AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in [illegible] everywhere; Liberal terms. [illegible] Garretson & Co., [illegible] College St., Nashville, Tenn.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.

R O

FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,

R O U S E.

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS. Jeans, Flannels, Nubias, Scarfs,

S E

QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.

A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at

DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

DRUGS & MEDICINES

I have nearly filled up my stock of

PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.

I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of

Stationary, Fancy and Toilet

—Articles. Also have a fine line of—

CIGARS AND TOBACCO.

I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,

Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.

Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.

N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY

TO BUYERS.

I have for the spring trade a clean and carefully selected stock of Goods with prices marked to suit the times.

IN DRY GOODS,

Brocades, Cashmeres, Indigo Blue Calicoes, Prints, Ginghams, Cheviot Shirting, Brown and Bleached Muslins and double width Sheeting, Pillow Case Muslin, Jeans and Cottonades, Crashes, Table Linen and Napkins.

IN WHITE and FANCY GOODS.

Nainsook, Lawn, Swiss, Jackonet, Hamburg Embroideries, Laces, Ladies' Collars and Ties, Toilet towels, Ribbons and Buttons.

Floor and Table Oil Cloth in new Style Patterns.

Carpet Chain in fast colors.

Rubber Coats and Leggins—Overalls and Jackets.

In Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware and Woodenware my stock is complete.

Flour and Salt always on hand.

A Full stock of FANCY & STALPE Groceries.

Cash paid for country produce or will take in exchange for goods.

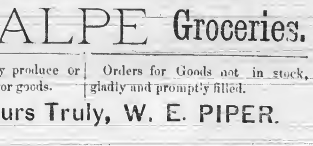
Orders for Goods not in stock, gladly and promptly filled.

Yours Truly, W. E. PIPER.

WILLIAM CLORE,

—MANUFACTURER OF—

Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,



Single & Double Shovels,

Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.

RISING SUN, - - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING

We keep constantly on hand all sizes of

BURIAL CASEs AND CASKET.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES guaranteed less than city rates.

sOARDs & DAVIS. Hebron, Ky

Making Paper from Peat.

During the past twenty years a scarcity of materials for making paper has existed in every civilized country in the world. At one time nearly all the white paper, such as is required in writing or for making books and newspapers, was made from waste cotton or flax. Rags furnished the largest proportions of paper stock. At present the demand for white paper is so great that comparatively little of it can be made of cotton and linen garments. For making coarse paper, such as is needed for wrapping up goods, hemp, tow and other substances that were used for making ropes and cordage were chiefly employed. At present cotton, flax and hemp are regarded as quite too costly to employ by themselves for making paper. They are chiefly used to give strength to other and much cheaper materials. While the demand for paper increases the supply of the materials of which it was formerly made diminishes. Proportionately more silk and woolen goods are worn than formerly, while wire is being used in the place of rope. Paper, or paper pulp, is now used for making collars, cuffs, boxes, various kinds of dishes and ornaments as well as small twine.

In the continent of Europe considerable difficulty is experienced in procuring materials for making paper. The supply of rags and other similar material is insufficient to meet the wants of the trade. Many vegetable substances which are wasted in this country are there fed to stock. Straw, beet leaves, and even the leaves and small branches of grapevines are carefully saved and used as food for domestic animals. In some countries hop vines and coarse grasses are manufactured into paper. In Sweden and Norway horse manure is washed and the portions that are but partially digested are saved for paper manufacture. They are found to answer the purposes very well. They are partially bleached in passing through the stomach, and their fiber is disintegrated to a considerable extent. As a consequence they require but little bleaching and but a small amount of boiling in an alkali solution to convert them into good paper pulp. Straw is there too valuable to use in paper making. Soft wood suitable for making paper is plenty, but it is not used to any great extent. Of late considerable attention has been given to the employment of the mosses that grow in bogs and forests in the manufacture of paper. The bark of some trees is used for the same purpose.

A very large amount of material for making paper is required in Great Britain, and the home supply is very limited. A vast amount of esparto grass, wood pulp, rags and other material are imported. Manufacturers have endeavored to find some native material that would answer for making paper. It was reported that such a substance has been found in the peat bogs, which are both numerous and extensive. Some inventors have perfected a plan for using a portion of the peat as it is found in the bogs, which is very simple. It is thought that the discovery will not only cheapen the production of paper, but will lead to reclaiming much land that is now useless. It is noticed that when a deep section is made into boggy land three well-defined beds or strata of peat are cut through. The surface stratum consists of moss, lichens, and other forms of vegetable life either growing or in the earlier stages of decay; the second is composed of the same substances which have become fibrous or tissue-like and are in a compressed condition; the third is darker in color, less fibrous in composition, more closely compacted, and in fact approximates, more or less, to lignite in appearance and general properties. The last-named is the peat used for fuel, and is the only portion of the beds that now possess a commercial value. The stratum utilized by the inventors is the second, or fibrous bed, which has been considered worthless. This peat contains from seventy to eighty per cent. of its weight of water when it is cut from the beds, and thus it would not pay to carry it long distances in its raw state. The plan is to erect cheap and easily movable machinery at the bog side by which the peat shall be cut, "deviled" (or torn to shreds), pressed dry, and packed in bales. In this condition it is a marketable article to makers of packing-papers, and it will command a price which, with economic management of the process, ought to pay both the capitalist and the laborer engaged in its preparation. The "deviling" operation to which it has been subjected has shaken it free from soil and foreign matters generally, and it presents the appearance of bundles of fibers of varying length. Arrived at the mills the peat fiber is washed in such a manner as to secure the complete removal of earthy and other impurities, and it is further treated with a hot solution of soda in order to dissolve and extract the gummy and resinous matters in the peat. The alkali is then washed out, and the fiber is left of a beautifully soft and pliable consistency. It is now ready for mixing with the hemp fiber obtained from rope and bags for the production of pulp, and, no means having been taken to deprive it of its rich brown color, the tannic acid which it contains serves the purpose of the minerals commonly used.

Paper made of this material has considerable power to resist the action of moisture. This is due to the large amount of mucilaginous matter it contains. This matter is rendered insoluble to the actions of the tannin contained in the turf which acts as soon as it is brought under the influence of heat. It is thought that the new material prepared for manufacturing can be delivered at mills for about $20 per ton. It contains scarcely any silica, and on this account it can be reduced to pulp with a small expenditure for chemicals. It is found that this prepared peat is valuable for bedding animals in the stable and for making paper-mache. It is to be hoped that this new method of making paper will be introduced into this country. It would be likely to lead to reclaiming much land that is now useless and cause peat to be employed as a fuel in places where there is neither wood nor coal. The highest economy is shown in converting worthless substances into those that possess industrial value.—Chicago Times.

—At a recent wedding in New York, gates formed of white roses separated the family friends from the others present during the church ceremony.—N. Y. Graphic.

There is a huge bowlder in Clinton, Mass., weighing fully one hundred tons, but it is so nicely balanced on a rocky ledge that a man can rock it with his hands.

HOME AND FARM.

—Poles cut in the summer will not last as long as those cut in winter by five years. Soil and climate of course make a difference with the life of the poles.—Chicago Journal.

—Too much clover hay fed to horses is injurious; they will eat so much of it, if allowed to do so, that they can not travel fast without injury. It should always be well sprinkled with water before feeding.—N. Y. Herald.

—To take off warts on cows' teats: Touch each wart daily with a sharply-pointed stick which has been dipped in nitric acid (aquafortis), being careful that the little drop on the point of the stick wets nothing but the wart. Do this for a week, and repeat in four weeks, if any are left.

—Rice and cheese form a cheap and palatable dish and liked by most gentlemen. The rice should be steamed until tender, then seasoned, and enough new milk added to make it quite moist; put into a buttered baking dish in alternate layers, with grated cheese, the cheese to be the last layer. Bake half an hour. —Rural New Yorker.

—Another fraud that has been practiced is worked as follows: A farmer receives a circular through the mails, stating that a new and improved variety of winter wheat has been discovered, and the seed will be furnished free of charge, until a good crop of said wheat is raised, on condition that he sends $1 to pay for packing, etc. The dollar is sent, and nothing more is heard of it.—Chicago Tribune.

—Bread Cake: Dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in half a teacupful of milk and strain it on three teacupfuls of raised bread dough, add a small teacupful of luke-warm melted butter, two small teacupfuls of sugar, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, and fruit if you like. Work the whole well together, put into cake tins, let it rise for an hour, or till sufficiently light, and bake in a moderate oven.—The Household.

—The hens that break and eat their eggs are usually those which are fed with kitchen waste. Feeding with meat or animal flesh seems to cause this bad habit, and fowls that are supplied with corn, wheat, scalded bran and meal in abundance do not seem to practice this vice. Once it is contracted there seems to be no cure. A frequent provocation of the habit is giving egg-shells to the fowls; they eat these with avidity, and then learn to break the eggs. Another cause is too close confinement in a house or yard and the leaving of eggs in the nest to freeze.—Prairie Farmer.

—Horses have been successfully cured of biting by putting a piece of hard wood an inch and a half square in the animal's mouth, about the same length as an ordinary snaffle bit. It may be fastened by a thong of leather passed through two holes in the ends of the wood and secured to the bridle. It must be used in addition to the bit, but in no way to impede the working of the bit. Animals with this vice should be treated kindly in the stable and not abused with pitchfork handles, whips, etc. An apple, crust of bread, a piece of beet, etc., and a kind pat, but firm, watchful hand and eye, with the use of the above wooden bit, will cure the most inveterate biter. The fact that he can not shut his mouth or grip anything soon dawns upon him and then he is conquered.—Toronto Globe.

Mastication.

As an indication of the importance of the thorough mastication of our food, intimately connected with the moistening of it with an important and absolutely needful solvent is the saliva. There are five glands in the mouth for the supply of this fluid. The estimated supply of this saliva for each day is from three pounds to six and one-half pounds, an amount which will not be fully appropriated unless more care and time are devoted to eating than is usual with us as a nation. Indeed, our hurry and flurry, our bad business habits, our false customs, as contrasted with those of our English cousins, do not admit of reasonable chewing. And yet it is utterly impossible to obtain the real nourishment of our food the whole of it, aside from full chewing, since food that is not properly moistened by this solvent does not yield its nutriment to the full extent. It is equally true that when food is but half chewed, remaining in solid lumps, is neither combined with the saliva, nor with the other juices connected with the process of digestion, a process of primary importance, a fundamental condition of health. This saliva is made to flow, not only by the stimulus of the food—known as the "watering of the mouth"—but mechanically, the act of chewing acting, by pressure, like milking, causing it to flow at each movement of the jaw, as well as by the action of the tongue.

In addition to the hot haste of most of those "tied to the bell-rope," in the matter of "bolting food," the custom of talking while actually eating, is but little less than barbarous, unrefined. We can no more swallow and talk than we can write and do manual labor at the same time, and with ease and propriety. To attempt to converse with one's mouth full of food, is not only inconvenient but unrefined. And, as if to rebuke this custom by making it inconvenient and dangerous, the food, in swallowing, passes the apperture leading to the lungs, and may, by a sudden effort to breathe, while laughing, pass into the lungs in some circumstances, causing death. It is a merciful arrangement that the act of swallowing actually closes this opening, to avoid danger. Hence, the folly of any attempt at conversation while food is in the mouth for the purpose of being chewed, instead of being swallowed whole! I well know that it is said that sociality and cheerfulness are favorable to digestion, but it should be remembered that digestion does not proceed during the meal, but after the liquids have been absorbed, and preparatory steps all completed. Cheerfulness then will favor digestion, and not endanger life.

It follows that the habit of drinking as a means of washing down the food is unnatural, crowding the food into the stomach in an unprepared state, in masses, needing more of the saliva as a solvent. Of necessity, such food can not be acted upon by other juices, and can never nourish like well-chewed food.—Dr. Hannaford, in Golden Rule.

—We believe it to be the correct thing, when speaking of the inhabitants of the island of Madagascar, to call them the Malagasy, or the Malagassy, or the Malagashes, or the Madagascans. Paying your money, you have the right to choose—and, taking what you please, you can't insult the "natives," who have no name for their country, and, therefore, may be supposed to be indifferent to being called out of it.—Chicago Herald.

—Toronto, a police officer there says, has more than twenty criminals who fled from this country and are enjoying life there quietly.

Compliments to American Organs.

Dr. John Stainer, Organist of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, than whom there could not be higher authority in regard to organs, organ music, etc., has shown his appreciation of American instruments by preparing an instruction book especially for the Mason & Hamlin organs. It has already been published in London, but will be immediately republished in this country by Messrs. Ditson & Co. Messrs. Mason & Hamlin have also received very recently two noteworthy compliments for their organs from London. One is in the sale of an organ to Her Majesty Queen Victoria; the other is the announcement that one of them will be used in Westminster Abbey on the 10th, 12th and 13th of this month, with full orchestra and chorus, in the production of Gounod's "Redemption," under the direction of the Organist of Westminster, Dr. Bridge. The same organs were used last week in the production of the same work by the Philharmonic Society of Brooklyn, N. Y., under the direction of Theodore Thomas, and will be similarly used next week in the production of the same work by the Cecilia Society of Philadelphia, under Mr. Thomas' direction.—Boston Journal.

—Great quantities of spurious and adulterated teas have in recent years been imported and sold at auction, to be distributed, among grocers and tea merchants. Congress passed a law at the last session prohibiting such imports, and the New York jobbers have now united to boycott the grocers who buy auction teas. It is to be hoped that spurious tea will be driven from the market. There has, of late years, been more of the spurious than the genuine sold and used in this country. In fact, it has got to be so that a genuine article of tea is a rarity.—Chicago Times.

—Chauncey Warner, of Cambridge, Vt., is to establish a free hospital in St. Albans, and will purchase for its use a fine house and grounds costing $30,000. The same gentleman recently founded the Warner Home for Little Wanderers in St. Albans, and provided an endowment fund of $25,000 for its support.

THE Fredericton (New Brunswick, Can.) Reporter says: "Nobody can but admire the persistent enterprise manifested by the owners of St. Jacobs Oil in keeping the name before the public. It received a big 'send off' in the House the other day by the Hon. Mr. Perley, who warned his colleagues in the Government of the danger of Beer Killers receiving two bounties for one nose: the judicious use of the Oil causing rapid growth."

"Could ye lind me the loan of a pipe and tobacky?" said Pat; "I have a match."

"Throw Physic to the Dogs, I'll None of it."

We do not feel like blaming Macbeth for this expression of disgust. Even nowadays most of the cathartics are great repulsive pills, enough to "turn one's stomach." Had Macbeth ever taken Dr. Pierce's "Purgative Pellets" he would not have uttered those words of contempt. By druggists.

A DIFFICULT point to grasp—The end of an eel's tail.

Fifty-Five Miles an Hour.

The New York and Washington "Limited," which passes through Perryville, Cecil Co., Md., is said to run fifty-five miles an hour, schedule time. Solomon Weaver Esq., of Perryville, writes that Mishler's Herb Bitters cured him of Neuralgia and Bleeding Piles, and his wife of Ague. All disorders of the blood, Neuralgia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation and Kidney troubles are certainly and speedily cured by this remedy.

RUFF on royalty—The historical collar of good Queen Bess.—N. Y. News.

A Remarkably Successful Business House—Free Fun.

The Baltimore (Md.) Daily American of February 9 editorially comments, to the extent of several columns, upon the vast business of The Charles A. Vogeler Company of that city and the unprecedented popularity of its goods. This house (successors to A. Vogeler & Co.) will be better known to the general public as proprietors of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain cure which has become a household word the world over. The new company is composed of Mr. Christian Devries, a leading Maryland merchant, President of the National Bank of Baltimore, etc.; Mrs. Vogeler, widow of the late Charles A. Vogeler, and Mr. H. D. Umbstaetter, whose rare genius and ability in conducting and directing the advertising department of his house have been so conspicuously successful. Thus possessed of a meritorious remedy backed by ample capital, experience and brains, there is every reason to predict for the new firm the largest measure of business prosperity.

The latest and most unique feature on the advertising programme of this enterprising house is the publication of a neat and attractive little work, the title of which is "St. Jacobs Oil Family Calendar, 1883-4, and Book of Health and Humor for the Million." It is largely composed of original (copy-righted) articles, written expressly for this book by the leading humorists of the day—such as M. Quad, Detroit Free Press; Spoopendyke, of the Brooklyn Eagle; the editors of Texas Siftings, Uncle Remus, Josh Billings, and a dozen others, all in the very best vein of these representative fun-makers. The illustrations are by the best artists, and the book contains, beside, numerous testimonials from distinguished authorities, and other matter of value.

This racy little book is being printed by the millions. In the larger cities it will be distributed free from house to house, and at other points by druggists. Any one may obtain a copy by addressing "Supply Department, The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.," and enclosing a 3-cent stamp to pay postage.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, March 30, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—Common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 5 85
HOGS—Common	6 25	@ 6 85
Good packers	7 15	@ 7 65
SHEEP	3 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@ 5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 12	@ 1 13
No. 2 winter red	1 10	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	44½	@
Rye—No. 2	62	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@11 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	18 50	@
Lard—Steam	11⅛	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	43	@
Prime Creamery	40	@ 43
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per barrel, from store	2 50	@ 2 6[illegible]
Apples, prime, per barrel	3 75	@ 4 2[illegible]
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 25	@ 3 80
Good to choice	4 50	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 19¼	@ 1 20
No. 1 white	1 11	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	67	@ 68½
Oats—mixed	51	@ 52
PORK—Mess	19 25	@19 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 red	1 08½	@
Corn No. 2	51¼	@ 51½
Oats—No. 2	41	@ 42
Rye	59¼	@
PORK—Mess	18 10	@18 12½
LARD—Steam	11-10	@11-12½
WHISKY	1 17	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 19¼	@ 1 19½
Corn—mixed	66	@ [illegible]
Oats—mixed	50	@ 51
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 10
Corn—mixed	58	@
Oat—mixed	45	@
PORK—Mess	18 75	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 08	@
CORN	49	@
OATS—mixed	41½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 50
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 6 00

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

What a Lady of Great Prominence Has to Say About Her Sex.

(Boston Globe.)

On a recent trip by a representative of this paper to the city of Haverhill, Mass., a most important incident occurred, which can not fail to be of the greatest interest to all, especially to our lady readers. The newspaper man met a lady a trifle past middle age with luxurious white hair that contrasted strikingly with piercing black eyes. She possessed a straight, full habit, womanly, but commanding, combined with manners wholly lady-like, and yet pronounced. Any acute judge of human nature could see at once that he was in the presence of an unusual person, one destined to accomplish more than most of her sex, and to exert an influence far reaching in its power. This lady was Mrs. M. W. Wingate. Almost from childhood she has taken a special interest in the bodily troubles of her sex and has probably been more successful in relieving suffering and saving lives than any other woman in America. Indeed, she seems to have been to women what Florence Nightengale and Dorothy Dix were to the suffering soldiers. The instances of women who were in the greatest agony and apparently beyond the reach of human aid, that she has restored to health and happiness, are almost innumerable, and it was only natural that the scribe should become specially interested and wish to converse with her more in detail.

"How long have you been engaged in the practice of medicine, Mrs. Wingate?"

"For more than twenty-five years."

"A long time certainly. How did you happen to enter the field at that early day when women in the professions were specially frowned down upon?"

"I think I must have inherited a taste from my father, Professor J. C. Wood, of Harvard College. He was eminent in the profession, a hard worker and equally earnest in his recitations. He hunted considerably, and I remember when only nine years old I used to dissect the birds and animals he had killed. I felt infatuated with medical science, even then, and the infatuation has continued up to the present time."

"And did you begin your studies so early in life?"

"I can hardly say when I began, for I can not remember when I did not read medical literature. You would scarcely believe it, but I was a slender girl and did not weigh over 120 pounds, but I used to sit up night after night until two o'clock in the morning poring over my studies and never dreaming of the flight of time. It seemed as though calls for my attendance on the sick always came unsolicited. I certainly can not fix the date when I first began practicing. Of course most of my patients were women, and the natural sympathy I felt for my sex has increased during all these years where I have been brought so closely in contact with them and have learned to anticipate their needs and sympathize with their sufferings. After the opening of the Boston Medical College I appeared before the faculty, passed examination and received a diploma. I had practiced for years previous to that time but thought it desirable to receive another diploma, which I did without any effort."

"Your experience with the many and serious diseases of women having been so extensive must also be valuable! Can you give me some facts regarding them?"

"I find that woman seems born to suffering, and where she avoids it, it is by reason of some care on her part or owing to some special renewing power. It is true some women go through life without unusual suffering, but they are none the less in danger, for there are critical periods all along their pathway when the utmost precaution is required. The innumerable complaints called female weaknesses: the irregularities of life and changes of the system all indicate the perils which hang over every woman's career, and which, unless attended to, may result disastrously."

"But is there no way by which these terrible troubles can be avoided?"

"That has been the problem for years. The habits of life and the demands of fashion are clearly at war with the health of women. I have been, perhaps, unusually successful in my treatment of their troubles, but there have been many cases that seemed specially stubborn. I recall one in particular. I had exhausted all the usual expedients and the results were not satisfactory. I became worried over the case and really did not know what to do, but finally thought I would try something out of the usual line. I had heard a certain remedy recommended very highly and so I procured some and made a chemical analysis of it. I found it was perfectly pure, and that the ingredients were unusually valuable. So I began giving it to my patient, changing it, however, into a bottle of my own. To my great joy it seemed to have an almost immediate effect and a complete cure was the result. Since then I have used it constantly in my practice and have cured every form of female weakness, as well as displacements, dropsical tumors, cellu dropsy and all such troubles. I have also used it with the best of results in cases of pregnancy and gestation. Indeed I have found it of untold value and benefit.

"Have you any objection to giving me the name of this remedy of which you speak?"

"None, whatever. It is Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure."

"Why, that is a proprietary medicine!"

"Certainly, but what of that! I have but one end in view in the treatment of my patients, namely—their restoration to health. In the accomplishment of this end I prescribe what I believe to be beneficial, no matter what the professional consequences may be."

"I notice in the New York papers that Doctors Hammond, Agnew and other prominent physicians are taking a similar stand, Mrs. Wingate."

"Yes, and all independent thinkers in the profession are bound to do so. I am, however, on the best of terms with my professional brethren as you can see," and the lady produced a beautiful gold medal mounted in the form of a badge which had been presented her by the medical society, known as the Ensign of the Humble Family, of which she is a prominent member. After examining it closely, the reporter remarked that the medical profession evidently were proud of what she had done, as she might well be in the possession of such a medal.

"I am proud of that" she replied, "and I was also pleased a short time since to receive an offer at a large salary to take the professorship in the new medical college at Walla Walla, on the Pacific coast. I do not know how they heard of me out there, but I was obliged to decline their offer."

"And so, in your experience with the diseases of women, you have found success, and that Warner's Safe Cure has been a most efficient remedy?"

"Yes, I have had unusual success and the remedy of which you speak has been proven of great benefit. There are, however, some base imitations of it to be found in the market: these are bad and should be avoided, but the genuine remedy is one of the very best."

"And has not the practice of your profession injured your health?"

"No, I am better now than ever before in my life. I froze my limbs last Winter, while riding one cold night to see a patient, and was obliged to remain indoors for over two months. Otherwise I am healthy, as you can see by looking at me."

"And may I publish this interview, Mrs. Wingate?"

"Yes. If what I have told you should be the means of assisting any women who may be suffering, I shall be perfectly willing to have it published."

"COME down," said the young man, stroking his upper lip.

"GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY" (words registered as a trade-mark) cures all humors from the pimple or eruption to great virulent eating ulcers.

IT is said that deaf and dumb people always take a hand in conversation.—Evansville Argus.

A Case Not Beyond Help.

Dr. M. H. Hinsdale, Kenawee, Ill., advises us of a remarkable cure of consumption. He says: A neighbor's wife was attacked with violent Lung disease, and pronounced beyond help from Quick Consumption. As a last resort the family was persuaded to try DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. To the astonishment of all, by the time she had used one half dozen bottles she was about the house doing her own work. I saw her at her worst and had no idea she could recover.

WOOLEN goods are quoted quiet, because of their nap.—Baltimore Every Saturday.

LOOK for advertisement in this paper of Glaceline. Shirts polished without an iron equal to a machine laundried work.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar

Stops your throat hurling. Why don't you use it! Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred as thirty day's trial is allowed.

THE "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce cures "female weakness" and kindred affections. By druggists.

THE "Fat Contributor" is the man who gains favor with the printers.—N. O. Picayune.

REDDING'S Russia Salve is an invaluable dressing for inflamed and sore joints. Price 25c.

LIFE is a tiresome journey, and when a man arrives at the end he is all out of breath.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

A PLAYIN' man: A homely musician.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

THE best fitting collars and cuffs you can get are the Celluloid. Now for sale at all first-class stores.

A COLD snap is likely to occur whenever there is a piece of ice that can be broken.

ONE pair of boots or shoes saved every year by using Lyon's Patent Metallic Heel Stiffeners.

WHEN a man gets high he is considered a very low fellow.

A COUGH OR SORE THROAT should not be neglected. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are a simple remedy, and give immediate relief.

A NOISY piece of crockery—The cup that cheers.

FOR sore feet, swollen joints, sprains, corns or bunions, use St. Patrick's Salve.

We Present no Pretended Miracle.—"Truth is Mighty and Must Prevail."—No Sophistry can Withstand the Power of its Honest Utterance.

Editor of Evening Press:

DEAR SIR—Feeling deeply grateful for the great benefits which I have received from the use of a very valuable article which has its origin and home in our beautiful city, and hoping that others who are afflicted as I have been may find like relief from its use, I beg the indulgence of a few lines in your valuable paper for the privilege of communicating to you a brief statement of facts, for the benefit of the multitude of sufferers to be met with on every side. Many of my friends well know that I have been very severely afflicted with heart-disease for a number of years, and have suffered from it as only those can suffer who have that disease; it reduced my strength so low that I could scarcely walk across my room, and the least exertion rendered me so short-breathed that I dared scarcely move, and life seemed very burdensome. I was treated for my malady by the best physicians, and derived no benefit from their treatment or prescriptions until I was advised by my family physician to use Hunt's Remedy, as my trouble was caused by inaction of my kidneys, which affected very seriously the action of my heart. I commenced taking it (having little faith in it or any other medicine), and it has helped me wonderfully, and I am now a great deal better and have been ever since I began its use. In fact I have taken no medicine that has benefited me so greatly. My breathing is easy, and I have gained in strength so much that I am able to do my housework. I cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all who may be afflicted as I have been, or who are suffering from general debility and nervous prostration. Respectfully, MRS. A. O. ROCKWELL, Pearl Street, Providence, R. I.

A standard medicine for curing Bright's disease, dropsy, kidney, bladder and glandular maladies is Hunt's Remedy. Female weakness, pain in the back and loins, gravel, diabetes, intemperance, excess, and prostration of the nervous system are cured by Hunt's Remedy. Hunt's Remedy imparts health and vigor to the constitution when it has become debilitated. Hunt's Remedy restores the invalid to health.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

Invalids who are recovering vital stamina, declare in grateful terms their appreciation of the merits, as a tonic, of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Not only does it impart strength to the weak, but it also corrects an irregular acid state of the stomach, makes the bowels act at proper intervals, gives ease to those who suffer from rheumatic and kidney troubles, and conquers as well as prevents fever and ague. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS

ABSOLUTELY PURIFIES THE BLOOD, Equalizes its Circulation, Regulates its Supply, Improves its Quality, therefore Furnishes Vital Energy.

. . . . CONQUERS DISEASE, ...

PERFECTS DIGESTION, Improves the Appetite, Cleanses the Liver and Kidneys; Acts as a mild stomachic and Imparts Vitality and Elasticity to every Organ of the Body. Formula in use 200 years.

. . . . IT HAS NO PEER. . . . .

MALARIA GIVES UP THE GHOST upon use while the system is brought to a state of perfect health and vigor. Get it at once. $1. per Bottle.

Mishler's Green Label Bitters, a Specific for Scrofula, Old Sores, Syphilis, &c., while Mishler's Red Label Bitters are prepared expressly for Diseases peculiar to Females. $1.50 per Bottle.

All sold by Druggists.
Send for book
"Messenger of Health."
MISHLER
HERB BITTERS CO.,
Lancaster, Pa.

Parker's Pleasant Worm Syrup works like a Charm.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!

DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE Lungs.

Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

SHIRTS POLISHED WITHOUT AN IRON AT HOME equal to finest machine laundried work, and a dozen polished while one would be done with an iron. NO SKILL OR HARD LABOR REQUIRED. Linen will stay clean twice as long, is rendered Perspiration Proof, made whiter and easier to wash, and neither linen nor wearer injured. Package, that will last an ordinary family six months, sent free by mail for 25 cents. Canvassers make $5 a day. Circulars free. Address, Glaceline M'f'g Co., 5 Home St., Cincinnati, O.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

YOUNG MEN If you want to learn TELEGRAPH OPERATING, and be guaranteed employment address P. W. REAM, Ada, O.

AGENTS.—Reliable Insurance Agents and Successful Canvassers, no matter what you are doing you can do better. Address, J. H. RUTLEDGE, St. Louis, Mo.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street Chicago.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS WANTED for the Best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Phila'a, Pa.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. [illegible] Family Physician and Second Receipt Book, $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2814 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

CONSUMPTIVES Last, Sure and Only Hope. Write Dr. [illegible]

ELECTRIC BELT $3 or $1 BATTERY can CURE You. Book free. Agents. Future Remedy Co., Cleveland, O.

$15 A Day at Home. No peddling. 12 Samples Free. Send dime for postage, &c. C. E. BOWEN, Brockton, Mass.

VIGOR RESTORED. [illegible] Write to Dr. [illegible], Cincinnati.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

Relieves and cures RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, BACKACHE, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, SORE THROAT, QUINSY, SWELLINGS, SPRAINS, Soreness, Cuts, Bruises, FROSTBITES, BURNS, SCALDS, And all other bodily aches and pains. FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

THE Popular Pianoforte METHOD.

A Third of a Million Copies sold to date.

There has been no more successful instruction book ever published than RICHARDSON'S NEW METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By NATHAN RICHARDSON. Price, $3.25. AMERICAN OR FOREIGN FINGERING. It has been carefully revised many times, is absolutely without errors, and may be termed a "perfect" music book. Its graded system is thoroughly progressive, its course of musical study eminently practical and comprehensive, and its selection of pieces for recreation judicious and pleasing. It is the ONLY TRUE "RICHARDSON," and should be ordered by its full title: Richardson's New Method for the Pianoforte. Published by OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston. C. H. DITSON & CO., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

WANTED—AGENTS. To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

LANDS 500,000 acres on the line of the WISCONSIN CENTRAL R. R. Full particulars FREE. Address, CHARLES L. COLBY, Land Commiss'ner MILWAUKEE, WIS. IN WISCONSIN.

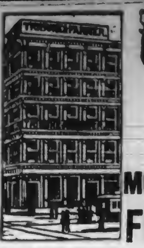
AGENTS WANTED FOR THE HISTORY OF THE U. S. BY ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS. It contains over 800 fine portraits and engravings of battles and other historical scenes and is the most complete and valuable history ever published. It is sold by subscription only, and Agents are wanted in every county. Send for circulars and extra terms to Agents. Address, NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

THE SUN ONE MILLION A WEEK. Decided opinions expressed in language that can be understood; the promptest, fullest and most accurate intelligence of whatever in the wide world is worth attention. That is what everybody is sure to find in any edition of THE SUN. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA ILL. Established 1872. Incorporated 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Write for catalogue. Coleman & Palms, Prop'rs.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.



3 MONTHS FREE!

We will mail The Philadelphia Weekly TRIBUNE and FARMER, every week, for three whole months, on trial, to any address, on receipt of only 12 cents in stamps to pay postage on 12 consecutive numbers, published weekly, or for twenty five cents, silver or stamps, we will mail the TRIBUNE and FARMER every week for 6 months. To anyone sending us a club of four twenty five cent subscriptions, we will send a premium of Silver-plated ware, honest, durable, goods, strictly first-class in quality. Regular price, $1.00 a year. Established 12 years.

HOW FARMERS ARE SWINDLED!

A series of articles written expressly for our columns by a Metropolitan daily paper reporter, showing up the ingenious methods devised by cunning rascals to swindle honest farmers by bogus commission merchants, bogus horse and stock auctions, swindling seed and stock advertisements, tree peddlers, etc.

COL. D. D. T. MOORE,

Founder, and for twenty-five years, editor of Moore's Rural New-Yorker, is the agricultural editor of the TRIBUNE and FARMER, and conducts the best and liveliest agricultural department to be found in any weekly newspaper in this country. Special writers on Small Fruits, Market Gardening, Horticultural Matters, Agricultural Machinery, with a list of Agricultural Inventions weekly, Philadelphia Market Reports, Answers to Correspondents, &c., &c.

AUNT ADDIE

Gives young housekeepers and young mothers good advice in her letters to the Household Department. Regular letters from "Aunt Eva," "Maybelle," "Jennie Joslyn," "Mrs. Geo. Caswell," and a score of regular correspondents.

The Ladies' and Household Department, under the charge of Mrs. Louise Knapp, devotes one whole page to Household Matters every week and is "Just Splendid." Everything bright and original, no stale receipts. Practical hints for Housekeepers, How to Dress Well and Economically, How to Entertain Company, Wholesome Advice to Young Girls, How to Care for Children, How to Knit, Crochet and do all kinds of Fancy Work, How to take Care of the Sick, All the Latest Fashions.

The best of American Humorists, is a regular contributor, and his letters are to be found only in our columns. Youth's Column is complete, with stories of adventure by land and sea. Puzzles and Home Amusements.

MOSE SKINNER,

Detective Sketches, exposing all city sharpers, frauds and humbugs. Our Home Stories, several every week, are complete, and selected from the pens of well-known writers

SPECIAL OFFER!

To every yearly subscriber sending us $1.00, our regular price, for a year's subscription, we will send at once, an elegant Silver-plated Sugar Spoon and Butter Knife, warranted to be of the best quality, triple plated on white steel, no cheap trash. For 10 yearly subscriptions, ordered direct from this advertisement, we will send a handsome American stem winding watch, warranted first-class time keeper.

CLUB RAISERS WANTED. For largest clubs to July 1st, either six months or yearly subscriptions, with or without premiums, we give away an elegant Rosewood Piano, a large Cabinet Organ, Silk Dress, Gold Watch, Sewing Machine, and numerous other premiums. Send for yearly subscription and sample premiums to work with. Mention this paper, and be sure to address letter plainly to

R. K. CURTIS & CO., Publishers,
Philadelphia, Pa.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

AGENTS only! Send 50c. for the $2 Book, "Songs of an Idle Hour." Richly bound; cream paper; 214 pp. 14 eds in 2 mos. Most fascinating, original and popular work in 20 years. Add. [illegible] & Co., Pub's, Lowell, Mass.

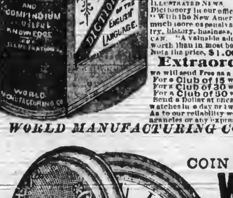
CHEAPEST BOOK IN THE WORLD. The New American Dictionary Price only $1.00. Contains 4,000 Engravings and 1000 pages more than any other book of the kind ever published; this useful and elegant volume is a Library and Encyclopedia of general knowledge, as well as the best Dictionary in the world. [illegible] Perfect Library of Reference. [illegible]

Read what the Press Says! [illegible]

Extraordinary Offer. [illegible]

WORLD MANUFACTURING CO., 122 Nassau Street, New York

THIS SPLENDID COIN SILVER HUNTING CASE WATCH FREE



To any person who will send us an order for— 15 NEW AMERICAN DICTIONARIES At One Dollar Each. [illegible] If you want a good SOLID COIN SILVER WATCH and want to get it WITHOUT MONEY you can easily do so. [illegible] NEW AMERICAN DICTIONARY [illegible] WORLD MANUFACTURING CO. 122 Nassau Street, New York.

WORLD MANUFACTURING CO. November 21st, 1882. Find enclosed $30 for 30 New American Dictionaries and the Ladies' Solid Gold Watch. I secured Thirty Subscribers in one day, and it was more than I promised. Everyone likes the Dictionary and all I have seen have subscribed. Miss LAURA COIL, Annapolis, Mo.

Office of the Auditor of the Treasury, Post Office Department, World Manuf'g Co., Washington, D. C., Jan. 29, 1883. The New American Dictionary ordered January 15th at hand. I obtained fourteen subscribers in about as many minutes last Saturday, and the Post Office department is a good field to work in. The book proves to be just the thing for office use, as I have had many more promised, and will send another larger order. Send the silver Watch as premium for the club. [HUNDREDS OF TESTIMONIALS LIKE THE ABOVE] Respectfully, ROBERT H. WOOD.

DIPHTHERIA GROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, NEURALGIA. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment (for Internal and External Use) will instantaneously relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives, sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

$60 5-TON JONES. Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. [illegible] JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. [illegible] TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. [illegible] 181 Pearl St., New York.

GUNS Pistols, &c., at Wholesale Rates. [illegible] Send for our new Price List. FREE. [illegible] A. G. Alford & Co., No. 5 N. Howard St., Baltimore, Md.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER OR GAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

A. N. K.—E. 910 13-83

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1883. NUMBER 24.

WHAT WAS YOUR NAME IN THE STATES?

We have a queer way in the West,
When a fellow his story relates;
We make this peculiar request;
Say? What was your name in the States?

CHORUS.

Oh! what was your name in the States?
Was it Thompson, or Johnson or Bates?
Did you murder your wife
And then flee for your life?
Oh! what was your name in the States?

Of course, sir, we all understand,
You say you are William G. Bates,
From New Hampshire you came overland,
But—what was your name in the States?
Cho.—Oh! what was your name, etc.

Your features are handsome, 'tis true,
With luck you are blessed by the Fate,
Your clothing is costly and new,
But—what was your name in the States?
Cho.—Oh! what was your name, etc.

You may be an angel, that's so,
Just slipped through the Heavenly gates,
But still we are anxious to know
Just what was your name in the States.
Cho.—Oh! what was your name, etc.

I hope no one will doubt that I sign this just as I would if I were in the States.—Stanley Wood, in Denver Inter-Ocean.

THE TALE OF A PEBBLE.

It was just eighty years ago that, one evening, a pale-faced young man took a prominent part in a new piece that was being performed at one of the Munich halls. His mournful looks and spiritless actions were so utterly at variance with the drolleries he had to say, that, being ridiculed and hissed by the audience, he was harshly dismissed by the manager.

They who sat in the audience-seats little knew—and as little did they care—that in a wretched garret lay the lifeless body of the young man's father; that five little brothers and sisters and a desolate widow now looked up to him as their only hope and support, or that, so distressing was his poverty, he could buy neither bread for the living, nor even a coffin for the dead.

Think of him all the lone night, watching by his father's corpse, and following it to the grave in the morning; track him as he listlessly saunters through the streets, and idly wanders down to the banks of the swift-rolling Iser, mark him watching the flowing current, till, hard pressed by affliction, the terrible thought of suicide flashes into his poor harrassed brain; then observe him shudder at the guilty thought, fall on his knees to beg for mercy, till at last, worn out by anxiety, he sinks down upon the soft grass—to sleep.

Morning has dawned, and the cheerful rays of the rising sun awaken the sleeper. An undisturbed slumber has refreshed him; some angel of deliverance which he saw in his dreams rise out of the dark waters, and gently hover over his unfortunate self, has scattered blessings from its gracious wings; and the young man almost forgets his sorrow, and ventures to build air castles on the unstable sands of the future.

On his way back to the city, his good angel accompanies him, and unlike most angels of our acquaintance, it causes him to stumble over a white chalk-pebble, which lies half concealed among the grasses.

Half in anger he picks up the stone, and just as he is on the point of hurling it into some less frequented path, his eye catches sight of a curiosity—of the tracing on the pebble of the delicate fibers of a sprig of moss.

"This surely means something," he says, in his German tongue. "Providence has not deserted me; I am a bad singer, but who knows? I may be good for something better."

It meant something; it meant just this: The chalk-pebble was a fragment of the now celebrated Bavarian lithographic stone, and that pale-faced, sorrow-stricken young man, whose good angel was an angel unawares, was Aloise Senefelder, the inventor of lithography—the art by which impressions or prints are obtained from stone.

It need scarcely be said that Aloise Senefelder, after having meditated upon his singular discovery, abandoned forever his former profession. He became an author. He possessed a tolerably good education, and with the pen could produce many a readable article.

Like many other authors, however, he was too poor to pay for the printer's labor in publishing his manuscripts. He could write books, to be sure; but they were of such a character that no one cared to assume the risk of making them public. It was evident, therefore, that whether he was deserving or not, Aloise Senefelder was not likely to become famous as a writer, unless he himself should print and publish his own works.

This thought gained possession of his will, and at once determined him to "go alone," as we say now-a-days. He began to experiment; and in the course of his practical essays, he discovered that soap, wax and lampblack made a good composition for writing on copper.

He next obtained some strong nitric acid, and employed it to eat away a portion of the copper, and to leave the letters, which he had scratched, in relief. These sheets he then printed.

So far so good; but, as copper was not cheap, and writing backward was not easy, he was induced to make further experiments with the little pebble which he had found on the banks of the Iser.

He polished it and found that its surface bore a very marked resemblance to that of a sheet of copper. He concluded to use it henceforth in preference to the latter.

It so happened that whilst thus engaged, his mother one day came into his room, and requested him to take account of some linen which she was about to send off to the washerwoman. There was no paper at hand, neither pencil nor pen; but he hastily wrote out the list with his prepared ink upon a polished stone, with the intention of copying it at his leisure.

A day or so later, when he was just going to wipe the writing from the stone, the idea struck him that he might take impressions [illegible] "bit," or eaten in the stone gently with acid, so as to leave the letters a little prominent, he found, after charging it with ink, that he could take impressions easily upon renewing the ink for each print.

Continuing his experiments, he soon saw that it was not necessary to leave the letters raised, but that the simple principle of grease resisting water was sufficient. Here was the true secret—the as yet undiscovered secret—of lithography.

I have previously said that the pebble which he picked up on the banks of the Iser was a white chalk-stone, or as geologists say, calcareous. There is something characteristic of this species of stone which deserves to be noted.

Strange as it may seem, the calcareous stone has a strong affinity, or liking, for grease and water; while, as is well known, grease and water have for one another a most decided antipathy. Working upon this principle the young man, by drawing or writing subjects upon the stone with fatty substances, produced some very excellent specimens of lithography.

The stone, greedily imbibing the grease, fixed the subject upon its surface; this being damped with a wet cloth till the whole face of the stone was covered, except where the greasy lines resisted the water, a roller of printing-ink was passed over the stone.

Such was lithography in its earliest days; at the present time the fundamental principles of the art remain the same, though the method of applying them have constantly and materially changed. It is not to be wondered at that Aloise Senefelder met with innumerable difficulties, for the art, even at its present state of development, is seriously affected by the most delicate niceties in chemistry, and the slightest variations in the weather.

With remarkable perseverence, however, he battled with his daily trials until, in 1799, he obtained a "patent," or license, to practice in Bavaria. Soon afterwards, he attempted to set up presses in London, Paris and Vienna.

The new discovery soon spread through Germany and France, and, being taken up by clever artists, rapidly attained excellence. In 1800, it was introduced into England; and nineteen years later, the stout-hearted Senefelder, with characteristic candor and public spirit, divulged all his secrets and published his receipts, hoping, as he said, "that it might produce many excellent lithographers."

In 1809, Senefelder was appointed Inspector of the royal lithograpic establishment at Munich, and from this time until his death, in 1831, he devoted himself to experiments, to instructing numerous pupils, and to writing a history of his invention. Notwithstanding the difficulties he had to encounter, not the least of which were the opposition and libels on his invention by persons who supposed their interests would be affected by his success, he completely triumphed, and lived to see his art brough to great perfection, and to be regarded as one of the most useful inventions of modern times, from its facility, cheapness and general application.

It is not many years ago that painters, engravers, and picture-buyers in particular, vilified the struggling art of lithography and cautioned the public against "greasy and smutty daubs," and others, who would be wiser than their neighbors, ventured to say that "it was all very well in its way, only it must be kept within its proper limits."

Now, the times have changed, the old tables have been turned, and lithography, as a useful, cheap and elegant art, has taken a position which engraving never could. Not only does it send out the merchant's letter in his own handwriting, and furnish the whole paper apparatus of the counting-house at a cheap rate; not only does it descend into all the common necessities of every day life; but it gives us the finest subjects of the best artists, crisp from their own hands, and bearing the real touches of their own pencils.

Moreover, it gives color, and interprets faithfully every tint and gradation of shade, and transmits them, fresh from the painter's easel, to multiplied copies, every one of which is a true fac simile of the original.

Such is a picture of lithography as it was in 1795, and as it is in 1883.

On the one hand, we see the unfortunate Senefelder; on the other, the numerous professors of his art at the present day. On the one hand, also, a little white pebble, a broken bit of limestone; on the other, a quarry of stones which, in some establishments alone, weigh hundreds of tons. On the one hand, a clumsy press that first threw of a sheet from stone at Munich; on the other, elegant and expensive machines of modern days, many of which are wrought by steam.

From this twofold picture of the old and the new a most important and cheering lesson may be learned, and it is this: To bear up bravely even although troubles thicken fast and endless perplexities seem to extinguish hope.

One day, as the story goes, Senefelder was strolling leisurely through the English garden which lies about a mile outside of Munich. He had outlived his trials, beheld the success of his discovery, and was now enjoying his well-merited gains.

A friend met him in the garden and, tapping him gently on the shoulder, said—

"Times have changed with you, Aloise; your pale face has grown ruddier, and your careworn look is gone. You have forgotten your days as a singer?"

"Forgotten them? No," replied the artist: "I could never forget them, for they taught me a lesson. It was sorrow, then. But God can turn, as you see, our pain into pleasure, and our bitterness into joy. Why should we ever despair?"

Senefelder died in 1834, aged more than sixty years, and was buried in the holy ground of his native city. A small mound and a tablet still point the visitor to his last resting-place; and upon the tablet we read his name, and these words in German, "Why should we ever despair?"—Youth's Companion.

—According to the Wiener Gewerbe Zeitung a chemist of Vienna has invented a new kind of glass, which contains no silex, potash, soda, lime, or borax. In appearance it is said to be a brilliant crystal, pefectly transparent, white and clear, and is susceptible of being cut and polished. It is completely insoluble in water, and is not attacked by fluoric acid, but can be corroded by hydrochloric and nitric acids. The most important feature that it possesses is that, when in a state of fusion, it adheres to iron, bronze and zinc.

—Milk which has changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda.

PITH AND POINT.

—"What is philosophy?" It is something which enables a rich man to say there is no disgrace in being poor.—N. Y. Herald.

—Appearances are apt to be deceitful. The lawyer's green bag, ostensibly crowded with remunerative briefs, may, after all, contain only that lawyer's cold luncheon.

—"Oh, pa," said a young lady, "why don't you get a fir tree?" It would be so economical to raise our own furs, "and then we could raise whatever kind we wish."—Wheeling Journal.

—Teacher:—"Can you multiply together concrete numbers?" (They appear uncertain.) Teacher:—"What will be the product of forty apples multiplied by six pounds of beef?" Small Boy (triumphantly):—"Mince pies."

—The number of people who say "them molasses," does not seem to decrease despite the common school system. Perhaps if the schools were not in existence folks would say "them water" and "those vinegar." Let us be thankful for what we have.—Kentucky News.

—The King of the Sandwich Islands locks himself in when he gets drunk. It would be well if some Americans were to imitate his example instead of going out in the highways and byways and offering to lick all creation and occupying both sides of the street at one time. —Norristown Herald.

—According to the law in Vermont the telegraph companies in that State must paint their poles. We object to such a law in Iowa, at least, if the law should require the painting to be done in red, white and blue. Consider the embarrassment the citizen would be in who requires a shave.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—"Madam," he began, as he lifted his hat at the front door, "I am soliciting for home charities. We have hundreds of poor, ragged and vicious children like those at your gate, and our object is—" "Sir! those are my own children!" she interrupted, and the way that front door slammed his toes jarred every hair on his scalp-lock.—N. Y. Post.

—A Numerical Courtship—

2 lovers sat beneath the shade,
And 1 un2 the other sayed.
"How 14-8 that you b9
Have smiled upon this suit of mine;
If 5 a heart it palps 4 you—
Thy voice is mu6 melody—
'Tis 7 to be thy loved 1, 2—
Say, 0y nymph, will marry me?"
Then lisped she soft, "Why, 13ly."
—Eugene Field.

—The boys were calling names and disputing on Larned street when a gentleman halted and said to the eldest: "Boy, this isn't beginning life right." "He sassed me fust!" "But he is the smallest. How it sounded for you to twit him with his father in the penitentiary. He has gone away crushed and degraded." "Well, I'm sorry," replied the boy, after a moment's thought, "and I guess I'll run after him and tell him my father is in the work-house! That'll kind o' take his lonesome feelin' away!"—Detroit Free Press.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—A blacksnake attempted to despoil a beehive in Berkley County, Va., when the bees attacked the reptile and stung him to death.

—A chemist in Germany has introduced a new system of preserving butter by covering it with a layer an inch in thickness of a strong solution of sulphite of lime, which he also used to preserve cider.

—In Lyons, France, the cold-bath method of treating typhoid-fever has been adopted with marked success. In the civil hospitals the death rate was reduced from twenty-six to nine per cent. and in private practice to one or two per cent.

—Speaking of indutry in Alabama, the Mobile Register says: "Prosperity to the laborer means prosperity to the employer. In point of fact, our farmers are now nearly all day laborers. The bosses are few and far between, and the drones are nearly all dead."

—Professor H. Carmichael, of Bowdoin College, has recently taken out an additional patent on waterproofing paper stock. His processes are now successfully employed in making paper dishes indestructible by hot water, acids, or alkalies. It is understood that he is at work on a roofing material made of paper pulp, which will be practically indestructible.—N. Y. Tribune.

—A new French steamship company will soon establish a line between New Orleans and Havre. It is expected that eight vessels will be required. A Liverpool company is also prepared to put a fleet of six steamers afloat to run between Liverpool and New Orleans. The latter city promises to be an important shipping point in the near future.—N. O. Picayune.

—Two gentlemen of Mexico have discovered a plant which produces material that, in their opinion, will revolutionize the present linen and silk industries. The plant yields a fiber of great brilliancy, fineness and strength, possesses an admirable affinity for all kinds of dyes and resembles silk more than anything else known. Samples of this fiber are twelve feet in length.

—The process for making wrought-iron and steel direct from the ore originated by H. C. Bull, an English inventor, has been tested in Pittsburgh and pronounced a success. At a recent trial two heats were made, each of which only occupied the space of an hour from the time the charge was put in till the iron was withdrawn. The ore was charged cold. The product cost the makers less than six dollars a ton outside of the cost of ore, which is ten dollars in Pittsburgh.

—An American engineer, who, being engaged in the construction of a railway in China, has had unusually favorable opportunities of examining the famous Great Wall, gives the following data concerning it: The wall is 1,728 miles long, eighteen feet wide, and fifteen feet thick at the top; the foundation throughout is of solid granite, the remainder of compact masonry; at intervals of between 200 and 300 yards, towers rise up, twenty-five to thirty feet high, and twenty-four feet in diameter; the wall is in a perfectly straight line from point to point.

Our Young Folks.

THE KAISER'S QUESTIONS.

The Kaiser would go to the Orphanage,
Upon a Summer day;
And the children braided their flaxen hair
And tied it with ribbons gay.
They tied it with ribbons pink and blue,
And each wore her dress of white,
And the Kaiser said he thought no man
Could see a lovelier sight.

Then he took his plumed hat off his head,
And they courtesied to him low.
He said: "God bless you, children dear,
And make you in wisdom grow."
He called to his side a blue-eyed girl
(She was fair as a child could be),
And he said: "Stand here, thou little one,
And answer me questions three.

"This lily, so fair and white and sweet,
To what kingdom does it belong?"
"To the vegetable kingdom, Sire;"
And her voice was like a song.
"And this little toy of purest gold?"
(He showed her a mimic lyre)
And she looked up with a smile, and said:
"To the mineral kingdom, Sire."

"Now tell me, my clever little maid,
To what kingdom do I belong?"
She thought of lions, of cows, and sheep,
The animal, sure is wrong.
She looked at his kingly air and dress
(She was but a child of eleven),
And said, with a still and solemn air:
"I think—to the Kingdom of Heaven."

The Kaiser looked down, and then looked up,
And his eyes were full of tears.
"The wisdom of Heaven dwells," he said,
"In the child of tender years."
He felt as if by an angel taught,
And his soul to its depth was stirred;
So he left a royal largess there,
For the little damsel's word.
—Mary A. Barr, in N. Y. Independent.

HOW NELLIE WON THE DAY.

Gray clouds drifted across the sky, and a chill wind swept over the fields, and whistled round the corner of the old red school-house; but the group of children, clustered about the door-step, noticed neither, so interested were they in some object that they were examining.

"It will be the greatest fun, alive!" exclaimed a large boy, in a muffler.

"Indeed it will!" assented a rosy-cheeked girl, whom her companion called Maggie.

"And how she will jump!" squeaked little Tommy Green, who had a cold in his head.

"There comes Nellie Lawson," cried two or three, as a sweet-faced maiden emerged from the school-house; "let us tell her about it."

"What are you all talking and laughing about?" asked the new-comer; "can't I know the joke?"

"Of course you can," said Maggie. "Just see this rat, that Ben Mott has caught," and the boy with the muffler swung a gray rat round by the tail.

Nellie gave a half-suppressed scream, and then, seeing that the animal was dead, asked: "What are you going to do with it?"

"Why, to-morrow is the first of April," explained Ben, "and we intend to play a trick on that shabby Ruth Baker."

"She is dreadfully afraid of rats and mice," continued Maggie, "almost goes into a fit, at the sight of one—so we are going to do this fellow up in a nice parcel, and put it in her desk. She will think it is something Auntie Piper has sent her by Miss Allis, and it will be fun to see her scared when she opens it—don't you think so?"

"No, I don't!" responded Nellie, while her cheeks glowed, and her eyes flashed; "and I think it is mean to treat a poor girl like Ruth so. She is smarter than any of us, if she does wear patched clothes, and live in a tumble-down old shanty, and it might do her a great deal of harm."

"Nonsense!" shouted Ben angrily: for he had a grudge against Ruth for going above him in the spelling class. "You needn't preach to us, Nellie Lawson, and we shan't ask your consent to the trick."

"No, indeed!" said most of the group, who did not care to lose their sport.

"And if you give Ruth a hint beforehand, we will have nothing more to do with you," added Maggie.

"I'm no tell-tale," answered Nellie, with some spirit, as she turned off down the road, leaving the mischievous youngsters to prepare this unkind surprise for their schoolmate.

That same afternoon, as Miss Allis, the school-teacher, was wending her way toward her boarding-place, at Auntie Piper's, she was overtaken by her pet pupil, Nellie Lawson, who, with her scarlet hood falling back on her shoulders, and her fair hair streaming in the wind, came running down a side path to meet her. "Oh, Miss Allis," she panted, quite breathless, "I was so afraid I might miss you; and I want to ask a favor."

"What is it, Nellie?" inquired the teacher.

"Only to lend me the school-house key until to-morrow morning, when I will be sure and bring it very early."

"But what can you want of it?"

"It is a secret, Miss Allis; but, truly, I will do no harm."

The teacher smiled at the girl's earnestness, as she drew the key from her pocket, saying: "I think I can trust you, Nellie; but don't fail to be on hand in good season."

"Oh no, indeed! and thank you so very much!" and with a kiss, and a wise shake of her little head Nellie bade her teacher "good-bye," and started towards home.

The Widow Baker's home was a miserable place, the cold air pouring through the wide cracks in the boards, and laughing at the wee bit of fire on the hearth, that seemed too timid, even to crackle.

"This is a poor shelter," groaned Mrs. Baker; "but I fear we may even have less, for not a penny's rent have I paid for three months, and farmer Mott has threatened to turn us out."

So it was with a sad heart that Ruth started for school, trying to plan some means by which she could earn money, at least to keep starvation from the door. The scholars were all in their places when she entered. Opening her desk, she saw a package in one corner, and—not observing the boys nudging each other, and the girls giggling behind their "readers" supposed Auntie Piper had kindly sent her a turnover, as she occasionally did. Carefully she untied the string, and unfolded the paper. Ben Mott stole up behind, and peeped over her shoulder, while the others watched eagerly. They were not disappointed, for the girl uttered a startled "Oh!" sat down suddenly, and covered her face with her hands; but they were surprised, when, in place of the repulsive rat, they beheld a dainty lunch, neatly packed in a box, and on top a netted purse, through which might be seen the gleam of silver, while on a slip of paper were written the two words: "April-Fool."

"This is some of Nellie Lawson's work, I know!" exclaimed Ben, angrily; but none of the others echoed his tone, as they caught a sight of Ruth's grateful face, and Nellie said, softly: "Yes, I know I have rather turned the laugh against the school, but I am sure you will enjoy my joke more than the one that you planned, even if you have all been April-fooled:" and going to Ruth's side, pressed her to taste the good things, "for I know by your looks you need them," she whispered.

"Let me take some home to the children," begged the girl, and she explained, in a few words, the sad condition of her family.

The well-fed boys and girls instantly scattered in every direction, each tried to out-do the other in bringing from their own lunch-baskets, sandwiches, biscuits, pies, cake, etc., to heap upon Ruth's desk, until there was much more than she could carry—and she fairly sobbed from excitement. Miss Allis, watching the proceedings, forgot to ring the bell until long after time.

That afternoon, as Mrs. Baker stood by the window, she uttered a cry of despair at the sight of Farmer Mott's wagon coming down the road. "For," she said to Peter, the oldest boy, "he has come to turn us out, and where we shall go, Heaven only knows!"

Sure enough, Mr. Mott soon appeared on the threshold. "See here!" he shouted, "have you some money for me?"

"N-n-no, sir!" stammered the poor widow—"but——"

"Well, that's all right, for it's April-fool's day, you know; but what do you mean by allowing any of my tenants to freeze and starve? Here is a cord of wood; don't you dare to bring me any rent until that young man is old enough to earn it."

And with these words, the bluff farmer hurried off, leaving Mrs. Baker speechless. She was roused by the entrance of Ruth, followed by a procession of boys and girls, bearing baskets and pails, and who in a twinkling set to work, like a band of good fairies, making up a roaring fire, spreading the table, with Ben Mott, the leader of them all, while his face fairly beamed with satisfaction. Fun and jollity prevailed on all sides, and Nellie, hugging Ruth rapturously, exclaimed: "Isn't it just the loveliest April-fool that ever was heard of?"

As the twilight shadows fell softly over the country-side, and the happy children—leaving the Bakers sitting by a cheerful fireside—wended their way to their own comfortable homes, Ben Mott whispered to Miss Allis: "Nellie Lawson's 'fooling' is worth twenty of my stupid rat tricks."—Agnes Carr, in American Agriculturist.

Some "Crawling Leaves."

When Australia was first discovered by the English, as many strange stories were told about the wonderful things to be found there as we used to hear in the early days of California. Among other thing it was said that the leaves of a certain tree had a habit of descending from their proper place and walking along the ground.

A party of English sailors had left their ship to roam along the coast and "see what they could see." They were resting under a tree, lying on their backs probably, and naturally gazing upward, when a sudden breeze shook down a number of leaves, which turned somersaults in the air, after the manner of leaves generally, and then floated to the ground. The sailors were surprised at this shower, because it was not the fall of the year, but midsummer, and these falling leaves looked fresh and green. It was strange to see leaves deserting the tree without any sort of reason; but this was nothing to what followed.

After a short rest these able-bodied leaves began crawling along on the ground toward the trunk of the tree from which they came, and the amazed sailors started up in terror. They probably knew from experience that people who come in contact with the ground may also expect to come in contact with various crawling insects, but walking leaves were something altogether out of the common way; and they took to their heels at once, and lost no time in getting on board the vessel. The land was certainly bewitched, and one of the men said, in relating their adventure, that he expected every minute to see the trees step out and dance a regular jig.

Fortunately this singular phenomenon has been fully explained by later travelers who were not too much frightened to stop and examine the matter. It was discovered that these queer leaves are really insects that live upon the trees, and are of the same color as the foliage. They have very thin, flat bodies, and their wings are like large leaves. When anything disturbs them—like a breeze, for instance—they fold their legs away under their bodies, and then the leaf-like shape, with stem and all, is complete.

Not only are they of a bright green in summer, like the foliage of the trees at that time, but they actually change when the leaves do to the dull brown produced by frost. Another peculiarity of these leaf-insects is that, although they have a generous supply of wings, they seldom use them, but when they have been shaken to the ground, after lying there for a few minutes as if they were really leaves, they crawl toward the tree, and ascend the trunk without seeming to know that they have the power of getting back to their quarters in a much quicker and easier way.—Harper's Young People.

—Italian murderers are very rarely hanged, but their fate is, if convicted, far from pleasant. Passanante, who tried to kill King Humbert in 1878, is fastened to the wall of a nearly dark cell by a five-foot chain riveted to his ankle. He has become imbecile.

Religious.

HE WENT BEFORE.

Their faces to Jerusalem,
They stepped with laggard feet,
Half timorous, defiant half,
At what they went to meet.
But as they rested, or they talked
Their sad forebodings o'er,
Still leading on the little band
Their Master went before.

He saw in vision maddened throngs
He saw the crowded hall
Where scribe and priest should mock and flout,
The cruel scourge should fall.
He saw the cross; its shadows lay
The toilsome pathway o'er,
But pressing on with ardent soul,
The Master went before.

To-day Thy pledged disciples, Lord,
Meet sorrow, pain and shame.
Their watchword in the trial time
Thine own all-conquering name.
Though flesh be weak and spirit faint,
And heart be spent and sore,
They can not fail in any strife
While Thou shalt go before.

In presence of Thy bitter foes,
Amidst the dark defeat,
They yet shall snatch a victory
And taste a triumph sweet.
Nor death itself shall crush them, Lord,
Its final conflict o'er,
The ransomed hosts shall shout and sing:
"Our Savior went before!"
—Margaret E. Sangster, in American Messenger.

OUR DAY OF REST.

The Sabbath was God's gift to man for all ages. The Divine order was, that man should have one day of rest for every six of work. All the best civilization of the world is based upon that idea, which has been wrought into the laws, industries and social life of all Christian nations. We have inherited from our fathers this sacred institution as one of our dearest rights, as well as our most sacred privileges. Our fathers, coming as they did from the tyrannies and oppression of the old world, were wise enough to guard "Our Day of Rest" with the solemn sanctions of law, as well as the lighter securities of custom and social life. But it appears in our day that we have large and powerful classes of men, who, either from selfishness and greed, or recklessness of other men's rights, demand that the sanctions of the law which gives a day of rest to workingmen shall be removed. In other words, some men want the larger class of men to work every day. The day of rest is to be abolished, and all days of toil to be alike, without respite or relief, if these views prevail. Men are to bear the strain constantly. Fatigued bodies and tired minds are to be worked to the utmost all the time, unless prohibited by law. One trade and business after another encroaches more and more upon the Sabbath, until they gain a day and enslave the workingman. Less and less become the poor man's rights, and fewer his opportunities for rest and recreation. Less and less he sees of wife and children, and more he must toil for their support, with but little of the comfort and joy of their society. The rich grow richer and the poor poorer both in family, body and mind. Already the din of traffic and bustle of business roar on the Sabbath but little less than on all days.

More and more trades and factories so enlarge their business and the demands of greedy monopolizing enterprise that they demand seven days' work per week.

Consider the trades and enterprises, public and private, that have no Sabbath. Railroads, employing every class of labor, common and skilled; city horse-railroads, omnibus-lines, ferries, iron-furnaces, foundries, all large furnace works, hotels, boarding-houses, barbers, butchers, grocers, druggists, confectioners, cigar stores, liquor dealers, newspaper publishers and venders, the police, insurance watchmen, stablemen, coach-drivers, milkmen, and many others, are obliged, in the competition or demands of their business as now conducted, to work all day or part of the day on the Sabbath. Very few, and growing less, are the industries or employments that completely respect the Sabbath and allow their workmen to rest.

This very serious and dangerous tendency is not a matter of fanatical alarm or mere sentimental discussion. It is a question of life and health to our overworked people. Nowhere in the world do men work as hard with body and mind as in our country. Nowhere in the world is rest so needed—complete and absolute rest for all men.

Herbert Spencer well said that what we need most is rest. Rush, struggle, competition, hurry, are the dangers of our industrial and business life.

To get rich, and rapidly, destroys the capitalist very often, and impels him to disregard his employes' rights and drive him more and more. The individual workman grows less, and more, he becomes merely an attendant of a machine. Less does he see the results of his own hands' work, less does he feel that he has a soul, less does his employer realize that his man is fitter than his machine.

The soul of the workman has as much right to grow and reach its Divine birthright as his body, and more, because it has grander, higher needs than his body.

It must be remembered, too, that the more every industry encroaches upon the Sabbath, the more it draws into the vortex other incidental work. Think how many classes of work one railroad compels, by merely deciding to run trains on the Seventh day. There is no break in the monotony of its whole work: engineers, depot hands, train and road men of all kinds must be at their posts along the whole line.

And thus to some extent every industry which does not pause one day in seven enslaves and even degrades its workers. Workingmen, this will not do. This evil must be stopped. The day of rest is yours. Don't let men in Brooklyn business, or in Albany legislation, or National law, or European customs, rob you of God's day and your day, in one dreaded scheme. If men tell you that all days are alike, tell them that they are not alike to you. One day God has given to you, and your reverence and gratitude for this gift make you glad to give thanks and worship to Him. The holy quiet and complete rest of the Sabbath are yours, and part of your liberty. Beware of those who teach or claim that all days are theirs, and you are theirs. Sabbath desecration has gone too far in our land of Christian liberty, where even the workingman is free. We are becoming ashamed to show even the best men who come from Europe what we are doing on what we call "the day of rest." Alas, such rest!

If law relaxes and social custom surrenders, we will soon lose every vestige of either rest or worship to the workingman.

Workingmen, the future depends very much upon you, and the way you demand and employ your day of rest. If you are faithful to your rights, and "knowing dare maintain them:" if you make the best use of your day of rest, demagogues will hesitate before taking it from you altogether.

Are you ready to give up your Sabbath? If not, be careful how you let go of it. Be careful how you allow others to remove the solemn sanctions of law which make it really yours as a right. Be careful how you allow others to control or use the time which belongs to you and to God, and how you rob God of one-seventh when He has given you the whole seven.

Dr. Farre, in an able report to the British Parliament, said, as a physician, that a rest of one day in seven was required by man and beast, and a loss of bodily vigor was sure to follow seven days of weekly work, ending in a breaking down of the system, and shortening of life. The Sabbath is God's special gift to workingmen, and one of its chief objects is to prolong his life and preserve in efficiency his working powers. In the physical system it acts as a compensation, replenishing the spirits, the elasticity and vigor impaired by six days' toil, and it supplies the vigor which is to do the next six days' work.

A flour-mill was once worked without a Sabbath, under an infidel manager. The same mill with the same men ground much more during the year under a Sabbath rest. A distinguished merchant of large business once said: "If it were not for the Sabbath, I should have been a maniac long ago." Another merchant, who used his Sabbaths to scheme and plan, soon found himself in the asylum, where many men are who have refused God's Sabbath. A man who works seven days a week will kill either mind or body.

Since, therefore, the Sabbath was designed to be a beneficial institution for both man and beast, it should be honored by all, and so enjoyed as to make it the greatest good to the greatest number, spiritually as well as physically. The danger in our day and at this very hour, is not of too great strictness, but of too great laxity and fatal indifference.—Wm. H. Ingersoll, in Church Union.

Helping One Another.

The efficacy of each Christian is augmented by a union with others: and by a concentration of effort and co-operation we may hope for the largest success. Independence, as was clearly shown by a writer in our last issue, is an impossibility. Hence God has ordained another and a better order of things. It is that of mutual dependence. This is the law of our being, ordained to insure the greatest efficiency. And when Christian men are brought to feel that they have one work and are seeking to compass one end, the speedier and the greater will be their success. But while this is true, it must not interfere with individual effort. Indeed, an intelligent recognition of this principle only serves to impress us with the importance of personal fidelity to duty in every relation of life and in every sphere of service. Every individual and all the talents of every individual are needed to secure the largest results. The best way of helping others, therefore, is for each one to stand in his own appointed lot and thus prove himself faithful in doing his own work instead of imposing it upon others.—Baptist Weekly.

Gems of Thought.

—Heart culture is more to be desired than intellectual equipment, but it is the discipline and training that develop both mind and heart that make noble and complete manhood and womanhood.—Golden Rule.

—If thou desire the love of God and man, be humble; for the proud heart, as it loves none but itself, so it is beloved of none but by itself; the voice of humility is God's music, and the silence of humility is God's rhetoric. Humility enforces, where neither virtue nor strength can prevail, nor reason.—Euchiridion.

—One grand concern with buyers is to obtain garments that will last garments whose fabrics will not waste, and whose colors will not fade. There is one seller in the great market of the world who assures the permanence of his wares. Hear ye him! "Buy of me gold tried in the fire, that ye may be rich; and white raiment that ye may be clothed." In this apparel the redeemed shall shine, when the sun shall grow dim with age, and the stars fall from heaven like unripe figs.—Arnot.

—England's wealthiest Baronet is said to be Sir John Ramsden, of Byram, Yorkshire. His rent-roll is computed at $850,000 a year. He owns almost the whole of Huddersfield, the great manufacturing center. The little bit he doesn't own was a very Naboth's vineyard to his father, who, according to popular tradition, once offered to its Quaker owner to cover it with sovereigns if he would sell it. "Edgewise, friend Ramsden?" quoth the Quaker; "in that case it is thine; otherwise all Huddersfield must still belong to thee and me." "Edgewise" was rather more than the Baronet could swallow.

—Rev. Dr. Dix, of Trinity, has introduced a new phrase. In alluding to the easy style of marriage and divorce in New England as "consecutive polygamy," he coined a phrase that is likely to live.—N. Y. Sun.

—The latest craze among fashionable English sports is insect shooting. They arm themselves with air-guns and pop beetles, bugs and flies. The Princess of Wales encourages them in it, as it saves pigeons and small birds.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. APR. 11 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
"	½ "	40
"	¼ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (except the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c.. $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

CIRCUIT COURT is booming.

TOBACCO dealers are not so downcast. Their purses are growing more plethoric.

THE result of the election in Cincinnati, last week, shows that a great deal of scratching was done.

PETER COOPER died at his residence, in New York City, on the 4th inst., at the advanced age of ninety-two.

REPORTS from all parts of the state are to the effect that early cherries are the only item in the fruit crop that are killed.

GEN. BUCKNER, an avowed candidate for governor, declares his determination to stay with the boys till the last day in the afternoon.

THE farmers complain of the backward spring, but by the first of June they connot discover that their crops are behind those of former years.

THE race for speaker of the lower house of congress is not attracting much attention at present, but Mr. Carlisle's prospects get brighter each day.

THERE is one man is this state whose friends cannot induce to become a candidate for an office. That man is Henry T. Stanton, of Frankfort.

GOV. BLACKBURN has gone to Arkansas to look after his farming interest in that state, and lieutenant-governor Cantrill is at the helm of state.

THE president packed his trunk and started to Florida, one day last week, where he expects to escape the army of hungry officeseekers for a few days.

IT costs $4,800 a day to run Barnum's show. Of that amount $2,700 a day goes for advertising. He pays more for advertising than everything else together.

IT seems that the republican fencing is yet somewhat out of order. Can the democrats keep theirs in repair long enough to hold Ohio in line through 1884?

THE Lawrenceburg Press has been polling the town on the question of building a levee to protect them from future inundations. There were few dissenting voices.

THE vacancy in the President's cabinet, occasioned by the death of Postmaster-General Howe, has been filled by the appointment of Judge Walter Q. Gresham, of Indianapolis.

JUDGE LYNCH has inaugurated a court in Nebraska. A dispatch from Hastings, on the 4th inst., says that a mob of thirty-five masked men hung three men there the night before.

THE street commissioner in New City is making it lively for the gambling portion of the population. He is a candidate for reelection and is doing all that for an electioneering scheme.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $7 65@7 85; fair to good packers, at $7 20@7 65; fair to good light, $7 25@7 65; common, $6 25@6 90; culls, $5 00@6 20; stock hogs, $5 7 @7 00.

W. N. HOGAN is a candidate for representative in Grant county. He is and experienced farmer and learned in the law, which combination the Courier thinks qualifies him especially for the position. Success to you, Newt.

DAVE FERGUSON, Louisville's defaulting back-tax collector, who was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary, has donned the stripes, and will be put to shoveling dirt on a railroad. Quite a come down in the world.

ON and after October first letter postage will be two cents half an ounce between all points in the United States, and after that date you can get a postal money order for as large a sum as $100. The present limit is $50.

WITH five candidates in the field for governor there are chances for a considerable contest accompanied by some uncertainty as to the result. Mayor Jacobs, of Louisville, the last candidate out in the race, has a very formidable backing at home, and will not be the first candidate dropped if the five go before the convention. The prospects for a lively canvass are good.

A SUIT has been brought in Boston to recover $5,000 damages from Rev. John H. Fleming and Archbishop Williams, of that diocese. In 1879 Lizzie Gannon, then a child, was attacked with a nervous disorder which had a peculiar effect upon her mental condition. She became greatly infatuated with some cuts in a paper, images which she said were angels sent by her brother who was dead. Fleming was sent for, and he took the images and kept them, refusing to return them. The girl fell into such paroxysms her physicians thought they should be returned to her to enable her to recover or keep alive, but Fleming and the Archbishop would not consent.

—A report from Augusta, Ga., says: While apricots and some peaches are killed by the late cold weather, in general there will be a good fruit crop in this section. Apples, plums and strawberries are not hurt to any considerable extent.

Circuit Court convened Monday with Hon. P. U. Major on the bench. The grand jury for the term is composed of the following gentlemen:

Reuben Conner, foreman, Jas Smith, Thos A Johnson, Wm Nelson, Joe Riddell, W M Rogers, James E Smith, J H Lawell, H P Crisler, W A Tanner, F. L Gordon, E Cropper, Yancy Clore, O C Utz, W E Clutterbuck and E M Gaines.

The petit juries are composed as follows: O P Tanner, L P Arnold, J H Walton, Thomas Grant, Geo Baker, W B Kelley, M T Graves, Thos. Willis, W E Walton, Ephraim Aylor, Geo E Rouse, Albert Beemon, Thos. Stephens Frank Smith, J J Weaver, D M Hewitt J F Blythe, J A Gaines, Lewis Conner, Asa Cason, W E Rouse, O E Rouse, S P Brady and W R Bradford.

About $200 in fines were imposed the first day, the largest being against Alfred Powell for shooting Boone Flanell at Walton some time since—fine $50.

IN MEMORIAM

NATHANIEL GREEN.

In another home has sorrow come, in other hearts has it planted its bitter sting. As the years roll on, one by one is some loved one taken from our midst. One more voice is silent, one more heart at rest. No more will his light footstep be heard or gentle smile be seen in the little church at Petersburg, of which he was an active member, and an earnest worker for the cause of his blessed Master. Others, fairer and younger, will come to fill his accustomed seat. It is not only the death of the young that fills our hearts with grief. Their lives are like the gentle violets that bloom in early spring, and as the summer advances, wither and die. But when the aged, with snowy locks and a faltering step, leave us, they who have guided us by their gentle influence, they who, for years, have been loved by all, then it is, we, with tearful eyes and sad hearts, bowed down by grief, bend over their graves.

The tender floweret brightens by its growth and is missed when gone, but the sturdy oak, which has stood the storms for ages, when it at last succombs, then it is missed all the more.

So our aged friend has left us. The summer rains will fall, and the gentle sighs of the breeze among the leaves will make sweet music above him, but he hears them not. The winter's snowflake will cover the mound where the locks scarce whiter are hidden beneath. Yet his memory shall dwell among us all, and above the silence of his grave will come and whisper to the stricken ones; "He is at rest with Christ, which is far better."

Blessed rest, sweet sleep, all life's toils forgotten, only rest and peace.

BELLE TERRILL.

STATE NEWS.

—Near Henderson Miss Annie Reed, aged sixteen years, was burned to death by her clothes igniting at a grate.

—Benjamin Boggs, one of the wealthiest men in Madison county died last week. He leaves an estate worth $210,000.

—Scott Oliver and John Walton played cards in Bowling Green. They had a misunderstanding and the coroner got a job viewing Walton's remains.

—While Mrs. Jack Renaker, of Cynthiana, was getting dinner, she stumbled over some wood, and, in falling, struck her head against the corner of the stove, putting out her eye.

—Near Paducha a twelve-year-old son of Jordan Southerland fell from a wagon load of straw, running through him two tines of a pitchfork which was leaning against the wagon Death was almost instant.

—Gen. Withers sold to a Chicago party a two-year-old filly, Maggie Medium, by Happy Medium; dam Maggie Keene, by Membrino Hatcher, son of Membrino Patcher; second dam Laura Fair by Rattler. Price, $1,000.

—Willis H. Brumback, an aged citizen of Owenton, was found by a jury to be a lunatic, and sent to the asylum at Lexington. His lunacy was caused by a long spell of sickness last fall, when he attempted suicide by stabbing himself, and has since been gradually growing worse.

—Black leg is reported to have appeared among the cattle in the northern part of Harris county, Texas, and much valuable stock has died from the disease. It is feared it will spread to the southern part of the county, where there are thousands of cattle Naturally the rumor has excited much apprehension among the stock men.

—A party of masked men went to the house of Bettie Ragan, a colored woman, in Smithville, a suburb of Mt. Sterling, and burned the house, stable and other out-buildings, with all their contents. It was in this house that the small-pox first made its appearance about six weeks since. Several of the family have died, and the others have been removed to the pest-house. It is supposed the negroes did the burning to prevent further spread of small-pox.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—A tobacco-box factory is to be started in Bristol, Tenn., soon.

—Chattanooga is all torn up over the bill to repeal her charter.

—Deer hunting is a favorite sport of some of the young ladies of Centerville, Tenn.

—At New Orleans the corner stone of the monumental tomb and equestrian statue of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston was laid April 6th.

—There passed through the Custom house of Galveston last week $36,000 in Mexican nickles, coined in the city of Mexico, and intended for general circulation in the State of Chihuahua.

—There is an old man living in Wilkes county, Ga., Mr. Pernet Truitt, who once wagoned cotton to Philadelphia and brought back dry goods on the return trip. He is now in his eighty-eighth year.

—Memphis Avalanche: With $1-200,000 in the State Treasury, Virginia offers a fair field for an enterprising treasurer. As the Old Dominion does not pay its debts it has no particular use for so large a sum.

—The colored school commissioner whose visited to one of the white schools in Chattanooga created such a furore, has resigned. He explains that his object in visiting the school was to get information that would be useful to his own people.

—Mt. Vernon correspondent Stanford Journal: A negro convict was shot by the Warden at the camp on Roundstone Sunday. He was ordered to take a whipping, but refused to be whipped and turned to walk off, and was shot in the back, perhaps fatally. The Warden skipped out, and has not been caught yet.

—West Point (Ga.) Enterprise: We were shown a twenty-dollar bill, Georgia State money, dated 1778, which has the signature of M. Maxwell, Dr. A. W. Greggs' grand-father. The printing and signature are very plain and distinct, though a little faded. It has never been out of the family, and is highly prized as a relic.

—An old lady in Oglethorpe county, Ga., has a metal tomahawk, with which weapon her grand-father was killed by the Indians in the early settlement of that county. The murderous band was afterward pursued and the bloody weapon obtained. The owner prizes the relic very highly, and refuses to part with it.

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, Apr. 6, 1883

G'n Trash and Lugs	$2 50@	$3 00
Common Smokers	3 50	5 00
Colory Smokers	5 00	6 00
Colory Trash	6 50	9 00
Good Br't Trash	10 50	15 00
Fine Br't Trash		none
Fancy Bright Leaf	00 00
Dark Lugs	4 00	5 00
Common Lugs	5 50	7 00
Colory Lugs	7 50	11 00
Good Stripping Lugs	11 50	16 00
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17	24 25
Common Leaf	6	11 00
Com. Med. Leaf	12 50	20 75
Good Med. Leaf	21	24 00
Good Br't Leaf	24 50	27 00
Fine Br't Leaf	27 50	31 25
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 00
Good Lug Fillers	11 50	16
Fine Lug Fillers	18	24
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 00	20 50
Good Med. Fil'rs	21	24
Good L'f Fillers	25 00	27 00
Fine Leaf Fillers	27 50	30 00

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

CENTRAL HOTEL,

BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,

(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

One Fool Among Many.

Wrecked by his Untempered Ambition —A Lighthouse on the Shoals.

"I ought to have stopped five years before I did; but I thought it wouldn't amount to anything, so I kept on. I was a fool, of course—but who isn't, when ambition and the chance of making money spurs him on? I only hope I shall get well enough to digest another square meal some time without a rebellion in my stomach."

The speaker was one of the best known civil engineers and mining experts in this country; hardy by nature as a buffalo, but broken down by hard study and the merciless lashing administered to his mind and body by his own hand during the earlier part of his career. At fifty he is prematurely gray, bent in form and dispirited. Dyspepsia did it—Dyspepsia, the self-inflicted curse of the American in every department of toil.

"I am thirty-five years old," writes Mr. Charles H. Watts, of West Somers, Putnam county, N. Y. and had suffered from dyspepsia for fifteen years. Tried everything. At last gave PARKER'S GINGER TONIC a chance to show what it could do for It proved its ability by curing me. I recommend it to all who are suffering from this dreadful disease." Mr. G. R. Cole, druggist, of Carmel, N. Y. certifies to the truth of Mr. Watts' statment.

Gloom, despondency, hopelessness, disgust with all labor, sleeplessness, horrid dreams to render bed-time like the hour of execution to a criminal—these are some of dyspepsia's foot-prints. The Dyspeptic knows what Coleridge meant when he said: "Night is hell." PARKER'S GINGER TONIC cures Dyspepsia, purifies the Blood, disperses Rheumatism and all chronic ailments. Price, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & Co., New York

ROBERT B. REED

Attorney at Law.

OFFICE AT - - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,

ATTORNEY at LAW,

BURLINGTON, KY.

☞ Office opposite the Boone House. ☜

L. C. NORMAN. M. J. STEPHENS.

NORMAN and STEPHENS,

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tt 81

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES,

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Court and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application to G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

ALBERT W. GAINES,

Attorney and Counselor at Law,

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

S. W. TOLIN,

ATTORNEY AT LAW

BURLINGTON, . . . KY

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt and studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST

Aurora, Indiana.

(Office Over Postoffice)

With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

W. E. VEST,

COUNTY SURVEYOR

WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

BOONE HOUSE,

BURLINGTON, KY.

C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,

—BURLINGTON, KY.,—

Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,

Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accomodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS, Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand

Marble and Granite Monuments,

Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

NOTICE.

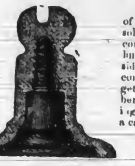
The stockholders of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company are notified that an election for president and four directors to serve the ensuing year will be held in Burlington on the 1st Monday in May 1883. They are also notified that a dividend of 50 cents a share of stock is ready for distribution for which call on J. J. Lillard, Treas. WM. WALTON, Sect'y.

FOR SALE.

A small lot of the celebrated Snowflake potatoes, for table and seed. Also a limited quantity of the Alpha, among the earliest and best variety grown. Price $1 per bushel. Apply soon to Allen Conner at my residence. E. A. TUCKER,
Florence, Ky.

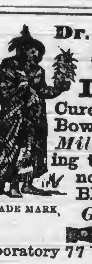
Chambers' Lightning Protecti'n

COMPANY.



Having purchased the right to put up the rods of the above company in Boone and Kenton counties, we solicit your patronage. These rods are constructed on the correct principle; it takes a less number of feet to rod a building and are consequently much the cheaper rods, besides they are ornamental and are the only rods that afford complete protection from lightning and are less liable to get out of repair. Their popularity is attested by the number now in use in Boone and Kenton. Those having buildings to rod will find it to their interest to have us give them a call and fix figures.

W. E. PIPER, CHAS. A. FOWLER.
Burlington, Ky.



TRADE MARK.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the

BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

☞ AGENTS WANTED. ☜

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. mar. 15, '83

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE

Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, March 13, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$547,836 36
Overdrafts		237 29
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		32,503 53
Due from other National banks	6,752 29
Due from State banks and bankers	2,856 39	9,608 68
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,661 66
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,076 59
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,167 11
Bills of other Banks		7,560 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		156 51
Specie		7,810 00
Legal tender notes		17,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$691,867 73

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,200 00
Undivided profits		16,670 14
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	314,454 95
Due to other National Banks	10,891 21
Due to State Banks and bankers	3,151 43	328,497 59
Total		$691,867 73

State of Kentucky, county of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of March, 1883.

RICHARD H GRAY, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:

L. C. STEPHENS,
J. H. MERSMAN,
E. J. HICKEY, } Directors.

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire

INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.

J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.

LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY, JNO. M. MOODY.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,

BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move

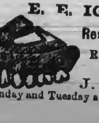
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS

On Short Notice.

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

83-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

E. E. IGOE,



Resident Dentist,

Rising Sun, Ind.

WITH

J. P. Ulrey.

Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2¼ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Alfred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises Title good. For ferther particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, feb 28-3m Burlington, Ky.

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonathan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

1883

THE CINCINNATI NEWS

A DAILY

Democratic Newspaper.

Is published to subscribers at the following

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

By mail postage paid.

Daily and Sunday edition, 1 year	$7
Daily and Sunday edition, 6 months	4
Daily and Sunday edition, 3 months	2

All Subscriptions Invariably in Advance

An extra copy of the paper will be mailed FREE for one year to any person who will raise a club of ten annual subscribers at one postoffice, and forward their names and addresses, together with $60.

BY CARRIER.

Daily and Sunday edition, 15 cents per week, or 65 cents per month, payable to Carrier.

PRICE BY SINGLE COPY.

Daily edition 2c Sunday (double size) 3c

Agents, Carriers, Newsdealers, Newsboys, or any one handling THE NEWS, are required to sell the paper in conformity with the above rates. Address

THE NEWS, Cincinnati, O.

SADDLES AND HARNESS

AND

ALBERT M. ACRA,

BURLINGTON, KY.

HARNESS MAKER

—AND—

DEALER IN SADDLES

Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed. A full line of everything needed by farmers in the harness line.

REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

☞ Give me a call. feb-14-83

—Shop over Rouse's Store.—

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers

(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.

New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday.
Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comor, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

PROSPECTUS
—OF THE—
CINCINNATI ENQUIRER.

Pre-eminently a NEWSPAPER in its truest sense, posessing facilities for gathering news from all quarters of the World, unsurpassed by any other Journal: presenting the same to its readers in a concise form free from coloring and predjudice.

In all cases, it publishes The Truth and Facts, and in matters of general interest, general interest, the fullest possible details are given. It is a paper, untrammeled or clogged in any way by Cliques, Corporations, or Bossism. Treats all persons and parties with fairness, giving a faithful record of all that transpires in the political field without fear or favor.

In matters of Finance and Commerce, its reports are extensive, complete, and accurate; furnished by reliable parties, thoroughly conversant with such matters; making this feature of the Enquirer, one of its best recommendations to the Commercial World.

It is published every day in the year, its extra large size admitting a vasts quantity of reading and miscellaneous information, in its various departements, all of which presents a freshness, characteristic of a live newspaper.

For satisfactory evidence that the Enquirer is all its publisher claims for it, we invite those desiring a first class commercial newspaper to send for specimen copies or short trial subscription.

SEE TERMS FOR

DAILY ENQUIRER.

Sunday and Daily	$1.50	$3.75	7.00	14
Daily except Sun	1.25	3.25	7.00	12
Any three days	65	1.75	3.25	6
Any two days	45	1.25	2.25	4
Any one day	25	65	1.25	2
Sunday Issue	25	65	1.25	[illegible]

THE WEEKLY ENQUIRER

will maintain its present standard of excellence, which has attained for it a circulation of near One Hundred Thousand Copies which fact alone speaks volumns in its favor. It is undeniably one of the best Family Journals printed; large size eight page paper, giving ample room for all the news of the week, and choice selections, Historical Reminiscences, miscellaneous reading, &c.

Its market reports are reliable and extensive, embracing all necessary information that Farmers and Merchants require for intelligent transaction of business, either as buyers or sellers.

Its Farm School embraces letters from all sections of the country treating upon all matters pertaining to Farm, Field, Orchard Ranch, &c.

Its Household department is made unusually interesting to the ladies, by letters from the thrifty housewife in which domestic affairs are ably treated upon.

A corner is reserved for the boys and girls wherein to talk to the outside world. The moral tone of all being in happy accord with pure thought and taste.

THE SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One copy, one year	$1.15
One copy, six months	65

Agents sending us 7 subcribers at above rates are presented with a free copy.

JOHN R. McLEAN, Publisher,

Specimen numbers free. Cincinnati, O.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthama, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instruction for successful treatment at your own home, will be sent you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped self-addressed envelope. DR. M. E. CASS,
201 York street Jersey City, N. J.

☞ Mention this paper. jan 17-83

FREE 85 USEFUL ARTICLES & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, Size 5 x 3, and an Illustrated Book, to all who send two 3c. stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. S. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours Will burn wood 5 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning,

Local News.

Sunday was a beautiful day.

Spiders are numerous this spring.

The garden cleaners were at work last week.

The Dutch measles are shaking the town up.

The ball and bat have come to the front again.

The sheriff had his business well up when court came.

Those who have gardens to make are getting restless.

Diamond Dyes, warranted fast colors at W. E. Piper's.

We are glad to announce that Judge Hawes is improving.

The wheat fields are beginning to show some signs of life.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, at W. E. Piper's.

Georgie Piper took a tussel with the French measles last week.

Our Local Drug Store has a large assortment of Diamond Dyes.

The assembling of the grand jury always creates a slight exodus.

Go to W. F. McKim's and get a package of Diamond Dye for 10 cents.

C. L. Crisler has provided accommodations for those stricken with spring fever.

Keenes Robbins is now proprietor of the Sandford House. See his card in another column.

Lonnie Crisler, son of C. L. Crisler, of the Boone House, has been quite sick since last week.

Boils, sores, and ulcers indicate a bad state of the blood. Ayer's Sarsaparilla eradicates all foul humors.

The rush of job work this office has enjoyed the past month is very agreeable to us to contemplate.

Charles Fowler now looks after localities for which he would like to furnish protection from the electric fluid.

Mrs. Francis Riddell, who has been spending the winter with relatives in Indianapolis, returned home Saturday.

James Conner has provided himself with a gig in which he skips around over the country as light as a feather.

Miss Lucy Ryle and Miss Fannie Duncan, who have been attending school at Glendale, Ohio, returned home last week.

The jury's first verdict: "We of the jury would much rather be at home than here adjusting the troubles of our neighbors."

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

Judge Major arrived last Saturday evening to commence court on Monday morning. The Judge wanted no failure in making connections.

While cutting bushes the other day Geo. Blythe stuck a thorn in the top of his head, from which he suffered excruciating pain for one night.

Z. T. Bondurant, of Missouri, came to Boone last week on business and a visit to his relations here. The west has diminished his corpulency.

The Burlington and Florence pike, Saturday, elected Feelden Rouse, president and W. E. Rouse, J. N. Crisler, Dudley Rouse and Hiram Rouse, directors.

Mr. Gabriel T. Gaines' little son has been quite sick for several days, and Mr. G. is apprehensive of the disease leaving him with a permanent hip trouble.

Samuel Crutcher, of Florence X-Roads, got a piece of steel in one of his hands last week, and an ugly incision was necessary to remove the fragment of metal.

We learn from the Georgetown Times that J. B. Finnell, at one time a citizen of this county, and W. C. Owens, have formed a partnership for the practice of law in Georgetown.

The report has been put in circulation there are about a dozen new divorce suits on the docket at this term of the Circuit Court, which is not the case. There are four.

A little son of Geo. Baker, of Florence X-Roads, met with quite a painful accident last Friday in nearly severving his knee joint by getting it hung on a nail. Dr. Furnish was called in and dressed the wound.

Col. Monfort had a very pleasant trip Sunday week, (the 1st day of April) to Walton on his way to Burlington to attend court. Sunday morning he boasted to his wife nobody would April-fool him that day.

R. C. Walker, of the Crittenden Press has an assistant editor on his staff, and for the benefit of his wife's many friends in this county, we will say it is a fine boy of but a few days sojourn on this mundane sphere.

We have printed bills, in the last week, for public sales as follow: James Tanner, on the 12th; John C. Riley, on the 12th; Enoch Barlow, on the 13th; Andrew Glackin, on the 13th. These are all administrators' sales.

Last Saturday, William Wahl, who had a difficulty with Fred Zimmer, of Constance, some time since, mention of which was made in these columns, was tried and fined $40. The charge against Zimmer was dismissed.

Lost—On Monday the 1st. inst., a double case silver watch with the initials of G. R. W. on the out side of case on the road between Wm. Ryles and the Bruce place on Woolper creek. The finder will please return to W. S. Aera.

Edward Cloud and Sidney Gaines went to Lexington, about two weeks since to attend commercial school. Sid is there yet, but Ed, concluding he did not want to spend the summer in the Bluegrass region, returned last Saturday with his goods and chattles.

Last Saturday while Esquire W. L. Norman's family, of Walton was absent from home a theif entered the house and stole $600 in gold. No clue to the theif or thieves. A few nights before Mr. Norman's store was robbed of some small articles.

Died—On Monday, April 2nd. at 5:30 p. m. Mrs. Eva L. wife of Daniel H. Blasingham, the second oldest daughter of W. H. and H. G. Soards, late of Boone county. The remains were burried in Spring Grove Cemetery on Thursday the 5th inst., from her late residence, No. 140 Barr St., Cincinnati.

While plowing the other day, Mr. John Winston, who resides near Constance, unearthed a silver twenty-five cent piece 101 years old. It was discovered in the bottom of the furrow and was not tarnished in the least. This would be quite an acquisition to Mr. J. W. Calvert's collection of ancient coins.

There were 15 or 16 of Ed Golway's Charley Highlander's colts on exhibition here the first Monday in this month, and all of them were extra good horses, making favor for their sire. The premium, a saddle and bridle, given the best get, was awarded John Hoffman's horse, which was a noble animal for an all purpose horse.

Last week T. D. Goodridge's fast fox hound was killed by Charles Hughes on his father's farm, where it is said the dog was in pursuit of a fox. Not many nights before, Mr. Hughes' flock of sheep had been badly mangled by dogs and his boys had sworn venegance against all dogs found on his premises. The dog in question was a noted fox hound, and had many friends who are indignant.

The following special in regard to the Bellevue B. B. C. for 1883 has been received at this office:

Honas Welsiele, p.; John Deck, c.; P. Lindenburn, s. s., John Kidwell, 1b; Tilford Sullivan, 2b.; A. Q. Baker, 3b; Mike Nolen, r f; Lewis Snyder, c f; Sam Wingate, l f; John Smith, president.

All communications should be addressed to Isaac McMullen, sect'y. The above players are all well known, and remarks in regard to their playing are superfluous.

W. F. McKim will supply his customers with Diamond Dye.

County Court.

Nancy Hauky's will probated.

Jasper Carson released from paying poll tax in future.

C. T. Rice appointed administrator of Jno. C. Riley.

James Tanner's will probated, and Ephriam Tanner qualified as executor.

Nathaniel Green's will probated.

H. C. Botts appointed guardian for Stanley B. Botts and Mary E. Botts.

Commissioners' report in the James Murphy's land division confirmed.

Keene R. Robbins granted license to keep hotel in the Sandford house this place.

N. B. Stephens appointed administrator of Andrew Glackin.

Commissioner's report of the division of John Underhill's land confirmed.

Viewers appointed to view proposed alteration in road leading from Bullitsburg church to mouth of Garrison creek.

Order to take vote on local option in Hamilton precincts in August.

Jameson Aylor and Chris Barlow were appointed administrators of Enoch Barlow.

M. T. Garnett appointed commissioner to make deeds to the parties in Norris' land division.

T. W. Finch ordered to pay Drs. Smith, Grant and Furnish $75 for first quarter pauper practice.

All the beautiful colors of Diamond Dye at W. F. McKim's.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Died—On last Friday night the infant child of W. A. Davis. The remains were placed in the Hebron vault.

Mr. John Aylor is on the sick list.

Mr. Jacob Tanner who has been quite sick for the last few days is able to be out.

Your correspondent entertained quite a number of youngsters on Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Thos. Huron is convalescing.

Several loads of tobacco were hauled from this section to Covington last week.

The farmers are behind with their work. Some have not finished sowing oats, and scarcely any plowing done yet.

Henry Quick has purchased him a little hatchet and gone to work at the carpenters trade.

Rabbit Hash.

No spring school in these parts, because those begun in the winter are still lingering

J. M. Moody, of Bellevue, was in our neighborhood two days last week on official business.

Our assessor spent last week in this section, and has about finished his work in this district.

A few days ago John P. Ryle shipped tobacco to Cincinnati, for which he had been offered only 5c by buyers at home, but realized 17½c in the Cincinnati market.

Miss Mary Stephens is spending the week with friends in Petersburg.

D. W. Calvert, of the Cincinnati News, spent Sunday in our midst.

Miss Pamelia Stephens visited friends in our neighborhood last week.

Several days ago a valuable mule belonging to Mrs M. McConnell had its leg broken.

S. Stephens has engaged his fine flock of lambs to J H Walton.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Verona.

Our Sunday-school, under the management of Mr. Wm. Carlisle has continued all winter, with good attendance. Mr. C. is a good Sunday-school worker, and deserves a great deal of credit for the work he has done.

The Bonner Bro's. show did not come off at the Fry school house as advertised. A great many were disappointed.

Last Saturday while the evening train on the Southern road was near this place the engine and baggage car were thrown from the track. All escaped injury except the engineer and fireman who were considerably bruised.

Mr. Clatterbuck was in this past of the county last week collecting taxes.

Erlanger, Kenton County.

Erlanger is a little village situated at the junction of the Lexington & Covington Turnpike and Cin. So. R. R., and is one of the live villages of Northern Kentucky. Eight passenger trains, four North and four South, and two mail trains pass the place each day, and all making a stop.

At the Erlanger Hotel with John L. Conner as proprietor, everything seems to go with a boom.

The following is the time card of the Southern Railroad at this station:

Trains South.		Trains North.
No. 17.	7:55 a. m.	No. 6	6:35 a. m.
" 1	9:26 a. m.	" 4	10:00 a. m.
" 3	3:27 p. m.	" 18	5:00 p. m.
" 5	9:05 p. m.	" 2	5:40 p. m.

Plattsburg

There is much talk of building a Methodist church in our town. There is not a community in the county that stands in need of a church and regular pastor as badly as this. Let some energetic person make the move, and then we will see what we'll see. We would suggest Uncle Henry Smith as a suitable person to start the work.

Mr. John Johnson has invented a lever for a horsepower thresher, which, by hitching one horse to the end of it, gives as much power to the thresher as if it had 8 or 10 horses attached by an ordinary horse power. This is no humbug, but a dead certainty.

The reason that Charlie Schramm is always in such a good humor is J. Frank tells him that bird story about twice a day.

Mr. Jack Hoffman has in his possession a thousand dollar Confederate bill.

Rev. Froh's last sermon at Ashby Fork was one of the best ever heard in Woolper valley.

Union.

The Union Transfer Co., composed of Blanton and Fullilove, established their quarters in the Matson lane, on Friday morning last.

Making hot-beds is the present and future occupation of the Union gardeners.—[Where do they get their heat?—Eds.]

Now it's hoe-cake and waiter,
But it'll soon be lettuce and 'tater

Frank Brentz and wife, Robert Chambers, Miss Jennie Graves and Miss Bettie Smith, are all well or convalescing.

L. B. Stephens, now in Altoona, Florida, will return the first of next month. Wm. Hudson and 'Squire Sam T. Johnson have just returned from Florida, and like him have the Florida fever, and we may expect them to be Floridians.

The Baptist church talks of maintaining its own Sunday-school.

Everybody busy when the weather will admit.

John Hoggins has sold his fine gray gelding to a Paris buyer for $350.

The genial smile of A. G. Winston, atty., greeted our town, Thursday last.

Many new landlords and as many new tenants.

The abiding fruits of Bro. Dunlap's labors among us is seen in the walk of many of our best citizens, and all Union appreciate him as a genial gentleman and personal friend.

Bellevue.

Spring struck this place last Wednesday night and the frogs had their first opera. There was some loud croaking done—especially the bass part. From present indications this will be garden week here.

Ezekiel Rice has sold his fine three year-old colt to Mr. Selmes, of St. Paul, Minn. Price $175.

Mr. B. F. Garnett's new residence is nearly completed, when finished we learn that he will occupy it and that Mr. J. S. Huey and family will occupy his old residence.

Our friend Robt. W. Rice has gone to North Manchester, Ind., where he expects to spend the summer.

The river is on another boom and is now getting near the top of the bank and rising

Tobacco plants are making their appearance.

Judge T. H. Baker is at home shaking hands with old friends, and looking well.

Last Saturday night a most distressing accident hapened at Mr. Cy Kelley's His mother-in-law, Mrs. Griffith, of Gent, Ky. before retiring for the night started to the kitchen to get a drink of water and in the dark mistook the stairway for the kitchen door and stepped off, falling a distance of 20 feet where she was picked up and taken back to her room. Dr. Piatt was called and after making examination found that her left arm was broken near the shoulder, also that she was hurt about the head and breast. She is suffering very much from her injuries at present, which we hope are nothing more than the broken arm.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics. Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green.
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.
dec. 20-6m

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf29 J. W. Talbott.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - - Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.
HENRY ROSS, Adm'r.

FOUND.

Near Bellevue, Boone county, Ky., since the flood a lot of Stone Mason's tools. The owner can have the same by proving property and paying charges.
W. W. GRANT, JAS. SMITH,
Bellevue, Boone county, Ky.

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

FOR SALE.

In Burlington, Boone county, Ky.
A BRICK HOUSE,

containing ten rooms, attic, cellar and out buildings, with four half acre lots attached. The late residence of Mrs. C. S. Tousey. The cellar contains a good kitchen, dining room and two other rooms. The buildings and premises are in good repair.

For terms apply to
GREEN & RIDDELL,
Burlington, Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to me are requested to come forward and settle at once, as I will leave Burlington in a short time. By coming up and settling you will save expense.
W. L. GEDGE.

Rev. Father Wilds'
EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS
—Best Purgative Medicine—
cure Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, and all Billous Disorders.
Sold everywhere. Always reliable.

MOODY'S Boarding School
For Teaching all Branches of Dress Cutting, and every garment worn by lady or child; also, SEWING, TRIMMING, DRAPING, and all the FINISHING PARTS of
—DRESSMAKING!—
Position Guaranteed if Desired.
LADIES living out of the city BOARDED FREE while learning.
Address:
D. W. MOODY & CO.
31 West Ninth St.
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles [illegible] needed [illegible] Liberal terms. [illegible] Garretson & Co., [illegible]

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
R FANCY & STAPLE
O GROCERIES,
ROUSE.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
Jeans, Flannels, Nubias, Scarfs,
S
E
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

DRUGS & MEDICINES

I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.

I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
☞Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.

N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

TO BUYERS.
I have for the spring trade a clean and carefully selected stock of Goods with prices marked to suit the times.

IN DRY GOODS,
Brocades, Cashmeres, Indigo Blue Calicoes, Prints, Ginghams, Cheviot Shirting, Brown and Bleached Muslins and double width Sheeting, Pillow Case Muslin, Jeans and Cottonades, Crashes, Table Linen and Napkins.

IN WHITE and FANCY GOODS,
Nainsook, Lawn, Swiss, Jackonet, Hamburg Embroideries, Laces, Ladies' Collars and Ties, Toilet towels, Ribbons and Buttons.

Floor and Table Oil Cloth in new Style Patterns.

Carpet Chain in fast colors.

Rubber Coats and Leggins—Overalls and Jackets.

In Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware and Woodenware my stock is complete.

Flour and Salt always on hand.

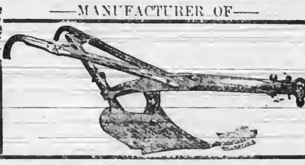
A Full stock of FANCY & STALPE Groceries.

Cash paid for country produce or will take in exchange for goods.

Orders for Goods not in stock, gladly and promptly filled.

Yours Truly, W. E. PIPER.

WILLIAM CLORE,
—MANUFACTURER OF—
Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,



Single & Double Shovels,
Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.
RISING SUN, - - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING

We keep constantly on hand all sizes of
BURIAL CASES AND CASKET.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES guaranteed less than city rates.
SOARDS & DAVIS. Hebron, Ky

Amusing the Children.

Many of the household recipes printed in the newspapers are glaring frauds, calculated to engender trouble and cause infelicity in the domestic circle.

The other morning Mr. Newbanks read in his favorite journal an article on "How to Amuse the Children at Home." The following formula was one of the plans suggested:

"Plaster-of-Paris is cheap; let the children have some to mix with water, and pour into anything hollow, as, for instance, the halves of old tin animals which have been parted asunder, and the result will delight their young souls."

This scheme favorably impressed Mr. Newbanks. It possessed many advantages over such juvenile pastimes as constructing mud pies, falling into ponds, and stoning the neighbors' cats and dogs, and was designed to develop an artistic taste in the children.

In the afternoon, as Mr. Newbanks was deeply absorbed in the composition of an elaborate paper on the "Invisibility of the Unseenness" for a scientific monthly, his wife entered the library and impulsively exclaimed, in a sentence wholly innocent of punctuation points:

"Now William I'm going out a couple of hours and do see if you can't keep the children out of mischief until I return and is my bonnet on straight?"

"Oh, there'll be no trouble about the children—don't worry about 'em," said Mr. Newbanks, confidently, without looking up from his writing. "Your bonnet's all right."

The plaster-of-Paris project was still fresh in Mr. N.'s mind, and after the departure of his wife he summoned his children—two lively boys and a ditto girl—and read them the simple directions of the recipe. Then he procured a peck of the plaster and instructed them how to mix and use it, "delighting their young souls" by imprudently pouring a quantity of the stuff into a small bottle, which he afterward broke and showed them the "result." He knew from the eagerness manifested by the little ones to test the recipe that it was going to be an overwhelming success; and providing them with a number of hollow things with which to experiment, he left them, with the injunction to "amuse themselves and keep out of mischief." Then he returned to his library, and resumed work on his scientific essay.

The children remained very quiet, and Mr. Newbank's favorable opinion of the recipe steadily increased as the hours went thundering down the ages.

"The women-folks," he soliloquized, fixing his eyes on a handsome monogram pen-wiper, and instinctively wiping his pen on his coat sleeve, "are forever prating and moaning about being 'worried nearly to death by the children,' and having the 'life worried out of them,' and all that sort of nonsense. Why, it is the simplest thing in the world to amuse the little ones and keep them out of misch—"

"Papa, I can't get this out," said little Tommy, breaking in upon his parent's reflections. "You fix it." And Tommy placed on the table his father's twenty dollar meerschaum pipe—a highly prized Christmas gift—the bowl of which he had filled with plaster, and then essayed to crack the "mould," as his father had treated the bottle.

Mr. Newbanks rapidly grasped the situation, and his opinion of the recipe fell to zero as if by magic. Seizing Tommy by the arm, he angrily exclaimed: "Why, you little rasc—"

"Papa! papa!" cried Rose, rushing into the library, with her eyes full of delight, and her dress full of the mixture, "come out an' see what Charlie's doin'."

"Why, Rosie," said the father, with considerable asperity, "just look at your dress! My! my! I'll have to—"

"Wow! Woo-ooo-oow-ouch-wow!" screamed Charlie, dashing into the room at this juncture, with blood oozing from a war map on his left cheek, and his hair matted with plaster. "Wow-ooo-wow!"

"Why, what in the world is the matter, Charlie?" anxiously questioned the father. "What has happened?"

And Charlie said: "It was—boo-hoo—the cat."

Mr. Newbanks soon discovered that children had litterally followed the newspaper directions and poured the plaster "into anything hollow;" and if the author of the recipe had made his appearance at that moment he would have been assassinated on the spot. Charlie had discovered a cavity in the cat's ear, and, despite the animal's terrible spitting and swearing, insisted upon filling it with plaster, and only desisted when the feline further showed her disapprobation of the scheme by inserting a couple of claws in the little fellow's cheek.

Mr. Newbanks was constrained to admit that while this mode of amusing the children might delight their young souls, it had a decidedly antipodal effect on the more mature spirit. With gloomy forebodings he made a reconnoisance of the premises, and found the following among other "hollow things" which had been brought into requisition to amuse the children and keep them out of mischief:

Mamma's seventy-five dollar Japanese vase, badly battered in the effort to loosen the plaster; little Tommy's savings bank, the contents of which, when removed, delighted their young souls by bearing a striking resemblance to a lump of cream candy interspersed with walnut kernels; the waste-pipe in the bath-tub (plumber's bill for repairs, $11.45; papa's curious bronze inkstand, a relic of the Centennial—had never been soiled with ink—badly damaged; key-hole of the door (bill for removing the plaster, $1.25); Rosie's pocket—a rather brilliant idea, but a dismal failure in an artistic point of view.

When Mrs. Newbanks returned home she surprised her husband surveying the ruins—or "mess," as she termed it—and from the significant manner in which she elevated her hands and fixed her eyes upon him he correctly inferred that she was about to make some derogatory remarks, and not wishing to interrupt her oratory or dam her flow of eloquence, he rushed from the house with the explanation that he must be at the post-office before the mail closed, and he had only three minutes to spare. All he heard, as he shot out of the door, was,

"Just as I expected."—Editor's Drawer, in Harper's Magazine.

—A Cleveland young man came to grief when he attempted a flirtation in a street car with the wife of a fireman. The woman was accompanied by her husband, who noticed the impudent attempt and resented the insult by thrashing the heart-crusher then and there.—Chicago Herald.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—The Chinese Government has taken strong measures to put a stop to the growth of opium in Shing King; in some instances the crops have been purposely destroyed.

—In Paris they make artificial ears. They are good for everything but hearing, and a blessing to the wearer, who is thus enabled to "turn a deaf ear" to duns, slanders and appeals for charity.

—The tunnel under the English Channel has been finished to a mile and a quarter from the French shore, and the engineers say they can advance 132 feet a day. At this rate the tunnel could be completed to Dover in a year and a half.

—The analeps, a viviparous fish of Eastern Asia, has a singular eye. It is divided horizontally into two hemispheres by a membraneous band. Each half is a perfect organ of vision. The two upper halves are long-sighted, and the two lower ones near-sighted.

—Two ladies of Rome, the last descendants of Amerigo Vespucci, who gave the name of America to the Western hemisphere, are now begging that the pension of ten crowns per month, which was assigned to their family by the Republic of Florence in 1690 be restored to them.

—Prince Gortschakoff's diplomatic career extended over the reigns of four Czars, Nicholas and the three Alexanders. His life extended over the reigns of six. The tremendous Catharine I. was Empress when he was born. He saw five Romanoffs and their great ancestress, Catharine, on the throne of Russia during his eventful lifetime.

—A drill-master at the Naval Academy was a determined stutterer. One day he was drilling a squad of cadets who were marching toward the Severn. As they neared the sea wall the Lieutenant attempted to halt them. The word hung fire. Overboard the mischievous cadets went. The Lieutenant took the precaution to tell his men the next time he did not get "halt" out they needn't go overboard.—London Times.

—A startling plot for a three-volume novel has just come to light in England. Early last summer a woman named Eliza Ebbon disappeared. A dead body was found, identified by friends, and a man named Stratton tried and condemned for the murder. His reason gave way, and he was subsequently reprieved and sent to Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum, and now Eliza Ebbon is discovered alive and well.

—A glover's apprentice at Prague, about eighteen years of age, hanged himself the other day, and left behind him a letter to his parents stating that he had been selected by a secret society to take the life of one of the chief officers of the police of the city—Police Director Steipkal—and that he had committed suicide in order to evade the performance of this task. If he had not carried out the behests of the secret organization, the writer added, he would himself have been assassinated by his colleagues.

—The census returns of India show an aggregate of over 3,000 professional acrobats in the northwest provinces and Oudh. There are 1,100 actors, 3,000 ballad singers, 146 curers by incantation, thirty-three gamblers, ninety-seven snake-charmers, fifty matchmakers, four poets, 10,000 singers and dancers, four story tellers, seven thieves (not including persons returned as household servants), and some professionals whose ancestors were probably among the Catilinarian retinues. Three classes of persons are worth a separate numerical quotation. There are over 7,500,000 cultivators of the soil. The landholders number nearly 10,000. The number of money-lenders is nearly 40,000.

Chinese Lottery.

"Som Toy," or Chinese lottery, is the most complicated of all games of chance. No set values are given to the drawings, for each prize depends upon certain mathematical calculations, in some cases occupying nearly an hour in computation. The player seats himself at a table on which are finely pointed bamboo brushes called pens, dishes of black and red Chinese ink and piles of square paper, stamped in Chinese characters. The lottery ticket is a piece of brown paper, six inches square. The paper is divided through the centre by a lateral line. On the upper half of the paper are four lateral rows of characters, of ten each, or forty in all, and the lowest half has a like number and arrangement, making eighty characters in all. These characters are hieroglyphics, representing names of eighty Chinese ladies of historical renown—the Elizabeths, Catharines and Joan d'Arcs of Chinese history. These slips of paper are sent out to the lottery agencies. The game consists in hitting upon a certain combination or number, as the case may be, of these numbers. The player is permitted, in consideration of $1.25 paid, to purchase and mark a ticket. The marking consists in spotting out with the black ink ten of the characters in whatever place or position the player may choose, either on one line, in a cluster, or scatteringly. Then the agent, with owl-like gravity, spots out a duplicate ticket, marks your name and the price you pay upon the side of the ticket in Chinese characters, and invites the player to call around next day and see what fortune may have favored him with. Drawings take place at midnight. In New York there are two great companies, each with a capital of about $50,000. They are called the Wing Hi and Hong Sing Companies. Wing Hi has the most patrons, although many players play both tickets indifferently. White men play Wing Hi almost exclusively.

The midnight hour having arrived, the agents congregate at the company's office with books containing fac-similes of the day's drawings. The bookseller settles with the agents, paying them their commissions. Then a gong rings, and the agents, together with the president and officers of the company, repair to the place set apart for the drawing. No one save the officers and agents are ever permitted to view the drawings. The writer never met a white man, even among the detectives in San Francisco, who claimed to have witnessed one of these drawings. The process of drawing is prefaced with mysterious religious exercises to propitiate the presiding gods. Then the President, blindfolded, inserts his hand to the elbow in a large jar and draws forth a little stick, upon which is painted one of the characters found upon the tickets. The name is called out, and all the agents write the characters upon slips. There are eighty of these "Som Toy" sticks, corresponding to the number and names of the characters upon the tickets. Twenty in all are drawn out by the President and recorded. Then the sticks are thrown back and shaken up for the next night's drawings. The names drawn are then spotted out in red ink upon tickets by the agents. The lottery officers eagerly scan the tickets sold to ascertain if they have met with heavy losses. If an unusually heavy series of losses is discovered, the company at once discards its untrustworthy patron deity, and selects another. If the losses are light or nominal, the President sets out baked meats and comfits for the patrons' edification, and hangs up congratulatory prayers.

In the morning the players compare their tickets. If they have caught five out of the twenty spots they receive two dollars; if six spots, they are paid twenty dollars; if seven, $140. Eight spots, which are very rarely caught, reap a golden harvest for the lucky gambler, for he collects $600, and nine and ten spots, which have on rare occasions been drawn, but never in New York, pay $2,400 and $15,000. These are what are called "white men's" tickets, because white men play them exclusively. Players may buy half, quarter and even one-tenth tickets. For the latter fifteen cents is charged, and but one-thirteenth part of the prize is paid. In this city hundreds of white men play at Chinese faro. For the most part they are the poor Italians who live in the vicinity, but many men, and even women, who employ Chinese laundrymen, deal in lottery; the Chinaman purchasing the tickets and collecting the prizes. In fact, many of the wash houses are branch agencies.

The mania for playing at Chinese lottery is spreading, and there is no reason why it should not get as firm a hold upon white people here as in San Francisco. There thousands play at the game. Three hundred lottery agencies are scattered over the town. They usually make a show of selling cigars. Elegantly dressed gentlemen may be seen to dodge into the doorways where the agency is located. The Chinese house servant is an almost universal institution, and he never misses his opportunity to introduce to his mistress the mysteries of the game. The lady will invest a dime or two bits in a ticket, just for the novelty, and if she wins a small prize keep on playing from day to day or week to week, until she draws a large prize. In that event she looks for another servant, for John has failed to come back with the winning. One lottery agency near the Palace Hotel does a large business with the ladies, many of the tickets going direct into the hotel. The police make constant efforts to break up the games, but as fast as they raid one shop another opens, and the law has been interpreted to exempt visitors at the dens. As the main offices of the companies move weekly and are located with great secrecy, the chief culprits can not be caught. The company always pays the agent's fine. There are seven great companies in San Francisco, with an aggregated capital of several millions. The greatest is the Fook Ti Company.

In this city, as in San Francisco, the Chinese themselves play at what they call the "high-low" game, in which the prize is not a set figure, but varies with the combinations. Many more spots are marked out than in the white man's game, and the player may pay as high as $100 for one ticket. Enormous prizes are sometimes drawn at this "high-low" lottery. Lucky combinations have been known to break the bank. The largest winning ever made in this city was about one month ago, when Wing Hi paid a Chinaman over $7,000 on a $2.50 "high-low" ticket. The largest drawing made by a white man was made by an Italian, who struck eight spots, drew $600, and went upon a glorious spree in celebration of the event. When he sobered up he found that he had been robbed of all his money. The game becomes rapidly popular because it does not expose the votary to any danger of disgrace, for an accommodating Chinaman may always be found who is willing for a small consideration to act as messenger between the agency and the player. The investment is small, the drawings rapid. The companies are scrupulously honest in their dealings with their patrons, and although agents sometimes swindle green players, the man who is willing to brave the loathsome surroundings and disgusting odors of a Chinese gambling den will generally obtain his prize. Any laundryman who knows that his customer is not in collusion with the police will introduce him to the game; and therein lies the danger.—N. Y. Sun.

Painting House Walls.

If a plastered wall be new, and has not been whitewashed, it will do to size it with glue water; but if it has been calcimined or whitewashed, which is often the case, no glue sizing should ever touch it. Any preparation of that kind is liable, sooner or later, to peel off and spoil the surface for any future finish. A safer way is to take oil and coat the whole surface before painting, which makes a fast union of any wash to the wall. On such a base oil paints will adhere perfectly.

But the principal trouble in painting walls is found in the defective character of the plastering. If one is building a house, he can place the studding twelve inches from center to center, so that strong laths will not spring and break up the mortar at every pressure. The laths, too, should be spread one-fourth of an inch apart, and the mortar have twelve pounds of hair to the barrel of lime. This will make a wall that will stand like the walls of the houses plastered a hundred years ago. The reason why the plastering falls off from our modern houses is because the laths are laid so close that the immediate swelling cuts off the clinch, and the mortar is usually too sandy, and has but six pounds of hair. On such a surface are laid three coats, when the clinch will fail to hold one. Professional lathers or masons themselves ought to lay the laths and be sure of a large spread; then if the mortar is strong or rich, with plenty of hair, there can be no falling off. I have seen many houses so poorly plastered that the entire surface had to be cleaned off and replastered after a few years. A person coming into possession of such a dwelling, no sooner gets the walls well painted to his taste than they begin to break up and disfigure the whole work. If you are sure the work is well done, the ceiling as well as the side walls may be painted to advantage. When any portion becomes soiled or smoked, it will then be an easy matter to wash it off. Rooms once thoroughly prepared in that way last for a life-time and always look substantial and neat. In case of cracks, make some putty of the same color as the paint and fill up.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

—The entire problem of aerial navigation has been solved by a man in Buffalo. He has devised a something which looks like an ordinary steam yacht, with innumerable wings or outriggers, and with it he will circumnavigate the globe and penetrate the heretofore impenetrable strata of the upper air. Steam is to be the motor when the invention shall have proved a success. For experimental purposes, however, he is constructing a smaller air-craft that will be operated by man power. Ten men will be necessary to "punch the breeze" for this experimental craft; but those ten men have not yet been found. After they shall have been recruited more will be known about the experiment.

Meat for the Poor.

It will perhaps surprise some people to hear that there are still agricultural villages where the laborers do not taste "a bite of butcher's meat" from one year's end to another. One such village is High Roding, in Essex, if one may judge from an interesting letter in last week's Guardian. It is commonly supposed that by the time beef-tea has been made out of a piece of meat all the "goodness" has gone, and the residue is generally sold by the London hospitals at a ridiculously low price to feed pigs. In fact, however, the extraction of the beef-tea only removes such of the "goodness" as is soluable in water, and the residue, although "insipid and not remarkably digestible," is still "really nutritious." Most people, by the way, have probably eaten something of the kind to their cost in the shape of the bouilli, which is a standing dish at small French inns. However, this residue of beef is highly appreciated down in Essex, and the first of the laborers who tasted it exclaimed: "Ah, if I had some of this every day it would make a new man of me." The vicar has now obtained large consignments of it from some of the hospitals, and it is eagerly bought by villages at a price sufficient to repay the prime charge and the cost of carriage. What proportion of our agricultural population, one wonders, would be equally glad to get this husk of meat which has hitherto been feeding the pigs?—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Toothsome Morsel.

This from the Madison (Wis.) Democrat, conveys its own moral: Hold on! We are cognizant of the fact that an aching tooth was last night cured by the application of St. Jacobs Oil. The young fellow got mad over his raging tooth in the ball room, and rushed straightway to a drug store where he applied the good old German Remedy; in ten minutes the toothache had gone.

SIZE ain't everything. A watch ticking can be heard further than a bed ticking.—San Francisco Post.

"Do Likewise."

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.—"Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine trouble. Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room alone. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and using the local treatment recommended in your 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' In three months I was perfectly cured. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for them and inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and earnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks stating that they had commenced the treatment and were much better already."

MRS. E. F. MORGAN, New Castle, Me.

DIED in the wool—a defunct sheep.—N. Y. Advertiser.

THE LOST CHILD.

A FATE WORSE THAN ABDUCTION.

How Parents, by a Lack of Precaution and Care, are Responsible for the Death of Their Children.

(Camden, Me., Herald.)

The moral and legal responsibility of parents, in the care of their children is, fortunately, attracting the serious attention of the better portion of the entire country. The many instances of child beating, oppression, and other forms of cruelty which have come to light, demand that something be done; and it is gratifying to know that the people are becoming thoroughly aroused. Whether the cruelty be in the form of physical violence or physical neglect matters not—the principle in both cases is the same. The man or woman who neglects his or her own health may be pardoned, as the consequences fall upon the individual alone; but the parent or guardian who permits the inroads of disease upon the innocent ones dependent upon him for protection, is criminally liable in the sight of God, however he may appear in the eyes of men. There are, however, parents that intend to care for their children, but, who through carelessness or the urgency of other duties, permit them to become the innocent victims of disease. Such parents may be guiltless of intentional wrong, but the disastrous results upon their children are just as great.

These are truths which must be manifest to every worthy parent and especially in a vicinity where the unknown effects of the atmosphere, the water and the general tendency to malaria are so great. There are many families in this locality who have been called upon to mourn untimely losses, even when the greatest care was exercised; but the experience of one only will be given: It is that of the late W. O. Thomas. The children were all most promising, but for some unexplained reason their health and strength seemed to gradually lessen until their friends feared they were the victims of consumption. One by one, they sickened and died until three had departed and two of the surviving brothers were also taken ill. Their names were Hermon and Edward. Hermon, however, seemed the stronger of the two; and, while his younger brother was confined to the house constantly, and to his bed much of the time, Hermon was able to be about but in so weak a condition that he had no desire to play. Eddie's symptoms were terrible! He found difficulty in retaining food upon his stomach, was restless and irritable, and out of his head frequently. At various times three different physicians visited him; and each one told his friends he could not live. He finally got so low that death was only considered a matter of a few days. At that critical time his elder brothers, aroused almost to the pitch of desperation by the three deaths that had so recently occurred, and the other one staring them in the face, resolved to take the case into their own hands. They accordingly did so, and secured a remedy that was then being universally used, and began giving it to him. Its effect at first was slight, but any improvement was considered a good symptom. By degrees his strength returned; he was able to eat with a relish, then walk about the house; and finally he regained complete health and strength. The boy was so rejoiced over his recovery that, accompanied by the editor of this paper, he went before Justice Charles K. Miller and made oath to the facts of his sickness as above related, and that he was restored to perfect health by the use of Werner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Now, Edward Thomas' parents, while they lived, undoubtedly, provided faithfully for the wants of all their children; and yet the seeds of disease had taken deep root. Their care in one direction had been counteracted by unknown carelessness in another. Their love was sincere, but wholly misdirected. They should have known that children are just as liable to kidney and liver diseases as grown up people; and that the fatality of Bright's disease of the kidneys is just as great among little children as with adults. This is a serious subject. Hereditary traits: the after consequences of measles and scarlet fever, diphtheria and the passing troubles which so easily become chronic, all demand the greatest care and caution. No case of cholera infantum, measles, scarlatina, or diphtheria was ever virulent while the child's kidneys and liver were healthy. It would simply be an impossibility. These important organs of the body are just forming within the child and growing with its growth; and they can be trained to strength and health as readily as the little mind can be trained to truth and uprightness.

The importance of carefully watching the slightest troubles of the child, and especially those affecting the kidneys and liver, can not be too strongly emphasized. Children respond so readily to the proper remedies and are so sensitive to disease, that it is a sin to deprive them of one at the risk of incurring the other. By a judicious treatment these essential organs can be developed so that a strong constitution, able to resist the inroads of disease through coming years, shall be the result.

A BALD-HEADED eagle is no more the harbinger of spring than a bald-headed man is of a missing heir.

DR. PIERCE'S "Pellets," or sugar-coated granules—the original "Little Liver Pills," (beware of imitations)—cure sick and bilious headache, cleanse the stomach and bowels, and purify the blood. To get genuine, see Dr. Pierce's signature and portrait on Government stamp. 25 cents per vial, by druggists.

WHEN a pick-pocket gets out of practice it takes a long while for him to get his hand in.—Yonkers Statesman.

A MACHINE for pressing hops has recently been invented. America is the home of the hop-pressed.

The Testimony of a Physician.

James Beecher, M. D., of Sigournay, Iowa, says for several years I have been using a Cough Balsam, called DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and in almost every case throughout my practice I have had entire success. I have used and prescribed hundreds of bottles ever since the days of my army practice (1863), when I was surgeon of Hospital No. 7, Louisville, Ky.

THE photographer's business is always at a stand-still.

"Beauty Unadorned (With Pimples) is Adorned the Most."

If you desire a fair complexion free from pimples, blotches and eruptions, take "Golden Medical Discovery." By druggists.

THE most humorous member of a dog is the wag of his tail.

Personal.

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B. —No risk is incurred, as thirty day's trial is allowed.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar Quickly silences a distressing cough. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are a sure remedy for Bronchitis and Hoarseness.

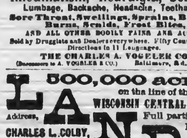
GET Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners for those new boots or shoes before you run them over.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, April 6, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—Common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 5 85
HOGS—Common	6 25	@ 8 85
Good packers	7 15	@ 7 65
SHEEP	5 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@ 5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 12	@ 1 13
No. 2 winter red	1 10	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	55	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	45¾	@ 45¾
Rye—No. 2	62	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@11 50
HEMP Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	18 50	@
Lard—Steam	11-10	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	43	@
Prime Creamery	40	@ 43
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per barrel, from store	2 50	@ 2 75
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 25	@ 5 85
Good to choice	[illegible]	@ 7 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 19	@ 1 19¾
No. 1 white	1 11	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	65	@ 65¾
Oats—mixed	52	@ 54
PORK—Mess	19 15	@19 30
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 red	85¼	@ 86
Corn No. 2	49	@ 51¼
Oats—No. 2	42	@
Rye	57	@
PORK—Mess	18 05	@18 07½
LARD—Steam	11-42½	@11-45
WHISKY	1 17	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 18½	@ 1 18⅝
Corn—mixed	65¼	@
Oats—mixed	50	@ 51
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 05	@ 1 07
Corn—mixed	51	@
Oats—mixed	45	@
PORK—Mess	19 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 08¼	@
CORN	49¾	@
OATS—mixed	43¾	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	3 75	@ 4 50

ST. JACOBS OIL



THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

500,000 acres on the line of the WISCONSIN CENTRAL R. R. LANDS Address, CHARLES L. COLBY, Land Commissioner MILWAUKEE, WIS. Full particulars FREE. IN WISCONSIN.

WANTED---AGENTS. To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first-class and fast selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free. DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR [illegible] L. A. L. SMITH & CO. Sole Agts, Palatine, Ill.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

$65 A MONTH and board for TEACHERS Students, Young Men and Ladies, in a light, pleasant Business, in your own county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., 915 Arch St., Philadelphia.

GUNS Pistols, &c., at Wholesale Rates. A Good 7-Shot Revolver $1.00, Fine Twist Guns $10.25, &c., &c. Send for our new Price-List, FREE. Good Agents Wanted. Address A. G. Alford & Co., No. 3 S. Howard St., Baltimore, Md.

WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT. SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 25c. Circular free. J. S. BIRCH & CO., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

THE BIGGEST THING OUT Illustrated Book Sent Free. (new) E. F. NASON & CO., 111 Nassau St., N. Y.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

$10 A DAY at home, no peddling. Terms free. C. E. BOWEN, Box Z, BROCKTON, Mass.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

Egg Hatchers. $10 to $50. 12 years experience. DAY BROS., Baltimore, Md.

ELECTRIC BELT $3 or $1 BATTERY can CURE You. Book free. Agents. Future Remedy Co., Cleveland, O.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

Hear What One Member of the Profession Testifies Regarding the Scientific Preparation of a Brother Member.

MR. DAWLEY has been in the drug business in the city of Providence twenty-five years as clerk and proprietor in good standing, and knows whereof he affirms.—ED.

Dr. D. says: "For many years I have suffered, intensely at times, with what is generally called rheumatism. When first attacked I was confined to my bed and could not walk a step. I could not bear the weight of the bedclothes, so excruciating was the agony I endured. I always noticed that before these attacks came on my kidneys were affected; before there would be any pain in my limbs or any swelling of joints or limbs, the color of the secretions from the kidneys would be very dark and the odor strong and feverish. The last attack was very severe, about five years ago, and I was confined to the house several weeks, and was unable to attend to business in three months. During the time I was confined at home and the time of my convalescence I employed four of the best doctors that I could obtain, but none of them gave me permanent relief, for they did not go to work at the cause of the trouble. Having been acquainted with the proprietor of Hunt's Remedy a long time I was induced by him to give it a trial, hoping that it might reach the seat of the disease; and after taking one bottle I found myself very much improved, and after taking the second I was feeling better than I had after any previous attacks. During many months previous to taking Hunt's Remedy my hands and fingers would be much swollen and stiff every morning; my left side, in the region of stomach and spleen, was very lame and sensitive; at times I would be taken with severe cramps over the spleen, and be obliged to apply mustard or cayenne for temporary relief; I was very nervous nights and could not sleep; I was obliged to be very particular in my diet, and my physical system was sadly demoralized. Since I have taken Hunt's Remedy systematically all these things have changed; I have no swollen hands or limbs; no pains or cramps in the side, can eat all kinds of food, sleep soundly and get thoroughly rested, and my kidneys are active and perform their functions promptly, thus taking out of the system all the poisonous secretions which contaminate the whole system where the kidneys do not act efficiently. My friends, what Hunt's Remedy has done for me it will do for all of you. I believe it to be the only sure cure for all diseases of the Kidneys, Liver and Urinary organs. Respectfully,

E. R. DAWLEY, 451 Broad Street."

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

What the great restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will do, must be gathered from what it has done. It has effected radical cures in thousands of cases of dyspepsia, bilious disorders, intermittent fever, nervous affections, general debility, constipation, sick headache, mental despondency, and the peculiar complaints and disabilities to which the feeble are so subject. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE. TRY IT USE IT. It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 98 Fulton Street, N. Y.

THE SUN INTERESTING AND CANDID. The superfluous words and phrases of ancient journalism were long ago discarded by THE SUN. It reports in a fresh, succinct, unconventional way all the news of the world, and it says exactly what it thinks about men and events. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 100

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C. O. D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

THE Popular Pianoforte
METHOD.
A Third of a Million Copies sold to date.

There has been no more successful instruction book ever published than RICHARDSON'S NEW METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE. By NATHAN RICHARDSON. Price, $3.25. AMERICAN OR FOREIGN FINGERING. It has been carefully revised many times, is absolutely without errors, and may be termed a "perfect" music book. Its graded system is thoroughly progressive, its course of musical study eminently practical and comprehensive, and its selection of pieces for recreation judicious and pleasing. It is the only true "RICHARDSON," and should be ordered by its full title: Richardson's New Method for the Pianoforte. Published by OLIVER DITSON & CO., Boston. C. H. DITSON & CO., 867 Broadway, N. Y.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS. We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

10 Valuable Books Sent FREE! The Fireside at Home is one of the most charming illustrated Literary and Family Papers published. Every number contains 16 mammoth pages, 64 columns, of the choicest reading matter, including Serial and Short Stories, Sketches, Poems, Useful Knowledge, History, Biography, Wit and Humor, etc., profusely illustrated. Wishing to introduce the paper into thousands of homes where it is not already taken, we now make the following extraordinary offer: Upon receipt of Only Twenty-Five Cents in postage stamps we will send The Fireside at Home on Trial for Three Months, and we will also send, Free and post-paid, Ten Valuable Books, each neatly bound in pamphlet form and printed from large clear type upon good paper, beautifully illustrated, and comprising ten complete first-class novels by well-known and popular authors, as follows: 1. Leoline, or, Into the Shade, by Mary Cecil Hay; 2. John Bowerbank's Wife, by Miss Mulock; 3. The Frozen Deep, by Wilkie Collins; 4. Lady Gwendoline's Dream, by the author of "Dora Thorne;" 5. Red Court Farm, by Mrs. Henry Wood; 6. Jasper Dane's Secret, by Miss M. E. Braddon; 7. A Bride's Tragedy, by Miss Mulock; 8. Among the Ruins, by Mary Cecil Hay; 9. Gabriel's Marriage, by Wilkie Collins; 10. Why Not? by Annie Thomas. Remember, we send all the above ten books, ten in number, free to any one sending twenty-five cents for a three months' trial subscription to THE FIRESIDE AT HOME. This great offer presents an opportunity whereby you may secure a very large amount of the most fascinating reading matter for a very little money. No better investment of the small sum of twenty-five cents could possibly be made. Money refunded to all not satisfied that they receive three times the value of amount sent. Five sets of the ten books and five subscriptions to the paper will be sent for $1.00. As to our reliability, we refer to any publisher in New York, and to the Commercial Agencies, as we are an old established and well known house. Address, F. M. LUPTON, Publisher, 27 Park Place, New York.

CANCER INSTITUTE. Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

YOUNG MEN If you want to become TELEGRAPH OPERATORS, and be guaranteed employment, address P. W. REAM, Ada, O.

$150,000 GIVEN AWAY!

THE PRACTICAL FARMER, OF PHILADELPHIA, from an intimate acquaintance with its readers, has found there is a general desire to possess Farms and Homes in the West. Now, in order to give each of our Subscribers an opportunity to obtain an Improved Farm, a well-known, reliable real estate man has carefully selected for us 100 FARMS, to be offered as Premiums to our paper. We also offer, in connection with the Farm property, as Premiums, fine Steel-Plate Engravings—superb reproductions of the works of the greatest masters. These are alone worth the price of the paper; and when we give, in addition, the opportunity to obtain an Improved Farm, we are making The most splendid offer yet! Every Subscriber will receive a Premium. The PRACTICAL FARMER was founded by Paschall Morris in 1855, and is one of the oldest Agricultural, Literary and Family Journals published. Its character and reputation are of the highest, and Subscribers rarely drop from our lists. It has 16 pages, published weekly at $2.00 per annum. We want 75,000 new subscribers in two months, and offer as Premiums the Steel-Plate Engravings and 100 GOOD IMPROVED FARMS Located in the States of Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Dakota, aggregating 16,630 ACRES AND WORTH $140,000.

These Farms are all in good condition, and are in size from 80 to 960 acres, and worth from $600 to $10,000 each. The Farms will be conveyed by Warranty Deed, and a clear and perfect Title shown from the United States down. They are all ready to occupy, and will be productive homes from the start. As high as 30 BUSHELS OF WHEAT per acre was harvested from some of these Farms last year. All of these lands are just as good, and will produce as much under like circumstances. The tenancies are such that possession can be given at once. How you may obtain one of the Farms. Subscribe for the "PRACTICAL FARMER." Immediately upon receiving the Subscription price—$2.00, a receipt and the current number of the FARMER will be mailed to the sender, his name entered upon our subscription list, and the paper continued for one year. As soon as we have 10,000 new Subscribers registered on our books, or in ten days from date, we will award to each of them a premium, aggregating in value $20,000, in such a manner that each subscriber will have a fair and equal opportunity to obtain one of the Farms and Engravings. In the same way the second and following series of 10,000 Subscribers will receive their Premiums until the entire $150,000 worth of property is given away. These Farms and Engravings are intended as premiums to our Subscribers. The distribution of these is entirely gratuitous upon our part, and is intended by us as a means of dividing with our Subscribers the profits of the year. The name and address of those securing the valuable Premiums will be published in the PRACTICAL FARMER. Having made up our mind to secure, at any cost, the largest circulation of any Agricultural Paper in the World, we have resolved to forego all profits and give our Subscribers the Farms and Engravings for the benefit derived from the present and future large circulation. A sample Paper containing description of the Engravings and of the 100 Farms, with a description of the improvements, dimensions of houses, etc., will be sent free.

WHO WILL RECEIVE THE $10,000 FARM?

CLUB RATES. In order that your name and your friends names may be among the first series of 10,000 subscribers to whom the first $20,000 worth of property will be awarded, subscribe at once and get up Clubs in your neighborhood immediately. Go to work at once. Show the paper containg the list of Farms and description of Improvements. If you will get 10 subscribers and send $20 we will give the getter-up of the Club a subscription for himself FREE, which will give him equal right with other subscribers to obtain one of the Farms. For 20 subscribers and $40, we will give two extra subscriptions; for 25 subscribers and $50, three extra subscriptions; for 30 subscribers, four extra subscriptions; for 35 subscribers and $70, five extra subscriptions; for 40 subscribers and $80, six extra subscriptions; for 45 subscribers, seven extra subscriptions; and for 50 subscribers and $100, we will give eight extra subscriptions. The extra subscriptions can be sent to any one to whom the getter-up of the Club desires. Each of whom will have an equal opportunity to obtain one of the Farms. By this means you may get the 960 acre Farm. Let every reader of this advertisement send at least one name with his own, and we will get the 75,000 subscribers and will distribute the $150,000 worth of property at once. Remember you may get a Farm worth $3,000 or $10,000, free of every encumbrance.

IMPORTANT!—As a matter of security to our Subscribers, the Deeds and Abstracts of Title to all the Farms have been deposited with the Union Trust Company of Philadelphia, Pa.

Address PRACTICAL FARMER, Philadelphia, Pa.

5000 MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN Wanted to secure Subscribers to the PRACTICAL FARMER. Sample copy free. You may get yourself, neighbor, or parents, a fine Farm.

AN ENGLISH VETERINARY SURGEON AND CHEMIST, now travelling in this country, says that most of the Horse and Cattle Powders sold here are worthless trash. He says that Sheridan's Condition Powders are absolutely pure and immensely valuable. Nothing on earth MAKE HENS LAY will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powders. Dose, one teaspoonful to one pint food. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for eight letter-stamps. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

PORTABLE Soda Fountains! Send for Catalogue. CHAPMAN & CO., Madison, Ind.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE HISTORY OF THE U. S. BY ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS. It contains over 300 fine portraits and engravings of battles and other historical scenes, and is the most complete and valuable history ever published. It is sold by subscription only, and Agents are wanted in every county. Send for circulars and extra terms to Agents. Address, NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST." ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers (Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the [illegible] Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's NEW TAILOR System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18, 1883. NUMBER 25.

THE MASHER MASHED.

She lightly tripped adown the street
With girlish loveliness replete,
A vision radiantly sweet.

He on the corner stood the while.
He wore a mellow, melting smile;
He wore a last year's well-brushed tile.

He gazed at her as she passed by,
He caught her lovely, beaming eye,
Her modest blushes mounted high.

She hurried on with quicker tread.
Unto her side he fleetly sped—
"Your bundle's heavy, miss," he said

Up the broad street her brother came—
Her spark of hope burst into flame—
She faintly murmured out his name.

* * * * * * *

Who is this dislocated youth,
With broken nose and absent tooth?
Some one has played with him, gadsooth!

Whence came he by those darkened eyes—
Those lumps and bumps of wondrous size
That on his curly pate uprise!

Some meteor on him must have crashed
To make him so supremely gashed—
What! No! It is!!! The masher mashed.

—Washington Republican.

HOW FATHER CONQUERED US.

We were a minister's children, Jamie, twelve, slight, straight as an arrow, with the peculiar golden light in the gray eyes that betokens hot temper and brilliant intellect, and masses of fine black hair pushed back from a high, white forehead. Bright, handsome Jamie, how I loved him, with an unquestioning devotion that taught me early to yield my wishes and desires to his imperious will and to shield him in all things, right or wrong, from the severe judgments of our father. I look back with a feeling of admiration for the homely little Dot, only seven, with her long, tawny braids and great eager eyes, so true to her boy hero.

Of course the familiar expresion that ministers' children are worse than any other had oft been repeated before us, and as people evidently expected us to be little heathens we tried hard not to disappoint any one. Lessons on the total depravity of ministers' children in general and we two, in particular, were as daily food to us. We knew that we were very bad, but we managed to be quite comfortable for such terrible sinners.

Among father's few worldly goods was a beautiful horse, fleet as the wind, and the pride of his heart. Jamie had often taken me with him to the pasture to lead "Flighty" backward and forward. And on rare occasions when we had gained permission to drive short distances for father we had grown bold and lengtened our drive, always receiving punishment for our boldness, but counting it well worth a whipping to hold the rains and feel the air rush against our faces as Flighty sped down the street. On one summer morning, that shown out clear as crystal, father spoke of the day as well fitted for shopping in Cleveland, a few miles distant, and as he spoke of train time to mother announced his intention of going by rail. Oh! the winks, and nods, and sly motions that told the story so plainly to me, and how helpful we grew; of their comfort how solicitous. At last, with terrible warning of wrath to be visited upon us if we ventured to disobey any of father's commands, we watched them aboard the train, and saw it sweep off down the track, with the fluttering pennons of smoke beckoning gayly to us. Racing back through the grassy lanes, tossing books and slates into a fence corner, with my pink sunbonnet on top of the pile. Jamie crowned my tawny braids with his sailor hat and calling me a jolly tar, helped me to pack our lunch. Before kind sister H—— who would come and get dinner, and mount guard over the parsonage, could reach there, we had packed our basket, harnessed our beautiful Flighty to the carriage and were off for a day in the woods. Oh! the dinner in the Old Maid's Kitchen, a cave to be found on the banks of the Cuyahoga River, famous now as the Switzerland of America. The long drive down the road that stretched away in the distance like a silver wire. The depths of cool living green, that lay like a shadow in a barren land. The moss, the violets, the new sounds we heard, the new visions we saw. The delicious coolness of the spring we discovered. The dreams we dreamed of the future. Oh! that summer day. As it waned we collected our treasures and unfastening Flighty from the tree where she had been made safe, we led her to the carriage, and depositing our burdens we drove gayly homeward. Runaways we were, but philosophers as well, for we put that fact of our awaiting punishment as far from our thought as possible. We expected to be whipped, but did not intend to suffer the sting twice, once in dreading and talking about it, and again in actual pain. As we sped along through the summer evening, we decided that life was worth the living—"the game well worth the candle."

Did we feel a presentiment that our placid enjoyment of this delightful wickedness was soon to end, that we finished our otherwise quiet sort of disobedience by racing through the village streets, huzzaing like young Indians, and passing every team with a challenge to follow if they could? Flighty was a thoroughbred and perfectly trained. She kept her head beautifully, or my story might have had another ending. As we drove up to the gate with a grand flourish, the whistle of the train in the distance warned us that our hour of reckoning was close at hand. After tea I was invited to the study and questioned as to the day's wickedness. I answered respectfully, and, after being reprimanded, was banished to my room. Soon after I heard father's heavy step in the hall and Jamie's light footfalls following. Leaning far out of my gable window, I watched them enter the barn. It was a glorious star-light night, and the silvery whiteness of the moonlight wrapped the world in its spell. Once I thought I heard the pleading voice of my brother. I could bear no more, and slipping out into the hall, stole down stairs and out to the barn. The lantern was hardly needed, for both front and rear doors being open, the moonlight lay in great bars, white and translucent, giving weird brilliance to the space of floor and leaving the corners in shadow. Creeping through the rear door I stood motionless, watching with wondering eyes the scene painted on my memory as clearly as if years had not dimmed the fire of those luminous eyes, or bowed with weight of care the proud uplifted head. Father was standing where the light from the lantern, suspended from the beam above, fell full on the hair just tinged with gray and brought into relief the massive forehead and stern blue eye. His mouth was quivering strangely and the hand that held the carriage-whip seemed shaking with irresolution. For the first time in my remembrance father hesitated to do what he considered his duty, and met the fearless glance of his only son with such yearning tenderness on his strong old face as I had never seen there.

"James, my son, do you remember my commands this morning?"

"Yes, sir."

"You remember the penalty of your disobedience?"

"Yes, sir."

"You know that you must suffer it, do you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Take off your jacket and your vest." Jamie obeyed, hung them on a peg and came back to his position before father with a hard, sullen expression on his face that showed a spirit to be won, never compelled by blows. Perhaps father saw this, for his hand failed to fall in punishment and his great strong arm stole around the boy's shoulders and folded him closely to father's side.

"Jamie! Jamie! my lad, why do you grieve your old father so?"

If an angel had spoken we could not have been more awe-stricken. Father, who so seldom caressed, who was so severe, so stern—Father was crying! Jamie was crushed by this sort of thing and stammered his excuses, and when he felt the tears on his upturned face his heart melted. "Oh! pa, I didn't know you could feel so bad. Don't, pa, don't!"

"Boy, did you think that I loved to whip you? Don't you know that every blow on your tender flesh makes a deeper, sorer mark on your father's heart? My son! my only son!"

His voice faltered and broke. I shall never forget the tenderness that thrilled every word as he talked.

"I can not break my word, Jamie; I told you if you disobeyed punishment must follow. Now, my boy, many a time with aching heart have I whipped you, and it seems to have had no lasting effect. I can not whip you to-night, and I dare not break my word. Take this whip, sir!"

Jamie took the whip, and father quickly laid aside his worn black coat, then his vest, hanging them beside Jamie's; and turning his broad shoulders to the wondering lad, his voice rang like a clarion.

"James, some one must suffer. I can't whip you. You must whip me. Strike, sir!"

The boy stood as if turned to stone.

"Do you hear me, Jamie? Strike!"

White as death grew Jamie's face; his mouth twitched nervously. The whip fell to the floor, and with a cry that came right from his heart Jamie went down on his knees. "Oh! pa! you may kill me, but I never can strike you!"

How he begged for forgiveness, passionately pleading, "I can't pa! Anything but that!"

What promises of future obedience. But father's will was iron. He would not break his word. He had said so many lashes, and they must be paid. Puzzled and stirred to the depths, what could he do?

What little white-gowned figure is this that creeps out of the shadows and throws itself at his feet, while a child's shrill voice pipes:

"Oh, Papa! I have been so wicked; I coaxed Jamie; truly, truly, I did! Whip me, papa, and let Jamie go."

Now if you think this was not an act of heroism, I am sorry for you; and then, perhaps, your father was not a minister.

He lifted his forlorn little daughter from the floor, and as no way out of the dilemma seemed to present itself, Jamie stood by in shame and humiliation while father's hand fell in punishment on his little sister. Father carried me to my room in his arms, and when I felt his tears splash on my hair, a new feeling of love that understands was born in my heart.

If Jamie had been writing this record of our long ago, he would have closed with the announcement that never from that day did we venture to run away with Flighty, and as our eyes grew accustomed to see the love written in every line of father's face, we grew to watch for the smile of approval, and weep over his displeasure.

But alas, I must add one more testimony to the weakness of my sex, and just whisper, how early the next morning standing on the veranda, where the lilacs swung their fragrant clusters against the study window, I ventured to say: "Jamie, don't you almost wish, when Pa's back was right in front of you so, that you had just given him a couple of good cuts, he has given you so many?"

Jamie had no chance to reply, for the lilacs were held aside from the window, and father's voice called "Daughter." Trembling little wretch, I need not have feared. Father was one of those rare men who have learned to "let well enough alone," and only kissed me with unusual tenderness as he led me out to breakfast."—Mary L. Wright, in Detroit Post and Tribune.

—It behooves editors to read their proof carefully before papers go to press. Colonel Bill Short, the editor of a Texas paper, is a fugitive among the chaparral and prickly pears of Crosby, all because in referring editorially to a patron, he says in his paper that the patron is "thieving as usual." He wrote "thriving as usual." According to the latest advices received by Texas Siftings, the indignant patron, assisted by numerous relatives, had Bill corraled in a thicket.

—Mr. Isaac Smith, of Albany, N. Y., aged sixty-three, has just got out of the insane asylum, where he was placed by his two married children because he had bought some new clothes and was preparing to marry a handsome young woman. What very unhappy old men the old men of this country would be if all were locked up as lunatics who propose to remarry.—Indianapolis Journal.

PITH AND POINT.

—The new telephone will transmit a whisper seven hundred and fifty miles. This enables a man to flirt with another man's wife out of pistol shot range.—N. O. Picayune.

—Forty years ago a man worth $60,000 was accounted wealthy; now a patent-rights man doubts whether it is worth while to skin him.—Somerville Journal.

—Why is a saloon like a sheet of music? The number of beats before the bar varies according to time. Greenbacks expended for cheering beverages may properly be called "full" notes.—Detroit Free Press.

—Somebody substituted a pile of corncobs for the doughnuts on a Vermont railway resturant counter, and they were about two-thirds eaten before anybody discovered what had occurred.

—It is said that "two hundred years ago the Indians indulged in Turkish baths." Yes, it must have been all of two hundred years ago. To judge from the one we saw last it might have been a thousand years ago.—Jersey City Tattler.

—They are building tenement houses so high in New York that the man who occupies the top floor is obliged to start for home about nine o'clock in the evening in order to reach his bed an hour after midnight.—Norristown Herald.

—This, from the pen of some philosopher, is worth remembering: "He who labors wholly for the benefit of others, and, as it were, forgets himself, is far happier than the man who makes himself the sole object of all his affections and exertions."

—An officer in the regular army laughed at a timid woman because she was alarmed at the noise of a cannon when a salute was fired. He subsequently married that timid woman, and six months afterwards he took off his boots in the hall when he came in late at night.—N. Y. News.

—A Pennsylvania man proposed to kill the baby in order to reduce the expenses of the family, but his wife finally persuaded him to reduce the dog's rations instead, and in a few weeks the family was rich enough to buy another dog.—Burlington Free Press.

—It is said that why so many married ladies keep pet dogs is because their husbands are absent so much from home. They don't have the canines for protection. It's because home doesn't seem natural with no growling about, and the dogs growl during the time the husband ought to be attending to that duty.—Philadelphia Chronicle.

—"Father," said Johnny, "this paper says that 'many prominent citizens are now ill with pneumonia and kindred diseases.' What is a kindred disease, father?" "Why, my son," said Smithly, "a kindred disease is—is—why-yes, yes, a kindred disease is one that runs through an entire family—kindred, relatives, you know. Surprised you didn't know that Johnny."—N. Y. Post.

—A fair young damsel went into the business place of one of Troy's most worthy and kindly merchants, and expressed a desire to purchase a certain article. Several specimens were shown her and she finally made choice of one as meeting her wishes. She hesitated a moment and then asked, "do you make a reduction to ministers?" "Yes," replied the gentlemanly attendant, "are you a minister's wife?" "No-o-o," was the blushing respoue, "but I expect to be soon." The reduction was granted.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Five million dollars will be invested in erecting buildings on twenty acres of ground at Beaver Falls, Pa., and the establishment of a barbed wire works.

—Mr. Du Pont Lyle, the American Consul at Funchal, Madeira, in a report to the State Department, says that the number of females engaged in the embroidery industry on the islands is estimated at about 10,000, and that the value of the product exported in 1881 was $3,355.34.

—More attention is being given to draining low land in the Southern States than ever before. The richest tracts in the South have been entirely unprotected or only used for producing rice. Much of this land is now being drained for the purpose of raising cotton, corn, sweet potatoes and small grain.—Chicago Times.

—In England thin shavings of veneers of different kinds of wood are coming into use for book covers. The woods now mostly in use are our American black walnut, lime, oak, holly, etc.; but all woods may be used. After being placed upon the wood the veneers can be either rubbed down with oil or French polished.

—An automatic electric mechanism, that is destined to announce the approach of railroad trains, has been tried on what is called the Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean Line. It consists of a box filled with mercury placed under the rail at the required distance from a bell. When a train passes over this box the mercury is so agitated as to form contact with the bell, and thus makes it ring.

—A French chemist claims to have invented an odor that will hold any fort and the land within half a mile of it for a week. The smell is not deadly, but no mortal can stand before it. The new agent is expected to work a revolution in the art of war, beside serving in obstinate civil cases. It produces sensations of nausea and disgust like the worst seasickness.

—Electricity is now entering the field against the horse as a means of traction. Two eminent electricians claim to be able to bottle up twelve-horse power in a storage battery weighing three hundred weight, and they promise to produce in a few months a perfectly practical electric tricycle capable of running fifteen or twenty miles without recharging the accumulators, and able to ascend all such hills as are now possible for the foot treadle, and even steeper gradients, if auxiliary foot-gearing be used to help the electro-motor when the incline is great. The weight of batteries will not exceed the weight of a second rider, and will run at the rate of seven miles an hour.—N. Y. Herald.

Religious.

MY MOTHER'S HYMN.

Like patient saint of olden-time
With lovely face almost divine,
So good, so beautiful and fair,
Her very attitude a prayer,
I heard her sing so low and sweet:
"His loving kindness—oh, how great;"
Turning, behold the saintly face,
So full of trust and patient grace.

"He justly claims a song for me,
His loving kindness—oh, how free;"
Sweetly thus did run the song,
"His loving kindness," all day long.
Trusting, praising, day by day,
She sang the sweetest roundelay—
"He near my soul hath always stood,
His loving kindness—oh, how good."

"He safely leads my soul along,
His loving kindness, oh, how strong;"
So strong to lead her on the way
To that eternal better day,
Where safe at last in that blest home,
All care and weariness are gone,
She "sings with rapture and surprise
His loving kindness in the skies."

—N. Y. Observer.

Sunday-School Lessons.

SECOND QUARTER.

April 15	—Saul's Conversion	Acts 9: 1-18
April 22	—Saul Preaching Christ	Acts 9:19-31
April 29	—Peter Working Miracles	Acts 9:32-43
May 6	—Peter Preaching to the Gentiles	Acts 10:30-44
May 13	—The Spread of the Gospel	Acts 11:19-30
May 20	—Herod and Peter	Acts 12: 1-17
May 27	—Paul and Barnabas in Cyprus	Acts 13: 1-12
June 3	—At Antioch	Acts 13:13-16 and 43-52
June 10	—At Iconium and Lystra	Acts 14: 1-18
June 17	—End of the First Missionary Journey	Acts 14:19-28
June 25	—Review.

HOW TO BEGIN A HOME.

Did you ever hear a gray-haired man or woman say: "Ah, well, if I had my life to live over again, and could have my present experience to guide me, I would manage things very differently!" But the fortunate individual does not exist to whom that chance has been given. Once again, time never returns, and therefore it is of the greatest importance for you, dear readers, who are rich in youth and hope, to use these golden days to advantage.

You are beginning a home. Yours is a grand opportunity. What will you make of it? What sort of home shall this be, to which you go, I trust, while the joy-bells are still ringing for your wedding?

The first thing I would say to you is, do not begin in a boarding-house. Let your home from the first have the sweet seclusion of being your very own. Sit at your own table, spread for two. Shut your door upon the rest of the world, and feel that your house, or your flat, or your small apartment, as may be, is hemmed in with sacred privacy.

Larger or smaller, determine that your home shall be carried on honestly. Pay for things as you get them. Be resolved to live within your income. To this end let husband and wife be perfectly candid with each other. There should be a financial basis, and a scale of expenditure, thoroughly understood by each other.

An immense amount of friction, of humiliating irritation, and trouble would be saved if people who are beginning home life would act with common sense and fairness about money matters. The husband is the bread-winner. The wife is the loaf-giver. He directly earns the family income. She also helps to earn it by caring for the internal economy of the household and leaving him free to attend to his business or his profession.

Domestic financiering is commonly carried on in a loose, hap-hazard way, to the last degree absurd. You, hand in hand at the altar, do not dream that so sordid a thing as money could ever give either of you a headache.

Well, take my advice and it never will: Buy nothing for which you can not pay, keep out of debt, and have a common purse, each partner being fully in the confidence of the other. And as we are stewards of the Divine bounty, let it enter into your home plan to give systematically, as God propers you, to the poor, to home and foreign missions, to the cause of God and the coming of His kingdom.

Begin your home in a spirit of unselfishness. Your love for each other should not make you careless of social duties. Exercise a simple yet generous hospitality, inviting guests to your house, and giving them of your best, not in the way of food and lodging only, but in the interchange of thoughts and opinions. Nothing brightens a house and breaks its routine like neighborliness. Be at home to friends, and let the home wear an air of welcome to all who come within its doors.

A home should have its ideal to which it aspires. Of all people they are the most to be pitied who are satisfied with to-day, in the sense of having nothing to climb to to-morrow. "To live that each to-morrow find us farther than to-day" should be our aim. Be the furnishing plain, be the margin for luxury narrow, still let the frugal housewife look forward to something better farther on.

You ought to think much of your day of small things in this regard. It is delightful to have to economize, so that the new picture on the wall marks an event in the home history, and the new rug on the floor is an episode, and the new book on the shelf is cause for a family festival.

Talking of home history, why not write one? Why not set down, day by day, in a book, the pleasant happenings of life? Your children—and you will be blessed, indeed, if they fill the home nest with laughter and song—will by and by prize such a volume as above rubies.

Do not isolate the new home by being strangers and pilgrims, with no rest for the soles of your feet, among the churches. Have a church home from the beginning: a pew, and a place, and a pastor, and Christian friends of your own, so that your household shall be one of the lights on some golden candlestick that shines in your community for Jesus.

Guard against small displays of temper, against jealousy, against slight misunderstandings.

Husband and wife should be chief friends to each other, and no entering wedge of alienation should disturb or fracture their intimacy.

"It is the little rift within the lute, that by and by will make the music mute."

Love must rule the happy home, and love must be long-suffering sometimes, since we are men and women: not saints and angels.

If you want your home to rise in beauty and symmetry, build it on the Bible.

I beg you to have family worship, always, at least once a day. Read the Bible together, and together seek the presence and benediction of the Master. That is a cold and cheerless abode in which there is no room for Christ. Let the time never be that your little ones as they come, and your friends as they visit you, shall be surprised at a call to family prayers. Courage, dear young people, if this appalls you at the outset! It will soon become your dearest and most hallowed privilege.

Begin right! Go on right! Your home will be a type of Heaven.—Margaret E. Sangster, in Christian Union.

Good Music for the Children.

They like it, and it is good for them. When they come to the Sabbath-school they need to be met with singing that will exhilerate as well as sober them. Whatever depresses or acts as a discord on their feelings or tastes will hinder their profit in the exercises and give them wrong impressions of the place and services. Children, all acute as they are, are more sensitive to such influences than even the most delicately organized of older people.

It is not enough to have music; it should be adapted to the worship. The singing is to help them praise God. That is a solemn exercise; a solemn, not a gloomy one. The singing, therefore, should be such as to lead the mind to think of His goodness, greatness, majesty, power, forgiveness, loving-kindness, and to inspire the soul with a disposition to honor and love and serve Him. Much depends on the tune and the way it is rendered in reaching these ends. The random singing of an unsuitable air will turn the thoughts away from the worship rather than toward it.

It should also be singing, that the children can take part in it. It is natural for a child to sing. If it do not sing in the Sabbath-school it is because there is something wrong there. It wants to sing, and it will sing if there is such music as will engage its sympathy. There is difficult music just as there are hard lessons in reading, arithmetic, or even in the Bible. The children need the easier sort. It should not be flippant, frivolous, trifling, suggesting the nursery rather than the sanctuary, but neither should it be profound, involved and complicated. Children singing out of their hearts do not wish to be troubled with "rests," repeats and "fugue" accompaniments, but with a clear track for direct and earnest expression of their feelings.

It is by teaching the children to sing in the Sabbath-schools that we have good singing in the congregations. The music in the basement will fix the music of the second story. Let the children be rightly taught and they will drive away the quartette and solos, and all the other abuses that fasten themselves on the churches. A disposition to praise the Lord is always a happy one, and a disposition to praise Him worthily is no less happy. The children should be made to feel this, and grow up with hearts full of enjoyment as "together they sing" the songs of Zion.—United Presbyterian.

Pernicious Literature.

Bishop O'Farrell, of Trenton, in a Lenten address, makes these remarks: In this country reading is universal, we might say, our children have a great thirst for it. There is little need to stimulate it; but it has to be wisely directed. Reading gives the turn to the minds of children; hence, Christian education will gain or lose its effect, according to the reading of the child.

Here, dear brethren, we would have many things to say to parents upon the necessity of watching over carefully, and directing prudently, the tastes of their children in the selection of their reading books. How many parents who never take the trouble to see what their children are reading; who never advise them, never sympathize with them, never try to gain their confidence, so that the children might be inclined to consult them and rely upon them! The vilest trash, the most obscene stories, the most irreligious tracts may fall into the hands of these young people, who become interested, excited and inflamed with what they read. Their minds become unbalanced, their intellects darkened, their hearts corrupted, their morals depraved—and the father calmly goes on his way and never pays attention. His child is devouring poison; he never minds. We see every day the evil effects of such reading, crimes most serious and most vile committed under its influence; children abandoning their homes for wild adventures, boys learning dishonesty, girls losing their purity. This evil is spreading to an enormous extent, and is all the more dangerous because it does not always work openly. The evil of intemperance is very great no doubt, and Temperance societies do well to wage war upon it. But the effects of drunkenness are apparent; all can see the ruin and the desolation it causes. Not so with bad reading. It works stealthily upon the mind; it poisons slowly all the faculties, it dries up the generous impulses of the heart; it inflames all the corrupt passions of our nature; it enkindles a fire which consumes and withers up all God's graces.

Choice Selections.

—There is one art of which every man should be master—the art of reflection.

—The desire of knowledge, like the thirst of riches, increases ever with the acquisition of it.

—True humility, the basis of the Christian system, is the low, but deep and firm, foundation of all real virtue.

—God's to-morrow.—

When a sudden sorrow
Comes like cloud and night,
Wait for God's to-morrow,
All will then be bright.
Only wait and trust him
Just a little while,
After evening tear-drops
Shall come the morning smile.

—F. R. Havergal.

Our Young Folks.

BOB'S WONDERFUL BICYCLE.

Bob Burns was a boy with a wonderful mind
For cogs, cranks and levers, and every kind
Of machine, from a dollar toy-engine to those
That rush through the depot and shriek through the nose.
And, indeed, "it was plain
To a person that's sane
That the boy was a genius, and bound to attain
To something uncommon," said Aunt Betsy Jane.
And for one I don't blame her, for Bob surely was Quite clever with jack-knives, and gimlets, and saws,
And constructed such marvels, the neighbors all said,
Enough to turn any ambitious boy's head.
So Bob came at last to consider that he
Was about as ingenious as mortal could be.

One day there arose a tremendous sensation
In his little town, o'er a queer combination
Of wheels, rods and bolts, which the school-master, Michael,
Informed all who asked him was called a bicycle.
Perched high in the seat,
Just by working his feet,
A man gayly rode up and down through the street,
And the boys said: "How jolly!" The girls said: "How sweet!"

Bob studied that bicycle day after day,
Played "hookey" from school, and caught—I dare say
You know what he caught—something warm, anyway.
At last, this deluded
Young fellow concluded
This new-fangled notion he knew all about,
And could make one himself that would "beat it all out."

An old baby-carriage he found in the attic,
Quite stiff in the joints (perhaps 'twas rheumatic),
And so rusty it wheezed in a manner asthmatic.
This furnished the wheels, big and little; the rest—
The bolts, bars and screws—with commendable zest
He begged and he borrowed, north, south, east and west.

And then what a clatter!
Clink, clank, hammer, batter,
Till the neighbors all thought what on earth is the matter?
But Bob worked away with a grin and a chuckle,
He barked his poor shins, and he bruised every knuckle,
And rubbed
His nose,
And stubbed
His toes,
And how many other things, goodness knows,
Till at last, with a final hammer and clink,
"There now," he muttered, "she'll do, I think."

And it was, I assure you, no common affair,
But was bound, as he said, to make most people stare.
For it ran, not by treadles, as those you may see,
But by a huge spring that was wound with a key;
So that all you need do, if you wished for a ride,
Was to pull on the throttle and off you would glide.

Then he called, to observe the result of his labors,
His parents, his brothers, and sisters, and neighbors,
And wisely expounded how much it surpassed
All others created, from first unto last.

The news and the wonder spread fast, and his fame
Grew wider and wider. The people all came
By scores and by hundreds to witness him try it.
And one wealthy gentleman offered to buy it
At whatever price; but he proudly refused,
And mounted the seat to show how it was used.
The spring had been wound up as close as a bottle,
And all crowded round as he pulled on the throttle.

Whiz! whir!
What a stir!
How excited they were,
As he dashed through the crowd like a shaft from the bow,
Ran over two dogs, hit a fat man a blow
That knocked him a distance of ten feet, I know.
Still faster and faster,
Like news of disaster,
He sped through the town and was soon out of sight,
Unable to stop, and in terrible fright.
The trees skipped behind at a dizzying pace,
The fences on each side seemed running a race.
Up hill and down dale,
With the speed of a gale,
He whizzed o'er the road with a flap of coat-tail
Streaming out from behind, and his face scared and pale.
The dogs tried to catch him, the women screamed out,
The men followed after him with many a shout.
Farmer Jones' two horses ran madly away,
Though every one says they get nothing but hay.

Thus, mile after mile, at the same rapid gait,
He dashed and he splashed, with his hair standing straight,
And his eyes as big as fists, and the mud flying fast,
And the tears falling thick as the rain, till at last
With a terrible shock
He struck a big rock,
Was thrown from his seat, sir, and straight as a rule
Was shot through the window right into the school.

The poor little scholars all started with fright,
For never before had they seen such a sight;
But the master, with wonderful presence of mind
Remarked, as he quietly mended a pen:
"Master Bob, when you enter the school-room again,
Come in at the door, sir! and, lest you should waste
Your delicate breath, enter not in such haste."

The bicycle? Oh!
It split into hundreds of pieces, you know,
And each of the pieces is whirling away
In the parks, on the roads, and the meadows to-day,
As this or that bicycle, patent applied for,
Though I can't imagine what boys like to ride for.

—E. J. Wheeler, in St. Nicholas.

A LECTURE ON FOOD.

The audience having again come to order, Lecturer John Spicer took his stand in front of them, made his bow, said his subject was Food, and began as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: If we did not have food we should not have anything to eat. Food is made in the kitchen. Some of it is fried, some of it is baked, some of it is boiled, and some is toasted. When it is toasted you call it toast, and sometimes you have dip on it, but not every time. Cracker toast is a very good kind. [Applause.] Cake is very good. [Applause.] The cake that is not good to eat because 'twill make you sick, tastes the best, and sometimes it has frosting on it. Cake that is not good to eat is made for company, but sometimes there is some left. Once there was a little girl, a very small one, that did something very funny. She was playing with the other children waiting for the grown-up people to be through dinner, and one little boy said he hoped there would be some jelly-pie left, and this little girl opened the door and popped her head in, and told the people: "Please don't eat up all the jelly-pie!" [Laughter.] There is no such thing as jelly-pie. They made a mistake. Pies are made of apples, and squashes, and custard, and mince, and huckleberries. Some pies are made of large pieces and some are made of small pieces. Once there was a stingy little girl, and she had a saucer-custard pie given her, and when she saw another little girl going past she called out: "Mary Ellen! Mary Ellen! Don't you want to come in and see me eat custard pie?" And Mary Ellen went in and saw her eat custard pie, and she did not give Mary Ellen any of it. [Groans from the audience.]

My aunt told me a story of three boys who had cakes sent them. One boy ate his cake all up himself, right away, and made himself sick. Peter put his in a box, to save it, and went every day to nibble off a little piece, when nobody was looking. But Bill cut his cake up and passed it round. Which boy do you like best? [Shouts from the audience: "Billy!"]

We have the most food Thanksgiving Days, but a great many cousins and other people you like come to see you, and your stomach is so glad you can not eat half the things on your plate. We eat food three times a day. These times are breakfast, dinner, supper. Breakfast comes the earliest. My aunt knows some children, very small ones, that always want the best in the dish, and knows some that when they ask for any thing at the table call out: "Meat!" "Bread!" "Milk!" and make such a noise calling out that nobody can hear anybody talk. People do not like to eat dinner at that house because the children make such a noise at the table. My aunt says she supposes they don't know any better.

Once when I was a little fellow, I did something very mean. I went to a party and took some of the things off the plates, and brought them home in my pocket. My mother made me feel ashamed of myself, and did the things up in a paper, and wrote on the outside: "From a greedy boy who took what did not belong to him," and sent it back to the lady. To be greedy means to get all you can away from others. To be stingy means to keep all you get, and not give any away. To be a glutton means to stuff yourself with food after you have eaten a plenty. My aunt says this is the right way to ask for food at the table. You speak to the one nearest the squash—if you want squash—and say that person's name. If it is your uncle, you say, "Uncle John"—if his name is John—"will you please give me some squash?"—if you want squash. I heard of a boy that called out, "Pudding!" and his father said, "What are you calling to pudding for? Pudding can't hear you!" [Laughter.] My mother knows some children that are so poor they can not get much food if they ask ever so well for it. They are glad to get a crust, or a piece of cold johnny-cake.

Once I heard a story of a girl, quite a small one, that wanted to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake, and she said to her mother: "I want to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake. How does it begin?" Her mother said: "If you want to begin at the beginning, you must go into the kitchen and begin it with meal." She went to the kitchen and said to Bridget: "Does a johnny-cake begin here? I want to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake. Please give me some meal!" Bridget said: "If you want to begin at the beginning you must go the grocer's. Meal comes from the grocer's." She went to the grocer's and said to him: "Does a johnny-cake begin here? I want to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake." The grocer said: "If you want to begin at the beginning you must go yonder to the miller's. My meal comes to me from the miller." She went yonder to the miller's and said to him: "Does a johnny-cake begin here? I want to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake." The miller said: "If you want to begin at the beginning you must run over the fields to the farmer's. The farmer brings corn to my mill, my mill grinds it into meal for the grocer, the grocer sells meal to people living in houses, and people living in houses make the meal into johnny-cakes." She ran over the fields to the farmer's and said to him: "Does a johnny-cake begin here? I want to begin at the beginning and make a johnny-cake." The farmer said: "The beginning was last spring when I planted my corn. When the snow had all melted away I planted my corn. From the seed corn sprang up cornstalks. All summer these grew and grew and grew taller and taller and taller, and when summer was over there were gathered from them bushels of corn. I sell corn to the miller; the miller grinds it to meal and sells the meal to the grocer; the grocer sells meal to people and people make it into johnny-cakes. But you see if you begin at the beginning it takes all summer to make a johnny-cake! If you want to begin at the beginning, come next spring and plant some seed corn."

The story did not tell if the girl went in the spring to plant some seed corn. My big sister says even that would not be beginning at the beginning, for she says the seed corn that you plant had to be grown somewhere.—Mrs. A. W. Diaz, in Wide Awake.

—Emma Fontaine, of Montreal, on returning home from work, the other night, received a letter that had been left for her during the day. She had to open envelope after envelope, and in the third one found a beautiful and sentimental valentine containing a wad of perfumed cotton-batting. She inhaled the perfume and at once fell in a fit. The priest and the doctor, when they came, found her in convulsions, from which she passed into a severe attack of congestion of the brain. Dr. Desrochse carried away the valentine, and, with the assistance of another physician, analyzed all its parts, without finding any traces of the poison which it was generally believed it must have contained.

—A Turkish pasha has shown his appreciation of the work of our mission schools in his country by the following remark: "When a girl has come back from the American mission school, you should not say a girl, but a school has come."

—Any coward can fight a battle when he is sure of winning it; but give me the man who has the pluck to fight when he is not sure of winning.—George Eliot.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. APR. 18 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column 1 year $80
[illegible] " [illegible] " 40
[illegible] " [illegible] " 20
[illegible] " [illegible] " 20
[illegible] " [illegible] " 10
[illegible] " [illegible] " 6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary notices, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 10 lines free; over that number (except the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year $1 50
Six months 75
Three months 40

We are authorized to announce JAMES P. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

IN Owen county tobacco plants are coming up nicely. Boone can say as much.

MONDAY week the democracy of Grant county nominated W. N. Hogan for representative.

GOVERNOR BLACKBURN has refused to pardon Furguson, the Louisville defaulter. His firmness in so doing has gained him much admiration.'

ACCORDING to Attorney-General Brewster, the trials of the Star-route robbers have already cost the government over six hundred thousand dollars.

THE Courier of last week presents the voters of Grant county with the photographs of the democratic nominees for the offices of representative and jailer.

CHARLES D. JACOB, for governor; E. Polk Johnson, for Lieutenant governor; and Richard A. Jones, for attorney general, are Louisville's candidates for state offices.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $7 60@7 80; fair to good packers, at $7 10@7 60; fair to good light, $7 20@7 50; common, $6 90@7 20; culls, $5 00@6 10; stock hogs, $5 75@7 00.

AN Indianapolis man has discovered an electric light that costs only about eleven cents for three months Each building in which the light is used will have its own battery. The discovery is expected to revolutionize the electric light business.

THE statement is that ninety-three thousand acres of Kansas soil have been planted with trees, under act of Congress authorizing additional pre-emption where trees are planted The cottonwood tree is mainly planted, because it grows rapidly.

A REUNION of the Mormons, at Kirkland, Ohio, to celebrate and commemorate the anniversary of the Mormon church commenced Friday the 6th inst., and is to continue two or three weeks. Mormons from all the different settlements are flocking there by the hundreds.

DR. S. S. SCOTT is the only man who has made his appearance on the legislative race course in Boone to date. If the people of Boone should see proper to send him to the legislature, he will serve them with all his ability, and make a good representative.

IT is claimed that Ellis Craft's brother has written him a letter in which he says a negro that has been arrested and lodged in a Virginia jail has confessed that he and another negro perpetrated the horrible crime which he (Craft) and Neal are charged. He tells him that much excitement over the matter exists in the county where the confession was made.

THE large attendance at the educational convention held in Frankfort week before last, demonstrates that there is yet considerable interest felt in the cause of education in this State. Representative men from all parts of the State met in council having under consideration a matter that is of vital importance, and discussed measures for its advancement. Such meetings as the one herein referred to are bound to be conducive of much good.

UNDER the present law small country Postmasters, whose sales of stamps do not amount to more than $200 per annum, retain sixty per cent. of the value of stamps canceled as their salary. The reduction of letter postage to two cents would of course materially reduce the compensation of those small Postmasters, were they to receive the same percentage. But the new law provides that where the sales do not exceed $200 per annum, the Postmaster shall after October 1st be allowed to one hundred per cent. of the stamps canceled.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

The Hebron B. B. C. played a match game last Saturday with the Kid Gloves, of Bullettsville. The score was 7 to 9 in favor of Hebron.

Henry Quick got his finger badly mashed playing ball, last Saturday.

The Hebron Sunday-school organized last Sunday with Prof. Tanner superintendent and G. O. Hafer, secretary.

Miss Hattie Clore has been quite sick for the past week.

James Conner has been laid up with rheumatism, for a few days.

Several of our farmers' horses have the distemper.

Mr. Alonzo Gaines is able to be out again, after being confined to his room most of the winter.

Henry Aylor was run over by a horse, last week, and badly bruised.

Jordan Beall bought some fine logs of W. N. Cloud, last week.

Bullittsville.

Plant your irish potatoes.

Peas are coming up nicely.

Oats are about all sown.

We can look at the wheat fields with an anticipation of a medium crop.

That dreadful disease, spring-fever, has made its appearance.

Our Base Ball Club meets every Saturday at the trotting grounds of Dr. J. C. Terrill.

Prof. I. J. Daughters' school closed last Friday with speeches and select reading by some of the scholars. His class in elocution read several pieces in concert, which was very interesting. A paper was made up by the school and teacher, and read by Miss Mamie Riley, the most advanced scholar in the school. Mr. Daughters talks of teaching the summer school here.

Our amicable clerk, Charles Balsly, was confined to his bed last week.

The lightning struck the Christian Church last Wednesday night but on account of the exactness of Chambers' lightning rod, the church was saved from destruction.—[Another feather, Piper and Fowler—EDS.]

Petersburg.

Elena Alden is visiting her sister at Carrollton, Ky.

Chas. Schramm, Bob Bolen, F. M. Cox and Lon Yerkes were in Rising Sun, last Sunday.

Miss Edith Collyer, of Carrollton, Ky., has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Frok, for the past few weeks.

Miss Mamie Stephens, of East Bend, is visiting Miss Nettie McWethy and friends here.

Miss Mary Bradley is teaching writing school here, and has about twenty-five scholars.

The Sons of Temperance at this place will put in their hall, in the near future, a fine library.

Mr. J. C. Stott, who has been clerking for Strawsberger at Lawrenceburg, Ind., for the past 3 years, has returned home to stay, as Mr. Strawsberger has retired from business.

Mort Christy has Pilot and Captain's license to run between Rising Sun and Lawrenceburg. Mort is a captain.

The steamer, Will Kyle, passed up from New Orleans, last Tuesday night, and favored us with another blow of that melodious whistle. It is the worst whistle we ever heard. It started all the dogs to barking, all the cows and cats to running, and the people all rushed to their doors, and a great many to the banks to see what could be the matter. One man here who was asleep jumped up and gathered his gun, and ran to the door, thinking some one was hallooing in his window. We do not want the Will Kyle to pass up very often.

Francesville.

Getting tired of the monotony of town life, we made up our mind, one day last week, to take a trip to the country, thinking a little recreation would be beneficial to our health, besides, we had a desire to call on some of our friends and ascertain how they had wintered through. In our meanderings we visited Bullittsville, one of the suburbs of this place, where we met several of our acquaintances, and among them, our distinguished friend, Dr. Jonas Terrill. The Dr. seems to be enjoying life as usual, and we must say his appearance is much improved since we last met him, for the reason that he has his hair cut again. Bullittsville is improving rapidly in the way of building. It numbers five dwelling houses, one of the neatest and handsomest church buildings in the county, a large two story building belonging to the Grangers and occupied by the Masons. Also two blacksmith shops, a lumber yard, two store houses and one drug store, (which by the way on entering it we could but exclaim Eureka.)

Immediately adjoining, on Mr. Joel D. Conners farm we had the pleasure of inspecting a new barn that he has recently built. It is built after an original design of his own, and is certainly one of the most convenient and roomy barns of the size, we have ever seen. It is well finished inside and out, and presents a very neat appearance, showing great taste on the part of the builder.

The prospects for fruit, with the exception of the damson and plum, was never better in this vicinity. The damson trees are about gone, having all died from the effects of the black wart Vegetation of all kind begin to put in an appearance again reminding us that spring is here.

The general health of Francesville is better than usual. There has been but one case of sun strike reported as yet and that did not prove fatal.

Billy Hays has disposed of his celebrated buggy mare Clyde. Some New York men being the lucky purchasers.

Have you made garden? is the countersign in our Ville this week.

STATE NEWS.

—Henderson has raised the quarantine against Evansville.

—The Confederate cemetery at Raleigh has recently been much improved through the exertions of the women of that city.

—Squirrels must be numerous in Adair county. A party of boys went on a squirrel hunt and killed one hundred and fifty in three days.

—It is stated that a colony of five hundred Austrians and French is expected to come to this section in early spring to be settled on some land in the "Knobs," about eight miles south of this place, in Lincoln county.—Danville Tribune.

—The Madisonville Times publishes the following, but doesn't vouch for its accuracy: "last fall a setting hen was covered with shelled oats in a hogshead, and this spring when the oats were removed the hen came out with a brood of half grown young chickens following her."

—The Lexington Transcript is the authority for the statement that Ellis Craft will not be hanged on the 25th of May, for the reason that the Court of Appeals will not reach his case before that time. The quibs and quirks of the law are such that it seems almost impossible to hang a condemned criminal.

Irish citizens of Lexington, Ky., began to raise a fund to send Col. W. C. P. Breckenridge and Judge J. H. Mulligan to Dublin, Ireland, to assist in the defense of the alledged Phœnix Park murderers, but after getting over $600 subscribed gave it up on information by Breckenridge that foreign lawyers could not practice in British courts.

—Fort Valley (Ga.) Mirror: Messrs T. O. Skellie and J. F. Parham, who have leased the Wester place, are now planting one hundred acres in watermelons. Mr. Skellie will also plant twenty-five acres on his home place, making one hundred and twenty-five acres in all. The watermelon crop promises to be very large in this section, as hundreds of acres have already been planted.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—There are over 100 varieties of timber in Murray county, Ga.

—A Tow of 7,348 pitch pine logs was carried to Millview, Florida, recently.

—A whale eighty feet long recently grounded on the St. John's, Florida, bar.

—An opposition telegraph line is to be run to Staunton, Va by the Baltimore and Ohio Company.

—From one acre of long staple cotton in Rankin county, Mississippi, Mr. W. Waddell realized $260.

—A Sumpter county, Florida, man has cleared $76 on one-third of an acre of turnips this spring.

—Gov. B. F. Butler has been elected President of the Great Falls Manufacturing Company at Alexandria, Va.

—The Norfolk and Western Railroad Company has ordered the construction of 1,000 freight cars and a number of new engines —The Key West sponge fleet numbering seventy vessels and about 600 men is out on a cruise. A large catch of sponges brings about $300,000 into that city.

—A man in Georgia who cares nothing for newspapers rode five miles to see a copy of the Gainesville Eagle in which it was announced that he was the father of a new boy.

—A Georgia bachelor, fifty years old, who scorns caramels and hot-house flowers, sends his sweetheart a bundle of pine kindling-wood when he wants to make her a present, a favor that is both practical and suggestive.

—The following have been organized in Montgomery, Ala., in the past sixty days and are now in course of erection. One soap manufactory, one cracker manufactory, one cotton press manufactory, two sash and blind manufactories, one brick and tile manufactory, one cotton compress. The new compress will be a ninety-inch Morse, of the latest pattern and in workmanship the finest ever built; it will have a pressure of 5,000,000 pounds and be used for export cotton exclusively.

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

CENTRAL HOTEL,
BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,
(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

FLORENCE, - - KY.

NOTICE!

Just received a full and complete line of

DRY GOODS

of the finest selections, and the latest styles which will be sold exceedingly low. Also

NOTIONS,
HATS & CAPS,
BOOTS &
SHOES,
GROCERIES, &c.

Too numerous to mention. Almost everything that the people may want will be found in my Stock. No trouble to show goods, and orders filled promptly. Call and examine my Stock and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.

☞ I feel exceedingly thankful to my friends and patrons for past favors and hoping you all will call again.

Truly Yours,
W. C. TANNER,
Florence, Ky.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price, selling fast, needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

One Fool Among Many,
Wrecked by his Untempered Ambition
--A Lighthouse on the Shoals.

"I ought to have stopped five years before I did; but I thought it wouldn't amount to anything, and kept on. I was a fool, of course—but who isn't, when ambition and the chance of making money spurs him on? I only hope I shall get well enough to digest another square meal some time without a rebellion in my stomach."

The speaker was one of the best known civil engineers and mining experts in this country; hardy by nature as a buffalo, but broken down by hard study and the merciless lashing administered to his mind and body by his own hand during the earlier part of his career. At fifty he is prematurely gray, bent in form and dispirited. Dyspepsia did it—Dyspepsia, the self-inflicted curse of the American in every department of toil.

"I am thirty-five years old," writes Mr. Charles H. Watts, of West Somers, Putnam county, N. Y. and had suffered from dyspepsia for fifteen years. Tried everything. At last gave PARKER'S GINGER TONIC a chance to show what it could do for It proved its ability by curing me. I recommend it to all who are suffering from this dreadful di- Mr. G. R. Cole, druggist, of Carmel, N. Y. certifies to the truth of Mr. Watts' statement.

Gloom, despondency, hopelessness, disgust with all labor, sleeplessness, horrid dreams to render bed-time like the hour of execution to a criminal—these are some of dyspepsia's foot-prints. The Dyspeptic knows what Coleridge meant when he said: "Night is hell." PARKER'S GINGER TONIC cures Dyspepsia, purifies the Blood, disperses Rheumatism and all chronic ailments. Price, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & CO., New York

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW,
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞ Office opposite the Boon House. ☜

L. G. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,

Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accomodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

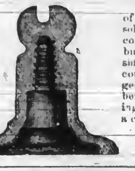
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

NOTICE.

The stockholders of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company are notified that an election for president and four directors to serve the ensuing year will be held in Burlington on the 1st Monday in May 1883. They are also, notified that a dividend of 50 cents a share of stock is ready for distribution for which call on J. J. Lillard, Treas. WM. WALTON, Sect'y.

FOR SALE.

A small lot of the celebrated Snowflake potatoes, for table and seed. Also a limited quantity of the Alpha, among the earliest and best variety grown. Price $1 per bushel. Apply soon to Allen Conner at my residence. E. A. TUCKER,
Florence, Ky.



Chambers' Lightning Protecti'n
COMPANY.

Having purchased the right to put up the rods of the above company in Boone and Kenton counties, we solicit your patronage. These rods are constructed on the correct principle; it takes a less number of feet to rod a building and are consequently much the cheaper rods, besides they are ornamental and are the only rods that afford complete protection from lightning and are less liable to get out of repair. Their popularity is attested by the number now in use in Boone and Kenton. Those having buildings to rod will find it to their interest to have us give them a call and fix figures.

W. E. PIPER, CHAS. A. FOWLER.
Burlington, Ky.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood.
Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
TRADE MARK,
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
☛ AGENTS WANTED. ☚
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:—This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Scaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,
In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, March 13, 1883.

RESOURCES.
Loans and discounts		$547,836 36
Overdrafts		257 29
U.S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		32,503 53
Due from other National banks	6,752 29
Due from State banks and bankers	2,856 39	9,608 68
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,661 66
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,076 59
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,187 11
Bills of other Banks		7,560 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		156 51
Specie		7,310 00
Legal tender notes		17,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$691,367 73
LIABILITIES.
Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,200 00
Undivided profits		16,670 14
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	314,454 95
Due to other National Banks	10,891 21
Due to State Banks and bankers	3,151 43	328,497 59
Total		$691,367 73

State of Kentucky, county of Kenton, ss:
I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.
J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 19th day of March, 1883.
RICHARD H GRAY, Notary Public.
Correct—Attest:
L. C. STEPHENS,
J. H. MERSMAN, } Directors.
E. J. HICKEY,

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
38-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2½ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Altred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R. W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises Title good. For further particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, feb 28-3m Burlington, Ky.

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonathan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.
C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

1883
THE CINCINNATI NEWS
A DAILY
Democratic Newspaper.
Is published to subscribers at the following
RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
By mail postage paid.
Daily and Sunday edition, 1 year $7
Daily and Sunday edition, 6 months 4
Daily and Sunday edition, 3 months 2
All Subscriptions Invariably in Advance

An extra copy of the paper will be mailed FREE for one year to any person who will raise a club of ten annual subscribers at one postoffice, and forward their names and addresses, together with $60.

BY CARRIER.
Daily and Sunday edition, 15 cents per week, or 65 cents per month, payable to Carrier.

PRICE BY SINGLE COPY.
Daily edition 2c Sunday (double size) 3c

Agents, Carriers, Newsdealers, Newsboys, or any one handling THE NEWS, are required to sell the paper in conformity with the above rates. Address
THE NEWS, Cincinnati, O.

SADDLES AND HARNESS AND
ALBERT M. ACRA,
BURLINGTON, KY.
HARNESS MAKER
—AND—
DEALER IN SADDLES

Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed. A full line of everything needed by farmers in the harness line.
REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.
☞ Give me a call. feb-14-83
—Shop over Rouse's Store.—

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

County. Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October. P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge, S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Roey, Constable.

PROSPECTUS
—OF THE—
CINCINNATI ENQUIRER.

Pre-eminently a NEWSPAPER in its truest sense, posessing facilties for gathering news from all quarters of the World, unsurpassed by any other Journal; presenting the same to its readers in a concise form free from coloring and prejudice.

In all cases, it publishes The Truth and Facts, and in matters of general interest, general interest, the fullest possible details are given. It is a paper, untrammeled or clogged in any way by Cliques, Corporations, or Bossism. Treats all persons and parties with fairness, giving a faithful record of all that transpires in the political field without fear or favor.

In matters of Finance and Commerce, its reports are extensive, complete, and accurate; furnished by reliable parties, thoroughly conversant with such matters; making this feature of the Enquirer, one of its best recommendations to the Commercial World.

It is published every day in the year, its extra large size admitting a vast quantity of reading and miscellaneous information, in its various departments, all of which presents a freshness, characteristic of a live newspaper.

For satisfactory evidence that the Enquirer is all its publisher claims for it, we invite those desiring a first-class commercial newspaper to send for specimen copies or short trial subscription.

SEE TERMS FOR
DAILY ENQUIRER.

Sunday and Daily	[illegible]	[illegible]	7.00	[illegible]
Daily except Sun	1.25	3.15	7.00	[illegible]
Any three days	65	1.75	3.15	[illegible]
Any two days	45	1.25	2.25	[illegible]
Any one day	25	65	1.25	[illegible]
Sunday Issue	25	75	1.25	[illegible]

THE WEEKLY ENQUIRER

will maintain its present standard of excellence, which has attained for it a circulation of near One Hundred Thousand Copies which fact alone speaks volumes in its favor. It is undeniably one of the best Family Journals printed; large size eight page paper, giving ample room for all the news of the week, and choice selections, Historical Reminiscences, miscellaneous reading, &c.

Its market reports are reliable and extensive, embracing all necessary information that Farmers and Merchants require for intelligent transaction of business, either as buyers or sellers.

Its Farm School embraces letters from all sections of the country treating upon all matters pertaining to Farm, Field, Orchard Ranch, &c.

Its Household department is made unusually interesting to the ladies, by letters from the thrifty housewife in which domestic affairs are ably treated upon.

A corner is reserved for the boys and girls wherein to talk to the outside world. The moral tone of all being in happy accord with pure thought and taste.

THE SUBSCRIPTION RATES
One copy, one year $1 15
One copy, six months 65

Agents sending us 7 subscribers at above rates are presented with a free copy.

JOHN R. McLEAN, Publisher,
Specimen numbers free. Cincinnati, O.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East Indian Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instruction for successful treatment at your own home, will be sent you by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped self-addressed envelope. DR. M. E. CASS,
201 York street Jersey City, N. J.
☞ Mention this paper. jan 17-83

FREE 25 USEFUL ARTICLES & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, Size 5 x 8, and an illustrated Book, to all who send two 3c stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfume
COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engir
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 18
2 to 100 Horse Power.
Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Thres Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 h. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, Straw and corn s Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning.

Local News.

Buds are bursting.

The plowman plods his weary way.

The croquet season has commenced.

Keep your tobacco beds well protected.

The trees with their trunks are leaving.

Last Saturday the heat was oppressive.

Sowing of oats was completed last week.

Mr. Jno. T. Craven is having his house painted.

The grass commenced peeping up again last week.

The jurors were paid $384 for their services last week.

Seed Sweet potatoes at Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

We had the first installment of summer heat, last Friday.

Tomato and cabbage plants will soon be in demand again.

Mr. Cowen was busy setting out shade trees the first of the week.

Two funerals in one day is an uncommon thing for Burlington.

There have been ten deaths in Burlington within the last year.

Twenty-five indictments were the result of the labors of the last grand jury.

The Commonwealth's business being concluded, Thursday, Attorney DeJarnett, left for home.

Mr. G. T. Gaines has improved the looks of his place on the Bellevue pike with a new plank fence.

E. W. Duncan has the job of making out the assessor's book for this year, and is now thus engaged.

Every mother should keep Ayers' Cherry Pectorial for immediate use, in case of croup and sudden colds.

Last Sunday the negroes organized a church in the Bellevue neighborhood, at which time 15 were baptised.

Some of the young men of town are taking music lessons. Why can't Burlington have an Opera Festival?

The Judge set aside the verdict in the Madden-O'Gorman trial, on the grounds that the jury was misinstructed.

Some of the farmers are ready to start the harrow, which is the next door to planting corn. Who'll be done first?

We have an egg at our house on which is plainly to be seen the letters s. t. The egg was thus branded when layed.

We are receiving direct from New York the Burbank Seedling and Early Rose potatoes. Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

The 25 indictments found by the grand jury are of minor importance, being for selling whisky gaming and carrying pistols.

Quarterly meeting will be held by Dr. Charles Taylor, at Hughes' Chapel, near Richwood, the second Saturday and Sunday in May.

Mrs. Robert Piatt and daughter, Miss Katie, of Bellevue, have rented of Mr. Benjamin Rouse, and will move to our town in a few days.

Dudley Rouse has in stock both patent and high grade flour, which he is selling cheaper than anyother house in town sells the same grades.

Dr. J. C. Terrill saw the lightning the other night when it was capering about on the Chambers rod on the Christian church at Bullettsville. It was lively.

Dunlap, the evangelist who has been preaching at Florence for two or three weeks, closed his meetings on Sunday night, the 8th, with only two additions.

The Commonwealth's Attorney had an order made forfeiting Dan Cumming's $300, which was deposited with the trustee of the jury fund in lieu of bail.

Many sheep in this county are very much annoyed with lice. A practical sheep raiser says salt mixed with sulphur and fed to sheep will destroy these vermin.

The remains of Mrs. John E. Botts, who was buried at Bullittsburg about 10 years ago, were taken up last Wednesday and buried in the cemetery at Bellevue.

This term of the Boone Circuit Court sends one delegate to the penitentiary. Frank Willis, who stole and butchered Jno. Barton's hog, some time since, gets one year for the offense.

The County Court employed Col. Montfort to assist in the mandamus sought by Dr. E. L. Grant and others, to compel the County to build a bridge across Woolper about 1¼ mile from its mouth.

Constable Moxley, of Walton, came to town, one day last week, a perfect walking arsenal. He delivered to the Circuit Clerk four revolvers which he had captured in his bailiwick since last term of the Court.

Judge Major made a shipment of antique furniture from this place to Frankfort last Sunday. The antiquated piece of furniture was an old fashioned tall clock. A young lady friend of the Judge's will be made a present of it.

Court will adjourn to-day, Wednesday.

The remains of Cora Kendall and Lonnie Crisler, were placed in the Hopeful vault.

If you want your buggy painted bring them in, as I have enlarged my shop, and am prepared to do the best of work, Joe Reed, Burlington, Ky.

Judge Major, when asked his age, answers by saying: "I am old enough to be the son-in-law of the oldest man in the United States.

Col. Monfort argued the Mandamus case, and before the sound of his voice died out in the court-room, he had gathered his grip-sack and was on the way to the bosom of his family.

Charlie Hughes says the statement that the hound he killed, was running a fox on their premises, is not correct; but that the dog was eating off a carcass of a sheep when he killed it.

Lost—On Monday the 1st. inst., a double case silver watch with the initials of G. R. W. on the out side of case on the road between Wm. Ryles and the Bruce place on Woolpar creek. The finder will please return to this office.

We received to-day direct from Philadelphia Landreths celebrated garden and flower seeds. Earliest varities of pear, beans, corn, cabbage, cucumbers, lettuce, tomatoes and onion sets by the qt. or package. Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

We call the attention of our readers this week, to the advertisement of W. C. Tanner, of Florence. He has put in a large stock of spring goods, and will make it to the interest of the public to give him a call. Read his adv. and be convinced.

A metor fell at Dalas, Texas, on the 14th inst., destroying a dwelling house, killing a man, his wife and five children It is imbedded in the earth about 200 feet and towers above the surface of the earth about 70 feet. The unwelcome visito rcreated a panic.

We intend to get up a premium list in 1900, in which it is desired to give a city building and lot, or a stone front, or horse and buggy, or a good farm or some other trifling consideration to each subscriber. For the present, however, we can only furnish you the RECORDER for one year for $1 50. Take it and try it.

The people of Burlington will be well supplied with vegetables this spring, as our seniour intends going into the garden business very extensively. He has already prepared himself with a pint of onion sets, and not long since he received a package of oats and lettuce seed through the mail. Those desiring vegetables will please send in their orders early.

The Madden-O'Gorman case, tried last week by the Circuit Court, was the spiciest on the docket. It appears that the plaintiff in action had sued at the bar of love a few years before, but was successful only in furnishing his dulcena much of the filthy lucre, which reverse in his courtship inspired him to resort to a court of justice for its recovery. The defendant put in a voluminous counter-claim; but in the opinion of the jury it was n. g., and they gave Madden a verdict for $300 and cost.

The Ministers' and Deacons' Meeting of the North Bend Association meets with the Middle Creek church, Friday morning, April 27th, 1883. Programme: 1. The Missionary Spirit as taught in the New Testament—W H Felix. Duties of a Pastor—J W Walker. The Duty of all Christians in View of the Evils Arising from the Manufacture, Sale and Use of Intoxicating Liquors—J G Tunison. Qualifications and Duties of a Deacon—John S Hucy. The Atonement Limited, by what Means and to what extent?—J A Kirtley. Church Discipline—John O Roberts. Exposition of Heb. 2:9—R E Kirtley. Bible Doctrine of a Call to the Ministry—J V Riley. The Scriptural Doctrine of Ministerial Support—S P Brady Exposition of I Cor. 4:2—John Sebree. The Eternal Punishment of the Wicked—L Johnson. The Christian Sabbath—A M Vardiman. The work of the Holy Spirit in the Salvation of the Soul—E N Dicken.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on businss or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mrs. Dr. J. M. Grant is visiting her parents in Newport.

Miss Sallie Hyatt has returned to her home in Newport.

Rev. C. C. Conner, of Aurora, Ind', was in town Tuesday.

Henly Smith is employed in F. P. Walton's tobacco shop.

T. P. Crisler, of Bullittsville, is visiting his sister in Moberly, Mo.

Mrs. S. P. Tilley and son are the guests of J. F. Blythe and wife.

Miss Sophia Finch returned, Sunday from a protracted visit to Missouri.

Prof. Stephenson was in town Saturday, the first time for many moons.

Mrs. Thompson, who has been quite sick all winter, is able to be out again.

Miss Sallie Rich, of Kenton county, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. F. McKim

J. L. Bristow and Joseph Childers, of Kenton county, were in town last Saturday.

W. I. Rouse's venerable mother-in-law, Mrs. Hagish, has been quite sick for several days.

Gen. Jno. W. Finnell and Geo. R. McKee, of Covington, attended court one day last week.

Mrs. Riley of Owen county, Dr. Furnishe's mother, and Mrs. Dr. Blanton, of Union, were the guests of Mrs. Sleet the first of the week.

Died.

GAINES—On Saturday the 7th inst., of typhoid pneumonia, Miss——Gaines, daughter of Mr Owen Gaines, of Bullittsburg. The remains were placed in the vault at that place.

KENDALL—On the 14th inst. of fever, Cora Kendall, little daughter of Mrs. Mary Kendall.

The heart-stricken mother has the sympathies of her neighbors.

CRISLER—On the 14th inst., after about two weeks illness, from a combination of diseases, Lonnie Crisler, only son of C. L. and Sarah Jane Crisler.

The bereaved parents have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

The funeral will be preached at the Universalist church at this place, on the 5th Sunday at 3:30 p. m., by Rev. C. C. Conner.

Lonnie has left them—
  His cares of life is ore—
Left father, mother and sister,
  For the Brighter Golden Shore.

He has left them—
  They will see him no more,
Until God calls them
  To that Bright and Peaceful Shore.

POPE—At the residence of her husband Mr. Wm. H. Pope, three miles South of Burlington, Boone county, Ky on March 26th, 1883, Mrs. Adda Pope, aged 45 years and six months.

She was baptized into the fellowship of the Middle Creek Baptist church Sept.——1869, by Rev. R. E. Kirtley, and continued a consistent member thereof until her death. Though deprived by poor health from attending regularly, she manifested a deep interest in the welfare of the church, and always enjoyed talking of Jesus and his Love. She for some years seemed to anticipate an early death, and very often talked to the writer and others, on the subject with Christian resignation, trusting alone in Jesus as her Savior.

A kind and sympathetic neighbor, a faithful and affectionate wife, a devot- mother. She leaves a large circle of friends, a husband and five children to mourn her loss.

May the bereaved husband and children find comfort in believing on and trusting in the precious Savior, that the final family gathering may be complete in Heaven. J S H

At a meeting of the Boone County bar, held last Thursday, to adopt resolutions in respect to the memory of R. C. Green, Judge L. L. Youell was called to the chair and S. W. Tolin appointed secretary.

On motion and second, Warren Montfort, F. Riddell, D. A. Glen and C. Y. Dyas, were appointed a committee to draft and present to the meeting resolutions expressive of the bar's esteem of the departed member. The committee reported the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

In memory of our brother at the Bar of Boone County, Reuben Clark Green, who departed this life on the 21 day of February, 1883, it is now, by the Bar of the Boone Circuit Court, in open meeting assembled.

Resolved, That we deeply mourn the loss of a true brother lawyer, who was honest, earnest and courteous; whose fairness in practice was equal to his faithfulness to his clients; whose whole purpose was to do right; and whose genial temper, generous hospitality and charitable heart, had made him dear to us as a social friend.

Resolved, That the Boone Circuit Court, now in session, be requested to spread upon its records this testimony of our respect, and that a copy thereof be presented to the widow of our deceased brother, to whom we tender our sorrowful sympathy, and that the Boone County RECORDER be requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting.
W. MONTFORT, F. RIDDELL,
D. A. GLEN, C. Y. DYAS.

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Clast Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

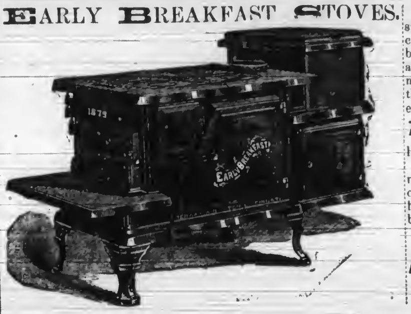
Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and now once I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.



Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, A. R. Mullen, E. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm, L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.
HENRY ROSS, Adm'r.

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 30-1y

FOR SALE.

In Burlington, Boone county, Ky.
A BRICK HOUSE,
containing ten rooms, attic, cellar and out buildings, with four half acre lots attached. The late residence of Mrs. C. S. Tousey. The cellar contains a good kitchen, dining room and two other rooms. The buildings and premises are in good repair.
For terms apply to
GREEN & RIDDELL,
Burlington, Ky.

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSEKEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

AYER'S
Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.
(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.
Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and Iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.
A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to me are requested to come forward and settle at once, as I will leave Burlington in a short time. By coming up and settling you will save expense.
W. L. GEDGE.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
ROUSE.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSES'.

DRUGS & MEDICINES

I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.

N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY

TO BUYERS.

I have for the spring trade a clean and carefully selected stock of Goods with prices marked to suit the times.

IN DRY GOODS,

Brocades, Cashmeres, Indigo Blue Calicoes, Prints, Ginghams, Cheviot Shirting, Brown and Bleached Muslins and double width Sheeting, Pillow Case Muslin, Jeans and Cottonades, Crashes, Table Linen and Napkins.

IN WHITE and FANCY GOODS,

Nainsook, Lawn, Swiss, Jackonet, Hamburg Embroideries, Laces, Ladies' Collars and Ties, Toilet towels, Ribbons and Buttons.

Floor and Table Oil Cloth in new Style Patterns.

Carpet Chain in fast colors.

Rubber Coats and Leggins—Overalls and Jackets.

In Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware and Woodenware my stock is complete.

Flour and Salt always on hand.

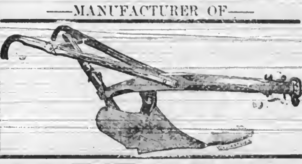
A Full stock of FANCY & STALPE Groceries.

Cash paid for country produce or will take in exchange for goods.

Orders for Goods not in stock, gladly and promptly filled.

Yours Truly, W. E. PIPER.

WILLIAM CLORE,
—MANUFACTURER OF—
Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,



Single & Double Shovels,

Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.

RISING SUN, - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING

We keep constantly on hand all sizes of
BURIAL CASEs AND CASKET.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES guaranteed less than city rates.

sOARDs & DAVIS, Hebron, Ky

$173.75 for a SQUARE or UPRIGHT [illegible] PIANOFORTE, with Stool, Cover [illegible]. Only $30 [illegible] an Eight Stop, Sub-bass and Octave-Couple ORGAN. Chapel Organs $35, Pipe Organs [illegible]. OTHER BARGAINS fully described in Illustrated Catalogue which is sent FREE with [illegible] particulars. VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME. Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

How to Write Biographies.

[illegible] my son, you want to know how [illegible]ies are written. I am glad you [illegible] because I can answer your question without dodging, and when a man [illegible] the answer, he doesn't care how many interrogation points are put forward to pluck it from him.

Well, then, supposing for example that you were about to write the biography of a clergyman, you want to know how to go to work. Why, my dear boy, it is the simplest thing in the world.

There are but two plans upon which clerical biographies are constructed; you may choose either, and so long as you are true to the rules tacitly agreed upon the world over for the particular plan you begin with, you can not fail.

One variety of the ministerial biography starts out with a pale, thoughtful-faced boy, who devours books instead of cookies, and is never truly happy unless buried to his eye-brows in theological treatises and musty metaphysics. He must have eyes which dwell on vacancy when they dwell anywhere. He must be of a sickly temperament, and nobody must expect him to live from day to day. This is the groundwork, and his college career must be consonant therewith. It is best to keep him hovering between life and death till his thirtieth year. Then let him grow fat and round and jolly by degrees, until you have completely reconstructed his physical and mental composition, and turned out a muscular Christian who loves sport, a good story and fat living, and whose sermons are as bright and pithy as they once were dull and tedious.

This is one plan. The other is to picture a boy chockful of mischief, who teases his sisters, torments the dog and cat, and astonishes his elders by his saucy wit and worries them continually by his escapades and general cussedness. He must be the black sheep at school, the horror of his teachers, and at college he must be the prime mover in all manner of wickedness and be expelled as often as your ingenuity may suggest. Like his complementary brother, he must also take a turn when about twenty-five or thirty, and ever after be the deep thinker, profound reasoner and tiresome bore, which death finally and kindly takes from a world altogether too bad for such as he.

The great point, you will observe, is to make as violent a contrast as possible between the boy and the man. It pleases the milk-and-water man to have people believe that he was a very imp in his youth; and the strong, healthy man, who cares more for physical than mental superiority, is not loth to have it go forth that when a boy he was studious and sickly to a fault.

In writing the biography of a soldier, you have simply to remark that he seemed born to command, and prove it by citing from imagination the salient points of his boyhood's exploits, and adding thereto all the great events and all the deeds of daring in the lives of the heroes of history and the famous fighters of fiction. It is as easy as lying, and therefore you require no further instruction in this department of biography.

The life of a great writer should deal principally with his eccentricities. Of course he must have these, otherwise he is a writer not worth writing about. Tell your readers that he wrote with a pointed stick, a pencil-stub or his finger—anything, in short, but a pen; that he preferred old envelopes, wrapping paper or wall paper to the orthodox stationery; that he wrote only when the fit took him, and that when the fit did take him he shut himself up for weeks and would neither eat nor drink nor sleep nor see anybody until the fit left him. After one of these intellectual spasms, you must depict him as utterly exhausted and just ready to die, as lying fallow for weeks or months, and then having a relapse and going back to his den, and grinding out a new batch of literature.

The successful business man must begin life as a poor boy. This is indispensable. Have his parents die in his infancy. If possible, let him be born without parents. At any rate, let him shirk for himself from the word "go," have him grow up without education or advantages of any kind other than his own shrewdness and honesty. Don't forget to emphasize his honesty. No matter if he was a thief from his cradle, picture him as honesty personified, and ascribe all his success to this virtue. You must make him an early riser, charitable to a fault and disinterested in all his dealings, a man averse to money rather than otherwise, and one who would be better pleased to see others rich and himself poor than to be overburdened with the wealth that is pouring in upon him in ever-increasing store and sadly against his will. These are the main points. Emphasize these and add such stories as you can invent of his charities, his public spirit and his shining example to all poor boys, and your tale is told.

There, my son, I think with these hints you will be able to write biography as well as the best of them. If you are not successful after what I have told you, you may as well make up your mind that biography is not your forte, and henceforward let fiction severely alone and confine your efforts to journalism or some other avenue monopolized by truth and veracity.—Boston Transcript.

—Sunday night Mr. Jesse A. Beard, of this city dreamed that his brother, Mr. T. J. Beard, of Chambers County, Ala., visited him, and upon being asked how things were at home told him that the family were all well, but that some thief had set fire to his outhouses, and everything on his premises was destroyed except the residence. Monday morning he received a letter from his brother which contained the exact information which he had dreamed that his brother told him in person. The smoke-house, stable and barn had all been destroyed, together with considerable grain and provisions, and it was with difficulty that the residence was saved.—Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer.

—[illegible] evening recently, while at the railroad depot at Baldwins, L. I., the horse of Edward Bedell became frightened at the sound of an approaching train and ran away. When the horse started the reins were lying over the dashboard, and Bedell was in the wagon talking to a friend on the platform. The horse dashed into the engine of the train just as it was passing the crossing and was killed. Mr. Bedell was thrown from the wagon a distance of ten feet, his head striking the depot platform, killing him instantly.

HOME AND FARM.

—Furniture needs cleansing as much as other wood-work. It may be washed with warm soap-suds, quickly wiped dry and then rubbed with an oily cloth. To polish it rub with rotten stone and sweet oil. Clean off the oil and polish with chamois skin.—Chicago Herald.

—Wall-baskets are made up in novel shapes; the oblong form is especially fashionable. Such a one can be covered with blue satin, embroidered in a floral design, the receptacle for papers having a valance of dark blue velvet cut in vandyke, a tassel depending from each point.

—A writer says that he has never failed to cure garget by the use of beans. He feeds one pint of bean meal, mixed with other meal, for four successive days, and has found that quantity sufficient to cure the worst cases. He thinks if cows were fed with bean meal several times a year they would never be troubled with garget.

—Many horses are actually killed by kindness. Letting them stand in the stable from one week's end to another without any exercise of any kind because they might hurt themselves if let run loose, is very injurious. To keep them in the right condition it is necessary that they be exercised every day.—N. Y. Times.

—Destruction of Ants: A correspondent in the Tropical Agriculturalist says: "Take a white china plate and spread a thin covering of common lard over it. Place it on the floor or shelf infested by the troublesome insects, and you will be pleased with the result. Stirring them up every morning is all that is required to set the trap again.

—The Iowa State Register asks and answers the following question: Why has England been able to keep up the fertility of her land for over a thousand years of constant cultivation? It is because they keep sheep. England has nearly one sheep for every acre of territory, while the United States has only one for every thirty-four acres.

—A great many farmers, says Colonel F. D. Curtis, in the Country Gentleman, comfort themselves with the notion that if they change seed with some other farmer they are doing a big thing. This is a mistaken idea. Seed should be improved and taken from the farm where it is grown, and to which it has adapted itself. At home is the place for improvement. The idea that the little germ of a seed can carry the good qualities of a good farm with it is ridiculous.

—While, in a degree, the heat of an animal is produced from its food, and therefore warm stables and steamed food and warmed water seem economical: yet it is doubtless true that animals are often greatly refreshed by drinking cold water. The thirsty man does not warm his favorite beverage even if its effect be recognized in the saving of food. The human system seems to require cold drinks at times.—N. Y. Herald.

—A correspondent in the Country Gentleman writes: "It is often necessary to haul water for quite a distance, and it is sometimes desirable to haul it in a barrel that has one head removed for convenience in dipping it out with a pail. This may be done without the water slopping out much, if a cover is made two or three inches smaller in diameter than the top of the barrel, so as to rest on the surface of the water and not on the top of the barrel. I have been obliged to haul water for some time past for a part of what we use at the house, and find that but little is wasted when covered in this manner."

Small Fruits on the Farm.

The first thing is the selection of the ground. If possible, a plat that slopes to the East or South is preferable, and if it is protected on the North and West so much the better. We do not like a steep hillside, especially for small fruits, but, if possible, want it sloping sufficiently to drain well. If this can not be secured to obtain the best results, artificial drainage will have to be resorted to.

While a poor soil will raise some fruit—and by using manure around the plants much economy in fertilizers can be used—still, if possible, it will always pay to select a naturally rich soil. Or if this can not be done, an application of well-rotted manure should be given. It is better of course that much of the preparation should be done in the fall, but at this time we can only do the best we can at the time. The ground should be well plowed and harrowed thoroughly, to get it in as good condition as possible. As in all other farm operations it pays to make the work of preparation as thorough as possible.

We believe that in small fruit culture it is far better to have the manure thoroughly incorporated with the soil. The roots of all plants (where they are to remain any length of time in the same place) are certain to penetrate through the soil in every direction, and when (as is often done) the manure is applied simply around the roots when the plants are first set out, it will stimulate a heavy growth at first or when the manure is first reached by the roots; but as the majority of the roots (especially the small rootlets or feelers) get beyond the manure and come in contact with the purer soil outside of the area covered by the manure, then there is a stoppage in growth and a consequent damage to the plants. And again, when manure is simply applied immediately around the roots in too large a quantity (and this is nearly always the case when applied in this way), it causes too strong a growth of wood at the expense of fruit and hardiness. An application of wood ashes is very beneficial, and should be applied if possible. We prefer to apply all the ashes we can save to our fruits, both large and small, in preference to using them in any other way, and if due care is taken with what is made in an ordinary family, a sufficient quantity can be secured to give all the fruit generally raised on the farm a dressing.

Understand at the outset that I am simply writing for the benefit of the farmer who, we think, ought to raise small fruits of all kinds for the use of his family, and not for those who make the raising of small fruits for market a specialty. I claim that each farmer can raise all kinds of small fruits far cheaper than he can buy. In fact, I have always held that the farmer ought, by all means, to raise all that is consumed in the way of edibles, and he can do so far cheaper than he can possibly buy them.—N. J. S., in Prairie Farmer.

—An American drank twenty-eight glasses of lager in Washington, on a wager the other evening, in thirty minutes, beating a German, who gave out after pouring down twenty-two glasses. This explains the antagonism manifested in Germany toward the American hog. It is jealousy.—Detroit Post.

A JOYFUL GREETING.

Hello! How are you? I am glad at last your eyes have fallen upon me. Now that we have met, pray cultivate the acquaintance, for it is my purpose to interest and to serve you. Between you and I, though only a newspaper article, I am ambitious. Having a portentous message for all mankind, if it be cordially received, its import truly realized and acted upon, I shall be considered a world's benefactor. Could have no higher ambition, you will admit.

A misanthrope of ample means determined to end his life by drowning himself. Going to the banks of the canal, found the time not favorable for the purpose, a number of persons being in the vicinity, and daylight still present. He concluded to walk along the tow-path until it was dark. While doing so, he heard piteous cries issuing from the door of a hovel near by, and unconsciously walked over to the place, and found a poor family, consisting of a mother surrounded by several children, who told him of their sufferings for food. He took from his pocket his wallet and handed it to the woman, reasoning with himself that he would not need it. The grateful thanks and praises that he received from the recipients of his bounty awoke emotion within his breast of such a pleasurable character, that he changed his suicidal intent, and decided to live for others. His future life became replete with good deeds—many a dark home and heart were made bright by his presence.

Well my appearance in these columns, springs simply from a desire on the part of those I represent to benefit your newsdevouring race. My province is to help you, your friends, your relations, aye, even your mother-in-law, if that interesting lady be not already far beyond the pale of good influences.

I am sent among men to bear tidings of a discovery that marks an epoch as important to the health of mankind as Newton's apple and Franklin's kite were to natural science. The sick, the discouraged, the dejected, the broken down, and the despairing, may now, all find a cure, certain as the Jordan proved to the Syrian leper. It is only necessary, as in the case of that sufferer of old, to follow directions.

The agent which I herald builds up the system, sweeps the cobwebs from the brain, and sends pure, invigorating blood dancing through the arteries, to the music of happy laughter.

The gloomy, worn-out man of business, by proper use of this wonderful medicine, will be enabled to meet trouble and reverses like a man. Then, in perfect health, he will not have abnormal views of the "Vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man, nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave."

The weak and nervous woman, just able to drag herself, in "moping melancholy," through duties of the day, may steal the bloom from blush roses, and have eyes bright and sparkling as the dewdrops nestling in their leaves: and the poor little baby, now disfigured with pimples and scabby sores, may be made sweet, cool, and wholesome as—"that youngster of Mrs. Blank's, across the way, whose family is always in a glow of health." Don't you know the reason? "No." Then I will tell you. For years, your neighbor has never been without Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

This remedy is a medicine, not a beverage, and is to be taken according to full and perfectly plain directions accompanying each bottle. It is specific, but not a patent medicine, and contains no vile narcotics, or viler liquor. It is a prescription used for years by the well-known physician Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose name is a household word in innumerable homes all over our own and foreign lands. The Golden Medical Discovery is prepared and offered to the public by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, a body corporate, existing by and under the laws of the State of New York: its President is Dr. Pierce, the great specialist in chronic diseases. The Doctor has devoted the best years of a very busy and wonderfully successful life to the relief and cure of his suffering follow-men,—and at a time when high political honors lay broadly open before him, Dr. Pierce resigned his seat in the Congress of the United States, simply from a sense of duty towards others. His associates in the great sanitarium represented to the doctor that the immense business of their Association demanded that his personal attention should be paid to the great army of patients crowding upon them from every clime. Dr. Pierce is also the founder of the Invalids' Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y. This establishment, possessing all the comforts and luxuries of a first-class American hotel, has in addition the daily attendance of a large faculty of eminent specialists, whose practice collectively cover the whole field of surgery and chronic diseases. The laboratory in which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is prepared is an object of interest and wonder. It has a frontage of one hundred feet, a depth of one hundred and twenty-five feet, and is six stories high. In this mammoth and palatial workshop two hundred persons are constantly employed in putting up Dr. Pierce's Medicines.

While the Golden Medical Discovery's curative effects are almost immediately felt, it is not merely a temporary stimulant, but is as certainly a safe and complete cure, in all cases for which it is recommended, as it is that certain misery and death will follow their neglect. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will not cure club feet, will not furnish armless or legless unfortunates with new and perfect limbs, and it is not guaranteed that even a dozen bottles applied to any stray portion of a second-hand skeleton will develop such member into an animate, human form divine (?). In brief, it is not asserted that this medicine will, or can, counteract the decrees of Providence. But in all cases where a high state of civilization and cultivation has engendered disease and suffering, whereby God's natural man has become a nervous, artificial being, the Golden Medical Discovery will positively restore to him the strong, vigorous, self-asserting life, from which almost unconsciously, he had drifted far, and perhaps hopelessly away. It is claimed, and guaranteed, if this medicine be used as prescribed, and faithfully persevered in a reasonable time, it will permanently cure liver complaint, and the various blood disorders consequent upon torpor of the liver, in all their various forms and ramifications, including bronchitis, consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, dyspepsia, costiveness, sick-headache, skin diseases, fever and ague, malaria, and other disorders arising from poisoned or deteriorated blood.

This wonderful medicine cures all humors, from the worst scrofula to a common blotch, pimple or eruption. Erysipelas, salt-rheum, fever-sores, scaly or rough skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying and invigorating medicine. Great eating ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influences. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing tetter, boils, carbuncles, scrofulous sores and swellings, white swellings, goitre or thick neck, and enlarged glands. Consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs, is promptly and positively arrested and cured by this sovereign and God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages are reached. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, consumptive night-sweats and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. For indigestion, dyspepsia and torpid liver, or "biliousness," Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it affects perfect and radical cures.

To all suffering from lassitude, weariness, despondency, lack of vigor or ambition, be it man, woman or child, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will speedily impart new tone, vigor and life to the whole system. The haggard face will grow round, ruddy and beam with the expression of long lost confidence. The step will be firm and elastic, and the relieved sufferer will once more enjoy, in common with fellowmen, that feeling of proprietorship in earth, air and being only fully realized by those in perfect health.

The Golden Medical Discovery will not make drunkards or opium eaters; on the contrary, any unfortunate, driven by trouble, adversity or inherited appetite, to the use of insidious stimulants, will find the Discovery of great assistance in efforts to break the chains binding him to a shameful and miserable existence.

Those feeling only "out of sorts," with no predominant symptoms, and who, if asked, would find it difficult to explain their sensations, will find a sovereign remedy in the Golden Medical Discovery.

Those who are irritable, petulant or fretful, ever seeing the gloomy side of life; who imagine "the time is out of joint;" to whom life is a heavy burden, not a blessing; who think the whole world is arrayed against them, and anticipate calamity at every turn; to all such let this message be full of encouragement and joy—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will radically cure them, when it will be found, to their lasting benefit, that life and the world have not changed, but that disease had thrown clouds of misery and woe about them through which all things were seen, as "through a glass darkly."

Let no sufferer be discouraged because he or she has tried other medicines without benefit. In fact, these are the cases the World's Dispensary Medical Association particularly desire to reach through their Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When all other medicines fail let this be tried, and no one will be doomed to further disappointment.

The Golden Medical Discovery is a prescription of a physician with a wide-awake reputation and an honorable position to maintain. It is far beneath the dignity of Dr. Pierce to lend his name to any vile nostrum, or catch-penny preparation, whereby the public may be deceived. Having used his Discovery for many years in his unprecedented private practice, he is convinced it is indeed a specific in diseases mentioned. Desiring this marvelous cure shall benefit, not only those with whom he comes personally in contact, but that all mankind may be embraced in his grand plan for the amelioration of human suffering, the Doctor, through the World's Dispensary Medical Association, earnestly and most confidently recommends his Golden Medical Discovery to the public at large, assured the most skeptical will be thoroughly convinced of its worth by a trial of a single bottle.

In stubborn, or long-seated affections, and where the bowels are very costive, the gentle, though certain action of the Discovery, will be more rapid and satisfactory by supplementing Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets in small daily doses of one or two. These pills (the original and only genuine Little Liver Pills) are purely vegetable, sugar-coated and very small, yet by the peculiar process used in their preparation, they possess the strength and virtue of larger and unpalatable pills. Pleasant Purgative Pellets will speedily remove all ill and disagreeable effects arising from over-eating or drinking, and are recommended as a cathartic at all times, being perfectly safe, sure and unattended by the griping pains usually experienced in the use of purgatives less carefully prepared. Promptly resorted to, these little Pellets will radically cure indigestion, biliousness and sick-headache, thus saving the patient from serious and lingering disorders. Dr. Pierce, the President of the World's Dispensary, and his faculty of twelve skilled specialists, can be consulted by letter or in person in any case of chronic disease requiring either medical or surgical treatment free of charge. For those desiring more exhaustive information than can be imparted through correspondence, the Doctor has written a book, called "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified."

This work alone is a goodly harvest for an ordinary life, and stamps its author a profound scholar and a very remarkable man. The book contains nine hundred and twenty-two pages, illustrated with two hundred and eighty-six wood-cuts and colored plates, and makes plain as a, b, c, anatomy, physiology, materia medica, practice of medicine, hygiene, temperaments, psychology, etc.,—and answers in plain, easily-to-be-understood terms all questions that may arise within their range, especially those questions the would-be inquirer is deterred by fear or modesty from asking the family or other physician. That all may be enabled to acquaint themselves with matter so vital to health, happiness and success, the price of this great work has been fixed at one dollar and fifty cents, postpaid by mail to any address, while smaller and far inferior books, purporting to cover the same ground, have sold at five dollars a copy. It being the aim of the proprietors of the Common Sense Medical Adviser to reach not only the affluent, but also those in moderate, and even straightened, circumstances, the price of the work places it within the reach of all.

A Jealous Calf.

At about two o'clock on Thursday morning a Chinaman named Wang Hee died at Ben Marker's from injuries he received the night before from a young bull on the ranch. It appears that there was a cow on the place that no one but Marker could milk because of the determined interference of its bull calf. The calf would fly into a rage whenever its mother was milked. The bull is now three years old, and for the past year has been kept in an adjoining lot, and when any one approached the cow with a milk-pail the bull would fall into a terrible rage and its bellowings could be heard all over the ranch. Day before yesterday the Chinaman started to milk the cow, and the bull, becoming very much excited, rushed to the fence as usual, but the Chinaman paid no attention. Suddenly the bull retreated a few paces, and, lowering his head, charged for the fence, making a breach and sending the fragments high in air. The fence went down as if it had been paper, and the bull came headlong at the Chinaman, striking him in the head and side with its horns. One horn penetrated the left side, breaking two ribs, and the other fractured the skull. The farm-hands rushed out to find the bull tossing the Chinaman in the air and bellowing savagely. The bull was driven off and the unfortunate man taken to the house unconscious. He lingered in great agony until two o'clock in the morning, when he died.—Carson (Nev.) Appeal.

Sunshine in the White House.

A dainty little girl of 8 or 9 years, with dangerous big blue eyes, appeared in the library of the White House the other day when it was full of great men of one sort and another, and quietly waited her turn to speak with the tall, dignified gentleman with gray whiskers and hair, and the sober face and courteous manner down by the bow window in the south end of the room. By and by her opportunity came. She tripped forward modestly, but bravely, and with a "Good morning, Mr. President," told her name and proffered her request. She was a niece of Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock, and she wanted a sweet flower from the executive conservatory for the Easter decoration of a little Episcopal church. She smiled archly, as she told her errand, as though she was quite sure of a favorable response. The president's tired face brightened with smiles as he turned from the tiresome politicians to the sweet, little face before him. It was like a cooling zephyr from the Chesapeake on a hot summer day. He told her honestly that he was very glad to see her, and then he gave her carte blanche in the conservatory, and dismissed her with a word or two about his own little girl, who does so much to lighten up his life in the White House. Her handsome uncle could not have done more for her had he been standing in Arthur's place. —Washington Correspondent Philadelphia Record.

The Rings and the Lady.

A dispatch from New Haven, Conn., says: A singular accident occurred here yesterday. A daughter of Mr. Diebel, in making her toilet, took three or four rings from her fingers and thoughtlessly left them in the wash-basin, and a lady friend threw the water, rings and all, from a window into a space between two buildings less than eleven inches wide. Nellie Manning, a niece of Mr. Diebel, saw the rings glisten and climbed down to get them. The buildings are closer at the bottom than at the top, and the young lady found herself wedged fast. Assistance was procured and the lady was rescued in a fainting, hysterical, and almost unconscious state. She was for a time delirious, and screamed; "Take me out! [illegible], I tell you I'll die here!" The young lady is as well as can be expected.

—Miss Sadie Miller, of Meyersville, Somerset County, Pa., wishing to disgust her father with the country because she desired a residence in the city, played the part of the ghost for a week. She had nearly scared the old folks into moving, when she was detected. She is now pining in a reformatory.

THE WEATHER LIAR.

There are many kinds of the liar family, but the best known is the weather liar. The older he is the greater his license to indulge in his favorite pastime. Every day of the year furnishes him with an excuse, and all he asks is for somebody to talk to. The weather liar remembers that the winter of 1879 was exactly like that of 1491; the spring of 1882 puts him in mind of the spring of 1624; the cold waves of the past winter didn't begin with those in 1774. He can remember winters when not a flake of snow fell, and summers when there was a frost every other night for three months. He has seen the thermometer drop to forty-seven degrees below in January, and climb to 130 degrees in August. He remembers one year when cherries were ripe in May, and another when they could not be picked until November. No matter what the weather is, the weather liar has always seen worse. If it snows for two days he has seen it snow for four. If it rains for a week, he can remember when it poured down without a break for three. If you have seen it hot enough to fry eggs on a stone sidewalk, he has seen an ax melt on top of a lump of ice.

THE FISH LIAR

ranks second on the list. He goes fishing about once in five years and spends the rest of the time in lying about what occurred. He caught a bass weighing fourteen pounds, but the hook broke and let him escape. He had a bite from a pickerel four feet long, but stubbed his toe and couldn't pull up at the proper moment. He began fishing with minnows for bait, but the fish bit so greedily that he finally tied a horn button to the hook and pulled 'em out as fast as he could drop the line. He caught an even tubful, but while he was eating luncheon the wharf gave way and let tub and fish into the water. The fish liar can be found sitting on the counter at the grocery of an evening, all wound up and ready to begin business, and nothing lets the sunshine into his life so quick as to get hold of some one who will gasp out occasionally: "My stars! but is that possible?"

THE HORSE LIAR

stands third on the list. He is a man who has had a horse which could go in 2.20. He hasn't got him now, but that doesn't make any difference. He has driven that horse in a race with an express train, and taken first money. And he also had a running horse which once made a dash of twenty-five miles on a bet of $5,000. He hasn't the horse or the money at the present time, but he can give you the name of a dozen leading bank presidents and Chief-Justices who saw that dash.

The horse-liar doesn't stop at lying about his own horses, but he is ready to put in his best licks on animals he never saw. He is in the confidence of the owners of all the celebrated equines. In his opinion such a track is short and such a track is long. He doesn't believe Rarus was ever much of a horse, and he feels that he could drive Goldsmith Maid in three seconds faster than she ever recorded. He is the identical man who first saw speed in Flora Temple, and if he had wanted to be mean about it, he could have bought her for ten dollars and an old plow, and made $5,000 out of the trade. He knows all about spavins, ring-bones, poll-evil, pinkeye and glanders, and he has a sure cure for each one. His seat is on the head of the second cracker-barrel from the stove each evening through the winter, and when he can come across some one who has invested fifteen dollars and a cross-cut saw in an old plug of a horse to use in a cider-mill, he is in his glory. He knows all about that horse; been an awful good stepper; saw him run away once, and killed two women; Rarey tried to tame him, but had to give it up; reckon he could go out now and give most of the boys the dust; and so on until the grocer rubs his sleepy eyes, and regretfully says:

"Come, you liars, it's time to lock up and go home.—Detroit Free Press.

A BIG-HANDED sawyer named Shaw,
Put his finger too near the buzz-saw,
He saw his mistake,
But each pain and ache,
St. Jacobs Oil cured in his paw.

A rheumatic old man named Meeker,
Was sick a whole year in Topeeker,
He there would have died,
But St. Jacobs Oil tried,
It sent him back cured to Osweeger.

THE diamond is the stone for an engagement, but give us the cobblestone in a free fight.—Puck.

Instantly Relieved.

Mrs. Ana Lacour, of New Orleans, La., writes:—I have a son who has been sick for two years; he has been attended by our leading physicians but all to no purpose. This morning he had his usual spell of coughing, and was so greatly prostrated in consequence, that death seemed imminent. We had in the house a bottle of DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS purchased by my husband, who noticed your advertisement yesterday. We administered it according to directions and he was instantly relieved.

THIRTY years ago, in Paris, there were tiny visiting cards for babies. The custom has been revived.

IRRITATION OF THE THROAT AND HOARSENESS immediately relieved by "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Price, 25cts. Sold only in boxes.

THE motto for the stamping clerk at the post-office—Wherever you see a head, hit it.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, April 13, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—Common	$2 50	@	3 75
Choice butchers	5 00	@	5 85
HOGS—Common	6 25	@	6 85
Good packers	7 15	@	7 65
SHEEP	5 25	@	6 00
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@	5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 13	@
No. 2 winter red	1 09	@	1 10
Corn—No. 2 mixed	56¼	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	46	@
Rye—No. 2	68	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@	11 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@	9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	18 25	@
Lard—Steam	11	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	43	@
Prime Creamery	40	@	43
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per barrel, from store	2 50	@	2 75
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@	4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 40	@	3 95
Good to choice	4 50	@	7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 18¾	@	1 19
No. 1 white	1 10	@	1 11
Corn—No 2 mixed	66	@	67¼
Oats—mixed	51	@	51¼
PORK—Mess	19 20	@	19 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@	5 50
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 red	1 06	@
Corn No. 2	49½	@	52½
Oats—No. 2	41½	@
Rye	57½	@
PORK—Mess	17 95	@	18 00
LARD—Steam	11-17½	@	11-20
WHISKY	1 17	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@	6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 18½	@	1 19
Corn—mixed	63¼	@
Oats—mixed	49	@	51
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@	4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 05	@	1 07
Corn—mixed	53	@
Oats—mixed	45	@
PORK—Mess	18 75	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 07½	@
CORN	50	@
OATS mixed	42½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@	4 00

STRAIGHTEN your old boots and shoes with Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffener, and wear them again. Sold by shoe and hardware dealers.

GRAY hairs are the only object of respect that can not excite envy.—Bacon.

THE cheapest and prettiest collars and cuffs are the Cholithion. Try them and see for yourself.

LAMENTATION is the musician that always, like a screech owl, alights and sits on the roof of an angry man.—Plutarch.

REDDING'S Russia Salve meets with wonderful success in all cases of Skin disease. Try it.

THE French word for law is placed in the feminine gender. This is because the law is so fearfully uncertain.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

"It's only a cold." But it's dangerous; use N. K. Brown's Ess. Jamaica Ginger.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar
Checks cold and prevents bronchitis. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

USE St. Patrick's Salve, and learn its great value. One trial convinces.

Our Reporter's Vacation Notes.

DURING his rambles this season, our Mr. M. has taken upon himself the task of satisfying our numerous readers that whatever goods are manufactured in our goodly city of Roger Williams, are of as high a grade, and as fine in quality as can be produced in any spot on the globe. Especially is this so when the skilled Pharmacist of many years experience resolves to extract from the finest botanical specimens of the vegetable world the most potent cure for some special disease. In proof of his assertion that Providence, R.I., affords the best, he relates an interview with an acquaintance, given him while sojourning temporarily at her residence. She says: "About a year I suffered severely from Rheumatism in my limbs, and Neuralgia in the head, which I endured two or three months with as much patience as possible, being under the treatment of an excellent doctor, and trying many kinds of medicine without any marked effect. At last a medical friend advised me to try Hunt's Remedy, because he attributed my severe suffering to the bad condition of my kidneys, which were not performing their proper functions, and I commenced taking it, and in a few days the neuralgia had departed, my headache had entirely disappeared, the swelling in my limbs and joints had gone, and I have not had a touch of it since. More recently I was troubled with impurity of the blood, which showed itself in severe eruptions on my face. I again resorted to Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it a short time was completely cured of that complaint. Hunt's Remedy has proved very beneficial to me in attacks of sick headache, which it always alleviates, and I notice the improvement as soon as I take it. Hunt's Remedy has strengthening elements, for it has made me feel much stronger, and has been very beneficial to my general health. I most heartily recommend it to all sufferers like myself. MRS. L. G. TANNER, No. 136 Pearl Street."

Great Praise.

ALBERT G. MANN, of Cottage Home, Ill., says: "I have been prostrated for three or more years with kidney disease; at times I was not able to put on my boots; my wife has often pulled them on for me. I was not so bad as that all the time, but I never knew what it was to be without pain in my back until I commenced using Hunt's Remedy. Since I began to take Hunt's Remedy I have been free from all pain, and take pleasure in saying that it is the best medicine that I ever knew for Kidney and Liver diseases."

.25 PISO'S CURE FOR 100
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first-class and fast selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free.
DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

To quietly introduce the new Sunday School Book GOLDEN RAYS will fill orders prior to May 1st at $18 per hundred; 20c. each. Specimen pages free.
S. S. MUSIC PUB. CO., 1818 Reed St., Phila., Pa.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

GUNS Pistols, &c., at Wholesale Rates. A Good 7-Shot Revolver $1.00, Fine Twist Guns $10.25, &c., &c. Send for our new Price-List, FREE. Good Agents Wanted. Address
A. G. Alford & Co., No. 5 S. Howard St., Baltimore, Md.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list.
J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book, $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Money! Patent soon expires; goods must be made now; 4,000 more men, women & children can make from $5 to $10 a day at home. Send 10c for material and begin work. B. Imont M'f'g Co., Box 11, Boston, Mass.

BOILERS LOVEGROVE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA. ENGINES

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Write for catalogue. Coleman & Palms, Prop'rs.

YOUNG MEN If you want to learn Telegraphy in a few months, and be certain of a situation, address VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

ELECTRIC BELT $3 or $1 BATTERY can CURE You. Book free, Agents. Future Remedy Co., Cleveland, O.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

Sure Cure Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

St. Jacobs Oil
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
What the great restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will do, must be gathered from what it has done. It has effected radical cures in thousands of cases of dyspepsia, bilious disorders, intermittent fever, nervous affections, general debility, constipation, sick headache, mental despondency, and the peculiar complaints and disabilities to which the feeble are so subject. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

Vital Questions!!

Ask the most eminent physician
Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly
"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu!"

"Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver disease or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients
"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.

Women gone nearly crazy!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism,

Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!

Erysipelas!
Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact almost all diseases frail
Nature is heir to
Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

CANCER INSTITUTE.
AURORA ILL.
Established 1872; Incorporated 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address
DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

$60. 5-TON JONES
Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM.
JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT.
Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low.
For free book, address
JONES OF BINGHAMTON,
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO.,
186 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

WORTH SENDING FOR! Dr. J. H. Schenck has just published a book on DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND HOW TO CURE THEM, which is offered FREE, postpaid, to all applicants. It contains valuable information for all who suppose themselves afflicted with, or liable to any disease of the throat or lungs. Mention this paper. Address
DR. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE SUN A MILLION A WEEK.
No other Newspaper published on this side of the earth is bought and read by so many men and women. Why? Because it is outspoken, truth-telling and always interesting. It is everybody's newspaper. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year.
I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS, NEURALGIA.
Johnson's Anodyne Liniment (for Internal and External Use) will instantaneously relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives, sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

LIST OF DISEASES
ALWAYS CURABLE BY USING MEXICAN MUSTANG
LINIMENT.

OF HUMAN FLESH.
Rheumatism,
Burns and Scalds,
Stings and Bites,
Cuts and Bruises,
Sprains & Stitches,
Contracted Muscles,
Stiff Joints,
Backache,
Eruptions,
Frost Bites,

OF ANIMALS
Scratches,
Sores and Galls,
Spavin, Cracks,
Screw Worm, Grub,
Foot Rot, Hoof All,
Lameness,
Swinny, Founders,
Sprains, Strains,
Sore Feet,
Stiffness,

and all external diseases, and every hurt or accident.
For general use in family, stable and stock-yard, it is
THE BEST OF ALL
LINIMENTS

XX.—NOTICE.—XX.
AS BLUE FLANNEL GARMENTS
Of Inferior Quality of Goods
are sold as the "genuine Middlesex," which are not made by that mill, The Middlesex Company, in order to protect their customers and the public, give notice that hereafter all Clothing made from THE MIDDLESEX STANDARD INDIGO BLUE FLANNELS AND YACHT CLOTHS, sold by all leading clothiers, must bear the "SILK HANGERS," furnished by the Selling Agents to all parties ordering the goods.
WENDELL, FAY & CO.,
SELLING AGENTS, MIDDLESEX COMPANY,
86 and 88 Worth St., New York. 37 Franklin St., Boston; 214 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co. Mansfield, Ohio.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 921 15—83

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25, 1883. NUMBER 26.

WISE SAYINGS.

GATHERED FROM ORIENTAL SOURCES.

Rogues differ little: Each begun,
First, as a disobedient son.
—Chinese.

A single human sigh may burn
Till it the world shall overturn.
—Persian.

To hide your tracks where'er you go,
Be careful not to walk in snow.
—Chinese.

As fabrics dipped in any dye
Give back its colors to the eye,
So they with whom we move and live
To us our special color give.
—Hindu.

My teachers brought me many a store
Of learning—but, my mates much more;
Yet, when I of my knowledge boast,
I know my pupils taught me most.
—The Talmud.

Misfortunes coming to the good
Nowise disturb their fortitude;
Like camphor-wood the fire illumes,
Through bitterness their virtue blooms.
—Hindu.

The tongue is little, but how strong—
Only at most three inches long:
But when foul words its rage supply
Woe to the man that's six feet high.
—Japanese.

Every Thought, from east or west,
Welcome as a favored guest—
But each Desire, both fierce and wild,
Control as you would rule a child.
—Chinese.

A CRUEL BLOW.

"The most dangerous and troublesome men," said Dr. Redfield, "are those who should be regarded as fools, but for some unexplained reason are not. Here now is a beautiful and lovely young woman suddenly deprived of reason just on the eve of her marriage to the worthy young man on whom the blow has also fallen with crushing force. Two lives blighted perhaps forever by an act that should consign its perpetrator to a prison and a lunatic asylum for each alternate year of the remainder of his life."

These remarks related to a practical joke played by a reckless and imprudent young man, one Fred Losher, the victim of his criminal folly being his cousin, Florence Percival, whose marriage would have taken place the next day.

The railway train which was bringing her prospective husband from his home, three hundred miles away, was behind time about five hours, delayed by a heavy storm, which had also prostrated the telegraph lines, so that no information in regard to the cause of the detention could be obtained.

The train came in at last, however, all right, and without having sustained any serious accident. The bride-groom elect, Frank McAllister, alighted from the cars, going first to the hotel, from whence, in half an hour, he would have reported himself at the residence of his betrothed.

That foolish cousin, however, who had been sent to the station to obtain the earliest news of the delayed train, came rushing back to the house to bring the tidings, but thought it would be a capital joke, as he afterward said, to give his cousin at first a good scare.

"Well, Florence," he exclaimed, "Frank has been heard from at last. The train's smashed—forty persons killed—and he among them!"

A bewildered, half-conscious look was followed by a fearful scream, and poor Florence had fallen unconscious.

Dr. Redfield, the family physician, who chanced to be passing the door, was immediately with the patient, and doing his utmost to arrest the progress of those terrible convulsions, but with scarcely any success.

A young brother of Florence was the only person with her at the time that startling announcement was made; but his version of what had occurred was so clear and positive that the reckless fellow who was the author of the mischief did not attempt to contradict or deny the boy's statement.

Had the life of the dear girl been suddenly destroyed by the careless discharge of a pistol, fired by some one who did not stop to consider in what direction he was pointing, the consternation and sorrow of the family could scarcely have been greater. Frank McAllister knelt at the side of the insensible girl, giving vent to his feelings in an agony of grief.

In the meantime, the young blockhead by whose criminal folly the mischief had been done, was dodging around in a dozen directions, telling everybody how very sorry he was for what had happened, and asking each one to tell him what service he could render. He subsided, however, and made himself less prominent, after having been repeatedly told that his immediate departure from the scene of the trouble would gratify everyone there.

But the blow that had fallen upon the heart of the afflicted lover was too severe to permit an immediate reaction even in the way of resentment against the author of the trouble. The joyful hope that filled his whole soul an hour before had given place to sorrow that seemed to have gone through every nerve of his life.

The terrible shock was followed, as the doctor predicted it would be, by a typhomania, that continued three weeks—the patient's life, in the meantime, being suspended in a balance which the weight of a feather might turn.

At the end of that time the malady began to take a different form. The cerebral excitement appeared to have exhausted its force and to be passing away, but the light of reason did not return. The one terrible thought, that her lover had been crushed to death, had gone through and possessed her whole mind, and there did not seem to be any way to remove it.

The first question she asked, when, looking as if making an effort to reason once more, was how long it would be before she could go to Frank's funeral. When assured that he was not dead, but still alive, and actually in the room at that moment, the meaning of the words did not seem to enter her mind, for she again repeatedly asked, in a pleading way:

"Please let me go to Frank's funeral!"

Her lover, who had been with her, or near her, almost continually, then came forward, and, sitting down beside her, took one of her hands, saying:

"I am not dead, dear Florence! I am alive and here with you."

But his kind words only brought a bewildering stare.

"You! Who are you?" she asked. "I do not know you! I never saw you before. You are not my dear Frank—he is dead; and now they will not even let me go to his funeral. Did you know Frank? you look some like him, and I believe you are trying to pass yourself for him. Go away from me! you trouble me!"

"There is hope in her case," said the doctor, when at his next visit this incident was related to him. "The normal action of her mind will not be restored immediately, and will be a work of great labor and care. I think it will be better my young friend," he continued, addressing McAllister, "for her not even to see you for a few days. We will, in the meantime, carefully observe all she says in regard to you."

This plan was continued for some three weeks, but with no encouraging result. The experiment of allowing Frank to return and talk to her, and with other persons, was again tried, but without success.

By the earnest desire of the parents and other friends of the patient, Florence was retained at home instead of being sent to an asylum for lunatics, Dr. Redfield giving her his daily, and, in fact, almost constant attention. In this way three months of painful and anxious suspense, with no certainty in regard to the final result, passed.

"You are a good singer, I believe," said the doctor addressing young McAllister, as they were sitting together on the veranda, where they had been talking for a half-hour in regard to the care of poor Florence.

"Well, yes; I am a fair singer," replied Frank. "Florence and I have been accustomed to sing together, especially when much younger, and before I moved away from the city. We were at one time members of a juvenile choir for two years."

"Well, my dear fellow," said the doctor, "I am disposed to try another experiment, which may not be of the least use to our dear Florence, but can certainly do her no harm. I want you to come into one of the adjoining rooms occasionally—only do not let her see you—and sing some of those old songs which you and she have been accustomed to sing together with the deepest interest, and let us see what the result will be. You must be near enough for her to hear you distinctly. We will try this experiment only when she is in a quiet state of mind."

"Who is that singing?" asked Florence, starting up and looking around suddenly and earnestly. "It sounds like the voice of my dear Frank, who is now in Heaven. How glad I would be to go there and live with him."

This remark was made the first time the experiment was tried, the patient being at the time more composed than usual.

"I know that is my dear Frank's voice," she repeated. "Please let me go to him." And she at once began to catch the tune and sing a few notes of it.

"It does sound like Frank singing," the doctor finally said; "but I do not see how we could hear him if he is already in Heaven. I think it must be nearer than that."

The experiment was, however, continued only a short time, as the patient became very much excited after a few moments, and burst into tears, begging to be allowed to go and join her dear Frank in the world to which she knew he had gone. Similar experiments were repeated frequently, occasions being selected when Florence was most quiet and not liable to be too much excited; her lover, in the meantime, passing around from one room to another, sometimes quite near to her, and then in a distant part of the house.

After a few trials the patient began to ask for the singing, and would not be satisfied until she heard it. She would listen for a considerable time with the deepest attention and interest, occasionally joining with her own own voice, but would invariably become weary after a time, and sometimes pass off again into the wildest excitement. The moment, however, any trouble of that sort appeared to be approaching the singing was, of course, suspended.

In this way these experiments had continued for some two or three weeks, with encouraging results. At length, one day when the patient was sitting up in her chair, and more quiet than usual, the familiar notes of "The Last Rose of Summer" sounded out clear and distinct. Florence immediately joined her own voice to that of the unseen singer; then, as if forgetting that she had ever imagined that her lover was dead, she sprang from her chair—the doctor grasping her arm at the same instant—and fixing upon him an earnest and intelligent look, exclaimed:

"Doctor, that is my dear Frank! He is in the next room! Why does he not come in here!"

She would have gone to find him at once, but Dr. Redfield finally pursuaded her to sit down and let him go and see if he could find him.

"Go in at once," directed the doctor, "but in a perfectly natural way; do not show the least excitement. I will come after a few moments, but had you better go in and meet her alone."

Ten minutes later the doctor entered quietly, and had the happiness of seeing his patient sitting by the side of Frank, clasping his hands in her own.

"Why, Doctor," she exclaimed, "here is my dear Frank! He has come at last! He says the cars were off the track, and were delayed a few hours. We were to be married to-morrow, you know."

"Yes, Florence," said the doctor, taking her hand kindly; "but you have not been very well lately, and it will be better to defer your marriage for a few days."

"But you will not go away any more, Frank, until after our wedding?" said Florence, anxiously.

"No, indeed," said her lover, the tears starting to his eyes. "And we will be married just as soon as you are well enough for us to go on our wedding tour."

No allusion was made at that time to what had occurred, but after some days, in answer to her questions, she was gradually permitted to learn the whole truth. Of the sudden fright, however, she remembered nothing. The last thing her memory recalled in connection with that terrible affair was an incident that occurred about four hours previous to that event, when her father, as she said, came in and told her that the train was behind time, having been due for an hour. All after that was a blank, the terrible shock having, by some strange law of the mind, reflected backward, so as to wipe out entirely the recollection of what had occurred in those four preceding hours.

She referred, however, occasionally to having heard Frank singing in the adjoining rooms, and wondering why he did not come in where she was. This had seemed, however, more like a dream than a reality.

Her recovery was rapid. Although possessed of a highly wrought nervous temperament, her constitution, previous to this sad affair, had been good, and her health was soon restored, leaving no trace of the mental disturbance and injury she had suffered.

The marriage took place soon after her complete recovery.—N. Y. Ledger.

Illustrious Shoemakers.

It is a somewhat curious fact that more shoemakers have become distinguished than any other craftsmen. Among illustrious American shoemakers are John G. Whittier, Roger Sherman, one of the singers of the Declaration of Independence; Henry Wilson, "the Natick cobbler," Vice-President and Senator of the United States; Daniel Sheffey, Member of Congress from Virginia, and gentleman who, when taunted by John Randolph, of Roanoke with his former occupation, replied: "The difference, sir, between my colleague and myself is this, that if his lot had been cast like mine in early life, instead of rising by industry, enterprise and study, above his calling and occupying a seat on this floor, he would at this time be engaged in making shoes on the bench;" Gideon Lee, Mayor of New York City and Member of Congres; William Claflin, Governor of Massachusetts and Member of Congress; John B. Alley, Member of Congress from Massachusetts; Henry P. Baldwin, Governor of Michigan and Senator of the United States; Judge Thomas M. Cooley, of the same State, and William Parsons, whom Benjamin Franklin speaks of as a member of the "Junto"

Among illustrious shoemakers of other countries have been Sir Cloudesley Shovel, the cobbler's boy who became an Admiral; Samuel Bradhurn, one of the most famous pulpit orators of his day and became President of the Wesleyan Conference; William Clifford, the first editor of the London Quarterly Review; Samuel Drew, the most eminent metaphysician of his day, whose famous work on the Immateriality and Immortality of the Soul was written while he was still cobbling shoes; William Carey, the first Protestant missionary to India and the translator of the Bible into Bengali and Hindoostani; Thomas Holcroft, a renowned dramatist and novelist; George Fox, founder of the Society of Friends (Quakers); Robert Morrison, D. D., the well-known Chinese scholar and missionary; John Kitto, the distinguished Biblical scholar; William Sturgeon, the electrician; and Thomas Hardy and George Odger, eminent English statesmen.

Other distinguished European shoemakers have been Benoit Bandonin, "the learned," of France; Hans Sachs, the Nightingale of the Reformation, and Jacob Boehmen, the Mystic of Germany; Gabriel Cappellini and Francesco Brizzio, both famous artists of Italy; and Londolph de Jong, the portrait painter, of Holland.

Many distinguished men of ancient times were also cobblers, among them being the artist Apelles; Annianas, Bishop of Alexandria; Alexander, Bishop of Courana; and Rabbi Jochanan.

Not a few shoemakers have had distinguished sons, as witness the following: Pope John XII. was the son of a shoemaker living at Cahors, France; Jean Baptiste Rosseau was the son of a well-to-do Parisian shoemaker, and wa ashamed of his father's calling; Hans Christian Andersen, the popular writer of fairy tales, was the son of an Adense (Denmark) shoemaker; and the father of Isaac Watts, the renowned hymnist, is supposed to have been a shoemaker.

The days for the cobbler's bench to graduate such eminent men are probably past, the making of shoes by machinery having almost entirely removed the necessity for the making of them by hand. That silent occupation afforded all engaged in it excellent opportunities for deep thought, which those who became illustrious wisely improved.—Cincinnati Times.

The Pest of the Planter.

The crayfish is receiving scientific and editorial attention in the South. When he burrows in back yards and gutters he affords much diversion to the small Southern boy, who laboriously fishes for him by dangling a string baited with grissle down the hole and jerking him out when he clinches the morsel. He is also employed in bisque soup, to the delight of gourmands, and he is really a valuable crustacean, when thus served. In return for these courtesies, the crayfish makes the spring-time warm for planters by honeycombing their levees as fast as they build them. One crayfish burrow may be the starting point of a leak which will in an hour widen to a crevasse, and let a flood pour over miles of cultivated land. There seems to be no means of suppressing either him or his subterranean industry, and he has now grown to be a terror. Hot water, Paris green and other death-dealing agents have been employed in vain, and now the afflicted landowners, whose levees and revetements are the sole barriers between them and destruction, are appealing to science for a bane which will effectually prevent crayfish engineering. In California, the gopher, a species of marmot, has long been the plague of farmers and gardeners. In portions of Texas the buffalo gnat and redbug have destroyed herds, or compelled their removal from tracks otherwise favorable. Against these there is neither remedy nor satisfaction. The Southern planter, whom the crayfish has drowned out, has at least one recourse. He can eat him.—N. Y. Sun.

—English gold coin has been so worn that it will cost $4,000,000 to restore the $275,000,000 in circulation.

Religious.

LIGHT IN SORROW'S GLOOM.

A child, grown restless as the night came on,
Tired of twilight—wondering where the day had gone—
Stood watching at the window with a weary sigh,
Till heaven should hang its starlamps in the sky.

"Mamma, why don't they come," she questioning said;
Then looking up, "Come pretty stars," she sweetly plead;
Deeper the shadows of the night around her grew,
While patiently she peered the darkness through.

At last, with shout of joy a star she spied;
"I see one now, mamma! why not before?" she cried;
The mother kissed her little eager lips, and smiled,
"Because it's just grown dark enough, my child."

So shine the "eternal stars" in sorrow's night,
The deepest gloom but serves to bring their blessed light;
Take courage, then—look up—oh heart that most has bled,
God's stars of hope are shining overhead.
—Miss Anna Gordon, in Union Signal.

SOME OF THE RESULTS OF CHRISTIANITY.

No stronger witness to Christianity can be needed than the amazing results which it has wrought in the social condition of the world, especially during the first three Christian centuries; and for the sake of strengthening our faith, it is worth while recapitulating some of these results as they are presented by Mr. Charles L. Brace, in his recent publication—"Gesta Christi."

At the time of the coming of Christ the Roman world was fast hurrying to moral and spiritual decay. The evils by which it was afflicted and against which the first chapter of Romans brings so terrible an indictment were not unheeded by the philosophers of the time, but even the most sanguine could suggest no relief. Plato, writing as early as three hundred years before Christ, lamented the situation in his own day, and though he conceived a remedy, he did not imagine it practicable. The evils might be broken up, he believed, by the operation of three principles or moral forces: first, that of piety or love to a Divine person; second, the desire for honor and the respect of the good; and thirdly, the love of moral beauty, that not of the body but of the soul. "These be, perhaps, romantic aspirations," Plato declares, "but they are the noblest of aspirations if they could only be realized. "Matters have now come to such a pass," he confessed, "that the enactment of such laws (as might proceed from these sentiments) seems to be impossible, and never likely to take place." This was a gloomy outlook, but it was not unwarranted by the signs of the times. Plato's lack of faith was not remarkable; it is only surprising that his diagnosis was so correct, and his idea of the remedy so clear. For as a matter of fact it was that remedy which Christianity afterward administered, and which proved effectual in arresting the progress of decay. "The three forces of which Plato spoke," says Mr. Brace," were especially thrown into the world by Jesus." The ideal for which the philosopher longed, but which he regarded as visionary and unattainable, became a matter of reality through Christ.

Indeed, when these forces began to operate in men's hearts it was impossible that the old vices should go on. All that was corrupt, sensual, oppressive, inhuman, found itself antagonized by the spirit of the Master, and as His spirit spread and the community became leavened, the corruption, sensuality, oppression were put away. The regeneration did not occur in a year or in a century. But little by little licentious and barbarous practices were stopped, gladatorial shows sunk in public esteem, the position of woman became elevated, public charities were introduced, and the evils of slavery were mitigated; until, when three hundred years had passed and Christianity had reached the throne itself, it was possible to do what Plato had fancied could never be done, and enact the new sentiment on these points into law.

Now, for the first time, was the son protected in his rights of life and property, while the rights of the daughter also began to receive recognition. The marriage tie was strengthened and divorce less easy. Against unnatural crimes the laws became rigorously severe. In legislation relating to slavery the new spirit was manifest. Hitherto masters had had the lives of their slaves in their own hands. Plutarch relates how Flaminius put a slave to death merely to afford a spectacle to a guest who had never seen a man die. Under the new laws, to poison a slave or cause him to be torn by wild beasts, or branded, was a homicidal act; liberty was declared to be a right which could not be taken away; and sixty years of captivity could not deprive the free born of the right of demanding liberty. Constantine himself writes: "It has pleased me for a long time to establish that in the Christian church masters can give liberty to their slaves provided they do it in the presence of all the people, and with the assistance of Christian priests," etc., while each new ruler, following Constantine, enacted some measure which made emancipation easier. It was under Constantine, also, that the first authoritative expression was heard against gladiatorial shows, while the month of December, which had been the especial month in which such spectacles were provided by the rich for the poor in memory of the dead, then "became the month of offering for the poor and suffering, in memory of Him who had died for all." The duty of the church toward its poor, indeed, had been recognized from the start, but now charities began to be organized on a large scale, hospitals were built, and that great system of philanthropic effort instituted, which is bearing its richest fruit in our own time.

These, however, are only a few illustrations of the way in which Christian sentiment operated at first for the reformation of society, and in which it has been operative ever since. The victories which Christianity won in the first three centuries have been repeated during fifteen hundred years where the spirit of Christ has not been hindered by priestly power and ecclesiastical formalism. Even with these hindrances it has succeeded where every other power has failed. The history of Christianity is the history of beneficent legislation, of humane and philanthropic institutions, of pure and elevated morality, of national and individual progress. It is the single potential force in the world to-day. Buddhism, Confucianism, Mohammedanism, need only to be tested by the degraded and hopeless condition of their hundreds of millions of votaries to show their lack of vital power. In Japan, the most civilized of Buddhistic countries, the failure of Buddhism is most conspicuous. "Travelers picture the Japanese as people without religion and without hope. A current and favorite proverb is that 'the worst thing you can wish a man is to live again.' As the old faith has died out, there is nothing left but its unconscious effects and the habits taught by it, to stem the tide of selfishness; and the people seem given up, say very candid observers, to 'licentiousness and untruthfulness,' while a deep shade of melancholy settles over all." This might have been said of the Roman Empire before the time of Christ; and what Christianity was able to accomplish in that unpromising soil it is able to do among the heathen nations to-day.—N. Y. Observer.

The Peace of Death.

How peaceful is the dwelling-place of those who inhabit the green hamlets and populous cities of the dead! They need no antidote for care—no armor against fate. No morning sun shines in at the closed windows and awakens them, nor shall, until the last great day. At most, a straggling sunbeam creeps in through the crumbling wall of an old, neglected tomb—a stranger visitor, that stays not long. And there they all sleep, the holy ones, with their arms crossed upon their breasts, or lying motionless by their sides—not carved in marble by the hand of man, but formed in dust by the hand of God. God's peace be with them! No one comes to them now, to hold them by the hand, and with delicate fingers to smooth their hair. They heed no more the blandishments of earthly friendship. They need us not, however much we may need them. And yet they silently await our coming.

Beautiful is that season of life when we can say, in the language of Scripture: "Thou hast the dew of thy youth." But of these flowers Death gathers many. He places them upon his bosom, and he is transformed into something less terrific than before. We learn to gaze and shudder not; for he carries in his arms the sweet blossoms of our earthly hopes. We shall see them all again, blooming in a happier land.

Yes, death brings us again to our friends. They are waiting for us, and we shall not long delay. They have gone before us and are like the angels in Heaven. They stand upon the borders of the grave to welcome us, with the countenance of affection which they wore on earth; yet more lovely, more radiant, more spiritual! He spake well who said that graves are the footprints of angels.—Longfellow.

The Beginnings.

If a man would keep his moral character without spot or blemish he must begin at the beginning, and studiously avoid all contacts which can possibly soil the soul. If a man would not be a miserable miser he must hold in check the first impulse of the miserly spirit, and see to it that the miserly habit is not formed. If a man would not be a drunkard he must avoid the first sip of that which has the dread color in the cup. If a man would not become a liar he must scorn to utter or insinuate, or in any way act so much as the shade of a falsehood. If a man would be sincere and trustworthy he must be scrupulous about the small concerns which are the stepping-stones to hypocrisy. If a man would not be habitually profane he must make it an object never to speak the name of God in other than a devout and reverent tone. If a man would not be a gambler let him be careful to withhold countenance even from a church raffle. No man can be self-indulgent, and foolish, and reckless, and criminal, up to a certain stage of life, and then emancipate himself, and go on just as though there had been no squandering of moral force, no turning from the right, no base recreancy to duty. Evil does not readily yield any advantage it may have gained. There is at once a startling significance and a profound philosophy in the words: "His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the sins of his cords.—Dr. F. A. Noble.

Choice Extracts.

—We often excuse our own want of philanthropy by giving the name of fanaticism to the more ardent zeal of others.—Longfellow.

—God never accepts a good inclination instead of a good action, where that action may be done; nay, so much the contrary, that if a good inclination be not seconded by a good action the want of that action is made so much the more criminal and inexcusable.—South.

—There is no occasion for a man to mourn because he has not opportunities enough for work, enjoyment or love in a world that has more work than workmen, more influences catering to our pleasure than we can improve, more who want to love us than we will welcome.—Golden Rule.

—Don't live your life alone, without forming friendships and love; nature needs love, you were made for it, and other natures need you. You are robbing yourself, you are robbing others, if you live like a hermit. Therefore go out into God's world; and live your life for others.

—No one who walks the streets with his eyes open can fail to find some one to whom a kind word, a pleasant smile, a small exhortation, or even a cordial grasp of the hand, would be a benediction. To encourage such effort the God of love has ordained that the satisfaction of doing good is greater than that of receiving a favor. In the laws of the kingdom of Christ, is it not written that "it is more blessed to give than to receive?"—Zion's Herald.

Our Young Folks.

SEVEN POINTS FOR BOYS.

Be honest, my boy, be honest, I say;
Be honest at work, be honest at play;
The same in the dark as when in the light;
Your deeds need not then be kept out of sight.

The next thing you need is knowledge, my boy;
These virtues, indeed, your time should employ;
Let knowledge display integrity, too,
And you'll seldom say: "I've nothing to do."

But work calls for action, muscle and will;
Boys must "get up and get," their station to fill;
And boys should be active as ever they can—
A dull, stupid boy grows to a dull, stupid man.

But simple activity will not suffice;
Some shrewd, active boys are shirks in disguise;
They mark all the moves the industrious do,
But don't care a fig to push business through.

The next thing in order—avoiding display—
Is boys should be careful to hear and obey,
Not even presuming to make a reply,
Nor, muttering, say: "I'll go by and by,"
But promptly obey, with a hearty good will,
Attempting, at least, the whole order to fill.

Again: Be not fitful, but stick to your work;
Never let it be said that you are a shirk;
But when any task is fairly begun,
Keep "pegging away" until it is done.

Be honest, be wise and industrious, too;
Be active, obedient, obliging and true;
Be faithful in all things, be clean as you can,
Polite in your manners, and you'll be a man.
—Uncle Amasa, in The Baptist.

FOOLING UNCLE JOHN.

"All Fool's Day—nonsense!" said Uncle John Tyler, with his hands pushed into his pockets. "Not all fool's day! Now, I'll give any body two silver quarters to fool me!"

Uncle John Tyler's voice sounded very deep, and his face was sober enough in all conscience; but his eyes laughed.

"Two silver quarters to fool me," said he.

"Honest true?" asked Ben, looking up.

"Honest true," answered Uncle John Tyler, looking down. "A quarter apiece all round."

"That'll be three," said Ben. "One for me"——

"And one for me," said Daffy.

"And two ones for me," piped Tommy, "to buy peanuts."

"A quarter all round," said Uncle John Tyler. "And I'm going to thrash oats for your father to-day, so you'll have a good chance."

This was in the morning, and before long Uncle John's flail was thump, thump, thumping on the barn floor.

Daffy washed the dishes, and Ben filled the wood-box, and Tommy stood round in the way, just as he always was doing when folks were busy. When everything was done, and he couldn't get in the way, he would sit down in the corner, "as nice as any body's boy," Daffy said.

So it was this time; and while Tommy was sitting on his cricket in the corner, and Daffy was untying her "dishes apron," and Ben was squeezing the place where a splinter had stuck into his hand, they all tried to think how to fool Uncle John Tyler.

"We couldn't have a sawdust pudding or anything, could we, now?" asked Ben. "'Cause he'll be a-looking out, and taste of everything 'fore he eats a whole lot."

"Of course he'll taste before he eats it," said Daffy, laughing. "We can't fool him any common way."

"Well, how can we, then?" asked Ben; and he wrinkled up his nose and thought of the quarters.

"I'm sure I don't know," said Daffy; and she sighed and thought of the quarters.

"I can't know, too," chirped Tommy, cheerily.

"I don't believe we can, anyway," said Daffy.

"Then we won't get the quarters," said Ben, soberly, "and Tommy can't have his peanuts."

"Oh de—ar me—e!" burst forth Tommy, coming out of his corner. "I wa—ant some peanuts! Couldn't you shoo the old black she—ep at him, Daffy, 'n he'd think 'twas a bear!"

Then they thought they should die a-laughing, Daffy and Ben.

"You're the beat-a-most boy, Tommy Pulsifer," cried Daffy; and she wiped her eyes and gave Tommy a loving squeeze. "I'll buy you five cents' worth of peanuts out of my picking-over-apples money, if—O Ben, I've thought how may be we can! But we must try some other ways, too, so Uncle John won't mistrust."

They put their three small heads together and talked it over. And all the forenoon, up in the shed-chamber, they pounded, and whispered, and tied bits of rope together and laughed.

They tried some other ways.

Once Ben carried an empty jug out where Uncle John was at work in the barn.

"Don't you want a drink of water, Uncle John?" asked he.

Uncle John picked up the jug and shook it, before he would put it to his lips.

"Well, I guess not this time," said he, sober as a Judge. And Ben, feeling very foolish, carried the jug away again.

Then there were egg-shells on with the boiled eggs for dinner, fixed so Daffy was sure nobody would notice the little holes in each end.

But though even Ben himself was fooled, Uncle John didn't touch a single one; nor take any salt in his tea; nor any corn-meal mustard on his meat.

But he rolled his eyes at Daffy and Ben and Tommy when he said: "No, thank you," in a way that set them all laughing.

One thing they kept for the last.

"If we don't fool him with that," said Daffy, a good many times, "we can't with anything."

Well, it was two hours after dinner when Daffy skipped out through the long wood-shed to the barn with a very eager, excited face, indeed; and it was at that same minute that Ben ran in at the side door, all in a flutter.

"O Uncle John," cried Daffy, "look out"—

"And see if this isn't Colonel Forney's new turn-out?" put in Ben.

"Stopped before the barn," begged Daffy, almost out of breath. "Quick, before it gets gone!"

"There is a turnout, sure, Uncle John!" cried Ben.

"And a black boy driving," said truthful little Daffy, very earnestly. "Truly, Uncle John!"

"Honest Indian!" said Ben. "May be he wants to see you."

Now, Colonel Forney, who lived at the village, and was a great friend of Uncle John's, had very lately bought a nice carriage and a pair of black horses, and had hired a black coachman to drive them.

And because Uncle John had never happened to see all this, he took a second thought, and looked down into the earnest little face beside him; and then he dropped his flail and opened one of the big barn-doors.

Such a shout! Oh, such a shout!

There sat Tommy—black as any little real black boy could ever be—perched up in Ben's box-cart, rolling his eyes and showing all his teeth in a very broad smile; and he was holding a pair of rope-reins over the old black sheep, who, harnessed into the box-cart with pieces of rope, stood placidly chewing her cud.

"It is a turn-out," cried Ben. "I'd like to know if it isn't?"

"And I'd like to know if Tommy isn't a black boy?" laughed Daffy. "Ain't you, dear?"

"Well, well, well!" said Uncle John; and then he leaned against the door-post and laughed until he couldn't laugh any longer.

And then Ben and Daffy shouted again, and Tommy, too, with all his might. And Ben jumped up and cracked his heels together.

At that, I suppose the old black sheep thought that they had had fun enough, for she finished chewing her cud in a hurry and started for the sheep-yard.

Tommy bounced out first thing and cried about it, though he wasn't the least mite hurt, only scared; and the cart brought up against the side of the barn and smashed itself all in pieces; and the black sheep squeezed herself through a hole in the fence and went to eating hay with the other sheep, with the rope harness all dangling round her feet.

"It beats the Dutch!" said Uncle John, putting his hand in his pocket. "Here, I guess you've earned your quarters. Colonel Forney's turn-out! Ho! ho! ho!"

And when Ben had gone to the village after the peanuts, and Daffy was scrubbing Tommy's smutty face at the kitchen sink, she heard Uncle John Tyler laugh again, "Ho! ho! ho!—Ada Carleton, in Youths' Companion.

The Science of a Soap Bubble.

How many of our boys and girls know what is meant by the science of anything? The word science means true knowledge, and to know truly, perfectly about an object, we must know of what it is made or what causes it, and what properties it has, such as form, color, weight.

How shall we make our soap bubble? Of soap and water, you will all say. Only soap and water? One such bubble will be gone before you can send another to catch it. In my childhood days I thought it real fun to see them burst, but more fun to make them last a long time.

Now the secret lies in getting just the right mixture. Put into a common white bottle one and one-half ounce of castile soap, one pint of water and three-quarters of a pint of pure glycerine. This is Plateau's solution, and from it he makes bubbles that are very, very beautiful, though, being blind, he can see them only with the eyes of his mind.

We can use in the blowing an ordinary tobacco pipe or a glass tube. It is hard to make very large bubbles with the mouth, and sometimes a pair of bellows is used. We cannot examine our bubble while it is dancing over the table or floating in the air, so we need a support, which we will make of a wire ring fastened horizontally to the head of a large nail. The nail should first be driven into a small block of wood, just far enough to keep it firm. Let the ring be smeared with paraffine; it prevents the wire from cutting into the bubble. A glass shade may be placed over the bubble, and its support thus protects it from draughts of air.

Let us see, now, what our bubble consists of. A portion of air enclosed by a film—something very thin—which is made of soap and water. So we have the three forms of matter—the solid, liquid and gaseous.

When blown from the mouth the air inside of the bubble is warmer and lighter than the outside air, and our bubble will rise. When filled from bellows, the air is colder and heavier, causing the bubble to fall. This rising and falling is due to pressure of the air which, some of the boys will tell us, is equal to fifteen pounds to every square inch.

Different airs or gases have different weights. This may be prettily shown by putting into a vessel of any kind a few pieces of chalk. Pour over them a little vinegar. A bubbling will begin and a gas set free which we call carbonic acid gas. Its presence may be shown by putting in a lighted match, which this gas will at once put out. Fill a bubble with air; let it fall upon the acid gas. It will remain supported—seemingly upon nothing, for this air is invisible—as long as any of the gas is left. If you could fill a bubble with hydrogen it would bound upwards at a great rate, for that gas is the lightest known.

Let us now look at the colors in our bubble. How beautiful they are, dancing and flashing so fast—changing so rapidly we can not begin to count them. But we know that white light, that is, sunlight, is composed of seven colors. They can all be seen in the rainbow.

Let a beam of light fall upon the bubble. Part of the light passes right through or is absorbed, and part is at once thrown back or reflected. The portion of the film that absorbs all the colors and reflects or throws back only the blue will appear blue, and so on for all the others. And so the thickness of the film changes the absorption and reflection of the light changes, so it is that our bubble sparkles with all the beautiful and delicate tints of the rainbow.

Adding more glycerine will make the coloring even more brilliant. Indeed, our bubbles can be made perfectly gorgeous.—Baptist Weekly.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. APR. 25 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
"	½ "	40
"	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	5

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c.. $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

THE noted stallion, Monarchist, valued at $15,000 and the property of D. Swigert, of Fayette county, is dead.

MONEY loaners are more numerous than money borrowers. This is the result of industry and bountiful crops.

THE candidates for nomination for state offices are moving around as rapidly as the facilities of the state will admit.

IF party services count anything in the present race for governor, who will be the successful man can be told easily.

THE Home Journal (Winchester, Tenn.) says: "Reports from all along the line are encouraging for a good wheat crop."

THE court of appeals has set Craft's case for hearing on the 15th of May, which is ten days before the time fixed for his execution.

THE grand jury composed of men from the different sections of the county, spoke a good word for the morals of her people.

SENATOR SHERMAN is being urged by many of his party to become a candidate for governor of Ohio. He does not hasten to accept the invitation.

JUST think of it; from forty to sixty millions of gold in Europe coming to the United States this year. We'd like to entertain a million of it indefinitely.

DANIEL O'CONNELL, who lost both feet while attending to his duties as a brakeman on the Cincinnati Southern railroad, has sued the company for $20,000 in Kenton Circuit Court.

SENATOR McDonald, of Indiana, is being boomed for the next democratic candidate for president. Indiana has several men in both parties who have aspirations in the direction of the White House.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR's pleasure trip to Florida was not all pleasure, as he contracted a case of regular Illinois shakes. The land of flowers and oranges should treat such dignitaries with more respect.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $7 35@7 75; fair to good packers, at $6 85@7 35; fair to good light, $7 10@7 30; common, $6 00@6 70; culls, $4 90@6 10; stock hogs, $5 50@6 50.

THE Star Route trial will no doubt be followed by an investigation of the manner in which they were conducted. At least such a procedure will not be out of the regular course of things.

TRUCK farmers of South Georgia are said to be shipping cabbage and realizing from five to seven cents a pound. They make from $75 to $100 per acre on them. The seed were sown last summer and the plants set out in the fall.

THE Lawrenceburg Press has commenced the publication of a daily edition which appears every morning. It is a sprightly sheet, and the publishers are meeting with greater success than at first anticipated. Success to the enterprise.

THIS week we announce Dr. S. S. Scott, of Florence, as a candidate for representative. Dr. Scott is a life long, true blue, dyed-in-the-wool democrat, and if elected will always be found at his post, earnestly advocating that which he conceives to be right.

WHEN the Judge sentenced Frank [illegible], last week, he told him that if he behaved himself while in the penitentiary, that he would get along very well, but if he didn't behave, he would find it the meanest place on God's earth. Frank thought that he would be [illegible] himself.

PATENTS have been issued to the following Kentucky inventors: Chas. Barnes, of Dayton, for a shaft-coupling; G. M. Redinger, of Erlanger, for an electric signaling apparatus for railroad trains; B. F. Meyers, of Hunnewell, for a combined can, pump and measure; G. E. Medley, of Hopkinsville, for a car-coupling; J. Kirby, of Ludlow, for a padlock.

THE general verdict of the public is that the jury did precisely right at Glasgow, last week, in acquitting the men who took the lives of two brutes convicted of rape. Technically speaking, the killing may have been murder, but a Kentucky jury does not stand on a technicality when the sanctity of home and the immutable principles of eternal justice are concerned. Every man who has honor and home to protect will say "well done." There is a law that is higher than any contained in our statutes.—Bowling Green Democrat.

JAY GOULD is going to retire, after a boyhood and manhood of incessant labor. He is at last going to take a long holiday and see how a little play would go. His fortune is estimated in round numbers at $100,000,000, nearly all invested in securities, and his son George is now to conduct the forces which wealth like this enables a leader to command. George Gould is not like his father. He is what is called bright and clever by rich young men, but even a great many of his associates say that he does not know enough to go in doors when it rains.

SOME nights since Mrs. Dr. Slater, of Florence, defended her house bravely against the invasion of two scamps who were trying to gain an entrance. Seven shots from a revolver scared the rascals off, and it is not certain that one of them did not carry off a bullet [illegible] carcass. It was the second attempt, of late, to enter the residence in the absence of the doctor, and the way Mrs. Slater repulsed them the last time has certainly taught them that she is a lady who knows how to defend herself and has the courage to do so. It is a pity that the scamps were not marked by Mrs. Slater's pistol so that they would be easily recognized. The females of this country should educate themselves to the use of the pistol, and always have them convenient and ready for use when an occasion requires.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Mrs. Polly Wilhoit, a well known lady of the Hebron neighborhood, died at the residence of her son, M. S. Wilhoit, on the afternoon of the 20th inst. She was confined to her bed about six weeks with her last sickness, and when the grim messenger claimed her, she gradually declined until the time stated, when she peacefully, happily and triumphantly fell into that sleep that knows no waking. Mrs. Wilhoit's maiden name was Souther, and she was born in Virginia, October 13, 1786, and was, therefore, 96 years, 6 months and 6 days old when she died. In 1808 she and David Wilhoit were married, and in 1837 they moved to this county. Their marriage was blessed with eight children, five of whom preceded their mother to that better world. Mrs. Wilhoit realized that her time had come to depart this life, and she conversed freely with friends and relatives concerning her approaching dissolution. She lived an honorable and useful life, and died a noble and victorious death.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Douglas, at the Hebron Lutheran church, April 21st, at 10 a. m. The sermon was able and appropriate. After the funeral discourse the remains were placed in the vault to await final interment, which will be in the Sand Run cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Wilhoit tender their kindest thanks to their friends for their services rendered in waiting on their mother during her long illness.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—Gold has been discovered in Alachua county, Fla.

—There is a Bible in Belton which was printed in the year 1798.

—A large mine of plumbago has been discovered on the farm of James Stone, in Stafford county, Va.

—A brisk demand has sprung up in Rome, Ga., for the new nickels, and they readily bring a premium of two and a half cents.

—The Florida coast is to have three new light-houses: At Mosquito Inlet, at Cape San Blas and one further down the coast.

—The Moss Pointers (Miss.) place eggs instead of dimes in the contribution box. The funds is for the support of the missionaries.

—Mrs. F. J. Parker, of South Nashville, has been working on a quilt for three years. It is just finished. The quilt contains 14,888 pieces.

—The Buffalo gnats are at work in the overflowed country along the Mississippi. Over fifty head of cattle have been stung to death.

—There are now in the port of Savannah a United States sloop of war, one ship, three steam ships, three brigs, forty-two barks and fourteen schooners.

—A veteran of the war 1812 died near Luina, Ga., the 11 inst., aged 100 years, leaving 265 children and grand children. His name was William Knight.

—There is a determined effort on the part of some of the people of Florida to divide the State into two parts, to be known as North and South Florida. It is said the interests of the different parts are not identical.

—A man who lives not many miles from Gainesville, Georgia, has been carrying on an illicit distillery in a cave. One day last week the cave tumbled in, set fire to the contents and came very near burning the proprietor to death.

—A Prominent lumber merchant of Savannah has just completed the purchase of 3,000 acres of land in Southwest Georgia, in the vicinity of his extensive mills. With a view to encouraging settlers, he has divided 700 acres into lots, and donated them to parties desiring to locate.

—There are fifteen out of eighty children in the State Blind Asylum at Macon, Georgia, whose sight can be partially or fully restored by an operation. Dr. Calhoun, of Atlanta, generously offers to operate on those children free of charge, and they will be sent to Atlanta for that purpose.

—A movement is on foot to hold a grand reunion of the army of Northern Virginia, on the field of the second battle of Manassas, during the coming summer. All the survivors of that army will be invited, and it is proposed to ask Gen. Fitz Lee to order the Virginia volunteer forces to have their summer encampment there.

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, Apr. 20, 1883

G'n Trash and Lugs	$2 50	@ $3 00
Common Smokers	3 50	5 00
Colory Smokers	5 00	6 00
Colory Trash	6 50	9 00
Good Br't Trash	10 50	17 00
Fine Br't Trash	none
Fancy Bright Leaf	00 00
Dark Lugs	4 00	5 00
Common Lugs	5 50	7 00
Colory Lugs	7 50	10 00
Good Stripping Lugs	11 50	16 00
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17	20 25
Common Leaf	6	10 00
Com. Med. Leaf	12 50	20 75
Good Med. Leaf	21	24 00
Good Br't Leaf	24 50	27 00
Fine Br't Leaf	27 75	29
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 00
Good Lug Fillers	11 50	16
Fine Lug Fillers	18	22
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 50	20 50
Good Med. Fil'rs	21	24
Good L'f Fillers	25 00	27 00
Fine Leaf Fillers	27 50	29 00

One Fool Among Many,

Wrecked by his Untempered Ambition —A Lighthouse on the Shoals.

"I ought to have stopped five years before I did; but I thought it wouldn't amount to anything, so I kept on. I was a fool, of course—but who isn't, when ambition and the chance of making money spurs him on? I only hope I shall get well enough to digest another square meal some time without a rebellion in my stomach."

The speaker was one of the best known civil engineers and mining experts in this country; hardy by nature as a buffalo, but broken down by hard study and the merciless lashing administered to his mind and body by his own hand during the earlier part of his career. At fifty he is prematurely gray, bent in form and dispirited. Dyspepsia did it—Dyspepsia, the self-inflicted curse of the American in every department of toil.

"I am thirty-five years old," writes Mr. Charles H. Watts, of West Somers, Putnam county, N. Y. and had suffered from dyspepsia for fifteen years. Tried everything. At last gave PARKER'S GINGER TONIC a chance to show what it could do for It proved its ability by curing me. I reccomend it to all who are suffering from this dreadful di- Mr. G. R. Cole, druggist, of Carmel, N. Y. certifies to the truth of Mr. Watts' statment.

Gloom, despondency, hoplessness, disgust with all labor, sleeplessness, horrid dreams to render bed-time like the hour of execution to a criminal—these are some of dyspepsia's foot-prints. The Dyspeptic knows what Corleridge meant when he said: "Night is hell." PARKER'S GINGER TONIC cures Dyspepsia, purifies the Blood, disperses Rheumatism and all chronic ailments. Price, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & Co., New York.

SADDLES AND HARNESS AND

ALBERT M. ACRA,

BURLINGTON, KY.

HARNESS MAKER

—AND—

DEALER IN SADDLES

Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed. A full line of everything needed by farmers in the harness line.

REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

☞Give me a call. feb-14-83

—Shop over Rouse's Store.—

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonahtan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

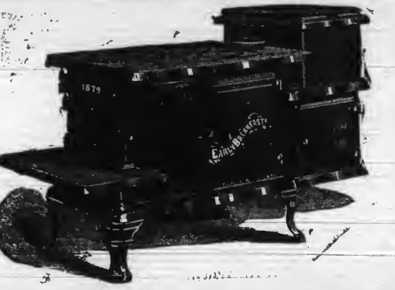
AT H. F. BLASE,

540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics. Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.



Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.

All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to me are requested to come forward and settle at once, as I will leave Burlington in a short time. By coming up and settling you will save expense.

W. L. GEDGE.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.

HENRY ROSS Adm'r.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to the estate of Andrew Glackin, deceased, will please come forward and settle. Those having claims against the estate will bring them forward well authenticated according to law, and they will be attended to.

N. B. STEPHENS. Adm'r.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

A bay horse, 12 years old, 15½ hands high, long neck, short mane, sprung in the knees, right hind foot white, collar mark on point of left shoulder.

Also a black mare, 5 years old, 15½ hands high, long mane and tail, short neck —A liberal reward will be given for the return of either or both above described animals. RAY SNYDER, Bullittsville, Ky.

NOTICE.

The stockholders of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company are notified that an election for president and four directors to serve the ensuing year will be held in Burlington on the 1st Monday in May 1883. They are also notified that a dividend of 50 cents a share of stock is ready for distribution for which call on J. J. Lillard, Treas. WM. WALTON, Sect'y.

FOR SALE.

A small lot of the celebrated Snowflake potatoes, for table and seed. Also a limited quantity of the Alpha, among the earliest and best variety grown. Price $1 per bushel. Apply soon to Allen Conner at my residence.

E. A. TUCKER,
Florence, Ky.

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.

(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.

Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and Iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.

A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

I take this method of contradicting the report being circulated in this neighborhood that a note with my name and my father's attached has been presented or seen in Aurora in the hands of another, and I will give $20 reward for the arrest of any person presenting a note for any amount with our names attached.

I also notify those who are circulating false and slanderous reports in regard to me in this neighborhood, if their slanderous and vile tongues are not at once stopped, that I will prosecute them to the extent of the law. J. W. RICE, Bellevue, Ky

CENTRAL HOTEL,

BURLINGTON, KY.

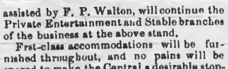
MRS. MARY J. GREEN,

(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.



Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 recipes, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.

S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, A. R. Mullen, L. C. Stephens, E. J. Hickey, L. H. Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm,

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE.

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

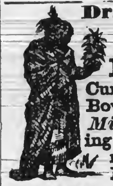
City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-1f23

J. W. Talbott.



Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN. Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

TRADE MARK,

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

FLORENCE, - - KY.

NOTICE!

Just received a full and complete line of

DRY GOODS

of the finest selections, and the latest styles which will be sold exceedingly low. Also

NOTIONS,
HATS & CAPS,
BOOTS &
SHOES,
GROCERIES, &c.

Too numerous to mention. Almost everything that the people may want will be found in my Stock. No trouble to show goods, and orders filled promptly. Call and examine my Stock and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.

☞I feel exceedingly thankful to my friends and patrons for past favors and hoping you all will call again.

Truly Yours,

W. C. TANNER,
Florence, Ky.

NAVAL BATTLES. Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the world. By Medical Director SHIPPEN U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., [illegible] W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

1883

THE CINCINNATI NEWS

A DAILY

Democratic Newspaper.

Is published to subscribers at the following

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

By mail postage paid.

Daily and Sunday edition, 1 year $7
Daily and Sunday edition, 6 months 4
Daily and Sunday edition, 3 months 2

All Subscriptions Invariably in Advance

An extra copy of the paper will be mailed FREE for one year to any person who will raise a club of ten annual subscribers at one postoffice, and forward their names and addresses, together with $60.

BY CARRIER.

Daily and Sunday edition, 15 cents per week, or 65 cents per month, payable to Carrier.

PRICE BY SINGLE COPY.

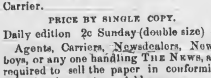
Daily edition 2c Sunday (double size) 3c

Agents, Carriers, Newsdealers, Newsboys, or any one handling THE NEWS, are required to sell the paper in conformity with the above rates. Address

THE NEWS, Cincinnati, O.

$1000 REWARD

For any machine hulling and cleaning fit for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR Double Huller. It has made $100 often IN ONE DAY.



VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE

NEWARK MACHINE CO., NEWARK, O.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers (Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. [illegible] Garretson & Co., [illegible] Nashville, Tenn.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff. T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Rylo, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

PROSPECTUS
—OF THE—
CINCINNATI ENQUIRER.

Pre-eminently a NEWSPAPER in its truest sense, possessing facilities for gathering news from all quarters of the World, unsurpassed by any other Journal: presenting the same to its readers in a concise form free from coloring and predjudice.

In all cases, it publishes The Truth and Facts, and in matters of general interest, general interest, the fullest possible details are given. It is a paper, untrammeled or clogged in any way by Cliques, Corporations, or Bossism. Treats all persons and parties with fairness, giving a faithful record of all that transpires in the political field without fear or favor.

In matters of Finance and Commerce, its reports are extensive, complete, and accurate; furnished by reliable parties, thoroughly conversant with such matters; making this feature of the Enquirer, one of its best recommendations to the Commercial World.

It is published every day in the year, its extra large size admitting a vasts quantity of reading and miscellaneous information, in its various departsments, all of which presents a freshness, characteristic of a live newspaper.

For satisfactory evidence that the Enquirer is all its publisher claims for it, we invite those desiring a first-class commercial newspaper to send for speaimen copies or short trial subscription.

SEE TERMS FOR

DAILY ENQUIRER.

Sunday and Daily	$1.50	$3.75	7.00	14
Daily except Sun	1.25	3.15	7.00	12
Any three days	65	1.75	3.25	6
Any two days	45	1.25	2.25	4
Any one day	25	65	1.25	2
Sunday Issue	25	65	1.25	2

THE WEEKLY ENQUIRER

will maintain its present standard of excellence, which has attained for it a circulation of near One Hundred Thousand Copies which fact alone speaks volumns in its favor. It is undeniably one of the best Family Journals printed; large size eight page paper, giving ample room for all the news of the week, and choice selections, Historical Reminiscences, miscellaneous reading, &c.

Its market reports are reliable and extensive, embracing all necessary information that Farmers and Merchants require for intelligent transaction of business, either as buyers or sellers.

Its Farm School embraces letters from all sections of the country treating upon all matters pertaining to Farm, Field, Orchard Ranch, &c.

Its Household department is made unusually interesting to the ladies, by letters from the thrifty housewife in which domestic affairs are ably treated upon.

A corner is reserved for the boys and girls wherein to talk to the outside world. The moral tone of all being in happy accord with pure thought and taste.

THE SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One copy, one year $1 15
One copy, six months 65

Agents sending us 7 subscribers at above rates are presented with a free copy.

JOHN R. McLEAN, Publisher,
Specimen numbers free. Cincinnati, O.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from active practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India Missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for General debility and all nervous complaints, after having thoroughly tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, feels it his duty to make it known to his fellows. The recipe, with full particulars, directions for preparation and use, and all necessary advice and instruction for successful treatment at your own home, will be received by return mail, free of charge, by addressing with stamp or stamped self-addressed envelope.

DR. M. E. CASS,
201 York street Jersey City, N. J.

☞Mention this paper. jan 17-83

FREE 55 USEFUL ARTICLES & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, size 5 x 3, and an illustrated Book, to all who send 10 cts. in stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

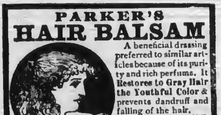
PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents Dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON COLOGNE

Exceeds the finest flower articles in richness. Delicate, very lasting. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N.Y. 25 and 75 cts. [illegible]

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.



Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1480, Corning, N. Y.

Local News.

Some corn planted last week.

Weeping April is about gone.

The picnic season draweth nigh.

A peach orchard now looks like a bouquet.

Garden planting was on the boom last week.

Year by year the supply of shade in Burlington increases.

Some complain that seed corn of a good quality is not plentiful.

Mrs. Robert Piatt and her daughter are now citizens of our town.

Esq. E. H. Baker is prizing Tilford Sullivan's purchase of tobasco.

Piscatorial excursions to the classic stream of Gunpowder are numerous.

The colored school at this place closed last Saturday with an exhibition.

If you want a set of good buggy harness go to Albert M. Aera, Burlington.

We were glad to see Judge Hawes able to be out buggy riding last week.

Elder Thomas will preach in the Court-house, this place, Friday night.

Gabriel T. Gaines now occupies the property he lately purchased of Henry Hoffman.

The remains of Mrs. R. H. Pace were interred at Linden Grove cemetery, last Sunday.

The Lawrenceburg Fair Company is making arrangements for a big exhibition this year.

If the weather is not modified there will be some grumbling pretty soon. This is Monday.

The assessor was in town last Saturday looking after the boys whom he had not assessed.

That genial gentleman, Dr. R. H. Crisler, of Ludlow, was in Burlington one day last week.

We have had some bud-bursting, grass-stretching, lamb-expanding weather the past week.

There is a diversity of opinion as to the effect the freeze Monday night will have on the fruit crop.

Some of the country cousins came in Friday morning and had a game of marbles with the boys.

Burlington has more dogs and cats to the square inch than anyother town of its dimensions in the State.

We have just received a fresh supply of Landreth's celebrated garden and field seeds. Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

On the 5th of next month Mrs. Tousey will sell publicly at her late residence in this place, her household and kitchen furniture.

The remains of Lonnie Crisler were buried in the cemetery at this place last Friday, and on Sunday Cora Kendall's remains were buried there.

Ras Huey has moved into the house lately occupied by Mr. Birkle. Wonder if father Birkle's mantle as a vegetable raiser will descend upon him?

BASE BALL—Hebron 15, Bullitsville 7. Game at this place next Saturday between the Hebron and Burlington-Bellevue club. Game called at 3 o'clock.

Is our friend, the attorney across the fence, going to supply a shoe-peg factory with material? A pile of maple wood cut into short pieces suggests the query.

We will give one hundred and thirty dollars for five hundred and twenty pounds of choice butter to be delivered ten lbs. per week. Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

In the Southern Railway time card for Erlanger, printed in this paper a week or two since, the type made us say that train No. 3 arrived there at 3 27 p. m., when it should have been 4 27 p. m.

A beech tree putting forth its leaves at this time of year, so far in advance of its kind, is a rare occurrence. Near E. K. Tanner's, on the Florence pike one of these trees has leaves of considerable size on it.

We will give one hundred dollars for one hundred turkies, average size, to be delivered between October 20th '83 and January 1st, '84. Any one wishing to take our offer must notify us within 60 days. Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

It is evident that there were three persons in the party that burglarized W. F. McKim's store the other night, as they left that number of pocket knives on the counter, having used them in taking lunch. They also took with them three of the finest knives in the stock. While these facts indicate that there were three of the scamps, the gate keepers on the Lexington pike each say there were but two in the buggy when it went into Covington.

In the appeal case of H. J. Foster vs. the County Court, Judge Major rendered a judgment in favor of Foster for $60, the amount he claimed. This $60 was a claim of Mr. Foster for making 40 settlements with road supervisors under the law repealed by the last legislature, and which the last Court of Claims refused to allow. Judge Major ruled that as the settlements were made under the law providing that they are to be paid for at the rate of $1 50 each, that he is entitled to pay and gave judgment accordingly.

BURGLARS WORK.

Burglars raided our town again last Wednesday night, and paid their respects to W. F. McKim's store. It is evident that money was their only object, as they carried off nothing with them except three pocket knives and what they ate and drank. They attempted to rob the safe, one of Hall's No. 77 patent fire and burglar-proof safes, but it successfully resisted the attack. A half inch hole was drilled in the door near the knob, for blasting purposes, but when the sheet of steel which protects the combination was reached, it was found impervious, and the scamps abandoned the idea of blowing the door open. They then went to the back of the safe and drilled a hole through it, but to no purpose, and the job was abandoned before successful.

How the thieves entered the store can not be accounted for as the lock on the side door, although broken, was removed from the inside. Paper funnels for blowing powder into the holes drilled were left in the store, as were also some other implements made by them to assist in holding the drill to its place.

To make their escape the burglars took C. W. Saxton's horse and buggy. Charlie followed them as far as Covington the next morning but did not find his property. It is the universal opinion that there is someone about Burlington or in its vicinity, who keeps the gang posted.

Tools were taken from John Kirkpatrick's shop and were found in the store next morning.

John Carpenter who, put up at the Sandford House that night, was up about three o'clock, and saw some one enter the store, but thought it was Mr. McKim, and paid no attention to them.

Since the above was put in type Saxton's horse and buggy were found in South Covington, the horse unhitched from the buggy and tied to the fence. It cost Saxton about $30 to recover his property, the City Marshal claiming to have paid the man who found the horse $25 before he would surrender the animal. That amount he refunded to that official, and says that he does not mind the $25 paid the officer, but the story he told about paying the man for alleged attention to the horse, he regards as very "thin."

The work of an Incendiary.

A few nights since the barn on the farm occupied by [illegible] Dorman, near Plattsburg was destroyed by fire, evidently the work of an incendiary. Dorman lost all his hay, corn and farming implements. There have been two or three attempts made to burn the dwelling occupied by Dorman. Why anyone should want to burn him out is a mystery to Dorman, he being a man who has attended strictly to his own business. No punishment known to the law is too severe for a person who will go under the cover of night and apply the torch to the property of his fellow man.

At the last term of the Court of Claims Sam Hind presented a claim for $138 for taking care of paupers—a negro woman and three children—which the court refused to consider, having decided to pay nothing for keeping paupers outside of the Poor-house. Mr. Hind appealed, and when the evidence was adduced in the Circuit Court it appeared that the negress was paralyzed, and moving her might have caused her death. The Judge decided that where it can be done without endangering life, paupers must be brought to the Poor-house; but, on the other hand, if they can not be moved without danger of causing death, the county must pay for taking care of them outside of that institution. Appellant was given judgment for $60 and cost against the county.

A $20.00 Bible Reward.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for May, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 in gold to the person telling us which is the shortest chapter in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) by May 10th, 1883. Should two or more correct answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner May 15th, 1883 Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the June Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be puplished, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address, RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penn.

In the mandamus suit to compel the County Court to build a bridge across Woolper Creek where the Bellevue and Petersburg road crosses that creek, Judge Major decided, after overruling the demurer to the petition, that the County Court "do meet at the court-house in Burlington, the county seat of Boone County, on the 4th day of June 1883, the same being a regular County Court day, and do then and there assemble with their clerk in said court-house, and set as and hold a court of claims for Boone county, and do there proceed as such court, and take cognizance and entertain jurisdiction of, and hear the motion and proposition on and about the matter of the erection of a public or county bridge across Woolper creek, in said county, at the point where the county road, running between Bellevue and Petersburg crosses the same about 1½ miles from its mouth. And after hearing the same and all lawful evidence offered pertinent thereto, do take such steps and make such orders touching, about and in regard thereto, as to them shall appear to be lawful, proper and expedient about the premises."

Both sides prayed an appeal, and Dr. Grant and his co-plaintiffs will take the case up.

The hogs in the Barlow and Beemon neighborhood are dying with some kind of a throat disease.

Married—On the 17th inst., at the residence of the bride's father, Marion county, Ky., by Elder R. A. Hopper, Mr. Daniel H. Bricker and Miss Zenith A. Alloway.

Report of the Grand Jury.

To the Hon. P. U. Major:

We, the grand jury, would respectfully report as follows:

We have been in session 4 days, and during that time have examined 45 witnesses and found 25 indictments.

In further pursuance of our duty, we have looked into the condition of the County Clerk's office, Circuit Clerk's office, Court-house, and Jail, and would report in regard to each of them as follows: We find a leak existing in the east gutter of the County Clerk's office, which should be repaired without delay. The books, papers and other official documents in said office appear to be kept in a methodical manner, and are so arranged as to be accessible and conveniently examined by those having business therewith.

We find a similar commendable state of affairs to exist in regard to the Circuit Clerk's office.

In regard to the Jail we would recommend the building of a porch along the whole front, not only for the sake of comfort and convenience; but more especially to protect that wall from the injurious effects of the elements.

In regard to the Court-house we would state that we find the walls thereof show ing evidence of decay, which we believe might be arrested by scraping, pointing and painting, and we recommend that the same be done.

In addition to the foregoing, we would ask leave to state that we find from the evidences before us, combined with our own belief, that the citizens generally, of Boone, are eminently a law-abiding people—that a certain class of misdemeanors arising from the use and abuse of intoxicating drinks appear to be rapidly decreasing—that in those parts of the county where the sale of such beverages is prohibited by law or outlawed by public sentiment, a commendable state of affairs exists in this regard, worthy to be followed by other sections not so favored.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

REUBEN CONNER, foreman.

April 1883.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Florence X-Roads.

Jno. P. Utz has sold his team of fine mules. They are to go South.

About four-fifths of the farmers are done plowing.

Jno. Aylor has lost his sign for planting potators.

Constance.

Davis Brothers have finished invoicing their stock of goods at this place.

The saw mill is in full blast with Lewis Anderson and Walton proprietors.

J. P. Loder still holds his fine saddle and harness horse at $600. He is a good one, so Jim says.

Everett Souther is dancing around with a patent washing machine.

Something entered into Geo. Brown's mind which caused him to go to work, he plowed one whole day.

The dance given at the residence of Mr. Henry Klassner's was a success.

Taylorport.

Geo. Piper gave us a flying visit last week.

Our ferry has changed hands again. Charlie Quick is now proprietor.

John Losey has purchased a lot of Mrs. Nero Berry, and will erect a fine residence at an early date.

Dr. Smith intends to erect a fine residence on his farm. Edward Rouse has the contract and will commence operations at once.

W. E. Piper, of Burlington, has sent his dog, "Fidget," to our town to spend the summer months. Morgan Helm has charge of the animal.

Last week we had one of the largest balls of which our town can boast. It was at the residence of Mrs. Cresby, cor. Main and Walnut streets. Richard Fox, chief, Joe. Shane, assistant. Bettis' orchestra furnished music for the occasion, and the light fantastic was tripped till 4:30 a. m.

Hebron.

Farmers are busy plowing.

Mrs. Harriet Quick is visiting relatives in Cincinnati.

Mr. Jacob Tanner is having his house repainted.

Mr. George Piper was in our town a few days last week.

Charles Davis came home on a short visit last Saturday.

Jeff Clayton has returned from Ohio.

The prospects for fruit are fine.

John Aylor is able to work again, after several days illness.

Tuesday of last week the remains of Enoch Barlow were taken from the vault at this place, and interred in the family grave yard.

Perry Aylor has purchased a fine buggy Perry says the girls will appreciate him now.

Mr. Geo. Gaines has sold his fine trotting colt to James L. Riley, for the sum of $250.

Died—On last Saturday Mrs. Clara Winners. The remains were placed in the Hebron vault.

Ray Snyder had two of his horses stolen from his stable at Bullettsville.

Mr. Wilson Gaines made our town a flying visit last Saturday. Mr. Gaines talks of going West in the near future.

Scattersville.

Thinking some news from this vicinity might be of some little interest to the many readers of our worthy county paper, we take the pains to gather up what there is at present.

There has been a great deal of sickness in our vicinity this spring; but all are getting out again.

All the farmers who had sod to break are about done plowing, while those having stalk or stubble land are away behind, owing to so much wet weather.

There is some preparations for another tobacco crop this season, but not on so large a scale as last season.

Wheat has been looking very backward all winter, but has commenced to show its color at last. We think now there will be a very good crop, considering the winter it has gone through.

About all of our farmers have sold their tobacco.

Mr. George Aylor, of Gallatin county, has moved onto Miss Dora Huey's farm, George will make a good neighbor.

Mr. Mannin, of Florence X-Roads, has moved to Aunt Susan Acra's farm.

Mrs. Lewis is teaching the Locust Grove school. She has a full school, and gives entire satisfaction.

So much rain and so much court has almost ruined our roads again, and the pike all gone to the bottom. Aint that bad? Some of our farmers did all in their power to build a pike, while others didn't.

The boys have turned their spare hours to base ball and fishing.

We understand that the old Speedwell base ball club has lost its worthy catcher, he having joined the Burlington club. Wat is a good one, and the boys will miss him badly.

We had the pleasure of seeing our old friend, Zack Bondurant, among us again. He has been in Missouri for about three years and looks hale and hearty.

Mr. Owen Conner has traded his house and 58 acres of land to his father for the brick house and 71½ acres. Owen is at home again.

Petersburg.

Miss Pauline Berkshire who has been teaching school at Guilford, Ind., is home on the sick list.

S. C. Buchanan's house caught fire, last Tuesday morning, and would have burnt down had it not have been for the bucket brigade. The flames were soon extinguished and no great damage done. A defective flue was the cause.

Billy Stott is the boss white-washer.

Mr. Riley was here two or three days last week, assessing the town.

Mrs. Harriet Newman, of Rising Sun, has been visiting friends here for the past week.

Capt. Frank Baker and sister, of Aurora, spent last Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs Thomas at this place.

A base ball club was organized here last Tuesday night with Solan Early, Pres.; Chas. Schramme, Sect'y.; Dr. Ed Terrill, Treas., and Captain. They will wear blue suits. Their name is Almonts, and they are going to be something fast.

Mr. John Green and Miss Utzsinger were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, last Thursday evening, by Rev. J. A. Kirtley.

About half past seven o'clock, Tuesday night, the alarm of fire was turned in from Mr. Jenkins', but before the bucket brigade got there it was put out. It was caused by a spark falling on the roof.

J. D. Norris has made a half mile track on his farm for the purpose of training his horses.

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2½ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Allred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R. W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises! Title good. For furthor particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, feb 28-3m Burlington, Ky.

FOR SALE.

In Burlington. Boone county, Ky.

A BRICK HOUSE,

containing ten rooms, attic, cellar and out buildings, with four half acre lots attached. The late residence of Mrs. C. S. Tousey. The cellar contains a good kitchen, dining room and two other rooms. The buildings and premises are in good repair.

For terms apply to

GREEN & RIDDELL,
Burlington, Ky.

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Clast Hotel Accommodations; with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

SCROFULA

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

PREPARED BY

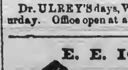
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

E. E. IGOE,



Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞ Office opposite the Boone House. ☜

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
☞ Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.,—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,
Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-clall accomodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
ROUSE.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUES'S.

DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
☞ Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

TO BUYERS.
I have for the spring trade a clean and [illegible] fully selected stock of Goods with prices marked to suit the times.
IN DRY GOODS,
Brocades, Cashmeres, Indigo Blue Calicoes, Prints, Ginghams, Cheviot Shirting, Brown and Bleached Muslins and double width Sheeting, Pillow Case Muslin, Jeans and Cottonades, Crashes, Table Linen and Napkins.
IN WHITE and FANCY GOODS,
Nainsook, Lawn, Swiss, Jackonet, Hamburg Embroideries, Laces, Ladies' Collars and Ties, Toilet towels, Ribbons and Buttons.
Floor and Table Oil Cloth in new Style Patterns.
Carpet Chain in fast colors.
Rubber Coats and Leggins—Overalls and Jackets.
In Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware and Woodenware my stock is complete.
Flour and Salt always on hand.
A Full stock of FANCY & STALPE Groceries.
Cash paid for country produce or will take in exchange for goods.
Orders for Goods not in stock, gladly and promptly filled.
Yours Truly, W. E. PIPER.

WILLIAM CLORE,
—MANUFACTURER OF—
Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,

Single & Double Shovels,
Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.
RISING SUN, - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

$173.75 for a [illegible] WOOD PIANOFORTE, with Stool, Book and Music. ☞ Only $50 for an Eight stop, Sub-bass and Octave-Coupler ORGAN. Chapel Organs $65, Pipe Organs $94. OTHER BARGAINS fully described in Illustrated Catalogue which is sent FREE with full particulars.
☞ VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME. ☜
Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

ECHO AND THE FERRY.

Ay, Oliver! I was but seven, and he was eleven;
He looked at me pouting and rosy. I blushed where I stood.
They had told us to play in the orchard (and I only seven!
A small guest at the farm); but he said: "Oh, a girl was no good!"
So he whistled and went, he went over the stile to the wood,
It was sad, it was sorrowful! Only a girl—only seven!
At home in the dark London smoke I had not found it out.
The pear-trees looked on in their white, and blue-birds flashed about,
And they, too, were angry as Oliver. Were they eleven?
I thought so. Yes, every one else was eleven—eleven!

So Oliver went, but the cowslips were tall at my feet,
And all the white orchard with fast falling blossoms was litter'd;
And under and over the branches those little birds twitter'd,
While hanging head downward they scolded because I was seven.
A pity. A very great pity. One should be eleven.
But soon I was happy, the smell of the world was so sweet,
And I saw a round hole in an apple-tree rosy and old,
Then I knew! For I peeped, and I felt it was right they should scold!
Eggs small and eggs many. For gladness I broke into laughter;
And then some one else—oh, how softly!—came after, came after,
With laughter—with laughter came after.

And no one was near us to utter that sweet mocking call,
That soon very tired sank low with a mystical fall.
But this was the country—perhaps it was close under Heaven;
Oh, nothing so likely; the voice might have come from it even.
I knew about Heaven. But this was the country, of this Light, blossom and piping, and flashing of wings not at all.
Not at all. No. But one little bird was an easy forgiver;
She peeped, she drew near as I moved from her domicile small,
Then flashed down her hole like a dart—like a dart from the quiver.
And I waded atween the long grasses and felt it was bliss.
So this was the country; clear dazzle of azure and shiver
And whisper of leaves, and a humming all over the tall
White branches, a humming of bees. And I came to the wall—
A little low wall—and looked over, and there was the river,
The lane that led on to the village, and then the sweet river,
Clear shining and slow, she had far, far to go, from her snow;
But each rush gleamed a sword in the sunlight to guard her long flow,
And she murmur'd, methought, with a speech very soft—very low;
"The ways will be long, but the days will be long," quoth the river,
"To me, a long liver, long, long!" quoth the river—the river.

I dreamed of the country that night, of the orchard, the sky,
The voice that had mocked, coming after and over and under.
But at last—in a day or two namely—Eleven and I
Were very fast friends—and to him I confided the wonder.
He said that was Echo. "Was Echo a wise kind of bee
That had learned how to laugh? could it laugh in one's ear, and then fly
And laugh again yonder?" "No; Echo"—he whispered it low—
"Was a woman, they said, but a woman whom no one could see,
And no one could find; and he did not believe it, not he;
But he could not get near for the river that held us asunder.
Yet I that had money—a shilling, a whole silver shilling—
We might cross if I thought I would spend it."
"Oh yes, I was willing"—
And we ran hand in hand, we ran down to the ferry, the ferry,
And we heard how she mocked at the folk with a voice clear and merry,
When they called for the ferry; but oh! she was very—was very Swift footed. She spoke and was gone; and when Oliver cried:
"Hie over! hie over! you man of the ferry—the ferry!"
By the still water's side she was heard far and wide—she replied,
And she mocked in her voice sweet and merry: "You man of the ferry,
You man of—you man of the ferry!"

"Hie over!" he shouted. The ferryman came at his calling.
Across the clear reed-border'd river he ferried us fast;
Such a chase! Hand in hand, foot to foot, we ran on; it surpass'd
All measure her doubling—so close, then so far away falling,
Then gone, and no more. Oh! to see her but once unaware,
And the mouth that had mocked, but we might not (yet sure she was there!)
Nor behold her wild eyes, and her mystical countenance fair.
We sought in the wood, and we found the wood-wren in her stead;
In the field, and we found but the cuckoo that talked overhead;
By the brook, and we found the reed-sparrow deep-nested, in brown—
Not Echo, fair Echo! for Echo, sweet Echo! was flown.

So we came to the place where the dead people wait till God calls.
The church was among them, gray moss over roof, over wall.
Very silent, so low. And we stood on a green grassy mound,
And looked in at a window, for Echo, perhaps, in her round
Might have come in to hide there. But no; every oak-carven seat
Was empty. We saw the great Bible—old, old, very old,
And the parson's great Prayer-book beside it; we heard the slow beat
Of the pendulum swing in the tower; we saw the clear gold
Of a sunbeam float down to the aisle, and then waver and play
On the low chancel step and the railing, and Oliver said:
"Look, Katie! look, Katie! when Lettice came here to be wed,
She stood where that sunbeam drops down, and all white was her gown;
And she stepped upon flowers they strew'd for her."
Then quoth small Seven:
"Shall I wear a white gown, and have flowers to walk upon, ever?"
All doubtful: "It takes a long time to grow up," quoth Eleven;
"You're so little, you know, and the church is so old, it can never Last on till you're tall." And in whispers—because it was old
And holy and fraught with strange meaning, half felt, but not told,
Full of old parsons' prayers, who were dead, of old days, of old folk,
Neither heard nor beheld, but about us, in whispers we spoke.
Then we went from it softly and ran hand in hand to the strand,
While bleating of flocks and birds' piping made sweeter the land.
And Echo came back, e'en as Oliver drew to the ferry,
"O Katie!" "O Katie!" "Come on, then!" "Come on, then!" "For, see,
The round sun, all red, lying low by the tree," —"by the tree."
"By the tree." Ay, she mocked him again, with her voice sweet and merry:
"Hie over!" "Hie over!" "You man of the ferry"—"the ferry"
"You man of the ferry—
You man of—you man of—the ferry."

Ay, here—it was here that we woke her, the Echo of old;
All life of that day seems an echo, and many times told.
Shall I cross by the ferry to-morrow, and come in my white
To that little low church! And will Oliver meet me anon?
Will it all seem an echo from childhood, pass'd over, passed on?
Will the grave parson bless us? Hark, hark! in the dim failing light
I hear her! As then the child's voice clear and high, sweet and merry,
Now she mocks the man's tone, with "Hie over! Hie over the ferry!"
"And, Katie." "And Katie." "Art out with the glow-worms to-night,
My Katie?" "My Katie!" For gladness I break into laughter
And tears. Then it all comes again as from far away years;
Again, some one else—oh, how softly!—with laughter comes after,
Comes after—with laughter comes after.

—Jean Ingelow, in Longman's Magazine.

"MONSIEUR, MY HUSBAND."

"And you mean to tell me my brother proposes to marry Marie to a Prussian?" Mlle. Archaimbault, the sister of the well-known Strasburg banker, was for once roused from her ordinary well-bred calm. She spoke shrilly, and her dark eyes sparkled with rage.

"I do," said the ugly little abbe, the great friend of the family and confessor to Marie Archaimbault and that beloved twin brother, Alphonse, who was killed in the late Franco-German war. The abbe and Mlle. Archaimbault (who kept house for her widowed brother, now absent for the moment in Paris) were seated in the magnificent drawing-room of the Hotel Archaimbault in Strasburg.

"Impossible—preposterous! Marie—the best match in the town—who might marry a Vicomte at the very least," and the aunt glanced complacently around at the tapestried walls, the heavy amber satin draperies, the massive gilt furniture and marqueterie cabinets, arrayed as primly as the garden outside, where avenues cut straightly as if by some sharp giant knife, ended in a statue or a fountain. "Marie—to marry a Prussian. My brother must be mad, or you"—turning sharply to the abbe—"are jesting."

"I never felt less inclined to do so, Mademoiselle." And, indeed, the abbe's wrinkled-leather face was twisted into an expression of grave perplexity as he leaned his elbows on his knees, loosely clasping his thin hands and staring vaguely at the huge rose bouquets on the aubusson carpet. He understood the letter he had that morning received from his friend, the banker, well. It was dated Paris, and commissioned the abbe to break the news of his consent to the pretensions for Marie's hand of a young German officer, the son of a Berlin millionaire. This the abbe, who had been partially in M. Archaimbault's confidence, took to mean that the recent alarming failure of certain great Parisian bankers had so far imperiled the Strasburg house that failure would only be averted by the marriage. For Marie's dot had been a temporary stop-gap, and the young German was more than ready to marry her without it; in fact, to make any arrangements M. Archaimbault pleased.

But the abbe did not understand the banker's postscript, which assumed Marie's consent, and announced the arrival of M. le pretendu as immediate. "He wishes to have his first interview with Marie alone," wrote M. Archaimbault. "Request my sister that it may be."

It was necessary for the abbe to break the ice. The roses on the carpet did not help him. At last he blurted out: "This gentleman arrives to-day."

"Let him arrive." Mlle. Archaimbault leaned back in her chair, folded her arms lightly across her bosom, and looked—in the neat black dress she was still wearing as mourning, not only for the young nephew "murdered by the Prussians," but for captured, subdued, enslaved Strasburg—as grim and forbidding as a prison portcullis. "Let him arrive. He will not see me."

"No," said the abbe, quaintly. "Your brother desires that he shall see Marie alone."

No shell thrown into the beautiful city when beleaguered by her victorious foes could have produced a sharper effect. Mlle. Archaimbault gasped, choked; took up her fan, then dropped it, and burst into tears.

"That is all right," thought the abbe, cheerfully. "When once they begin to cry, they give in." Then he gave her time to "have her cry out," and, walking to the window, gazed out where the town lay spread out around the proud cathedral, whose lofty spire seemed still stretching skyward the beloved city, now all patches and props like some wounded human being. But mademoiselle wept on, and he came back into the stately room, thinking how much more unpleasant this was than his usual experiences of the hotel: the evenings spent playing with M. Archaimbault, and teaching the fair, beautiful Marie English. Latterly there had been more English and less picquet: for the banker, after losing game after game through inadvertence, would get up and go to his room, and the abbe, after taking a few thoughtful pinches of snuff, would put away the cards and join Marie where she sat at work with her aunt. They had nearly finished reading "Ivanhoe;" and to-day an unknown knight would appear. How little had they dreamed this!

"Do you think it would be better to think how we shall break the news to Marie, instead of crying about it?" asked the abbe, gently. Then as mademoiselle incoherently murmured something about "the shock" and being "totally unnerved," he rang a small silver hand-bell.

The yellow satin portieres were lifted, and, as if by magic, a footman, in the fawn and crimson Archaimbault livery, with heavy silver shoulder knot and loops, spotless stockings and freshly powdered hair stood there, awaiting his orders.

"Tell Mlle. Marie—" began the abbe; but the footman stepped aside with a respectful obeisance, and a young girl came in dressed in white with large bows of black ribbon. She was tall, fair, with serene blue eyes under arched brows, and a soft white skin—more like the Belgian mother who had died shortly after the birth of the twins, Marie and Alphonse, than like the French father and aunt, dark, wiry and determined. Perhaps the beautiful girl's most potent charm was her graceful neck, which deserved the epithet of "swan-like," anciently bestowed upon the celebrated Matilda, of Flanders. "Good morning," she began pleasantly. Marie was always glad to see the good-natured, monkey-like face of the abbe, with those stray wisps of hair which never would keep in the right place across his bald head. Then her welcoming expression changed to one of consternation "Ma tante!"—and she went quickly to her, kneeling down and exclaiming: "Papa?"

"Is perfectly well," said the abbe, dryly, "your aunt has been crying about you."

"About me?"—Marie looked perplexed.

"Yes. You have received a proposal of marriage."

The aunt clasped her niece's hands, and averted her eyes. A smile flitted across Marie's face—amused, incredulous—as a stray sunbeam flickers upon a wintry landscape. She had rarely smiled since her twin brother's death. "But, mon pere, there is no one," she said. Indeed, they had led secluded lives since the war—since their terrible loss—at the Hotel Archaimbault.

The abbe cleared his throat. "Yes, there is," he began.

"Do not tell her. I cannot bear it. It is an insult," muttered her aunt.

Marie glanced quickly from one to the other, then she compressed her lips. "Please tell me at once," she said firmly. "Whatever it is I can bear it. I have known grief."

"I have had a letter from your father this morning, in which he desires me to inform you that he approves of a proposal made for the honor of an alliance with you by a young German."

The abbe repressed the contemptuous term "Prussian" out of respect for the approved aspirant. Still, so strong was the Strasburgian hatred of their present rulers, that he felt ashamed when he disclosed the intelligence, and could not bring himself to look Marie in the face. Therefore, neither he nor Mlle. Archaimbault, who sat, the image of despair, gazing into vacancy, saw the beautiful blush, the droop of the eyes, the happy smile that dwelt one moment upon the young girl's face—one moment, for it was only a memory. Still, the memory softened the "Oh!" with which she greeted the announcement.

"You perceive we have not quite killed her with our intelligence," remarked the abbe to the aunt, somewhat sarcastically.

"The idea is too preposterous for her to realize," replied the lady, indignantly.

"What—that a German desires to marry me? Does my father desire the alliance, mon pere?"

"I am afraid—I think he does, ma fille."

"What is this man—this German—like?"

"Well," the abbe paused, thinking pitifully of the natural curiosity of these daughters of Eve, a curiosity so strong that it seemed to smother their holiest natural impulses—"he is, I suppose, tall"—throwing up his arm—"strong"—inflating his chest—"fierce"—rolling his eyes—"with a great mustache, red, red as fire."

"No, no, not red—fair!" cried Marie. Then, as her aunt and her confessor stared in astonishment, her head dropped and a blush mantled even her fair throat with a tinge of pink.

"And he is—an officer!" ("At least this will arouse her natural animosity toward her brother's slayers," thought the abbe, himself growing almost annoyed by Marie's unnatural demeanor).

Marie was silent.

"And his name," continued the abbe, almost sternly, "is Karl Eichmann."

"Cruel! You have killed her?" cried the aunt, terrified. Marie had risen to her feet, and holding her hands to her breast had staggered away. She leaned against the wall, her eyes closed, pale with the ghastly pallor of a corpse.

"What have I done? Mon Dieu! what have I done?" exclaimed the poor little abbe, wringing his hands. "I can assure you, Mademoiselle—my good child, I had no idea—how was I to imagine—"

"You have done nothing," said Marie, solemnly, opening her eyes. "How could you know? Mon Pere—that name was said to me—by my dear brother—the moment before—he died."

An instant's silence. Then the abbe murmured. "This is, indeed, a mystery."

"Almost horrible mystery," sobbed Mlle. Archaimbault. "It is the worst day of my life."

"Compose yourself, my child," said the abbe, hastily. A servant entered and presented a card to Marie on a gilt salver.

"It is Herr Karl Eichmann," said the young girl. "Ask Herr Eichmann into the ante-room," she said, calmly, to the servant; "and when I ring the bell bring him in."

The footman bowed and retired.

"You, my aunt, and you, mon pere, had better await us here," pointing to an adjoining room, "and when you hear me ring this bell twice you will come to me."

"She is right," said the abbe, consolingly, offering his arm to Mlle. Archaimbault. And feeling half stunned, he hardly knew why, he led the trembling, weeping woman into an adjoining boudoir.

After Marie had closed the big doors upon them and had arranged the portiere, she made a violent effort to compose herself for the coming interview. Mon Dieu! what does it mean?" she first said, wildly, pushing back her hair from her burning forehead. How well she remembered the events of that awful day when her twin brother—almost one with herself—her beloved Alphonse—died. He had been brought home to them, dying slowly of some injury to the spine, shortly after the capitulation, and they had endured the slow agony of watching him lie insensible day after day, hour after hour. That cruel time, when Strasburg lay fettered, the enemy's strong foot upon her neck, dearer than ever to her dear children in slavery. Each man, woman and child seemed to bear one link of her heavy chain around their hearts like a crown of thorns, while they silently scorned and shunned their conquerers, and caressed their lost nationality in secret. In mourning garb they thronged the churches, creeping through streets where they would be least offended by the sight of those "accursed Prussians." And while the market-place was gay, the restaurants full of bright uniforms, the military band clashing out the latest German waltzes and quick-marches, not one citizen of Strasburg could be seen there. They were abasing themselves before the altars, and the little chapel of Our Lady of Sorrows, in the cathedral, was full of sad, kneeling figures from early morning until late at night. Here Marie came, here she fled in her anguish, when the doctor told them Alphonse's life was now an affair of hours. It was evening; while the flickering of the many votive tapers played upon the sad, beautiful face of the Mater Dolorosa in the great picture above her altar, casting strange new expressions across the painted features, the kneeling crowd were in shadow. Marie could faintly distinguish the outlines of the Pieta in the corner of the chapel—the great image of Mary with the dead Christ in her lap. She wept and prayed; and was rising to return to her watch beside the deathbed, when she saw a face gazing in upon her through an aperture in the screen that divided the chapel from the cathedral nave. A man's face, soft, tender, the eyes fixed upon her with such pity, such deep, yearning love, that instinctively she moved a step forward. Then she remembered, recoiled, and the face vanished. Was it a comforting vision? Some strange influence had passed into her soul; a promise of consolation. Calmed, wondering, she went through the darkness and out into the moonlight, unaware of a quick step that followed till the door shut behind her, a voice said pleadingly: "Mademoiselle."

She started—turned. Heavens, she was face to face with a tall officer; the moonlight gleamed on the silver facings of his light-blue uniform.

"Monsieur," she cried, with passionate anger. Then, drawing herself up, she flashed one glance of hatred upon him and fled.

That night Alphonse opened his eyes; he was conscious, he smiled upon them. Bending over him, she had heard him say these two words: "Karl Eichmann." Then he sighed, and his spirit went.

All these things came back to her as she stood irresolute, looking at the card inscribed with that name. At last she nerved herself and rang the bell.

"Herr Karl Eichmann." Quick footsteps crossed the floor, spurs clanked, a tall figure was there. She stood, her eyes fixed on the floor.

"Mademoiselle!"

"Ah!" A shiver, a shuddering sigh; all color left Marie's cheek; her lips trembled. This was the man in the pale-blue uniform, and his face was the face she saw that night in the cathedral. Bewildered, she shrank back and stammered:

"Sir, there is some mistake. I expected Herr Lieutenant Karl Eichmann."

He smiled. His large blue eyes looked benignant, though his huge mustache lent fierceness to his face.

"I am he," he said.

"You—but you—you spoke to me—and my brother—"

"Did your brother tell you about me?" he eagerly asked.

"Monsieur, my brother is dead; but he once spoke that name to me."

"Then you do not know that it was I—that saw it—and let me tell you, Mademoiselle," he cried, for Marie had turned away: the sight of that hated uniform, the recollection of that night sickened her. "Hear me. It was I that, fighting near your brother, saw the fragments of a shell strike his horse—saw it rear and throw him. These arms lifted him and carried him from the field. Yes, Mademoiselle, his head rested" (he struck his shoulder); "and if it had not been for me you would never have seen him again alive. I was powerless to save his life, but at least I can lay claim to having prolonged it. Now, will you still turn away as if you could not bear to look at me?"

"You were my brother's enemy—perhaps—even—ah! I can not bear the thought." She spoke in a hard, choked voice.

"Mademoiselle, I was his friend."

"How could you—a Prussian—be my brother's friend?" She turned upon him in anger; more with herself—for in spite of the fact that this man was a foe, hated with a cherished hatred, the same curious influence affected her as in the cathedral. When she looked at that fine face with the frank, large eyes and the bronzed, aquiline features, she was attracted, pleased, soothed.

"Why did you not tell me this, then, before?"

"If you remember, Mademoiselle, I tried to speak to you, but you would not hear me."

"That was not the way, that was not the way."

"There I take leave to differ from you. I was determined that no one should hear the story of Alphonse's death-blow, except you, from my lips."

"Why?"

"Because, Mademoiselle, I loved you." He spoke with passionate earnestness. She blushed violently.

"How could you do that, Monsieur, when you had never seen me?"

"If I tell you all will you listen? Mademoiselle, Alphonse and I were friends in Paris just before the war began. He was there, as you know, with his regiment—I to enjoy myself during my leave. How little we knew, when we used to talk of you, of the yawning gulf—the battle-field—that would shortly divide us."

"He spoke to you of me?" The tears welled into her eyes.

He drew a little velvet case from his breast, reverently kissed it and held it toward her. "Perhaps you recognize this?"

"My portrait! The one I gave Alphonse." She was agitated. "Did he give it you? But no; how could he?"

"When I carried him into the tent after the fatal moment he opened his eyes, recognized me, and, feeling feebly in his breast, drew out this, gave it me, and said one word—'Marie.' It was his last effort," added the young man, with emotion, "before he fell into that unconscious state from which he never recovered. I understood that he wished me to place this in your hands."

"And—your name—was the last he said. What did he mean? Oh," exclaimed the young girl, covering her face with her hands.

"He knew how much I thought of you—how I cared for him—how I had loved your portrait, Mademoiselle. He was pleased, he would read me your letters—those sweet, innocent, girlish letters; he would have introduced me to you; but then came the fatal news—the declaration of war. Private friends became public foes."

"Does my father know this?" murmured Marie, behind the screen of her hands.

"No. He knew Alphonse was my friend and he gave me permission to see you alone. O, Marie, listen to me, I have thought of you, felt for you, followed you at a distance watching over you, so long. I knew my only chance was to see you and plead my own cause—a just one," he added haughtily. "If these arms are not worthy to hold you, then may they be withered, paralyzed as I stand here."

"Give me a moment to think," murmured Marie, sinking into a chair and leaning her head wearily against the back. "Can you not wait—come again?"

"No, Madamoiselle." The answer was sudden, fierce, like a shot. "I will either leave at once, or remain."

There was silence. Marie, in miserable perplexity—bound to her prejudices, yet her beating heart, her inclination belying them—tried to think. She thought of Alphonse. Once more she heard the feeble utterance, "Karl Eichmann." Her father, had he not actually sent him here? Then—a Prussian—that hated uniform! The more she reflected, the more uncertain she grew.

Suddenly she sprang up. Decision was in her rallying color, her sparkling eyes, her whole demeanor.

"It is all over," thought the brave young soldier. His heart seemed to sink within him; he trembled like a girl; he turned to go; his head sank upon his breast.

The hand bell rang shrilly—once, twice.

Before the second peal was fairly over the doors of the boudoir opened abruptly, the portieres were pushed aside, and two scared, anxious faces looked in, the abbe's quaint ugly face above that of Mlle. Archaimbault, who walked into the room, pale, stern, determined to uphold her niece's brave refusal of this hated Prussian, if need be, to death.

"Monsieur," Karl Eichmann started as Marie spoke, gently, tenderly; then, a soft hand stealing into his, he turned in astonishment, to find Marie smiling, almost beaming.

"Ma tante," she said, "and mon bon pere, allow me to introduce to you, Monsieur, my husband."

"Diable!" cried the abbe, startled into profanity.

"God protect us," said Mlle. Archaimbault, devoutly crossing herself as a shield against Prussian Witchraft.

"You are both right," exclaimed the young man, first passionately kissing the fair hand that lay contented on his, then saluting them with a stiff, military bow, "You, madame, and you, mon pere—the devil may begin wars, but it is the good God who ends them!"—Whitehall Review.

A Shad Ten Feet Long.

What's the biggest shad I ever saw! Well now, about here I've seen an eight pounder, but there is a shad in Florida that beats the world. It isn't exactly a shad, but is one of the family, and down there they call 'em tarpons. I'll never forget the first one I see. We were haulin' a net at Masquito Inlet for mullet (and they're a fish for you), and had commenced the in run, when I see somethin flash just like a sheet of silver, and the next moment a big fish lept out of the water about ten feet, a shinin' like silver for all the world. I'll tell ye the way that net went in was a caution, man, grove roots and all, and in less than no time we had the tarpon on the beach, and such a fish a man don't see more than once in a lifetime. It looked like a regular herrin' or shad, only I'm cussed if it wasn't nigh on to ten feet long, and each scale looked like a polished trade dollar with the silver massed on in lumps, the whole scale as big as the palm of yer hand. It was out and out the gorgeous est fish I ever saw. They're very rare. We kept the scales, and they brought $1 apiece as curiosities; so, countin' up what all hands made, the one fish paid about $200. The flesh was fine, too; but only one or two are caught a year, and mostly on the Gulf side of the State, though I have heard of 'em bein' seen up North."—Southern Paper.

—The very newest agony is for a lady to take along a small boy, when she goes shopping, to carry away the plaques, fans, flower baskets and other "lagniappe" she may receive during her trading. This signifies that she intends to buy a spool of thread, three and one-eighth yards of ten-cent Hamburg, a skein of zephyr and a new crochet needle, and get enough fancy articles to decorate her boudoir with oriental magnificence.—Hartford Post.

—The French Minister of Finance has received the following letter: "Monsieur le Ministre—I have the honor to apply to you for an appointment in the Finance Department of the Government offices. I herewith inclose my references and testimonials. Unless I hear from you between the present date and the end of the month, I shall consider myself as having received the appointment, and shall come on the 1st of August to enter upon my duties. I am, etc., B."

—Six feet tall: There is a young lady up in Columbia County who is six feet tall and is engaged to be married. The man who won her did it in these words: "Thy beauty sets my soul aglow; I'd wed thee, right or wrong; man wants but little here below, but he wants that little long."—Irwinton (Ga.) Southern.

—The Albany (N. Y.) Journal says the remnant of the Stockbridge tribe of Indians lately called at the State Treasury for money belonging to his tribe. "Fire-water" had affected him seriously, and the noble red man was anything but the plaintive relic of a fading race. He was ready to fight the whole Legislature.

—John Andrews Harris, an Episcopal clergyman of Philadelphia, has published a series of sermons on "The Principles of Agnosticism." We had supposed that the principal thing about agnosticism was that it had no principles.—Louisville Courier.

—People in Houma, La., and vicinity are much exercised over the nightly visits of a panther, which has been creating havoc in the poultry yards and killing all the dogs that disputed its way. The negroes will not go out at night for fear of meeting the "go-devil."

—An Oregon editor says of border robbers: "The law ought to put a stop to the wild ways of the wicked, willful wanderers." There is a wonderful weirdness in this alliteration. It wafts from the westward wooing winds of sentiment.

—"Without joking, will you tell us what a 'dude' is?" asks a lady correspondent. Certainly. A "dude" is no thing. It is merely an apology for a human being, and is too weak to be bad and too tame to be wild.—Chicago Times.

—The simplest and most economical way of taking a census of the children of a neighborhood is to employ an organ-grinder for five minutes.

A HOTEL clerk named Briscoe,
Stumped his foot out in 'Frisco,
It hurt him like thunder,
But the pain was got under,
By St. Jacobs Oil rubbed on histoe.

A conductor who lives at Belair,
Got hurt, being thrown on a chair,
They took him away,
But in less than a day,
St. Jacobs Oil made him all square.

IT is well enough for a physician to recommend elephant's milk to patients, but the next thing is to secure the address of a foundry engaged in its manufacture.

Consumption Cure.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Death was hourly expected by myself and friends. My physicians pronounced my disease consumption, and said I must die. I began taking your "Discovery" and "Pellets." I have used nine bottles and am wonderfully relieved. I am now able to ride out.
ELIZABETH THORNTON, Montongo, Ark.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, April 20, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—Common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 5 85
HOGS—Common	6 25	@ 6 85
Good packers	7 15	@ 7 65
SHEEP	5 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@ 5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 13	@
No. 2 winter red	1 10	@ 1 11
Corn—No. 2 mixed	56½	@
Oats—No 2 mixed	47	@
Rye—No. 2	63	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@11 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	18 75	@
Lard—Steam	11	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	18	@
Prime Creamery	40	@ 43
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per barrel, from store	2 50	@ 2 75
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 65	@ 4 15
Good to choice	4 70	@ 7 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 20½	@ 1 21
No. 1 white	1 13	@ 1 13¼
Corn—No 2 mixed	66½	@ 68½
Oats—mixed	51	@ 51
PORK—Mess	19 00	@19 25
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 red	1 11½	@ 1 12
Corn No. 2	54	@ 54½
Oats—No. 2	43¾	@
Rye	57½	@
PORK—Mess	18 25	@18 30
LARD—Steam	11 40	@
WHISKY	1 17	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 20	@ 1 20¼
Corn—mixed	65¼	@
Oats—mixed	51	@ 53
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¼	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 51	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07	@
Corn—mixed	53	@
Oats—mixed	47	@
PORK—Mess	18 75	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 09	@
CORN	51	@
OATS mixed	45	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 00

THERE is an old Latin proverb which runs in this way: "Anger manages everything badly."

IF you want to be a Telegraph Operator, send 25 cents for the Most Complete Telegraph Instructor in the world.
C. E. JONES & BRO., Cincinnati, O.

THE Parisian florist says that spring is the very worst season for selling flowers.

A Druggist's Story.

Mr. Isaac C. Chapman, Druggist, Newburg, N. Y., writes us: "I have for the past ten years sold several gross of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I can say of it what I can not say of any other medicine. I have never heard a customer speak of it but to praise its virtues in the highest manner. I have recommended it in a great many cases of Whooping Cough with the happiest effects. I have used it in my own family for many years; in fact, always have a bottle in the medicine closet ready for use."

Our Progress.

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, cathartic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar-coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. By druggists.

LET our lives be pure as snow fields, where our footsteps leave a mark but not a stain.—Mme. Swetchine.

The "Golden Bloom of Youth" may be retained by using Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," a specific for "female complaints." By druggists.

CHARACTER is higher than intellect. A great soul will be strong to live as to think.—Emerson.

LYON'S Heel Stiffeners keep new boots and shoes straight. By shoe and hardware dealers.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are an effectual Cough Remedy. Sold only in boxes.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar,
To a cold, is like oil on troubled waters. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

ST. JACOBS OIL

TRADE MARK

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO.,
136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR 100
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME IS COMING
You Carpets must be Relaid.
DO YOU want to save time, temper and backaches! the EXCELSIOR CARPET STRETCHER and Tack Hammer combined will lay your Carpets with ease. EVERYONE says, "Just the thing, we are delighted with it." For sale by THE HARDWARE TRADE generally. Circulars free. Sample by mail, post-paid, $1.00. Address R. W. MONTROSS, Sole Manufac'r, GALIEN MICH.

To quickly introduce the new Sunday School Book
GOLDEN RAYS will fill orders prior to May 1st at $18 per hundred; 20c. each. Specimen pages free.
S. S. MUSIC PUB. CO., 1316 Reed St., Phila., Pa.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR
[illegible]
L. A. L. SMITH & CO., Sole Ag'ts, Palatine, Ill.

A KEY THAT WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT.
SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 25c. Circulars free. J. S. BIRCH & CO., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C. O. D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

AN ENGLISH VETERINARY SURGEON AND CHEMIST, now traveling in this country, says that most of the Horse and Cattle Powders sold here are worthless trash. He says that Sheridan's Condition Powders are absolutely pure and immensely valuable. Nothing on earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powders. Dose, one teaspoonful to one pint food. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for eight letter-stamps. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.
MAKE HENS LAY

An Open Secret.

The fact is well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh, and muscle to the very bone removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence none other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

The Prophet Honored in His Own Country, Even in His Own House.

The honest, simple narrative of MRS. S. J. WHIPP who resides at No. 177 Williams St., Providence, R. I.

"During the past six or seven years I have been severely afflicted with kidney disease, causing intense backaches, dizziness and other severe pains through my body and limbs, rendering me so weak and prostrate that at times it was impossible for me to do any part of my housework. I have had also a fluttering of the heart, and was terribly distressed for breath. I was very miserable, and completely worn out and discouraged; I had no ambition to undertake to do anything, and barely sufficient strength to render existence desirable, having failed to find any relief from the doctor's prescriptions. At this trying crisis a friend persuaded me to obtain a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, and now I rejoice that I followed this friendly advice, for it acted like a charm in my case. After I had taken a few doses, my health began to improve; I felt better every way. The fluttering of the heart, the intense backaches, and terrible shortness of the breath speedily disappeared, my strength and ambition soon returned, and before I had taken two bottles of Hunt's Remedy I was entirely well, and able to wash and iron and do my housework. Once in a while I am troubled with the headache, and as soon as I am taken I resort to Hunt's Remedy, and a few doses fix me all right. I shall never be without it in the future. I have frequently recommended Hunt's Remedy to my friends, and they have experienced relief from the first dose. I heartily recommend it to all who are afflicted with kidney disease or diseases of the Liver, Bladder, or Urinary organs. I think no family should be without it.
MRS. S. J. WHIPP,
No. 177 Williams St., Providence, R. I."

Acts Like a Charm.

"I HAVE used Hunt's Remedy for Kidney troubles, and recommended it to others, and always found it to act like a charm."
JOHN CHAMBERS,
723 Carson Street, Pittsburgh, Penn.

"Gratitude is the memory of the heart." How many heart memories cluster around Hunt's Remedy in grateful households where it has wrought its magic cures!

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

What the great restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will do, must be gathered from what it has done. It has effected radical cures in thousands of cases of dyspepsia, bilious disorders, intermittent fever, nervous affections, general debility, constipation, sick headache, mental despondency, and the peculiar complaints and disabilities to which the feeble are so subject. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!
DR. WM. HALL'S
FOR THE Lungs. BALSAM
Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.

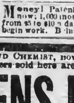
We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc., of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 82 Fulton Street, N. Y.

AURORA ILL.
CANCER
INSTITUTE.
Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first-class and fast-selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free.
DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PORTABLE



Soda Fountains!
Send for Catalogue.
CHAPMAN & CO.,
Madison, Ind.

Money! Patent soon expires; goods must be made now; 1,000 more men, women & children can make from $5 to $10 a day at home. Send 10c for material and begin work. Belmont M'f'g Co., Box 11, Boston, Mass.

THE SUN IS THE PEOPLE'S NEWSPAPER.
There is no mystery about its loves and hates. It is for the honest man against the rogues every time. It is for the honest Democrat as against the dishonest Republican, and for the honest Republican as against the dishonest Democrat. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

$65 A MONTH and board for TEACHERS Students, Young Men and Ladies, in a light, pleasant Business, in your own county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., 915 Arch St., Philadelphia.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 2, 1883. NUMBER 27.

KITTY.

I could not call her by the name
Her Quaker mother gave her;
Unwilling were my lips to frame,
For one like her, a word so tame,
With neither salt nor savor.
But, somehow, as I dreamed of her,
Neglecting Kent and Chitty,
To mind and heart would still recur
One name, and that was—Kitty.

A name some flitting fancy wrought,
I know not why nor wherefore,
It came to dwell with me unsought,
Yet ever to my mind it brought
One face and form, and therefore
On many a marge of legal brief,
In many a careless ditty,
On tinted sheet and printed leaf,
I scrawled the name of—Kitty.

I wrote to her one day, but why
I do not now remember;
I know I dared address her: "My
Dear Kitty," and, in swift reply,
All in the glad September,
Came friendly note, and, at the close,
Than written word more witty,
A pictured kitten in repose,
The sign and seal of—Kitty.

This name I gave her to her face,
Her lips did not reprove me;
It fitted her with dainty grace,
And—strange the name should win the race—
Thenceforth she learned to love me.
And sweet the joy I find in this,
While all the world I pity,
That none with me may share the bliss
Of calling her my—Kitty.

—Homer Greene, in Our Continent.

THE DAYS OF ROD AND FERULE.

"I see by a Media paper," the Jester remarked, as the train sped away for Towando, down in the State of Pennsylvania, "that Colonel Hyatt, President of the Pennsylvania Military Academy, was arrested on a charge of assault and battery because he whipped a student with a switch."

"Yes, I read about it," the fat passenger said, "and the student exhibited three welts on the calves of his legs, in evidence of the severity of the whipping. 'Brutal severity,' they called it. By St. George ——"

And the fat passenger choked up with speechless rage and disgust, and held his hand up in the air to express the terrible state of his feelings, which was away beyond the reach of language.

"I should wince to whimper," the Jester said, and the bells on his cap tinkled in the mellow tones of "the golden, olden glory of the days gone by." "I don't know what the boys of to-day are made of. The idea of a school boy going into court to show three welts on the calf of his leg. That part of his leg, I think, must extend all the way up the boy. Three welts! Why, in those days when Hinman taught the "three R's" in Peoria, to get a licking with a forty-four inch hickory and be able to show the other boys a back like a Franco-Prussian war map, was greater than a King. And we didn't go home and show our welts to father, either. If we did, the old gentleman tenderly laid on a few broad ones with a skate strap to add variety to the general effect. And the idea of going into court about it! I would just like to see a boy stand before old Captain Lee, or Squire Bernard Bailey, or Justice Cunningham, and file information against old Hinman for licking him just because he pushed Bill Rodecker into the pond. Dear old Hinman," the Jester continued, tenderly rubbing his legs with his hands, "when he snatched up that old piece of slate frame and came charging down the aisle at you, the biggest boy in school began to howl in sympathy with the victim. I always yelled like a Comanche, long, long before he hit me. And when that old slate frame came down on a boy's thigh, all the injunctions and rebutters and decrees and reversals and replications and demurrers of all the courts in the State of Illinois couldn't soothe that boy's feelings or keep him from nursing a blister as big as an air-cushion. Do you remember the old chalk-box Hinman used to demonstrate cube-root with?" he suddenly added, turning to the fat passenger.

"I remember the long 'gad' he licked Bill Haskell with," the fat passenger replied, "the day Bill came whooping into school in a pair of Indian leggings and bead moccasins. And every time the old switch whistled down, Bill would raise a yell like the cry of torment and jump clean over a desk. How the dust did fly! And talk about welts! That boy's back looked like a wash-board. But he never thought of going to law about it. If he had, the old man would have licked him harder the next time."

"And the day Dick Looms got ugly and kicked the leg out of a bench," the fat passenger said, "and the old man just picked up the leg and tanned Dick with it till the slivers flew. That was the daisy licking of that old school. Dick howled till the neighbors came rushing to the school, and the first man that bounced in and demanded to know what this meant the old man climbed and rode him all around the room while the boys stood up in their seats and yelled and cheered in the wildest enthusiasm, and Dick forgot his own licking in his pride over his teacher's prowess. The neighbors didn't wait for the second act. 'I'm teaching this school,' the old man said, proudly, and we believed him. Then he turned to Dick and finished his licking. It would have been a rash court that interfered with old Hinman's methods of discipline."

"Old Doty was the boss banger of that town," said the man on the wood-box, "used to teach in the fourth ward, and whipped the school all round twice a week. The other days he devoted exclusively to George Kent and Frank Jones. Then he came down to the first ward and put in most of his time on Andy Peters, Charley Balance and the two Burdettes, until one day he found John's desk full of rocks and brick bats, and in the exciting rastle that came after this discovery of a dynamite plot, John bit the old whaler's thumb nearly in two. Then he went to the sixth ward, and there Billy McKenzie knocked him out with the big school-bell, and he disappeared."

"There were two-handed, double and twisted giants in the land in those days," the Jester said, "but when a boy got his licking at school that was the end of it. If he was of a revengeful disposition, he stole chalk from the school-house and drew fearful and wonderful pictures of his teacher on the neighboring fences, to the great wrath of the residents and property owners. And that there might be no mistake, he wrote the teacher's name under the photograph, or on the nose of it, the length of the nose being proportioned to the pupil's hate and merciless vengeance. And no matter how young the teacher was; if he was only a boy from college, twenty-two years old, the indignant pupil always called him "old" so-and-so. But all the same, the boy got licked sometimes when he needed it, rarely when he didn't, and never when he wanted it. And he rubbed his stripes and showed his welts to his cheerful and delighted fellows, for we were always well pleased to see another boy "licked," and he grinned rather ruefully over them himself, but he didn't go whining into a court with them. Great Scotland, some Thursday afternoon in June, when the day was warm, and the room was close, and the flies buzzed against the dingy window panes, and a storm was in the air, and a spirit of mischief pervaded the atmosphere, when there was a boy doing penance behind each blackboard and another one standing on the chalk-box, and another sat on the long front bench, softly weeping into a dog-eared Webster's spelling book and delicately rubbing the place of the slate frame; when the monotonous buz-z-z-z of study was timed off on the girl's side of the room as those angels in pantalets beat their breasts in rapid syncopation, as they conned over the pages of United States history or buzzed down the column of words of three syllables ending in "ible" and "able;" when old Hinman sat watchful and suspicious with the trusty slate frame in his hand, worrying some drowsy, stupid urchin with his awful "three-fourths of twelve is what part of seventy-two." Suddenly, some idle boy, supplied with work by the usual contractor, would fire a paper wad clear across the room "spot!" on the old man's bald head. Soul of the tempest, how the cloud would burst! Before the boy who shot that wad had time to yell "I never done it!" more than once, he would be collared and yanked over the desks and benches, back on the floor heels in the air and the slate frame flying like the sails of a mill, and the shriek of "I never done it!" changes to "I'll never do it again!" "Oh, you won't?" says the old man, with savage sarcasm, "if you didn't do it this time how are you never going to do it again?" And the slate frame whack away like a trip hammer, the boy rolls on the floor and pounds a vigorous tatoo with his anguish-stricken heels, the chairs go over, the dust flies in clouds, the boy on the chalk box gets upset in the melee, the prisoners behind the black boards come out to see the circus, smiling away their own disgrace, the culprit on the bench forgets his own welts in his joy at beholding new ones located on another boy, the girls cry in shrill tones of fright and pity, covering their faces with their aprons or wringing their pleading hands, the boys on the back seats, furthest out of sight, joyously repeat, in extravagant pantomime, the gyrations and contortions of the boy who is rehearsing his part in the great slate frame act; and as oft as old Hinman gets in an unusually good whack, there is a general subdued "O-w-w!" all over the boy's side, expressive alike of the keenest appreciation of the neatness of the "lick" and the painful situation of the receiver, and all the time that old slate frame keeps going like a wild, mad thing, until the curtain goes down in a glare of red fire and the low muttering of distant thunder in the mountains. That was an old-time licking in old Hinman's day, and no court can stick its nib into the matter, either. Go into court for a school licking in these degenerate days!"

And the Jester suddenly drew his bauble and smote the cross passenger such a resounding whack across the legs with it that he howled with delight as he jumped clear over the back of the seat and said he hadn't felt so good since the day old Hinman made him dance on the carpet for smearing ink all over Steve Bunn's nose under pretence of rubbing off a flake of smut.—Burdette, in Burlington Hawkeye.

A Salt Mine.

It is not generally known that Louisiana can boast the possession of one of the largest deposits of salt in this country. It is found on Petit Anse, or Avery's Island, in Vermilion Bay, the island being connected with the mainland by a causeway which runs through the sea marsh. The island has an area of about 2,500 acres, covered mostly with woods. The salt is struck at a depth of twenty feet below the surface, and found in a solid mass; so hard that it requires to be mined like coal or ore, holes being drilled into the face of it and the explosion made with dynamite, which leaves no discoloration of the salt. An explosion is followed by the tumbling of the face of the mass to the floor in huge blocks, which require to be broken with sledge-hammers before they are loaded in cars to be drawn out of the mine. The lumps are afterward passed through a steam crusher, which breaks them into smaller fragments, and these are ground in a mill to any required fineness, when the salt is ready for market. About 200 tons a day are taken out. The working of the deposit has been attended with difficulties, owing to the position of the island in shallow water, but a railroad will reach it the present year, and then larger quantities will be sent to market. The deposit shows plain stratification, but the layers and seams are upright, showing that the whole mass was upheaved in some remote convulsion of nature. The galleries in the mine are hewn through the solid saline mass, and it is estimated that there is enough salt in the mine to supply the whole population of the United States for many years.—N. O. Democrat.

◆

—Coming east from Utica the other day, Mary Anderson and Mrs. Langtry traveled on the same train, the former's car being at the head and the latter's at the rear. Although so near together they were yet so far apart that Miss Anderson said, in response to the question whether she had met Mrs. Langtry: "No; I have never seen the lady, and I hardly think we shall ever meet."

◆

—Patent medicines are now made that will cure everything except hams.

A Car Porter's Complaints.

It was a porter on the Pennsylvania Railway who spoke: "Careless people who travel about losing their purses, jewelry and bundles are curiously ungrateful to those careful people who find and return their property. This is the general rule, to which, of course, there are exceptions. There are thousands of people running at large to-day who are no better than overgrown children in the care of their belongings. As children they carelessly lose their toys, and as they grow up the pinafores and short jackets are laid aside, but not their negligence. They go through life leaving a trail of lost things behind them to mark their erratic careers. These lost things either fall into the hands of thrifty souls who pick them up and keep them, or of innocent but honest creatures who chase after the addlepates, wake them up, and restore their property. When thus overtaken and suddenly awakened from their day-dreams, some of these heedless creatures receive their goods with scant courtesy, seeming more vexed at the exposure of their stupidity than they would have been at the loss of the article. How fortunate for careless folks that their heads are securely fastened to their bodies! They would assuredly march off some day and leave them, entirely oblivious to the fact. Perhaps this would be very little loss, as they make such scant use of the wits supposed by courtesy to be located in their head-pieces.

"Why, only last week," continued the porter, "a lady coming through from Baltimore to Philadelphia lost an ear-drop in the car. It was found by a brakeman and taken to the office. The next day an advertisement appeared offering a 'liberal reward.' The brakeman took the article to the designated number, rang the bell, was admitted, restored the lost gem, and was overwhelmed with profuse thanks by the lady owner. She then pathetically stated that her husband's business had not been very good during the past year, and handed the man five dollars. The gem restored cost not less than $500. The man looked at the note, and reflecting that it was much better than nothing, made his bow and retired. Oh! these careless people are in no danger of dying of enlargement of the heart, I can tell you.

"A few weeks ago I picked up a pocket-book on the floor of the car. It was bursting with wealth. In the seat just in front lay a man sound asleep, with his overcoat thrown over the back of the seat. Thinking he might be the owner, but wishing to be sure, I cautiously woke him. 'Had he lost anything?' 'No-o,' he snorted. I asked him to examine his pockets. He began to go through himself and again said that he had lost nothing. Then he prepared to go to sleep again. Still not satisfied, I asked him to look in his overcoat. He did so and suddenly announced that he had lost his pocket-book, with $1,500 in it, besides many valuable papers. It had slipped out of the pocket of the coat, carelessly thrown over the back of the seat. The man described his property accurately and I restored it to him. What do you suppose he gave me in return? Give it up? Well, he thanked me in the most elegant English, never put up a blessed cent, turned over and resumed his nap. Honesty is the best policy, but it sometimes makes a fool of a man. There's my signal. Good-by."—Philadelphia Times.

Unrecognized Heroes.

The heroism which exhibits itself in the "imminent deadly breach" is honored of all. It never lacks for chroniclers. Historian, poet and artist are at its service, immortalizing themselves in immortalizing the central figures of grand achievements.

There are other heroes, too, whom fame is glad to recognize. The men and, above all, the women, who, uncheered by martial music, dare disease and pain and death in the quiet performance of professional or other duty, have their place in the heroic pantheon, though the recognition comes later than it does in the case of the soldier.

But there is one class of heroes whom the world rarely treats as such, whose heroism, from one standpoint—usually their own—is of the very highest order. They are the heroes who sacrifice their feelings in inflicting pain upon others for the good of the latter. The domestic circle is full of such heroes. Who has not known —or known of—some tender father steeling his heart and choking down with a strong grip the paternal agony that filled his soul in order that he might inflict upon a cherished son the thrashing absolutely necessary to his reclamation? And the heroic mother; how often has she not stood with tear-brimmed eyes and rod in hand writhing in maternal anguish as the dust arose from the juvenile jacket, "tanned" for its wearer's everlasting weal?

Nor are these heroes confined to the household. In the olden time every school-house in the land held one of them. To every adult person of to-day who has enjoyed—or tried to enjoy—the advantages of a common school education there is one never fading picture on memory's page. It is the pedagogue of the past, pleading with some youthful incorrigible to credit the statement that the "hiding" in immediate prospect would give more pain to bestower than receiver. And how heroically he laid it on, notwithstanding the pain with which every whistling blow thrilled the sensitive fibers of his own sympathetic nature. Truly, the pedagogue of old was a hero to whom the world scarcely gave due credit.—Detroit Free Press.

◆

—The door of the McIntosh grain warehouse on the Sacramento River, near Chico, Cal., was left open awhile the other day. Loose grain was plentiful on the floor, and there being no men about the premises to scare them away, a large number of ducks entered the building and began to feed. An employe happened to come along. He took in the situation at a glance and promptly closed the door. A squad of men was got together. Armed with clubs, they entered and made war on the game. Two hundred ducks were killed when the conflict terminated.

Religious.

PRAYER OF AN INVALID.

Gently, Lord, unloose the ties
Which so long have bound me here;
Softly veil my failing eyes,
Lest they yield to phantom fear.
Oft this pillow Thou hast blest,
Soothe it now with final peace,
Gather all the past to rest,
Rest in Christ:—then glad release.

If I've learned the lessons taught
By the pain of later years,
Lessons with deep meanings fraught,
Deeper far than earlier tears,
Let me whisper life's adieu,
In a cadence low and sweet,
And the earth's dissolving view
Fit me fairer scenes to greet.

Ah! not much is left to die;
Youth—full years—long since have fled;
Cherished hopes in dust now lie,
Friends most dear sleep with the dead;
Yet within me lives a heart,
Clinging close unto its own;
With its all—how can it part,
Going forth—alone—alone!

Whither? Oh! not long the way
To the realm that glows between
Shadow of earth's sinking day
And yon world of bliss serene.
Oft that interlying sphere
Presses closer than the air;
When I feel Christ with me here,
Then know I that Christ is there.

—A. A. Lipscomb, D. D., in N. Y. Independent.

International Sunday-School Lessons.

SECOND QUARTER.

April 29	—Peter Working Miracles.	Acts 9:32-43
May 6	—Peter Preaching to the Gentiles	Acts 10:30-44
May 13	—The Spread of the Gospel	Acts 11:19-30
May 20	—Herod and Peter	Acts 12: 1-17
May 27	—Paul and Barnabas in Cyprus	Acts 13: 1-12
June 3	—At Antioch	Acts 13:13-16 and 43-52
June 10	—At Iconium and Lystra	Acts 14: 1-18
June 17	—End of the First Missionary Journey	Acts 14:19-28
June 25	—Review.

HOW TO FIGHT TEMPTATION.

There is a lesson of tact in the old-world legend of the saint who was harassed in all his work by the mocking face of the Devil. At last it became unbearable; and, one day, as the saint was busy at the forge, with his tongs thrust into the glowing fire, and that hateful, sneering face before him, he suddenly snatched the white-hot tongs from the glowing cinders, and in a moment had the Devil by the nose. That changed the position of affairs in that forge; it was no longer a question whether the saint would be allowed to pursue his work in peace, but whether the howling fiend at the other end of the tongs could by any means get away from the saint.

Translate the legend into the language of to-day and it expresses a mighty spiritual fact. Temptation is not conquered by whining about the weakness of the flesh and the willingness of the spirit; and then—yielding. Often the surest way to win the victory is dexterously to flank the enemy; and to change his position from that of the assaulting party to that of the assaulted. That North Country farmer whose two besetting sins were avarice and a hot temper, knew how to flank the enemy when he resolved that every time he gave way to anger he would take from his pocket a bank-note, and burn it to ashes; thus at one time cooling his wrath and dealing a gratuitous stab to his avarice. "Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you," is the command of Holy Writ; and the best way to assure the Devil that your resistance is sincere, and not a mere temporizing show of resistance to make yielding seem excusable, is to cease standing on the defensive, and to take up some work for Christ which the traitor in you would fain persuade you to let alone.

This is the true office of tact in fighting temptation—to change the base on which the conflict is being waged; and, metaphorically speaking, to take the Devil by the nose. The ascetic saints who fled to the desert to escape the temptations of the world, and who attempted to quell the promptings of the flesh by scourgings and fastings, had a mind to show tact; but they lacked the tact to show. They were content to fight the battle out on Satan's lines; and there was their error. With as good a spirit and with better judgment does he struggle who turns away from the Tempter, and devotes himself to untiring activity in another direction, perhaps laboring for the Master among those who are tempted, and who know not how to resist. Over such a soul Satan finds himself unable to gain any fatal advantage; his most artful fascinations have no power to corrupt an imagination which is already filled with the Word and the work of God, or which is determinedly occupied in behalf of new and absorbing activities.

And so it comes that the highest tact in fighting temptation is something which the world would not call tact at all. The tact is not displayed in keeping the attention fixed upon the probable point of attack, nor in erecting man-made systems of fortifications about it; but it often consists in leaving the weak part in our defenses and seeking battle in the open plain. Foolish as such a proceeding may seem to the tyro in spiritual warfare, it has the truest philosophy on its side. For in battle the advantage is likely to lie with the attacking party; there is a force of movement, an enthusiasm of courage, in an advance, which can more than make up for the lack of protecting cover.

Are you melancholy and despairing; are you tempted to believe that life is a hopeless tragedy? you will not find relief from the temptation to despair by brooding over it, nor will you get rid of it by seeking amusement and forgetfulness in the places where men go for these. The laugh of the clown is hollow; you see the dark lines beneath the eyes that feign gladness. But seek to lighten the despair of others; carry the message of hope and trust to the neglected poor, in the slums of the city. In the streets and lanes, in the wards of the hospitals; and in the bearing of that message, you will yourself find trust and gladness. Overcome your dread of the world's evil by assaulting Satan in his strongholds of sin and wretchedness, and you will find that the night is not so starless as you had thought: He that goes out into Satan's night to rescue the wandering will also see God's stars.

And this is the principle which lies at the bottom of all tact in fighting temptation. We are never sure to be true to ourselves; and if the enemy can get us to make self our work, our temptations, our sorrows the main object of our thought, his work is more than half accomplished Our only safety is in getting outside of ourselves. Whatever your peculiar temptation is, you will not overcome it by clinging to it; but rather by turning away from it. Forget it, in the work of helping others, and it ceases to be a temptation.

Get out of yourself; you will never find strength or peace there. Cease to bewail the weakness of the flesh or the apparent smallness of the measure of grace which has been given you. You have strength and grace enough if only you use them; and Christ has more to give in your time of greater need. Your temptations come because self occupies too large a place in your thoughts. Would you know how to fight these temptations with tact?

"Many wounded round thee moan;
Lavish on their wounds thy balsam, and that balm shall heal thine own."

—S. S. Times.

Remembering the Sermon.

Do tell me how I shall remember the sermon? I go to church every Sabbath. We have an excellent minister. Other people remember his sermons and talk about them. They can give an outline of each discourse. As for me, I have nothing to say. The words seem to go in at one ear and out at the other. Sometimes I remember the text. Sometimes I can not even do that. Occasionally I can recall an interesting illustration or an apt expression; that is, I can for a few hours, but to have a clear idea of what the minister says seems impossible. What shall I do?

Thus spoke a bright sweet girl as we sat around the evening lamp last night, after the rest of the folks had retired.

What I said to this dear child may be of use to other young people who can not remember the sermon."

This is, in substance, what I told her.

The first and most important aid to your memory is attention. You must listen. Are you sure you have learned to do that? Did you not lose the text last [illegible], while noticing who came in with the Smith girls? Did you not lose one head of the discourse watching Deacon Scale's nods and another while admiring his wife's new bonnet?

How many times during the hour did you think of what Charley said in his last letter and what you should say in your reply?

How often did you say to yourself: "Oh dear, I wish he were through."

Were you not, after all, surprised when the choir rose to sing that closing anthem?

Were you "trying to remember" then?

Did you really listen, after all?

Second, not only listen, but write down what you hear. Take notes. You can do it quietly. Your next neighbor need hardly know it. A few small slips of paper in your half closed Bible, a short pencil, a word or two here and there to help your memory when you go home, and to fix your attention during the preaching. Taking notes will help you listen until you can attend and remember without. Do not fear to do it. Write out these notes in full after you have returned from church. Set down everything you can recall, while the subject is fresh in your mind. Have a place for these notes. Read them occasionally. Take a personal interest in the subjects. Study things connected with them. Look up doubtful questions, names, dates and places.

Third, talk about the sermon during the week. Tell your mother, your sister, your friend, about it. Ask them to hear your full account of the discourse. Listen to theirs.

Lastly, carry the sermon into your life. Resolve that it shall make you better. Ask God to help you fulfill this resolution. Try to practice what your minister has preached.

Follow up these four good rules: Listen. Write. Talk. Act.

You will soon "remember the sermon." Listening to it will be one of your greatest pleasures. Your memory will be more retentive, your heart will be warmer, your life will surely be better and happier.

Will you not commence next Sabbath?—Golden Rule.

Choice Selections.

—Religion, to be beneficial to others, must be seen. A concealed light does not help the traveler.

—Forgetfulness is one of the broad ways of sin. A ship can be lost by carelessness as well as by design. The evils of life come mainly through inattention.

—Self-examination is a wise use of our time if we are honest in it, but it is the height of folly if we grow morbid and blue, or if we be puffed up and exalted by it. It must be merely as a safeguard, just as the General has his fortification examined to be certain there are no weak places.—Golden Rule.

—Does your manner grow cold and forbidding as you grow older? Do the little children answer your questions with great timidity and avoid your presence as far as possible? It is a bad sign. It is not well for them nor for you. Come out into the sunlight. Make your life so bright that the little ones shall run with joy to greet you. Lead a merry, joyful, sunshiny life. And fill other lives with all the happiness you can. It does not pay to be morose. It does pay immensely to be a bright, warm-hearted Christian.—Golden Rule.

—When we read about some person who has amassed a colossal fortune by means which will not in the least bear the light of day, building a church, or endowing a college or a theological seminary, either in his life time or in his will, we are disposed to inquire if the hope of purchasing the gift of God had anything to do with the largess. If so, ought we not to tell him that there are some things which can be bought, such as human applause; but there are some things which can not be bought, such as the favor of God, the peace and purity of Heaven? Is this disposition confined to the outside of the church! When the church needs spiritual gifts, when it needs the influence and power of the Spirit bestowed on the rising ministry, is there not a tendency to seek these blessings through the giving of money, forgetting that the gifts must be accompanied and made effectual by prayer, by humility, by personal purity, by self denial? National Baptist.

Our Young Folks.

THE RAINDROP'S LESSON.

"Little Raindrop, pure and sweet,
Falling softly on the street,
Tell me, Raindrop, if thou wilt,
What thy home is—where 'tis built?
In what fountain's cool and bright?
On what mountain's airy height?
From what streamlet's laughing wave?
In what fairy's crystal cave?"

Spoke the Raindrop's silvery cry:
"Home I have none. Pilgrim I!
Coming earthward, joy I sow:
Soaring Heavenward, pure I grow.
Thus I journey up and down,
Gladdening field or dusty town,
Whether sprinkling shriveled leaves;
Whether moistening thirsty eaves;
Whether filling cisterns dry;
Whether answering suppliant cry;
Whether blessing good or bad,
Just or unjust making glad;
Whether traveling east or west,
God, who sends me, knoweth best.
So I go from earth to sky,
Never idle, happy I!"

Fell the Raindrop at my feet,
Smiling, sparkling, on the street.
"Little Raindrop, thanks to thee!
Precious lesson taught thou me.
Let me ever do my part,
Murmuring never in my heart;
Working always, helping all,
Friends or foemen, but or hall.
Never tempted work to stop,
Though my cup hold but a drop.
Rising Heavenward, pure to grow,
Coming earthward, joy to sow."

—Rev. S. F. Lathrop, in N. Y. Independent.

Writing Compositions.

The use of too many words is one of the most common faults in writing. We were attracted the other day by an article in a newspaper entitled "Gumption," and hastily concluded that a writer who could use so homely and strong a word as the title of his article must have something good to say about it. And so he had; but he employed a wild superabundance of words to express his thoughts. For example: "There are many persons, the majority of persons, in fact, who see, but do not perceive." This awkward sentence becomes a good one by simply leaving out the redundant words, thus: "The majority of persons see, but do not perceive." It would be still better, perhaps, to avoid the long majority, and say: "Most persons see, but do not perceive." Thus by erasing nine words from a sentence of sixteen, the thought is more clearly expressed because it is more directly stated. The writer then remarks that many persons have a habit of "postponing and putting off" what ought to be done at once. The words "and postponing" are useless. In explaining the "process" by which men are to get gumption, he throws about his words with a lavish hand.

"It is neither," he says, "more nor less than the doing and completing of anything that needs to be done upon the instant, without delay or postponement, and at the same time a careful observation of what is going on around one." By the omission of more than half the words of this bad sentence, it is converted into a fairly tolerable one. "It is the doing of what needs to be done on the instant, and carefully observing what is going on around." We advise our young readers, after they have "done" their compositions, to let them lie in their desks awhile, "to get cool," as Washington Irving used to say. Then go over them again, bearing in mind Sydney Smith's recipe for good writing: "Leave out every other word." It is often possible to obey this rule almost literally, as we see in the sentences quoted above. Daniel Webster tells us that whatever excellence he may have attained in the art of composition, he owed to a discovery he made when he was about nineteen years old. He learned that "all true power in writing is in the idea, not in the style." From that time he pruned his sentences of redundant words, and gave his ideas with directness and simplicity. — N. W. Christian Advocate.

Spiders, and Other Knowing Creatures.

We have read stories of spiders tamed by prisoners, and here is one from "Animal Intelligence," which shows that, besides being capable of tameness, they have sense enough to resent being teased: "I noticed one day in a half-dark corner a tolerably respectable spider's web, in which a well-fed spider had made its home, and sat at the nest-opening early and late watching for some flying or creeping food. It soon became a regular duty with me to carry it flies several times a day, which I laid down before its door with a pair of pincers. After a while the spider came each time and took the flies out of the pincers. This game was carried on for some weeks, as it seemed to me curious. But one day when the spider seemed very ravenous, and regularly flew at each fly offered to it, I began teasing it. As soon as it had got hold of the fly I pulled it back again with the pincers. It took this exceedingly ill. The first time, as I finally left the fly with it, it managed to forgive me; but when I later took a fly right away, our friendship was destroyed forever. On the following day it treated my offered flies with contempt, and would not move, and on the third day it had disappeared."

You have all heard of the ants of South America—the Ecitons—which go about in great crowds and kill every live-creature they overtake. There is an account given by Mr. Belt, showing that not all the wisdom of the country belongs to the ants. "Many of the spiders would escape by hanging suspended by a thread of silk from the branches, safe from the foes that swarmed both above and below. I noticed that spiders generally were most intelligent in escaping, and did not, like the cockroaches and other insects, take shelter in the first hiding-place they found. I have often seen large spiders making off many yards in advance, and apparently determined to put a good distance between themselves and the foe. I once saw one of the false spiders, or 'harvest men,' standing in the midst of an army of ants, and with the greatest coolness lifting, one after another, its long legs, which supported its body above their reach. Sometimes as many as five out of its eight legs would be lifted at once, and whenever an ant approached one of those on which it stood, there was always a clear space within reach to put down another, so as to be able to hold up the threatened one out of danger."

One who has studied the ways of that wise bird, the gray parrot, is ready to believe almost any story about it. There is one in which pussy, though very knowing herself, found her match in cunning. "One day the cat and parrot had a quarrel. I think the cat had upset Polly's food, or something of that kind; however, they seemed all right again. An hour or so after Polly was standing on the edge of the table; she called out, in a tone of deep affection: 'Puss, puss, come then, come then, pussy.' Pussy went, and looked up innocently enough. Polly with her beak seized a basin of milk standing by, and tipped the basin and all its contents over the cat; then chuckled diabolically. Of course the fall broke the basin, and half-drowned the cat."

In one case a parrot owed its life to puss. "One evening there was no one in the kitchen. Cook had gone upstairs and left a bowl of dough to rise by the fire. Shortly after the cat rushed up after her, mewing and making what signs she could for her to go down: then she jumped up and seized her apron, and tried to drag her down. As she was in such a state of excitement, cook went and found Polly shrieking, calling out, flapping her wings, and struggling violently, 'up to her knees' in dough, and stuck quite fast. No doubt if she had not been rescued she would have sunk in the morass and been smothered."

Cage-birds know quite well enough how to ask for a bath, and it seems that some wild ones do also. A lady writing about a jackdaw which lived in her yard says: "I generally made a practice of filling a large basin which stands under the trees every morning for Jack's bath. A few days ago I forgot this duty, and was reminded of the fact in a very singular manner. When I opened my dressing-room shutters about eleven o'clock, I found my little friend waiting just outside them, as though he knew that he should see me there: and when he did, he placed himself immediately in front of me, and then shook himself and spread out his wings just as he always does in his bath. The action was so suggestive, and so unmistakable, that I spoke just as I would have done to a child: 'Oh, yes, Jack, of course you shall have some water.'"—Christian Union.

Stingy Davy.

Davy was a very pretty little boy. He had curly hair, dark blue eyes, and rosy cheeks. But he was very stingy. He did not like to share anything with his little brothers and sisters. One day he went into the kitchen where his mother was at work, and saw on the table a saucer of jelly.

"Can I have that jelly?" asked Davy.

"Mrs. White sent it to me," said Davy's mother. "She has company to dinner, and made this jelly very nice. But I don't care for it: so you may have it if you won't be stingy with it."

Davy took the saucer of jelly and went out into the yard: but he did not call his little brothers and sisters to help him eat it.

"If I divide with them, there won't be a spoonful apiece," he thought. "It is better for one to have enough than for each to have just a little."

So he ran to the barn and climbed up to the loft, where he was sure no one would think of looking for him.

Just as he began to eat the jelly he heard his sister Fannie calling him But he did not answer her. He kept very still.

"They always want some of everything I have," he said to himself. "If I had just a ginger-snap they think I ought to give them each a piece."

When the jelly was all eaten, and he had scraped the saucer clean, Davy went down into the barn-yard and played with the little white calf, and hunted for eggs in the shed where the cows were. He was ashamed to go into the house, for he knew he had been very stingy about the jelly.

"O, Davy," said Fannie, running into the barn-yard, "where have you been this long time? We looked everywhere for you."

"What did you want?" asked Davy, thinking that, of course, his sister would say she had wanted him to share the jelly with her.

"Mother gave us a party," said Fannie. "We had all the dolls' dishes set out on a little table under the big tree by the porch: and we had strawberries, cake and raisins. Just as we sat down to eat, Mrs. White saw us from the window, and she sent over a big bowl of ice cream and some jelly, left from her dinner. We had a splendid time. You ought to have been with us."

Poor Davy! How mean he felt! And he was well punished for eating his jelly all alone.—Our Little Ones.

A Man Sings a Mouse to Death.

A New England lady writes: "Quite late the other evening my husband was humming a lively air, playfully keeping time with his feet as he sat in his easy chair, when he suddenly stopped and said: 'Do see that mouse!' It was only about four feet away and it did not manifest any fear. I said it is charmed with your singing. He began again, and going nearer sat down on the floor, resting his hand on the carpet. The mouse first ran a little further away, then came back and ran up his hand and arm, until he moved to prevent its going to his neck. I took it from his shoulder, but it instantly jumped to the floor and ran away in another direction. Mr. P. again sat down on the floor and the mouse came running back to him, when, finding it injured beyond recovery, he put an end to its sufferings. We have never before seen a mouse in that room, though troubled with them in the pantry and kitchen. It seemed to have been attracted by the singing to come in under the door to find help or sympathy, else why manifest such a preference for Mr. P?"

◆

What was probably the finest collection of flags in this country was recently destroyed with the Piper Opera House at Virginia City, Nev. The owner had spent ten years of time and $6,000 in money in making it, and it was thought to be complete, all nations being represented.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. MAY 2. 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1	½ "	40
1	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

TILDEN for 1884 is the talk of some politicians.

DON'T forget the mass meeting next Monday.

SMALL POX continues to rage in some parts of the State.

TORNADOS are paying their respects to the southern states this spring.

THE conviction of a star-router would be a great surprise to the country.

DON'T forget the Convention next Monday. You will have as much authority there as any other man.

GRANT county has had another case of murder of such a degree as to cause the commitment without bail of the accused.

THE Louisville and Nashville railroad stock took a rise the other day, and Grant was enriched fifteen thousand dollars thereby.

THE Cincinnati News occupies the Gazette building on the corner of Sixth and Vine. The morning Journal has suspended publication.

SEVERAL gentlemen who now consider themselves the leading candidates will find out how much they are mistaken, on the 15th of this month.

HON. JOHN D. WHITE, representative in congress from the tenth district in this state, and Miss Alice M. Harris, a Massachusetts belle, were married last week.

HENDRICKS says he will not be a candidate for the nomination by the Democratic National Convention, or words to that effect. McDonald has not had his say on that subject, yet.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $7 35@7 75; fair to good packers, at $6 85@7 35; fair to good light, $7 10@7 30; common, $6 00@6 70; culls, $4 90@6 10: stock hogs, $5 50@6 50.

THE Clinton Democrat publishes a long article and credits it to the Owen News, which the News will certainly refuse to daddy, as the article referred to is loud in its advocacy of Jones for governor.

SARELLS, editor of the Milton Free Press, has employed a sub editor, to give him time to mount the stump, and shake hands with the dear people of Trimble county. He wants to go to the legislature.

ACCORDING to the Owen News, last county court day was the quietest county court day had in Owenton for a long time. The News ascribes the good behavior of the people that day to the effect of local option.

THE Federal census makes the "State debt proper" of Kentucky $1,858,008. The state debt does not exceed $180,394, and the sinking fund has five or six times that amount with which to cancel the debt.

IN the last two years, floods and fires have damaged the Lawrenceburg fair-grounds about $6,000, but the company is not in the least discouraged, and is pressing forward as though nothing had happened.

THE Ministers' Temperance convention rejected the proposition to nominate Straight prohibition candidates for the legislature. It proposes taking a different route for reaching the public and educating it up to prohibition.

ONE witness in the Tewkesburg examination in Boston, testified to tanning human skins received from various students and doctors, and a pair of uppers, made from a woman's skin was shown. Another witness testified to the cruelty practiced by the nurses. Ben Butler had better look after the civilization of Massachusetts some while he is its governor.

KELLOG has been indicted for receiving money as a member of congress, for his services in connection with a contract to which the government was a party. His indictment has caused much uneasiness among a number of other congressmen who have been making favorites of star-route contractors. This is a nice kettle of fish.

THE Virginia detective, who believes that Neal, Craft and Ellis did not murder the Gibbon children at Ashland, but that some negroes committed the crime, has recently paid the Ashland Independent a visit; but he failed to convince the Independent that his theory is correct. These people who have so much proof of Neal and Craft's innocence should produce it at once. "Either put up or shut up."

NEXT Monday is the day set a part by the Democratic Executive Committee of the county for the holding of a mass meeting for the selection of delegates to attend the State Convention, which meets in Louisville, on the 15th inst. All those interested, and that includes every democrat in the county, should attend the convention held in the court-house in Burlington that day, and lend his hand and voice in shaping Boone's course in the State Convention.

THE number of offices for which the convention will instruct delegates, next Monday, is a matter worthy of consideration. There is no question as to the county's choice for governor and instructions will be given in accordance therewith. As to the other candidates there is not such unity of choice, and an attempt to instruct the delegates further than for governor would certainly not be judicious. Appoint a delegation of clear-headed, honest men, and the county's favorite candidates will have their interests well guarded.

THE following is condensed from the platform of Professor Henry K. Taylor, President of the Riverside Seminary, at Vanceburg, and candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, subject to the action of democratic convention:

1st That the school fund should be increased by the proceeds from the sale of public lands.

2d. There should be a uniform system of text-books, prescribed by the State Board, from which if the teacher departs he forfeits his pay.

3d. That Commissioners should be required to qualify by standing a written examination.

4th That a vigorous canvass of the state should be made by the state superintendent.

The above platform contains some very good points.

PHIL B. THOMPSON, representative in Congress from the Harrodsburg district, shot and instantly killed Walter H. Davis on a train of cars near Harrodsburg last Friday. Thompson charges that Davis, last December in Cincinnati got his wife drunk and debauched her while he was on his way to Washington to attend to his congressional duties. Davis was a very popular man and the charge as made against him by Thompson is denied by a large number of friends. The tragedy, on account of the social and political standing of the parties, is one of unusual importance in the history of the State. Thompson was a principal in a shooting scrape in Harrodsburg, about ten years ago, in which he, his brother and father killed three men by the name of Davis. This trouble causing the killing of three Davises grew out of a law suit between the elder Thompson and the elder Davis and which was being tried at the time.

STATE NEWS.

—Scarlet fever is raging at Flemingsburg.

—Frankfort talks of organizing a professional base-ball club.

J. W. Williams, of Crittenden county, dropped dead while at work in the field.

—James Crouch, of Bath county, ate heartily of wild greens. Result—a large funeral.

—The City Council of Bowling Green has placed retail liquor license at $225 per year.

—Thornton Gee, of Barren county, has a ewe which recently dropped five lambs at a birth.

—News from the various tobacco-growing sections of the State reports the prospects for tobacco plants excellent.

—The bond of J. H. Ashcraft for $14,000 to be postmaster at Paducah, Ky., has been received and accepted by the Department.

—John Roberts and Steve White, col., of Anderson county, fell out over a game of cards, and Roberts shot and killed White.

—George Washington, colored, has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment in the penitentiary, by Bourbon Circuit Court, for robbing a safe.

—A terrible wind and rain storm did considerable damage in the vicinity of Owensboro. Farm work will be greatly delayed.

—Lexington Press: Carter county has no sheriff, and the coroner of that county will have to conduct the hanging of Ellis Craft next month.

—James Robertson, of Rowan county, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head with a pistol. He was jealous of his young and pretty wife.

—Richard M. Wilborn, who was convicted recently in the Crittenden Circuit Court of the wilful murder of James Guess and sentenced to five years imprisonment in the penitentiary, has been pardoned by the Governor.

—West Liberty Scorcher: A little five-year-old son of Kelsey Murphy died last Sunday under peculiar circumstances. He was seized with a pain in the foot, a few days ago, and the foot and leg began swelling, reached the body and continued until the little sufferer was relieved by death.

—Glasgow Times: The champion hog of Barren county, and of this section probably, belongs to Mr. Sim Arnett, near Coral Hill. The sow weighs over 800 in ordinary fat, and when slopped would likely go over 1,000 pounds. She is a cross between the red Jersey and the black Berkshire.

—Mt. Sterling Sentinel: George Coons, a negro boy who is just recovering from a spell of sickness, was sitting up in bed handling a pistol, when the weapon was discharged, the ball striking the little two-year-old son of his sister, Bettie Coons, just below the right eye and coming out behind the right ear. The child is still alive, but it will be a remarkable case if it recovers.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—Work mules are being killed by buffalo gnats in Morehouse parish, La

—A man in Alexandria, Va., has been fined $20 for cutting off a cat's tail.

—A goose farm with 500 birds has been established in Talladega county, Ala.

—Numbers of turtles are being shipped from Cedar Keys, Florida, to St. Louis.

—A frog-shaped young negro, aged thirteen, is being exhibited at Lynchburg, Va.

—Three hundred dollars an acre was paid for fifteen acres of land in Volusia county, Fla., the other day.

—Marion county, Fla., shipped during the past season 94,000 boxes of oranges that netted at least $3 per box.

—One firm in Chattanooga, outside of other work, has made and sold 300 saw-mills within the past two years.

—There are said to be 2,200 convicts in the Texas penitentiary. Of this number three-fifths are negroes and Mexicans.

—The Board of Health of Cedar Keys, Fla, has prohibited the sale of oysters from now until the close of the warm season.

—An arrangement is on foot in Augusta, Ga., to have cooking taught in the public schools. Much trouble is experienced with the domestic servants.

—J. J. Wolfe, of Hawkins county, Tennessee, has sent to Chattanooga $50,000 worth of walnut lumber to be sold to Western and Eastern dealers.

—It is said that the Jacksonville, Florida, liquor dealers have raised a fund of $2,000 with which to pay lawyers to contest the validity of the new liquor law.

Every Man His Own Boss.

How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was suffering from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC I never met with anything so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & CO., Chemists, New York.

FOR SALE.

In Burlington, Boone county, Ky.

A BRICK HOUSE,

containing ten rooms, attic, cellar and out buildings, with four half acre lots attached. The late residence of Mrs. C. S. Tousey. The cellar contains a good kitchen, dining room and two other rooms. The buildings and premises are in good repair.

For terms apply to

GREEN & RIDDELL,
Burlington, Ky.

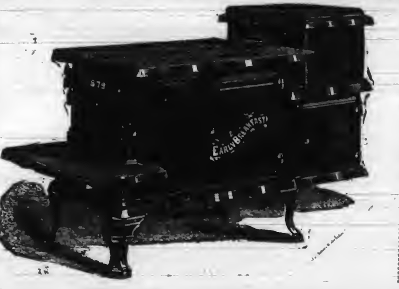
AT H. F. BLASE,

540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.



Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.

All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to me are requested to come forward and settle at once, as I will leave Burlington in a short time. By coming up and settling you will save expense. W. L. GEDGE.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.

HENRY ROSS, Adm'r.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to [illegible] of Andrew Glackin, deceased, will please come forward and settle. Those having claims against the estate will bring them forward well authenticated according to law, and they will be attended to.

N. B. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

STRAYED OR STOLEN.

A bay horse, 12 years old, 15½ hands high, long neck, short mane, sprung in the knees, right hind foot white, collar mark on point of left shoulder.

Also a black mare, 5 years old, 15½ hands high, long mane and tail, short neck —A liberal reward will be given for the return of either or both above described animals. RAY SNYDER, Bullittsville, Ky.

NOTICE.

The stockholders of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company are notified that an election for president and four directors to serve the ensuing year will be held in Burlington on the 1st Monday in May 1883. They are also notified that a dividend of 50 cents a share of stock is ready for distribution for which call on J. J. Lillard, Treas. WM. WALTON, Sect'y.

FOR SALE.

A small lot of the celebrated Snowflake potatoes, for table and seed. Also a limited quantity of the Alpha, among the earliest and best variety grown. Price $1 per bushel. Apply soon to Allen Conner at my residence. E. A. TUCKER,
Florence, Ky.

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.

(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.

Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and Iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.

A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NOTICE.

I take this method of contradicting the report being circulated in this neighborhood that a note with my name and my father's attached has been presented or seen in Aurora in the hands of another, and I will give $20 reward for the arrest of any person presenting a note for any amount with our names attached.

I also notify those who are circulating false and slanderous reports in regard to me in this neighborhood, if their slanderous and vile tongues are not at once stopped, that I will prosecute them to the extent of the law. J. W. RICE, Bellevue, Ky

CENTRAL HOTEL,

BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,

(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonathan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings, and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK,

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green.
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

dec. 20-6m

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE,

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23

J. W. Talbott.

TRADE MARK.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '18.

FLORENCE, - - KY.

NOTICE!

Just received a full and complete line of

DRY GOODS

of the finest selections, and the latest styles which will be sold exceedingly low. Also

NOTIONS,
HATS & CAPS,
BOOTS &
SHOES,
GROCERIES, &c.

Too numerous to mention. Almost everything that the people may want will be found in my Stock. No trouble to show goods, and orders filled promptly. Call and examine my Stock and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.

☞I feel exceedingly thankful to my friends and patrons for past favors and hoping you all will call again.

Truly Yours,

W. C. TANNER,
Florence, Ky.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SADDLES AND HARNESS AND

ALBERT M. ACRA,
BURLINGTON, KY.
HARNESS MAKER
—AND—
DEALER IN SADDLES

Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed. A full line of everything needed by farmers in the harness line.

REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

☞Give me a call. feb-14-83

—Shop over Rouse's Store.—

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS On Short Notice.

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Dawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

HALL'S

Vegetable Sicilian

HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE
FOR THE WHISKERS

Will change the beard to a natural brown, or black, as desired. It produces a permanent color that will not wash away. Consisting of a single preparation, it is applied without trouble.

PREPARED BY
R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N.H.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

FOR ALL THE FORMS OF Scrofulous, Mercurial, and Blood Disorders, the best remedy, because the most searching and thorough blood-purifier, is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles, $5.

FREE 25 USEFUL ARTICLES & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, Size 3 x 5, and an illustrated book to all who send two 3c. stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. F. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Exceeds the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.

2 to 100 Horse Power.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1460, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.

All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap. All are warranted. Circulars mailed free. Newark Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md. W. N. STACY, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky

THE DIXIE COOK BOOK

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and items of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.

S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers

(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Local News.

Shear your sheep.

Next Monday is county court day.

May-bees and Mayflowers are ripe.

The small boy and maple whistle are here again.

Squirrels are said to be very numerous this spring.

J. W. Duncan moved last week to his son Jimmie's.

C. L. Crisler is now proprietor of the Boone House in full.

We are sorry to learn that F. W. Grant is yet quite sick.

Some of the farmers in this neighborhood are done planting corn.

Lambs are numerous but generally of an inferior quality this spring.

Miss Mary Ann Thompson occupies the common school house with her school.

Don't forget Mrs. Tousey's sale of household and kitchen furniture next Saturday.

Ayer's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly safe, do not gripe, and are a splendid tonic.

The remains of R. C. Green were interred in the cemetery at this place last Wednesday.

A. O. Hall presented the RECORDER force with a lot of nice young onions, the other day.

The Christians' new church building at Bellevue is nearing completion, being under roof.

Last week William Hogan had a fine young horse to die from the effects of eating young clover.

J. M. Conner has bought considerable wool this spring, at prices ranging from 20 to [illegible] per pound.

Joe C. Revill, Clerk of the Owen Circuit Court, has been elected cashier of the new bank in Owenton.

James Conner and family now occupy Mr. J. W. Duncan's residence, to which place they moved last week.

Mr. Alfred Cason, being so well pleased with German carp, has put another supply of them in his ponds.

Luther Kirtley, col., working at Graham's saw mill, was badly hurt last Saturday, by a log rolling against him.

Elder Thompson, an Old Baptist, preached to a good congregation in the court-house, this place, last Friday evening.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

J. J. Berkshire, who lives near this place, has planted ten new varieties of Irish potatoes, paying from 50 cents to $1 per pound for the seed.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the Ministers' and Deacons' meeting at Bellevue last week. It was a very interesting meeting.

A few nights since David Hogan's meat house was robbed of all the meat it contained. A search warrant failed to discover the stolen property.

J. J. Berkshire says that the budded peaches is the only fruit killed. He also says it does not pay to plant and attempt to produce budded peaches in this section.

William Walton and his son, Everett started West yesterday to look up a location for a future home. They expect to be accompanied by Miss Susie Walton and H. C. Wingate.

We learn by the Courier that Jas. T. Willis, of Williamstown, has sold his fine three year-old gelding for three dollars and fifty cents. Jim ought to have made it round numbers, $3.

Mr. Benjamin Rouse has a cow of the short horn stock from the milk of which he makes two pounds and one ounce of butter per day—two milkings—after the calf has taken enough to keep it fat and sleek.

Elder Vater, of the Christian denomination, preached in the court-house at this place, last Sunday morning and and Sunday and Monday evenings. Mr. J. W. Calvert united with the church Sunday evening.

Rev. C. C. Conner, of Aurora, spent several days last week, with his relatives in this county. Sunday morning he finished his series of lectures at this place, and in the afternoon he preached Lonnie Crisler's funeral.

Tho social event of the season in the Richwood and Walton neighborhoods, this season, is the marriage, to-day, of Sam Hind and Miss Annie Hughes, daughter of J. C. Hughes, deceased. The nuptials will be celebrated at the residence of the bride's mother, near Beaver.

Joe Emmett, the noted actor, spent the day, last Wednesday, with James Riddell. Emmett has purchased three horses from Jimmie, Hedgeford, Sensation and a sorrel gelding, and is now negotiating for the purchase of the young Woodpecker stallion which Riddell is handling.

J. J. Lillard, treasurer of the Burlington and Bellevue turnpike company, was in town the other day, paying out 50 cents on the share dividend on the stock in that road. This is the first dividend the board has declared, and it has come much sooner than many of the stockholders anticipated when the road was being built. The dividend does not exhaust the treasury by any means.

Esquire H. Ashley, an old citizen of this county and a resident of Florence, died, last Saturday, after a protracted illness. The deceased was a member of Good Faith Lodge, No. 95 F. & A. M., and had been a justice of the peace for many years.

The Burlington and Hebron base ball clubs crossed bats at this place last Saturday. The game was witnessed by a small crowd. The playing, considering the weather, was very good, but on account of rain, the game was called at the close of the 7th inning, Hebron having played their half of the 8th inning, in which they made three runs. Below is the score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7
Hebron	0	3	0	0	0	0	2	—5
Burlington	2	1	0	0	1	1	0	—5

NOTES.

It was doctors' day—only five were present.

The ladies were furnished with cushion seats.

The Hebron boys drive a spanking turn-out.

Theo. Rouse scored and shouted for the Hebron team.

The Hebron catcher was a little QUICK for the Burlington boys.

The boys will play a better game next time—they will be used to their new caps.

In the 5th inning Charles Fowler had a finger on his left hand broken, while reaching for a ball thrown to first by Tom Clore.

Duncan, the catcher, in pursuit of a fouly fly, collided with T. W. Finch, and for a while it looked like both were pretty badly hurt.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

We are glad to see Mr Alonzo Gaines able to be out again.

Our city druggist has been waging war on the finny tribe.

Mrs. Dr. Grant has returned from a very pleasant visit to Newport.

Geo. W. Hughes, of Paris, [illegible] visiting relatives in this county.

Miss Annie Cowen is visiting her brother, at Rabbit Hash.

Harrison Hawkins, of Pendleton county, was in town this week.

Mrs. Sherrill, widow of Benjamin Sherrill, was visiting friends at this place, last week.

Mr. and Mrs H. P. Stephens, of Union, were the guests of Mrs. A. W. Smith one day last week.

Dr. I. R. McKenzie, of St. Louis, is visiting friends and relatives at this place. The doctor is looking well and hearty.

Andrew Ellis, J. W. Kennedy and Harmon Polly, three prominent citizens of Big Bone, were in town Monday,

Mrs. Tousey and her daughter, Miss Julia, have returned to Burlington, and will spend the summer at the Central Hotel.

Professor McNight, of Indiana, is making an effort to organize a normal school in the Morgan Academy. He is a very fine linguist.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

North Bend.

Seeing nothing in your valuable paper from this place, I thought I would write a few items.

The principal occupation of this locality is farming. The farmers are about through making garden and planting potatoes.

Mr. Clinton Gaines is having his barn remodeled.

The Assessor has been quite sick for a number of days, but is able to ride again. He will complete his work in a few days.

Mr. W. P. Cropper, who retired from business early in the spring, has again resumed business.

Mrs. June Balsly has gone to Cincinnati with her three children, to stay a few days. They will visit the Zoo and other objects.

Miss Lou Balsly is progressing rapidly with her music.

We have a very flourishing summer school. Miss Hallie Stephens is an excellent teacher and quite an accomplished young lady. We have over 20 scholars and the school is still increasing.

We congratulate on your Francesville correspondent. Long may he wave.

ZENOBIA.

Constance.

For the past few weeks the little village of Hebron, situated a few miles from this town, has been called to mourn the loss of some of her promising citizens. First, the news struck the town like a thunderbolt that Mike Dye had left the town for Constance, to til' the soil for Jas. H. Wilson, where frogs echoed notes of gladness at his arrival. Shortly afterward E. T. Clayton left that place to help Jim Loder dust counters for Davis Bros. Last but not least our dear love, Mr. Harry Henderson left the town in tears to come here to work for Jas. L. Anderson. While Hebron mourns the loss, Constance has been greatly benefitted by the change.

Mr. J. W. Davis, the retired merchant, has left for good.

Evan Anderson was severely cut while working at the saw-mill. A slab struck him in the face, knocking him down.

Geo. Brown said it was a mistake about him working a day. He only worked until noon.

The Street-cars have stopped on account of the track being in a bad condition.

Jim Loder says if people don't quit priceing his horse so low he will whip somebody Nothing less than $1,000 will touch her.

Plattsburg

J. A. Botts is very sick at th's writing.

S. P. Dorman has moved to Aurora, Ind.

B. B. Grant was struck by lightning one day last week, and severely shocked.

Your scribe tried to shake himself to death with ague last week.

Some of the farmers have finished planting corn.

The persons that set fire to S. P. Dorman's barn is worse than a murderer, and should they be found out, hanging is too good for them.

Fishing in Woolper is good, but catching is bad. Messrs. Editors, you should come down and try your luck.

W. W. Winslow, of the Wrought Iron Bridge Company, Canton, O., was here Tuesday. He said he would replace the old bridge for $632 or would build them a 100 ft. span for $1,300.

Billy Rice will build the Ashbyfork bridge.

There is more geese on Woolper this spring than ever known. Seems that goose raising has become quite an industry.

The following persons are directors of the Woolper pike: G W Terrill, President; J Frank Grant, Sect'y.; John Smith, F. Wingate and J J Lillard, directors.

Union.

Union will soon present to view a number of new and handsome residences.

The frost took in all our beans at one supper.

Corn and hogs scarce and high.

Alf Gaines and Joe Williams are engaging lambs—they are liberal buyers.

A Mr. Howlett, of Gallatin, and Miss Connelly, of Beaver, were married in the presence of a large number of friends, at Wesley chapel last Wednesday.

Much of Union and vicinity including an attorney, assisted J. A. Huey in raising a stock barn last Thursday.

A case of small-pox, from Robt. Willis' place, was moved to the pest-house a few days since.

Union will soon have to establish a 5th street.

G. W. Dunlap, evangelist, at Independence, has had some 50 confessions to date and the meeting is still progressing

Miss Nannie Burkett is convalescing...... M. C. Norman speaks of moving to Southern Kentucky...... L. B. Stephens and wife will return from Florida in May......Vol Wilson has moved to Beaver Lick. Martin Rouse to the Dave Utz farm.

Scattersville.

News scarce this week.

Our gardens are all made, and soap about done for this season.

Whitewashing is the order of the day, while the ground is so wet.

The last rains have stopped some of our forward farmers from planting corn as soon as they intended.

Mr. Henry Parsons, of Big Bone, has bought the Geo. Bedinger saw and grist mill, and will move the same on Leander Seters' place on Gunpowder,

William Clore is talking of building a barn.

Some of our farmers are some what uneasy in regard to the fruit, since the last cold spell.

Our kind old friend and huckster, John Conner, has made his appearance among us again.

We stated in our last that Zack Bondurant had returned from Missouri. Since then he has sent for his family and they are now at his mother's, where they expect to make their home this year.

Mr. Hogan, of the Bellevue and Burlington turnpike, is doing some stone work for Owen Conner,

Rev. C. C. Conner and wife, of Aurora, paid his brother and family a visit last week. We are glad to see our Bro., looking so well.

Rabbit Hash.

Some of our farmers are not yet through planting potatoes.

Fruit in this section was not damaged by the late cold weather. There is a full bloom of all kinds, except apple, which is very light in some orchards.

The school at Maple Hill, taught by Prof. Bell, closed last week.

Miss Annie Cowen, of Burlington, is visiting her brother at this place.

Z. T. Stephens is at Patriot, Ind., having his eyes treated by Dr. Jamison, of that place.

Miss Ella Hastings has returned from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Clara McKay, in West Virginia.

Quite an interesting meeting was held at the East Bend Baptist church last Saturday, the occasion being to ordain Bros., J Q Stephens and J P Craig, deacons of the church. The ordination sermon was preached by Elder Dickens, of Bellevue, and it was very able and interesting. The other ministers present were R E and J A Kirtley, J C Sebree and Mr Hudson, of Louisville. After the ordination a bountiful dinner was spread, which was followed by a sermon by Rev R E Kirtley.

An immense crowd of Kentuckians wended their way to Rising Sun, last Friday evening, to witness the commencement exercises of the High School. Among the graduates was Miss Jessie Stephens, daughter of Solon Stephens, of our neighborhood who acquitted herself with great credit to herself and friends. She was the recipient of many floral offerings, which were both handsome and elegant.

Rising Sun had 11 funerals in ten days, the last one being last Thursday.

Francesville.

Our Ville is looking much improved since the yard cleaning and whitewashing season has come, and with the welcome assistance of nature, it presents quite a cozy appearance. Business of all kinds is on the boom, and the bustle and confusion on the streets the past week has been truly astonishing, compared with the general quiet of our Ville. Francesville is better adapted for a summer resort than for winter enjoyments, for the reason we have no railroad and turnpike connections, and our canals generally become impassable late in the fall and remain so until the spring thaw, making it impossible for excursion boats to get here, and debarring tourists and pleasure seekers from sharring our hospitality in the winter time. But for a summer resort it has but few equals. The romantic scenery, its antiquated buildings and beautiful landscape views in the distance are surpassed only in a few instances, making it a very desirable place indeed.

Quite a sensation occurred on our streets one night last week, caused from one of our citizens burning some corn stalks. Some of the neighbors imagined that Prof. Edson was in town with his wonderful electric light, but on learning the cause quiet was restored

We neglected to make mention last week that the Sabbath-school had been organized at this place, with Mr. Robt. Bradford, of Hebron, as superintendent.

Our newly elected constable of this precinct, passed through here last Sunday evening. What his business was we did not learn.

Mrs. Matilda Goodridge, of Bullittsville, was visiting in this place last week.

Greens and hog jole with sturgeon on toast, is the bill of fare with us this week. Thank the Lord for those greens.

Big Bone.

APRIL 30—During the past week we have had quite a variety of weather, first warm and pleasant, then rain and cold to a disagreeable degree.

Farmers in this section are more backward now with their preparations for a crop than ever known at this season. Scarcely any ground has been plowed for corn, except some sod.

Tobacco plants are promising, owing to the precaution of our farmers in canvassing their tobacco beds.

Mr A Ellis, one of our tobacco dealers, took in the Queen City, one day last week, and put eleven hhds. of fine leaf on the breaks, receiving therefor a good price.

Col. Bennie Aliphin, who spent the winter in Shelbyville, Mo., has, much to the gratification of his many friends, returned to the classic haunts of his youth over on the placid waters of old Mudlick Creek.

Henry Stevenson will run the Valley Hotel this summer season. Henry is an active, energetic young man and will leav nothing undone to add to the comfort and pleasure of his guests.

D J Lake & Co. have delivered their beautiful Atlas of Boone, Kenton and Campbell, to those who subscribed for it in this district. It is just grand.

Our district school began a few weeks ago under the guidance of an accomplished lady from York State.

Rev. Jas. Kirtley preached the funeral of Mrs. Grimsley at the Big Bone Baptist church, last Sabbath. Quite a number of friends and relatives were in attendance.

The Walton Whoppers came down last Saturday and took a tilt at base-ball with the Big Bone Brilliants. There was considerable good playing done on both sides. Mr. Add Miller made the decided fine play of the evening, catching a fly on 3d base. Brilliants 43; Whoppers 14, said the score sheet. Whoppers, come again.

Petersburg.

Tom Stuart, of the Barkworks, Ind., was shaking hands with his many friends here last week.

Harry Graves returned home from New Orleans, last Wednesday.

Commodore Perry left here last Wednesday morning at 4 o'clock in his sail boat for Florida, and at sun down he was below Vicksburg—so some one says, and judging from the amount of gas he generally carries, we have no doubt but what it is so.

Dr. Ed Terrill says he has rode horse back long enough, and has purchased a two wheel village phaeton.

Dave Alcorn got his finger cut off, while working with a horse-power saw-mill, at J. Frank Grant's lumber yard.

Chas. Schramm and Solen Early attended the commencement at Rising Sun, last Friday night.

Rev. Froh and wife were surprised last Friday night by a number of their friends meeting at their house, and each one bringing a pound. It was a pound party.

Charley Bolen is lying very low, at this writing, with typhoid fever.

Base-ball is all the go here and Dr. Ed says he is going to havo the best club in the county.

Hebron.

Will Davis is building an addition to his house.

Ben Floyd and wife, of Florence, visited relatives and friends at this place last Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Mary Clore, who has been visiting in this community for the past few months, has returned to her home in Montgomery county, Indiana.

Perry Aylor claims to be the owner of the finest four-year-old harness mare in the county.

Considerable hay was hauled to Cincinnati from this place last week.

Tanner is the boss hay hauler.

Lou Gaines is visiting relatives in Montgomery county, Indiana.

Fruit in this locality is not injured so far

Jameson Aylor has the finest field of wheat in this vicinity.

There will not be half a crop of tomatoes raised in this section this season.

Clore & Snyder have hauled off 35,000 pounds of tobacco and have as much more to haul.

One day last week we made Bullittsville a very pleasant visit, and found everything lovely. We are glad to report that the Ville is rapidly improving, and business very brisk.

Erlanger, Kenton County.

Erlanger still improves. The railroad company is thoroughly renovating and repairing their depot at this place. The building is to be lowered, the platform extended and a ladies' waiting room attached In fact we are to have a splendid depot. This in connection with our gentlemanly agent, Mr. Ira Riggs, and his assistants Messrs. Johnston and Garvey, every one may rest assured they will be treated nicely when occasion calls them to Erlanger.

Our friend Charley Stephens is again at the wheel, holding down business for Bedinger & Co. Charley is a wheel horse in business, and don't you for-get it.

We understand that Mr. J. M. Conner and Mr. Tim Westbay, of Burlington, Ky., on their return trip from Cincinnati, the other day, stopped off at the Erlanger Hotel, in a very hungry condition. It being past meal time Mr. Conner had the gentlemen some hamsandwich and hard boiled eggs prepared, of which they devoured one dozen sandwich and four and one half dozen eggs. Their friends here have heard nothing of them since and fears are entertained that they are either foundered or dead.

A $20.00 Bible Reward.

The publishers of Rutledge's Monthly offer twelve valuable rewards in their Monthly for May, among which is the following:

We will give $20.00 in gold to the person telling us which is the shortest chapter in the New Testament Scriptures (not the New Revision) by May 10th, 1883. Should two or more correct answers be received, the reward will be divided. The money will be forwarded to the winner May 15th, 1883 Persons trying for the reward must send 20 cents in silver (no postage stamps taken) with their answer, for which they will receive the June Monthly, in which the name and address of the winner of the reward and the correct answer will be puplished, and in which several more valuable rewards will be offered. Address, RUTLEDGE PUBLISHING COMPANY, Easton, Penn.

Mr. Editor:—Will you allow me a small space in your paper, that I may bring before the people of this county the name of Professor H. K. Taylor, who is a candidate for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction? Prof. Taylor is a perfect christian gentleman, highly educated, and has given his life to the cause of education. He has held high position in his educational career, and is now President of Riverside Academy, a flourishing male and female college, situated in Vanceburg, Kentucky.

He is just in the prime of life, and is fully awake to the cause of education. He realizes how deficient our present system is, and desires to make it more perfect. I have known Professor Taylor intimately for several years, and do not hesitate to say, that in my humble judgment, he is capable to fill the office he now seeks, or any other the people of Kentucky may give him.

Now, let the people of Boone county all come out and support Prof. H. K. Taylor, and elect a man that they will not be ashamed of, but proud to have him represent them. R. O. HUGHES.

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2½ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Alfred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R. W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises. Title good. For further particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, feb 28-3m. Burlington, Ky.

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office opposite the Boon House.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J. P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
108 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,
Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accommodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

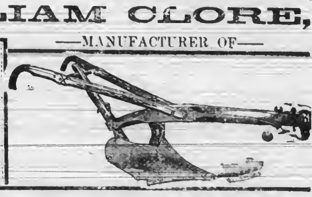
AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere. Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., [illegible] College St., Nashville, Tenn.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
R O U S E.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY

TO BUYERS.
I have for the spring trade a clean and carefully selected stock of Goods with prices marked to suit the times.
IN DRY GOODS,
Brocades, Cashmeres, Indigo Blue Calicoes, Prints, Ginghams, Cheviot Shirting, Brown and Bleached Muslins and double width Sheeting, Pillow Case Muslin, Jeans and Cottonades, Crashes, Table Linen and Napkins.
IN WHITE and FANCY GOODS,
Nainsook, Lawn, Swiss, Jackonet, Hamburg Embroideries, Laces, Ladies' Collars and Ties, Toilet towels, Ribbons and Buttons.
Floor and Table Oil Cloth in new Style Patterns.
Carpet Chain in fast colors.
Rubber Coats and Leggins—Overalls and Jackets.
In Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware and Woodenware my stock is complete.
Flour and Salt always on hand.
A Full stock of FANCY & STALPE Groceries.
Cash paid for country produce or will take in exchange for goods.
Orders for Goods not in stock, gladly and promptly filled.
Yours Truly, W. E. PIPER.

WILLIAM CLORE,
—MANUFACTURER OF—
Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,



Single & Double Shovels,
Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.
RISING SUN, - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

$173.75 for a SQUARE or UPRIGHT ROSEWOOD PIANOFORTE, with [illegible] and Music. Only $80 for an Eight Stop, Sub-Bass and Octave Coupler ORGAN. Chapel Organs $65. Pipe Organs [illegible]. OTHER BARGAINS [illegible] described in Illustrated Catalogue which is sent Free with full particulars.
VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME.
Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

How to Slaughter Animals Mercifully.

A paragraph in one or two newspapers recently announced that Mr. St. George Lane-Fox, the well-known electrical engineer, had devised an electrical apparatus for slaughtering animals. This has apparently given rise to some misconception. It has been generally supposed to apply to the slaughtering of animals for food. This, unfortunately, is not the fact. The appliance referred to is intended only for the killing of horses, dogs, cats, and other animals not intended for food supply. The same electrical discharge which would kill a horse will, of course, kill a cow, but there is the difficulty that was experienced when some ten or fifteen years ago Dr. Richardson experimented with the great induction coil at the Polytechnic upon the lives of sheep and other animals before a large party of veterinary surgeons and others interested in the subject. This formidable coil, it may be remembered, was said to be capable of giving a shock twenty-nine or thirty inches long, and though a bullock was never subjected to its power it was believed to be capable of killing one. Sheep, under favorable circumstances, it did kill easily, but the carcasses were of no use for food. The blood, it was found, could not be extracted; and for the same reason animals killed by a lightning flash, even though not charred or otherwise structurally injured, can not be used for food, but ordinarily have to be buried.

The invention, then, of Mr. Lane-Fox has no application whatever to the work of butchers. It affords, however, a completely satisfactory method of according the happy dispatch to all worn-out or injured horses, ownerless dogs and cats, or any other animals that it may be required to kill without any reference to the condition of the dead body. The simplest way of impressing upon all persons of humane disposition the value of such an invention would no doubt be to draw aside the curtain behind which these wretched creatures are done to death. There are plenty of people whose sensibilities are far too delicate to permit of their putting their own animals to death or of seeing for themselves that the business is properly performed, but not too delicate to permit of their handing them over to anyone who will undertake to get rid of them, even though the deputy may have neither knowledge nor skill and may rather enjoy a little ingenious and protracted torture. That dogs and cats are often brutally ill-used in careless or clumsy attempts to destroy them, most persons probably have within their own knowledge facts sufficient to prove, and it would be a very easy matter to depict scenes of daily occurrence in "knackers'" yards which could not fail to harrow the feelings of the most callous. The public generally, however, know even less about the circumstances under which used-up horses are slaughtered than they do of the killing of sheep and cattle. Thousands of miserable creatures are every year in London led away to their death at the hands of men and youths whose ordinary vocation inevitably renders them more or less incapable of pity and who do their work under no sort of a surveillance. The animals are killed in private yards, and though as a rule perhaps the operation is performed as swiftly and painlessly as it may be, yet it is a fact which very little inquiry will be sufficient to establish that sickening cruelties are often wantonly perpetrated, and the most hideous results of bungling and incompetency bring to a close the lives of many a useful servant of the public.

It can not be too clearly emphasized that science has put into our hands a cheap and simple method of sweeping away all such ghastly and revolting possibilities, and that all that goes on in this way henceforth is due to public apathy and indifference, and not to any necessity. By the method devised by Mr. Lane-Fox, a worn-out horse to be killed would first have the top of its head and its feet and its legs wetted with salt water. It would then be led into a stall and made to stand upon an iron plate connected with the negative pole of a condenser of a capacity of about 100 microfarads. All that would now have to be done would be to touch the animal's head with the positive pole, and it would fall dead. There would be scarcely a possibility of failure or mistake, and scientific men seem all agreed that the electric discharge which causes death is incapable of inflicting sensation. The reason of its occasioning no pain has been explained—with what correctness we do not pretend to pronounce—by the alleged paralyzation of the nerves before they have time to convey any sensation to the brain. Physiologists profess to have demonstrated that a nervous vibration can not be communicated to the brain in less than a tenth of a second, and that another tenth of a second must elapse before a sensation can result from the vibration thus communicated. One fifth of a second must therefore necessarily intervene between the actual infliction of an injury and the experience of pain from it. But the flash from such an apparatus as has been described would paralyze every fragment of a nerve in man or beast in something like a hundred-thousandth part of a second. Such a death, we are told, must necessarily be painless, because the whole mechanism by which alone pain could be produced would be virtually destroyed long before it could operate. However this may be, the difference between this swift and certain death and the horrible practice of the knacker's yard is sufficiently apparent to incline every humane person to fervently wish that this scientific mode of slaughtering may be adopted. The idea, of course, is not new; indeed, as we have shown, the thing was practically done years ago, but electrical matters have moved rapidly of late. The application of the condenser to this business renders the process more certain and manageable than it was a few years ago. We are informed that for £500 such an electrical apparatus as is here alluded to may be fitted up in any stable or out-house, that it will kill as rapidly as animals can be placed in position and taken away again, and that the cost of maintenance is trifling. Why should not we immediately have some central establishment fitted up for the painless dispatch of the worn-out, the injured, and the useless of our brute dependents.—London News.

—England is filled with cranks whose highest ambition is to thrust a bouquet or petition into the Queen's carriage as it is passing. They are frequently arrested.

—The consumption of rubber goods has more than doubled in the last three years.

G. M. D.

A Medley, a Mystery, a Marvel and a Miracle.

The Story of a Dream.

"Get money, honestly if you can, but get money," was a foolish father's advice to his son. Get money, if you can honestly, makes but a slight alteration in the order of the words, but varies the sentiment considerably. There is no harm in making money. It answereth all things. Used rightly, it is a power for good, and there is money enough in the world to form a lever by which the mass of humanity could be lifted, to a certain extent, out of its depths of sorrow and despair. Money we must have for money makes the mare go. Some can make money who have no faculty for saving. Would you save you must know how to deny those who would borrow and never repay as well as those who beg simply because they are too lazy to work. There are men who never want to see you except to ask the favor of a loan. They will ask for just one word with you, and that one word is sure to be money. An impecunious fellow met a rich acquaintance, and not liking to ask directly for a loan, said, "Friend Smith, if you had ten dollars in your pocket and I was to ask you for the loan of five, how many would remain in your pocket?" "Ten dollars, to be sure," replied the rich man, without a moment's hesitation. He had gumption, and knew too much to part with his money by any such rule of subtraction.

O I see, said the impecunious man thus rebuffed. He was able to owe. He was one of the Micawber sort—always waiting for something to turn up. How like some people who are sick. They think to get well by letting disease take care of itself. But diseases do not heal themselves, and too late their victims full often find this out to their sorrow as death seizes upon them. Had they been wise in time they might have added many years to their lease of life. The cure was nigh them, as it is nigh to all who read this medley. These paragraphs tell the story, as a patient perusal will prove. Those who have keen insight and can read between the lines may solve the conundrum the sooner for it, but upon all light will dawn ere they read the final word of our story.

Light will dawn, we said, and so it will, light of hope and help. Light is what a certain individual wanted. Mr. Jones we will call him. He was very sick. Consumption had fastened its fangs upon him. He had long neglected catarrh, and laughed at the idea of taking anything for it when advised to do so, and so went from bad to worse. His lungs became diseased, a hacking, church-yard cough racked him almost to pieces, and he was fast wasting away. A mere shadow of his former self, he scarcely slept at all at night, or slept only to dream horrible dreams. Talk of nightmare! A whole circus troupe, horses and all, seemed to make his bed the arena of their wild performances. In this case money did not make the mare go, for he spent a deal of money on doctors and physics and was nothing bettered. He ate little, and was fast going down to an untimely grave, leaving his wife a widow and his four bright children orphans, when, lo! on one eventful night he dreamed for once a bright and happy dream, which our next paragraph will relate.

Death, the black-visaged monster, had until then stared him in the face, but the dream brought him hope. He saw a bright, white-robed angel in his dream, who said: "I come to bring you good news. Here is your cure—sure, safe, harmless, prompt, and reliable. Get well and seek to take health thereby to others. Behold the cure!" With these words the angel was gone, but ere the trail of light which followed him had vanished the dreamer saw glittering in the light three golden letters—G. M. D. "What can it mean?" he said to himself, as he awoke from his slumber. "I have had a Good Many Dreams before, but never such as this." Startled and surprised, he aroused his wife and to her related his vision. Alas, she could not solve the problem. Remembering all the medical advice, and the physic, and the expense involved since her husband became sick, she expressed the hope that the letters were not intended to suggest that a Good Many Doctors must yet be consulted in addition to all that had been interviewed. He groaned in reply and remarked that if he had to consult any more there would have to be a Gold Mine Discovered in order to pay them.

Every day for a week he and his faithful spouse searched diligently for a key to the problem. In the dictionary, in such newspapers as they happened to have, in books, on placards on the walls—everywhere they sought—hoping to find a clue. Letters stand for words, and they hoped to light upon the words that would suggest the cure. They Grieved Many Days over their lack of good luck, as they said, and the Good Man Dreamed again and again, but saw no more angels. Hope deferred maketh the heart sick. "Oh, that the angel had Guided Me Definitely and Given More Directions," he exclaimed, again and again.

Nearly two weeks had elapsed since the night of the Great Mysterious Dream, when there came to the house a pamphlet. Fired with his exhausting office work, which he still pursued, determining if possible to die in the harness, Jones was about to throw the pamphlet in the fire when something prompted him to examine it. Surely, thought he, here can be nothing that will Pierce this Gloom Most Distressing, or Give Me, Disheartened, any relief. Poor man, he had worked letters over in his mind, and made so many combinations with them, that they occurred in almost every sentence he uttered. They entered even into his prayers. Heaven Grant Me Deliverance, he would say, nor let disease Grind Me Down, and so forth, ad infinitum, and a mile or two beyond.

Mentally tortured and suffering in every fibre of his body, what wonder that he read page after page of the pamphlet. It was a work on diseases, and in the morbid state of his mind its contents seemed to suit him. It spoke of almost every disease that flesh is heir to, but oh, joy! as he read, a Glimpse Most Delightful of light stole in upon him. "Eureka! Eureka!" he cried. "Wife, I have it, I have it."

Everybody in the house heard him cry Eureka, and rushed to the room to hear what he had found. All expected to see some Great Miracle Done, and then came the explanation. Simple, of course, but why had he not thought of it before? Oh what a revelation! Here was hope for him and for all consumptives. Here, hope for suffering friends and neighbors. That night he scarce could sleep, but when he did, he again saw a bright vision of golden letters, in fact, a Glittering Monogram Deciphered readily, and reading G. M. D.; and again P. P. P., and yet again F. P., and one huge P, around which these others were entwined, and then W. D. M. A. All the letters blended, yet each was distinct. All he had seen in the book, all he again saw in his vision.

Dream Most Glorious. D. M. G.—G. M. D.—Again he rang the changes; backward, forward, every way. Gold Medal Deserved. M. G. D.—Misery's Great Deliverer—till time would fail to tell them all. P. P. P. stood for Perfect Peace Promised for sufferers, and sweet release from Prostrating Purgatorial Pains. And again F. P. was Freedom Promised, and backward, P. F., it became Pain Flees. Now he could get well, and once well, he would be a missionary, a Glad Missionary Devoted to the work of telling others how they might get deliverance. He went through the list of diseases among those of his own acquaintance, from John Robinson, whose torpid liver gave him constant headache and severe bilious attacks, on through the list of those suffering from ulcers, coughs, weak and diseased lungs, to his friend, General B——, who was as near the grave as he. And for all these, as well as for himself, the Grave May Disappear from present vision, and each may be Given More Decades of life than they had hoped to have years. Against the milder cases he marked P. P. P. Against the serious cases he marked G. M. D., not the Grizzly Monster Death, which he so long had dreaded, but something—oh, so much better, as we shall presently see.

In a short while our hero was well, and went everywhere among his friends and neighbors, telling of his good fortune and showing the sick and the suffering how they might be healed. Some laughed and continued to suffer, refusing to be healed. More were wise, took his counsel and proved his vision of the night as he had done.

"A vision, less beguiling far,
Than waking dreams by daylight are."

Can anything be more delightful than health after sickness? To be a well man, to feel pure blood coursing through your veins, to know that lungs, liver, kidneys, and all the Grand Machinery Does its duty perfectly in one's body; to carry health's ruddy mark on the cheeks. Ah, this is Good Most Decidedly. This was our hero's case, and thousands can tell the same story. The good angel has come to them. They have seen the letters Gleam Most Distinctly before their eyes, and Going Most Definitely to work in pursuing the instructions given, they have recovered that great blessing—Health. G. M. D. has been to them a channel of good, Good Mysteriously Done, and they have bid their sick friends do what all the sick should do, namely, put themselves in communication with the W. D. M. A., Which Done Most Assuredly will put them in the Way Desired Most Anxiously.

Alas, that human nature is so slow to believe—alas, that men and women are bowed down with the burden of complaints, of which they might be rid—consumption, bronchitis, dyspepsia, heart-disease, kidney disease, malarial complaints, scrofulous diseases, skin diseases, tumors, ulcers, and many more. It would seem as though some ill deity had given every letter of the alphabet as many diseases as it could possibly desire, thus forming an alphabet of sorrow, suffering and woe. Happy they who the Great Mystery Discerning, have escaped the clutches of sad diseases.

Looking back upon his past experience, Mr. Jones feels Grateful Most Decidedly, and continues telling the old story of his sickness, his vision, and his restoration to health; for all the sick are not well yet. But he has had the pleasure of seeing, as he says, Good Miraculously Done to hundreds upon his personal recommendation.

Dear reader, bear with us awhile if light has not yet dawned on your mind. The mystery will soon be revealed. If the key be not on your right hand it is at least on your left, in letters clear as daylight. A Good Many Delighted have discovered it and opened the portal to a long life and a useful one.

Initials of words that stand for all that is sorrowful and sad, letters, the self-same letters, are often initials of words that breathe of hope and benediction.

Search but awhile and you will find the boon, the blessing and the benefit. The mystery of the three P's, of the F. P., of the G. M. D., and of the W. D. M. A., Will Dawn Most Auspiciously upon you.

Columbus discovered America and won high honor and immortal fame, and they who have learned the secrets of the wonder before your eyes, good reader, Give Most Delightful testimonials of their gratitude.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these—it might have been—so sayeth the poet. When we think of the myriads that might have been saved from untimely graves had they seen Mr. Jones' vision and sought his way to health, we feel sad. Yet we can not but rejoice at the Great Many Delivered from death's door by G. M. D., and that Pain's Positive Persecution has been escaped again and again by P. P. P.

Virtues unnumbered serve to make G. M. D. the Greatest Mercy Deigned by favoring providences for the relief of sufferers, and its discoverer feels P. P. P.—Perfectly Pardonable Pride in telling of the Growing Multitude Delivered from the Grasp Most Dreadful of Greedy Mournful Death.

Every sick person is interested in the theme before us, and every well person, too, for who does not know some one who is sick and needs, therefore, the good news of health that is Given Many Daily.

Reader, mystified reader, we will detain you no longer. Perhaps you have Guessed Most Deftly the hidden meaning. P. P. P., you know, stands for Pleasant Purgative Pellets, curing constipation, torpidity of the liver, headache and many other complaints. F. P., of course, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has proved such a P. F., Prime Favorite and Precious Friend to ladies; safe, easy to take, working like a charm—curing the peculiar weaknesses incident to their sex. The letters W. D. M. A. stand for the World's Dispensary Medical Association, at Buffalo, N. Y., with its imposing structures, its army of medical men, specialists all of them, and its president, Dr. R. V. Pierce (the large and central P of Mr. Jones' second vision), all at the service of the sick and suffering, everywhere; while G. M. D. is—well read the initials of the paragraphs of this article and you will see that G. M. D. is Golden Medical Discovery, the boon of the diseased. This wonderful medicine cures all humors, from the worst scrofula to a common blotch, pimple, or eruption. Erysipelas, salt-rheum, fever-sores, scaly or rough skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great eating ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influences. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing tetter, boils, carbuncles, scrofulous sores and swellings, white swellings, goitre or thick neck and enlarged glands. Consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs, is promptly and positively arrested and cured by this sovereign and God-given remedy, if taken before the last stages are reached. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, consumptive night-sweats and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. For indigestion, dyspepsia and torpid liver, or "biliousness," Golden Medical Discovery has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures.

You will do well if afflicted with any chronic disease to write to the Association for advice, describing your malady as well as you can. Many cases are successfully treated through correspondence and no fees are charged for consultation. For one dollar and a half you can secure a copy of the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," sent post-paid to your address. Its purchase will repay you. In this is Given More Desirable information than you can find in any other work of a similar nature.

The Ice Remedy.

The proprietor of one of the New York hotels thus explains how he rids his house of the drunken loafers who fall asleep in the bar-room or the rotunda: "Why, you see, when he gets asleep, as he generally does after having drank too much, nobody can take him up or do anything with him, and he is a combination of a devil and a wreck. I just get a little ice, well pounded up, and take him in a friendly way round the neck and slip the ice down his back. As it descends he sort of straightens his spine up; that makes it drop down a little further. As it gets toward the small of the back he looks very much surprised and opens his eyes wide, which previously he could not open himself or anyone for him. He looks at three or four places around, and seeing everybody looking at him, and feeling a little cold and queer, he rises right up and walks out of the front door. I never knew it to fail, and don't you forget it."

A Poor Cure for Insomnia.

A California man troubled with insomnia was told that he would be cured by going to bed, closing his eyes and picturing in his mind a flock of sheep jumping a fence one at a time. The experiment nearly made him insane. "I jumped about 2,000 over the fence," he says, "and there were about 1,000,000 left. Sleep! I'd given $1,000 not to see those sheep jump that fence. I could have gone to sleep right away but for the 2,000,000 stupid, white-faced sheep standing waiting like a lot of fools for me to jump 'em over the fence. Jump 'em, did I say? I had to boost 'em, drive 'em, hoist every one of those 6,000,000 sheep over that pasture fence, and when I turned and looked back there were 13,000,000 sheep, stupid, blank-faced white, woolly imps waiting there, each saying, 'Me, too; my turn next.'"—Boston Globe.

—Mr. Jefferson, the actor, went into a bank in New York recently to get a check cashed. The cautious clerk refused to pay out the money, saying that Mr. Jefferson must be identified, whereupon the actor leaned back against a post with that peculiar forsaken air of the returned sleeper, and said, sadly, in the words of Rip: "If my tog Schneider vas here he vould know me." The check was paid.—N. Y. Mail.

—For brevity in the statement of a tragedy, commend us to this paragraph: "A party of the name of Russell Lester went to Vinita, Indian Territory, for the avowed purpose of killing a man named Rutledge. The remains of Lester were returned in the baggage car of the next train. The best of plans are sometimes thwarted."

HOME AND FARM.

—A tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes will greatly aid the whitening process.

—A Wisconsin farmer thinks corn planted with the rows running east and west will stand better than if they run north and south.

—It is said that the American is superior to the European teasel, and that the cultivation of this plant can be engaged in profitably by the farmers of this country.

—A bit of economy is to save the peel of oranges; dry it and grate it for flavoring mince pies and orange cakes and custard also. If it is dried perfectly and is kept in a dry closet, there is no danger of its becoming musty.

—When horses eat their oats too rapidly the evil may be checked by placing some clean cobblestones in the box. The horse will thus be compelled to pick his oats slowly, masticate them more thoroughly, and they will do him much more good than if hurriedly eaten in the ordinary way.

—Professor Shelton, of the Kansas State Agricultural College, holds that the cultivation of such crops as broom-corn, hemp, flax and, perhaps, castor beans, which furnish but little, if any, stock feed, will ultimately lead to serious consequences in the loss of fertility sustained in the lands so cultivated.

—A dry substance like wool or saw dust for hens' nests abstracts moisture from the eggs and ruins them. The hen, if left to herself, will make her nest on the moist earth. At the bottom of the nesting-boxes place a damp sod of earth and mold it into a concave form. This dampness is beneficial, as it supplies the moisture the eggs lose during the process of hatching.

—Silver in constant use should be washed every day in a pan of suds made of good white soap and warm water, drying it with old soft linen cloths. Twice a week (after this washing) give it a thorough brightening with finely-powdered whiting, mixed to a thin paste with alcohol, rubbing longer and harder where there are stains. Then wipe this off and polish with clean, soft old linen.

—Sponge-drops are nice to mix with other cake in the basket. Beat four eggs to a stiff froth; then stir in one heaping cup of sugar and one cup and a third of flour. One teaspoonful of baking powder should be thoroughly mixed with the flour. Flavor with lemon and drop from a dessertspoon on buttered paper spread on tin plates. The oven should be hot, and the cakes will bake in a few minutes. They require watching, as they are very likely to brown too much.

—Spanish shortcake: Spanish shortcake is excellent for tea. Take three eggs, half a cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two-thirds of a cup of sweet milk, a little cinnamon, two cups of flour, and a teaspoonful of baking powder; stir the flour in, do not knead it; the eggs, butter and sugar should be beaten together till very light. Bake in a shallow tin; when it is done spread a thin frosting over the top; make this of the white of one egg, a little pulverized sugar, and set in the oven to brown.

The Use of Paris Green.

Farmers, bear this in mind: You can not have a large crop of sound potatoes, no matter how rich the soil or how well the crop is cultivated, unless the vines and foliage are healthy. Protect them, therefore. If you use too large a proportion of Paris green in the water or plaster, then the leaves will be injured, and injury from this cause is just as harmful as injury from the potato beetle. It is a fact that Paris green may be so extended with plaster that it will not harm the foliage while it will kill the beetles or their larvæ. It is, no doubt, a handier way to many and certainly it costs less to use this poison in water, while it is just as effectual. But the poison does not dissolve, so that, in spite of constant stirring, the water of the bottom of the vessel from which it is sprinkled upon the vines contains enough poison to harm the leaves, and it is for this reason we give preference to its division with plaster, which may be evenly distributed over every part of the plant. Sifters and bellows are now sold in most country stores, or the former may be constructed at home at a trifling cost. We have used Paris green in water and in plaster through several seasons and carefully noted the result upon the foliage. While that upon which the poisoned plaster was applied remained green and luxurious, the middles (mid-veins) of the leaves receiving the poisoned water would often turn gray and finally wither. Let us then bear in mind that our object is to preserve our potato vines as much from the injury of Paris green as from being devoured by the potato beetle. The one is just as important as the other, and both may be accomplished if we would use, instead of poisoned water, one part of pure Paris green to 100 parts of plaster and thoroughly mix them together, so that the plaster will be evenly, though very slightly, tinted throughout with the poison. It is best to purchase the plaster and green now and to mix it as above suggested and store it in barrels in a perfectly dry place. Thus mixed, there is little, if any, chance of its poisoning animals, since they would have to eat a considerable quantity to do them harm, while pure Paris green is a most dangerous article to have about the premises.—Rural New Yorker.

Hints to Pork Makers.

While it has been demonstrated that under favoring circumstances twenty pounds of live hog can be made from fifty-six pounds of shelled corn, it has been even more thoroughly demonstrated that tens of thousands of men every year feed millions of bushels of corn to hogs that never return one-fourth that quantity, while a good round per cent. of them fall even short of that. A hog to fatten or even grow rightly, must not be cold, and especially not cold and wet too, as he is sure to be if much exposed in inclement weather; hence, he should have quarters where most of his time, when not eating, will be passed in healthful sleep, warm and undisturbed. This can not be had in a leaky sty, or a manure heap. In referring to the plan of keeping corn or food all the time before them a writer says: "Surely in this way their appetite and relish for it can not be as good as when only as much is given as they will clean up; then next time they come with alacrity to what should be to them an enjoyable feast. This by no means signifies that they should be allowed to become squealing, screaming hungry. The more they eat the faster they are likely to lay on flesh and fat, and they will eat most when fed a reasonable quantity, and at regular intervals. To keep them full, without being at any time cloyed, is the happy medium to seek."—Colman's Rural World.

—There are eleven States in which women can vote for school directors.

—Franklin Pierce's old home, in the outskirts of Concord, N. H., is to be transformed into a Protestant Episcopal school for girls.

—In the best school in the State of New York the pupils have been trying to thrash the master. There seems to be a general misunderstanding as to who is boss in the schools of America.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—The number of students in the Presbyterian theological seminaries during the past year is as follows: Princeton, 125; Union, 129; Allegheny, 74; Auburn, 42; Lane, 36; Chicago, 27; Danville, 7; San Francisco, 6; making a total of 446.

—A religious movement bearing some resemblance to that of the Salvation Army has begun at Hamburg. Three orthodox clergymen invite people, especially workmen, to meetings by placards with the inscription: "Followers of Christ, assemble and take up His cross." The meetings are well attended by men and women of the lower classes. Free discussion is allowed.

—Pennsylvania school-slate makers have organized an exchange which has advanced prices twenty per cent. all round. The indignation of the juvenile population will, doubtless, be arrayed against this protected interest, where a similar action with regard to "'rithmetics," "spellers and "grammars" would pass uncriticised. Nervous teachers can be driven to the verge of resigning by any boy who understands how to drop a slate at the angle most favorable to vibration of tone.

—The Lowell (Mass.) Mail gives the following statistics for the Congregational churches of that city for 1882: Total membership, 2,387—659 males, females, 1,628; absent members reported, 494; total additions, 93—71 by profession, and 22 by letter; 44 dismissals and 26 deaths, making a gain of 23; 47 adults and 34 infants were baptized; total Sunday-school membership, 2,525; total number of families, 1,238; total charities, $12,045.49; total expenses, $26,520.46; total expenses and charities, $38,565.95.

An Accurate Time-Piece.

• • • While on the subject of Waltham watches, we may mention that we have seen a letter from the Commander of the Gordon Castle (Castle line of Steam Packets), who was fortunate enough to save life at sea, and who for his gallant conduct was presented in September last with a Gold Keyless Waltham Watch by the President of the United States, on behalf of the London Local Marine Board. Referring to this Presentation Watch, he says: "When I left London the watch was six seconds fast, and on my arrival at Singapore it was only three seconds slow, a most extraordinary performance for a watch, as I carried it on my person the whole time. I compared it every day with my chronometers on the passage out, and it seldom or ever differed one second from them; in fact, I found it almost, if not as good as my chronometers, which is a great deal to say for a watch carried about and subject to all kinds of jolts."—London, England, The Watchmaker, Jeweller and Silversmith, Feb. 5, 1883.

—The grand offense of parents, says Alexander Dumas, lies in shirking the difficulties presented by the curiosity of children. He dwells upon the heinousness of the time-honored practice of lying to children. Children, he declares, are always old enough to receive correct answers to the questions they ask. "There is no such thing as a stupid child. A child may have a more or less prompt intelligence; it may develop special aptitudes or antipathies, but you will never hear it say a stupid thing as long as you have not deceived it, as long as you have not told it a lie."

A GRANGER whose name is Bob Shield
Was mowing the grass in his field,
By a snake he was bitten,
And he has just written,
"St. Jacobs Oil has the bite healed."

A lame Chinaman on the Pacific,
Of pains and aches was prolific;
He limped all around,
Until he had found
St. Jacobs Oil, the great specific.

MR WILLIAM BUSH, living in Corsicana, Texas, recently buried his wife and four children in the same grave. They all died of measles, within two days of each other.

UPON what should the dude be fed? Upon dew-drops, of course.—Life.

A Remarkable Tribute.

Sidney Ourchundro, Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "I have used DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS many years, with the most gratifying results. The relieving influence of Hall's Balsam is wonderful. The pain and rack of body, incidental to a tight cough, soon disappear by the use of a spoonful according to directions. My wife frequently sends for Hall's Balsam instead of a physician, and health is speedily restored by its use.

A BOARD full of nails is the worst we ever saw.—Exchange.

STRAIGHTEN old boots and shoes with Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners, and wear them again.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, April 27, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 25	@ 6 25
HOGS—Common	6 25	@ 6 65
Good packers	7 15	@ 7 65
SHEEP	5 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 14¼	@ 1 15
No. 2 winter red	1 11½	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	56½	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	45	@
Rye—No. 2	65	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@ 12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 11
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 75	@ 20 00
Lard—Steam	11½	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 75	@ 4 15
Good to choice	4 70	@ 7 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 20⅜	@ 1 21
No. 1 white	1 13½	@ 1 15½
Corn—No. 2 mixed	68	@ 69½
Oats—mixed	51	@ 52½
PORK—Mess	19 25	@ 19 60
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 12	@ 1 12¼
Corn—No. 2	55⅛	@ 55¼
Oats—No. 2	41	@ 41½
Rye	61½	@
PORK—Mess	19 15	@ 19 20
LARD—Steam	11·70	@ 11·72½
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 20½	@ 1 21
Corn—mixed	66½	@ 66¾
Oats—mixed	51	@ 53
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12½	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 10
Corn—mixed	54	@
Oats—mixed	47½	@
PORK—Mess	20 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 10	@
CORN	52	@
OATS—mixed	42	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 5 60

THE man who "dies game" should never be shot out of season.

RADDING'S Russia Salve, best family salve in the world, and excellent for stable use. 25cts.

"Misery loves company." That's the reason a hen-pecked husband advises his friends to marry.

THOSE COMPLAINING OF SORE THROAT, Hoarseness or Cold, should use "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Sold only in boxes.

SLANG never heard from the lips of a bride—"don't give me away.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

CHROLITHION Collars and Cuffs will not turn yellow nor grow stiff like other waterproof goods.

THE latest mineral discovery in California is a soap mine. Good stock to water.—Boston Star.

Gastrine.

A lady says: "When I feel at all distressed after eating, a tablespoonful of Gastrine gives me almost instant relief." Sold by druggists.

BRANDY improves by keeping it; so does the man who owns it.—Baltimore Every Saturday.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar
Soothes the lungs convulsed with a cough. Piko's toothache drops cure in one minute.

You would use St. Patrick's Salve if you knew the good 'twould do you.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

What the great restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will do, must be gathered from what it has done. It has effected radical cures in thousands of cases of dyspepsia, bilious disorders, intermittent fever, nervous affections, general debility, constipation, sick headache, mental despondency, and the peculiar complaints and disabilities to which the feeble are so subject. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

HOGS IN EUROPE United States.
Mention this paper with your address on postal card to H. W. HILL & Co., 8 West Main St., DECATUR, ILL., will obtain a book FREE with the number of Hogs in each State and Europe, Census 1880, also a popular story entitled "THAT HOG OF MINE."

WORTH SENDING FOR! Dr. J. H. Schenck has just published a book on DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND HOW TO CURE THEM, which is offered FREE, postpaid, to all applicants. It contains valuable information for all who suppose themselves afflicted with, or liable to any disease of the throat or lungs. Mention this paper. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

HANDSOME GOLD WATCH. On receipt of $25 we will send a Gent's SOLID GOLD Stem-Winding Watch, and guarantee perfect satisfaction, or will refund the money. Send P. O. order or registered letter. T. MORTON & CO., 203 Broadway, New York.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

YOUNG MEN If you want to learn Telegraphy in a few months, and be certain of a situation, address VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Write for catalogue. Coleman & Palms, Prop'rs.

Na Gongs, No Banners.—"A Summer Idyl."
From a Providence Merchant.

MR. GEORGE H. DAVIS, a fruit dealer at 297 Westminster street, bears his grateful testimony to the unequalled excellence of the production of one of our most skillful Providence pharmacists. Mr. Davis says: "Last spring I was very greatly troubled with severe inflammation of the kidneys, and it became so bad that at times I urinated blood, and my sufferings were intense. My condition was so painful that for a while I was scarcely able to attend to business, and the severe pains would come so suddenly and severely that I would be obliged to leave a customer whom I might happen to be waiting upon. During a part of the time I was unable to walk, and scarcely knew what to do or which way to look for relief. At this time a friend recommended Hunt's Remedy. I took two bottles of it, and it took right hold of my disease and cured me very speedily, and I have experienced no trouble with my kidneys since.

"Furthermore, Hunt's Remedy has strengthened me very much, and since I began to use it I have been able to attend to business, and am all right now. I heartily recommend it to all. What it has done for me it will do for you who are afflicted."

Suffered for Twenty Years.

HON. JOSHUA TUTHILL, of East Saginaw, Mich., says: "Count me among the enthusiastic friends of Hunt's Remedy. It has proven in my case all you claim for it. Having suffered for about twenty years with severe disease of the kidneys (which our local physicians pronounced Bright's Disease), I made a journey East to consult the eminent Dr. Haven, of Hamilton, New York, of whose fame in this specialty I had heard much. Dr. Haven examined me carefully and simply said: 'Go and get a bottle of Hunt's Remedy and take according to directions.' After having traveled so far for treatment, it struck me as rather funny to be directed to take a medicine which I might have bought within a stone's throw of my own door; but I was in the doctor's hands, and of course I followed his advice, and right glad was I that I did so, for before I had taken Hunt's Remedy half a dozen times I found immense benefit from it, and by continuing the use of it for a limited time I recovered from my trouble entirely, and am to-day, I think, one of the most rugged of rugged Michiganders. The world is indebted to you, sir, for the promulgation of such a medicine, and I hope you may not go without your reward."

Advertising Cheats ! ! !

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article, in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

"Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say;

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable"

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY OF UTICA, N. Y.

$60 5-TON JONES

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address
JONES OF BINGHAMTON,
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO.,
136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA, ILL.
Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or loss of blood, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address
DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME IS COMING
DO YOU Your Carpets want to save time, temper and backaches! Must be Relaid. The EXCELSIOR CARPET STRETCHER and Tack Hammer combined will lay your Carpets with ease. EVERYONE SAYS, "Just the thing, we are delighted with it." For sale by THE HARDWARE TRADE generally. Circulars free. Sample by mail, post-paid, $1.00. Address R. W. MONTROSS, Sole Manufac'r, GALIEN MICH.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION. 25 100

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

BOILERS LOVEGROVE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA. ENGINES

DIPHTHERIA CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, NEURALGIA, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment (for Internal and External Use) will instantaneously relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives, sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

Lay the Axe to the Root

If you would destroy the cankering worm. For any external pain, sore, wound or lameness of man or beast, use only MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. It penetrates all muscle and flesh to the very bone, expelling all inflammation, soreness and pain, and healing the diseased part as no other Liniment ever did or can. So saith the experience of two generations of sufferers, and so will you say when you have tried the "Mustang."

THE SUN FOR FARMERS. FOR EVERYBODY.
THE SUN is not only a newspaper; it is also the best magazine of general literature published. Its readers miss nothing worthy of notice that is current in the world of thought. Its WEEKLY edition contains an Agricultural Department of unequalled merit. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year.
I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 923 17—83

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1883. NUMBER 28.

AN ALPHABETICAL RHYME.

There is a farmer who is Y's
Enough to take his E's,
And study Nature with his I's
And think of what he C's.

He hears the chatter of the J's
As they each other T's,
And Z's that when a tree D K's
It makes a home for B's.

A pair of oxen he will U's
With many haws and G's,
And their mistakes he will X Q's
While plowing for his P's.

In raising crops, he all X L's,
And therefore little O's,
And when he hoes his soil by spells
He also soils his hose.

—Whitehall Times.

HOW SHE FOUND HIM.

It was on the last stage of the long and tedious ride from Fort Craig to Santa Fe. We had taken up the last relay of frisky mustangs, said good-night to the last sleepy hostler, and were dashing away into the darkness with the noses of the leaders pointed square toward the City of the Holy Faith. We had been under way an hour before my attention was attracted toward the driver. He might have been fifteen and he may have been seventy-five. He was cocked and primed with all the slang of the frontier, which he interlarded with bits of lingo from the mines, quaint quotations from the familiar poets and humorists, and when at a loss for a word or so to point a sentence slung in a Latin or Spanish phrase with an inimitable pronunciation and a graceful wave of, the hand that signified his utter disgust with a mother tongue that was so paltry of fitting words in an emergency.

"Now, let me tell you," he would remark, close on the heels of some long and astonishing yarn; "now let me tell you what occurred to me one night on the Yellowstone," or the Brazos, or the South Fork of the Canadian, or the Sea of Galilee, or other equally distant locality, and off he would gallop at a breakneck pace, keeping time with the scampering team in front of us. It was in the midst of this medley of astounding adventures by field and flood that he spun the quaint little yarn that is the excuse for these paragraphs.

"One night out from Los Animas," he began after carefully lighting a proffered cigar, and shying the burning match at the off-wheeler, "a beautiful moonlight night, I remember, one of those nights, you know, Cap, when the prairies seem all aglow with mellowness, I found when I had mounted the box and unfastened the lines from the handle of the brake, the strangest outside passenger in my experience. It was a woman—that is, I thought her a woman when she drew herself up with dignity as I bade her a hearty 'good evening,' and turned up her little nose at the idea of being accosted so familarly by a driver, but when I said something about the night being filled with music, and the cares that infest the day, etcetra, etcetra, etcetra—you savez—she turned a clear-cut, thorough-bred profile toward me and opened a pair of the biggest, blackest eyes I ever looked into with a most wondering expression. It was only a moment, however, for then she opened her lips to show two rows of the smallest, whitest teeth as she sent out a peal of childish laughter that rippled and rang all over the prairie.

"She had come from Boston, she told me, and was bound for Tucson, where she expected to meet a friend, 'the dearest friend in the world,' she intimated, with a proud little gesture, 'and he loves me to distraction. I am not alone, you know. Max is with me, and with him I wouldn't be afraid of anything. Would I Max?' Now who the dickens is Max I wondered, and looked up and down and all around, expecting to see some fellow, you know, that I hadn't noticed before. And just then I felt a cold, wet something come against my cheek that felt for all the world like the barrel of a derringer, and turned around suddenly to see the biggest, blackest Newfoundland stretched out on the roof behind me.

"'And now let me tell you about Jack. You see Jack and I always loved each other. He was awfully mischievous, and when he grew up and we were married he was just as wild as ever. He got into some foolish scrape, and the people around there were all so stupid and intolerant that he could never have any peace of his life, and one day the sheriff came around to see Jack about something, and Jack didn't care to have any words with him, and so he went away. Don't you know I hadn't the slightest idea where he had gone for the longest time. But one day I got a letter from Chicago, and it was from Jack, and he had been having such a hard time, poor fellow, and he said if he only had some money he could go to the mines and dig lots of gold, and then come home, and we would be as happy as two bugs in a rug. Now, wasn't that nice of Jack? Well, so as I had been saving up ever since he went away. I just sent him the money, and then I didn't hear from him again until about a week ago. Then a letter came from Arizona, and it was from Jack, and he had been having more trouble, and unless he could have more money within two weeks they would put him in jail. I can't understand why every one is so down on Jack. So you see I drew all my money from the bank, and as I was afraid the mail might miscarry, I just thought it would be safer to bring it myself. And so here I am, and—and that's all. But won't he be glad to see me, the dear old darling, and won't it be splendid when I get there to face those wretches who are so down on him, and pay them their old, nasty money, and say: "There, you old rascals, I'm a little woman, as you can see, but I am Jack Seymour's wife." Oh, won't it be nice, driver?'

"'Great Heavens!' I thought. 'Jack Seymour! the roughest desperado in the Southwest and the biggest rascal unhung!' Jack Seymour's wife! She had better have been the wife of the old Nick himself. And then I happened to think that sure enough the Sheriff had taken him a few weeks before, and that if Judge Lynch didn't try him in the meantime he would certainly swing by due process of law, and all the wives in the world wouldn't save him. I am afraid my face, even in the moonlight, must have shown something of my horror at the thought, for she peered curiously into it, and grasped my arm with a little clutch as she said: 'Do you know Jack, driver? Maybe you have seen him. He is tall and fair, and his hair is ever so light, and curls all over his head in the cunningest little tight ringlets.' Oh, yes, I groaned to myself, not the least doubt in the world but your man and mine are one and the same infernal scoundrel. But to her I said something altogether different, as you may imagine, and I did my best to keep up the conversation, and listened to all her queer little plans and confidences, and am afraid I forgot all about the truth in listening to that merry little voice as it chatted all night long to plumb daylight.

"A half hour after sunrise we drove into the little ranch where we were to change horses and breakfast. I noticed a crowd around the relay-house long before we reached it; say a dozen men armed to the teeth, and horses all saddled, as though a party had been staying there over night and were about to start on. But you can imagine how the blood curdled in my veins when, as we drew up in front of the piazza, two men with drawn revolvers came out of the door, and between them was a tall, fair man, with blue eyes and curling hair, and wearing the most dare-devil expression I ever witnessed. It was the Sheriff's pose taking a prisoner to Santa Fe. And just at that moment the Newfoundland made one spring from the roof of the coach to the piaza, and a ringing voice shouted: 'Why, that is my Jack!' and my little woman made one flying leap to the ground, with a glad-like cry that I shall never forget to my dying day, and then I saw Seymour struggling with his guards, heard muffled oaths, saw him wrench a revolver from the belt of one of them. 'Stand off!' he shouted. 'Stand off, men, or I will have some one's heart's blood! Stand off, I say!' Then I saw the burly Sheriff advance toward him, when, quick as a flash, Seymour leveled and fired square at his head. But the Sheriff had dodged, and as my little woman had been trying all the time to reach his side the cruel bullet struck her full in the breast, and she fell forward just as Seymour sprang and caught her in his arms. Then we all gathered around them as she lay there with her little white arms around his neck, talking to him in her sweet little voice, while the anguish on Seymour's face was terrible to witness. How he cursed and imprecated his captors and petted and soothed the dying woman, and swore by all the heavens that he would make mankind pay dearly for that moment. And she—the dear little angel—oh, shall I ever forget it?—she talked of nothing but Jack. 'Never mind, my darling,' she whispered, 'it was not your fault; you couldn't help it, you see, and I am so sorry that you are taking it so hard, Jack. Never mind, sweetheart, it will soon be over. And, Jack,'—here she pulled his head down to hers and whispered with her last breath—'after I am gone look in my little satchel and you will find the money. It was to be all yours, any way, you know; and I am so glad I reached you in time,' and the pure, faithful little heart had ceased to beat. I could stand it no longer, Cap, and with tears streaming from my eyes, I sprang back on the box, and drove my team the next twenty miles at a dead gallop. What became of Seymour? Oh! he swung just the same. He had a score of murders against him, you know, besides this, the last and worst of all. And speaking of murders, let me tell you of something that happened to me in Utah in '59." But though my driver galloped away all night with his everlasting adventures, I heard nothing but the last words of Seymour's little wife, and for the next week I lived over in memory the thrilling story of how she met him.

* * * * *

A month later, while lunching at Menger's in San Antonio, with General Armstrong, the then efficient chief of all the stage lines north of the Brazos, I happened to think of my quandom friend, the driver.

"A queer character, General," I remarked, "that driver of yours at Santa Fe. Johnson I think is his name, Ben Johnson. A most remarkable fellow. Seemed to have picked up a deal of information for a man of his sphere. Uses good language you know; has many original ideas; rude sort of eloquence, pathos, and all that sort of thing, you know. And besides, he is a most wonderful raconteur.

"Yes," said the General, musingly, "and the biggest liar this side of the Rocky Mountains. If Johnson ever told you anything for a fact, you can bet ten dollars to a cent that it isn't so. Why, that unprincipled scamp lays awake nights studying out yarns to beguile travelers on the box. Do you know, Carl, he once told me a cold-blooded fiction about a woman and a dog that—"

"Pass the wine, General," I faltered; "never mind the woman and the dog; I dare say I have heard it before. What time do we leave for Concho?—Washington Capital.

—The Children's Society of Philadelphia is about to attempt to have enforced an old State law which forbids the employment, in factories, of children less than thirteen years of age, and which imposes a penalty for working children, between thirteen and sixteen years old, more than nine callendar months of the year. The same law provides that children more than thirteen and less than sixteen years old shall attend school for three consecutive months each year. The penalties prescribed are not light ones.

—At a recent examination for clerical positions in the Treasury Department at Washington, one of the applicants, in replying to the inquiry of how far the sun was from the earth, answered: "The sun is not so far away that I can not see to do my work if I am given the place I want."

—It is estimated that there are 70,000 dead laws on the statute books of New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Ohio, but the only way for a stranger to find out the live ones is to swing his hat on some street corner and yell out that he is from the headwaters of Fighting Creek.—Detroit Free Press.

PITH AND POINT.

—Tight trousers are going out of fashion. They always did have a slim chance, and latterly the wearers' legs have had to combine for support.

—He—Good-by, Miss Smith, I'm sorry I have to leave so soon. She—I'm very sorry, too; but still, "parting is such sweet sorrow."—Harvard Lampoon.

—The great question of the day at present is, how to wear a high all-round collar and still be able to sneeze hard without cutting your throat.—Puck.

—A cynical old bachelor thinks that women, as a class, should be called "maple sugar," because it is almost impossible to tell their age.—N. Y. Advertiser.

—Be respectful to every one, no matter what his or her position may be in the world. Never, for instance, ask your washerwoman where she "hangs out."—Earville Graphic.

—Mrs. Sam Millidge, an Austin lady, was busy trying to make a pincushion of sawdust when the colored cook came to ask what she should cook for dinner. "Go away, and don't bother me now. My head is full of sawdust now, and I can't think of anything else."—Texas Siftings.

—A young lady was recently asked by her gallant what she considered the height of impudence. Looking archly at him, she said: "Spark a girl for three solid hours and never offer to kiss her." It is needless to add that he is not so impudent now.

—"Woman's rights!" exclaimed a Philadelphia man when the subject was broached. "What more rights do they want? My wife bosses me; our daughters boss us both, and the servant girl bosses the whole family. It's time the men were allowed some rights."

—A Pittsburgh girl who had refused a good-looking telegraph repair man three times within six months gave as a reason that he was too much of a wanderer. That he roamed from pole to pole, from one climb to another, and if he did come home he'd be insulate that the neighbors would be sure to talk.

—The theory that photographs can not be taken at night was upset the other day when a thief was marched up to the bar in a justice's court-room. Judge—"What is the charge?" Officer—"Stealing." Judge—"Stealing what?" Officer—"Stealing photographs." Judge—"When did he steal them?" Officer—"Last night, your Honor." Judge—"I will discharge the prisoner, for I know that thousands of dollars have been wasted in the attempt to discover a process whereby pictures could be taken at night. The prisoner may go."—Carl Pretzel's Weekly.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Large amounts of peanuts will be planted in Tennessee this year.

—A gentleman of Enterprise, Fla., has spread muslin under many of his orange trees, to collect the orange blossoms when they fall. He will make perfumery out of them.

—San Francisco claims to make more and better chocolate than any other place in the world. The ingredients are sugar from the Sandwich Islands, cocoa from Ecuador, and vanilla raised in California.

—Hearths are decorated with tiles in imitation of polished woods. Deep browns, reds and black represent maples, mahogany, cherry and walnut, the high glaze of the tile giving the exact effect of the polish of natural wood.

—A new idea is a contrivance for holding open the pages of a book which obstinately refuses to lie flat on a table, or to keep quiet on a music desk. It is made of wire twisted into a shape that resembles the confused snarl of a crab's locomotive machinery.

—The Earl of Ashburton has a collection of manuscripts which he values at $800,000. If he were to send them to a magazine editor he would probably discover to his dismay that they were not worth $20. Many an author who has valued his manuscripts at $100 has disposed of them at one cent a pound, after they had been "respectfully declined."—Norristown Herald.

—The staining of bricks red is effected by melting one ounce of glue in a gallon of water, then adding a piece of alum as large as an egg, one-hall pound of Venetian red, and one pound of Spanish brown; redness or darkness is increased by using more red or brown. For coloring black, heat the bricks and dip in fluid asphaltum, or in a hot mixture of linseed oil and asphalt.—Chicago Journal.

—According to La Libertad, of Mexico, Don Nicolas Zunigay Miranda of that city has invented an apparatus that it is claimed will give notice, several days in advance of the coming of an earthquake. Its indications, Senor Zuniga affirms, are so accurate that it will mark not only the day, but even the exact hour when the disturbance is to occur, and show what the degree of intensity of subterranean commotion will be.

—An enormous quantity of water passes through the roots of plants. An English experimenter has ascertained that for every pound of mineral matter assimilated by a plant, an average of 2,000 pounds of water is absorbed. At the French Agricultural Observatory of Montsouris it was found that in rich soil, 727 pounds of water passed through the roots of wheat plants for every pound of grain produced; while in a very poor soil, 2,693 pounds passed through the wheat roots for each pound of grain.

—A Mr. Brooks, who lives about a mile north of Somerset, Pa., dug a well on his farm last fall, but the water had such an odor that he could not use it. Upon examination of the well a few days since he found it contained about ten feet of petroleum. In the same neighborhood petroleum is running in a small stream from a spring. About two years ago a Pennsylvania oil man examined the land in that section, and wanted to lease the farms for boring and inspection, but a number of farmers refused to lease their lands, and the matter was soon dropped, but now the oil excitement is on the rise.—Chicago Times.

Religious.

DON'T FORGET TO PRAY.

"It's hard to have you leave us, John,
They all are gone but you;
We're getting old and feeble, and
Our journey'll soon be through,
But since it is God's pleasure, John,
To guide you on your way,
Accept, my boy, this precious Book,
And don't forget to pray.

"This Book has been a treasure, John,
To father and to me;
As it has been to millions, and
To millions more will be.
In sickness, pain and sorrow, John,
'Twill shed a cheering ray;
Then let it be your constant guide,
And don't forget to pray.

"This world is full of wickedness,
Of luring snares, and sin;
And thousands, madly pressing on,
Are daily falling in.
But if you would escape them, John,
And keep the narrow way,
Oh, make God's Word your counselor,
And don't forget to pray.

"With yearning hearts we'll pray, dear John,
For your eternal weal,
As round the family altar we
At morn and evening kneel.
In spirit you may join us, John,
Though many miles away,
If in your heart this Word you hide,
And don't forget to pray.

"Good-bye! God bless and keep you, John!
Shall be our daily prayer;
And if we meet no more below,
God grant we may up there.
And we have this assurance, John,
To cheer us, that we may,
If we the Bible make our guide,
And don't forget to pray."

—J. W. Childs, in N. Y. Observer.

SOWING AND REAPING.

The Inter Ocean publishes the following synopsis of a recent sermon by Rev. J. H. Barrows, of Chicago:

"Be not deceived. God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, and he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."—Gal. vi., 7-8.

Since that third epoch in creation, when God made the fruit tree yielding fruit after its kind, the great law of sowing and reaping that which has been sowed has continued, and the Scriptures and human experience teach us that this is the material side of an universal law, as true in life and character as in the garden, the orchard and the corn-field. He who sows evil and hopes to reap good is mocking at God. But God cannot successfully be treated with contempt. Chance does not rule in the system of things under which we live. We are under a government of law and order. The farmer who plants corn in May will not gather sugar-cane from that seed in September. Nature is not a freakish mistress, but a wise and orderly mother. The reign of law, or, to speak more actually, the reign of God by law, is universal.

Our homes, and schools, and stores, and streets contain many who seem to imagine that they can sow idleness and dissipation and yet reap the substantial fruits of character and the enduring rewards of life. Human experience and the word of God do not encourage men to believe this doctrine. The late President Chadbourne, of Williams College, said of General Garfield that he remembered him as the student who never "flunked," and he recalled the story of Wellington, the hero of Waterloo, who affirmed that that victory was won on the Eton play-ground. Lord Macauley said that, as a rule, the men who stand first in the English universities have been the men pre-eminent in the world of active life. That Liverpool lad who led his class in Eton and took the double-first degree in Oxford is the Prime Minister of England today and has long been

"The pillar of a people's hope,
The center of the world's desire."

The Commercial Club of this city has in its membership sixty of the leading business men of Chicago, representing firms that employ 48,000 persons. A member of this club told me that he had seen the great majority of these sixty men when they came to Chicago with scarcely a dollar in their pockets. Most of them are of New England Puritan stock—men who have no sympathy with the notion that dissoluteness, indolence and short-sighted extravagance in youth are to be the seeds of honor and prosperity in middle life.

Most of these men and most of Chicago's most prosperous citizens to-day have no sympathy with loose principles, and I have the conviction that the great majority of the sixty-four millionaires whose names were published the first of this year have regard to the Lord's word, and will be found listening to it on the Lord's day.

Young men are often disposed to act on the theory that the beginnings of evil are harmless: that it will not be dangerous for them just to sip a little draught of forbidden pleasure. O what multitudes are snared by a prurient curiosity! They want to "see life" in the great city, which means dabbling in corruption, poisoning the mind with impure sights and memories. A man can not take fire into his bosom and not be burned. The hospitals are filled with loathsome wretches who only began by indulging in impure desires. The vast army of drunkards all came from the immense ranks of the moderate drinkers. The insane asylums are filled with men who said: "One glass can never harm me." "There is no danger," many a young man says, "in occasionally visiting the saloons." The prisons are crowded with men who began with little thefts and dishonesties. God is not mocked.

We see men about us in political life who had by nature noble traits, generous enthusiasms, but who in the presence of temptation let down the bars of moral honor just a little, and are to-day moral bankrupts, the reproach of our city. If we can get young men to understand that the habits of mind and life which hold to-day are the forces which are to make the blessedness or ruin of twenty years from now, we give them the best part of their education. God's laws are not to be safely broken, and you should so respect the Divine earnestness and the Divine truthfulness as to live for the future, fearing, among other things, to transgress the laws of physical health by late hours, little sleep, intemperate eating, vicious pleasures, the indulgence of harmful luxuries, and a hundred other ways in which young people are storing up for middle life, if they ever reach it, the seeds of weakness, disease and death. Fearing God means that you are to understand that God's laws are not to be altered for the benefit of your sins, and that next year will not make up for the deficiencies and transgressions of to-day.

Few habits formed in childhood and youth are equally valuable with the habit of reading good books. It is the beginning of that culture which Matthew Arnold defines as knowing the best that has been thought and written. It is a mental employment which saves the mind from dissipation and the life from ennui, and often from vice. Carlyle says that his university course was chiefly valuable to him in that it taught him to read, to read wisely, with a disciplined mind, in several languages. And there is no surer sign of a bad education than an indisposition to become acquainted with some part of the world's intellectual treasure house. And there is nothing more perilous to young men than the habit of filling the mind with the scandal and crime which certain representatives of the industrious press scrape together from the four quarters of the globe.

There is no question of greater moment to the American people to-day than that of the reading which is put into the hands of the young. Let me furnish the books which make up the mental life of the rising generation and I will shape the national future. There is no excuse for not owning and reading good books to-day. They can be had at one-fifth their former price. No greater service can be rendered to the public and the home than to quicken a desire to possess and master some portion of the best literature. Whatever is printed on the mind of man is an autograph for eternity. The enduring results of our thoughts, habits, choices are found in our own souls. No man ever did a mean or indulged an impure meditation without feeling the effect of it in himself. We all see the results of physical disease in the persons of the sufferers. We can not look into the human soul as easily as into the human face.

But God does. He sees the effect of every sin in clear outline and dark coloring. There sinful pride, hardening into utter selfishness, has left its impression. There vanity and insincerity have defaced what was originally beautiful. There lust and anger have burned their black foot-marks into the white innocency of the soul; and this is the harvest of the flesh—moral deterioration, or, as the Scriptures call it, corruption, which in the New Testament is synonomous with death. A thing spoiled is a thing dead. A human soul dies when it is lost to virtue. There is many a man, increased in goods, fat and prosperous, a lord of creation, envied of fools, but who, having sown to the flesh, has reaped moral death, whose heart is pollution and whose touch is defilement. "My soul enter not thou into the secret of that man!"

Young men, I entreat you not to regard this world or the next as a grand lottery in which one is just as likely to draw prizes as another. Be not deceived. There is a wise and holy law-giver at work in human life, and whatsoever you sow, that very thing, and nothing else, you shall also reap. And the same principle which should discourage men from sowing to the flesh should encourage them to sow to the spirit. Every virtuous act confirms the habit of virtue. Every loving deed strengthens the capacity of love. Begin early in sowing to the spirit Let the good seed fall into the good ground of a heart not hardened by long years of misdoing. Welcome the dews of God's grace, and the harvest of your life shall not be the chaff which the wind driveth away, but the golden sheaves which, with great joy, shall be gathered into the storehouse of the Lord.

Gems of Thought.

—Bear your own misfortunes with half the resignation you bear other people's, and you will be happy all the time. It is so easy to tell other people how to be heroic, and so difficult to be courageous ourselves.—Golden Rule.

—He that will not permit his wealth to do any good to others while he is alive, prevents it from doing any good to himself when he is dead; and by an egotism that is suicidal and has a double edge, cuts himself off from the truest pleasure and the highest happiness hereafter.—Colton.

—William E. Dodge, in a letter written not long before his death, detailing to a friend some reminiscences of his eventful life, said: "The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Road was formed in my office in 1851, by my inviting some one hundred gentlemen to consider the project. My late father-in-law, Anson G. Phelps, made the first subscription and myself the second. I have been a director ever since. It has grown into vast proportion, but has been a strictly Sabbath-keeping road and greatly prosperous. I was pleased some years ago last summer, when in the office, to see a telegram reply just made by the President, Mr. Sloan, to a letter from a Methodist minister, asking that trains might be run on Sunday to a camp meeting some fifteen miles from Scranton. The reply was short, but to the point: "Our trains don't run on Sundays."

—Feeling is no true test of one's religious state; nor is it a safe guide in duty. One is not always most profited by church services, or by Bible reading, or by prayer, or by alms-giving, or by duty-doing of any sort, when he feels most in the mood of that particular service. He may, indeed, gain most when his duty-doing is most of an effort to him. "God," it is true, "loveth a cheerful giver;" but if a man can not give cheerfully, he had better give reluctantly than not give at all. And there is no way by which one is more likely to grow into a spirit of cheerful giving than by giving in spite of his feeling of reluctance to give. So of Bible reading, and of private devotions, and of public worship. One ought to feel it a privilege to have a share in these things; but the less he feels in this way, the larger is his need of taking a part in them in spite of his lack of right feeling. As Archbishop Trench has phrased it:

"When prayer delights thee least, then learn to say:
Soul, now is greatest need that thou shouldst pray."

—S. S. Times.

Our Young Folks.

TOM'S SCHOOL-BOOKS.

One night, not long since, as I went to the closet,
A garment of Tom's in its place to deposit,
I heard such a queer noise upon one of the shelves,
Where his school-books all stood in a row by themselves,
That I paused at the door, as in I was walking,
And found, to my wonder, the school-books were talking.
Said one, with a sigh: "I am sure you remember
How nicely I looked a year since in September;
But now," it shrieked out, in the wildest of rages,
As it flung back its cover, "just look at my pages!
And how he could do it is really a mystery,
Maltreating like this a 'United States History.'"
Then a book by her side bowed low, as to please her,
And said: "I can sympathize; I am Tom's 'Cæsar.'
I'm nearly worn out, and he never translates me
Without saying roundly he 'perfectly hates me,'
And wishes that 'Cæsar had saved him the trouble
By writing in English.' I'm nearly bent double
By the tortures he gives me, the thumpings, the thwacks,
And by being slapped down upon little boys' backs.
I could not discern the year through one good omen,
And now I despair," said the noble old Roman.
Then said the Arithmetic, speaking quite grim:
"My interest isn't of interest to him.
He pays no regard to my Weights and my Measures,
My Cubes and Square-roots, and the rest of my treasures.
And myself and my comrade in arms, this good Slate,
If we choose, we, too, could a sad story relate."
Then the Reader, the Grammar, and all, testified
In the very same way. 'Twas a blow to my pride,
For Tom is my boy; but as soon as 'twas morning
I woke him, and told him this tale for a warning,
And he promised at once, when he heard of their pain,
That he never would treat them so rudely again.

—Golden Days.

BRAVE BETH.

"I wish that I lived in a little room at the top of ever so many flights of rickety stairs, and we didn't have anything to eat in the house, nor any fire, and no bed, only a heap of straw and rags in the corner, and I had a little brother who was very sick, and we didn't have but one old cloak between us," said little Nellie, as she closed the book which she had been intently reading.

"Why, petsie, that is rather a strange ideal of perfect happiness. What could have put such a wish as that into your head?"

"Because, auntie, then perhaps I could become a heroine. All the heroines of the stories are poor girls. There isn't much chance for little girls to do anything brave who have all they want, and good, kind mammas to keep their hair combed, and fix pretty dresses with nice little ruffles and ribbons."

"Don't you know, pet, that a great many years ago, a very wise man said: 'He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city?' So every time you keep back an untrue, or a cross, impatient word, you become a little heroine; and every time you sacrifice your own pleasure, ease or convenience for the sake of others, you have fought a great battle, and become a mighty conqueror over a strong enemy. But perhaps the reason so many little heroes and heroines of stories are poor, friendless children, is because it is so remarkable that without training and advantages they should exhibit such nobility of character. Let me tell you about a little girl who did not belong to this class, who was one of the grandest little heroines that I ever knew. Little Beth lived in a beautiful home on the bank of a river, and she had all the nice clothes, and books, and play-things that she wanted, and a kind father and mother who loved her dearly. Sometimes she thought that she was the happiest child in the world, except her little brother Rob, baby Rob, whom everybody loved on account of his sunny temper, cunning ways and sweet, lisping baby talk.

"When Rob was two years old, one summer afternoon, Beth came running home from school and went in search of him for their usual romp. Mamma was busy and said he was not with her, but had gone out into the garden a little while ago. So Beth went out into the garden, where she found his little wagon and his hat lying out under a tree, but she could see nothing of Rob. Then she ran down the garden walk, calling 'Rob! Rob! where are you baby Rob?' But no sweet little voice answered her. When she reached the farther end of the walk, she found that the gate which was always kept fastened had been carelessly left open. Passing through, her heart stood still at the sight before her. A little back of the house ran the railroad, with a long, high bridge over the river. Some planks had been laid along the middle of the bridge for the convenience of persons crossing on foot, and away out on this narrow walk, half way across the bridge, was baby Rob. In one hand he carried a little basket, and in the other a little stick which he was using for a cane. There he was trudging along, as unconscious of danger as if he had been walking across the nursery floor. It was no wonder that Beth's heart stood still, for that first glance had also shown her a train coming up the track—coming it seemed to her faster than train ever came before. And it was so near.

"Beth gave one scream, hoping that her mother might hear it, and then started down the track. It seemed as if her feet had wings. She knew that she had never run so fast before; but run as fast as she could, the train ran faster. She reaches the bridge and darts along the narrow walk. She knows that she is putting her own life in danger, but she does not hesitate; she does not even think that she is performing a heroic act, but only that her darling little brother is in great peril, and that she must save him if she can. Even baby Rob at last seems aware of his danger, as he notices the panting monster rushing down upon him. He turns and begins to run as fast as he can, and seeing Beth coming he reaches out his little arms to her and cries: 'Take Rob, Beth! Rob's 'fraid!' And Beth clasps him in her arms, and feels his soft little arms around her neck; but she also feels the bridge tremble beneath her. The engine has reached it. She knows that she can not reach the other end of the bridge with her burden; yet, even now, she might escape had she nothing to carry. But the thought of saving herself and leaving poor, helpless little Rob there to be crushed to death never entered her mind.

"She can almost feel the hot breath of the merciless giant. Think quick, little Beth, is there no way of escape? One way seems possible to her; she will try it. And running to the end of one of the ties, she loosens the little arms that cling around her neck, and, kissing the soft baby cheek, she says 'Good-bye, Rob!' and drops the little burden in the stream below. She hopes that some one will come and save him before he drowns. And now she will make a brave effort for her own life, so clasping her hands over one of the ties, she drops down with her body hanging over the stream. If she can only hang on this way till the train has passed she may yet be saved. But the sharp edges cut her wrists, and the tie trembles under the weight of the cars, and with the roaring in her ears, she grows faint and dizzy, and loosens her hold and drops into the water beneath.

"The engineer had at last seen the brave act of the little girl, and, as quick as possible, he stopped his train and went back to rescue the children. One man, throwing off his coat, swam in and easily brought baby Rob to shore, but it was some time before Beth's body was borne by strong arms to her father's house. For a long time loving ones worked over their unconscious forms to win them back to life. At length baby Rob opened his eyes, and, trying to lift up his weak little arms, cried: 'Take Rob, Beth! Rob's 'fraid.' And for weeks this cry rang in the mother's ears as she nursed the little sufferer through the delirium of fever. But Rob called in vain, for the loving arms which would so gladly [illegible] him were motionless forever. Little Beth was dead. They folded the poor bruised hands over the little brave heart, and covered them with flowers; and when they laid her under the maple in the quiet grave-yard, they wrote on her headstone: 'Our Beth. Aged ten.' 'Greater love hath no man than this, that one should lay down her life for her friends.'"—Christian at Work.

The Mail-Catcher.

When I saw the express train steaming over the track at the rate of fifty miles an hour, it would have been very hard for me to believe it had caught up and taken due possession of the mail-bag without even "slowing up," had I not long since been convinced that it was neither safe nor sensible to be incredulous with regard to the advances of science. It seemed impossible, but likewise have many other things fully proved, so I donned my hat and walked over to the railroad station.

"Do you mean to say," I asked the station-master, "that my letter deposited in the post-office half an hour ago, has gone in that train?"

"I do," replied the station-master, smilingly but firmly.

"Then please show me the lamp of Aladdin."

"We do not resort to magic," returned Mr. Oldham. "I am the slave of the ring myself, and merely carry the mail-bag to the post you see yonder beside those steps. After the mail-bag," he continued obligingly, "is locked, I strap it around the center, so that it resembles an hour-glass. Ascending the steps, I pull that hinged beam which now lies parallel with the upper part of the post over the top of the post, so as to be at right angles with the track. On the movable iron arm attached to it I hang the reversed bag by the heavy iron ring secured to the bottom of the bag. I then adjust the lower arm to meet the iron ring fastened to the real top of the bag. The bag will now, you understand, be parallel with the train. In order to keep it stretched 'taut,' I tie it to the lower arm by a slender cord which is snapped when the bag is caught; and as it is whirled away, presto, the lower arm falls back beside the post, and the hinged beam returns to the first position.

Thanking Mr. Oldham for his explanation, I resolved to be on the spot the next time the express was due, see the mail caught up, and then tell my young friends all about it. I carried my resolution into effect as far as being present was concerned. The train came, whisked by me, and took the mail-bag with it, but how? I rubbed my eyes in vain. The motion had been so instantaneous that I failed to gain an idea which I could reproduce. I therefore applied to the postal agent, requesting the privilege of a better insight into the working of this wonderful invention for saving time. Mr. Applegit kindly acceded to my request, so at the distance of nine miles from the point where my investigation began, I stood on the platform of a station where the express regularly condescends to make a "stop." My attention was called to two iron rods and a heavy iron lever folded closely back against the outside of the postal car. The gentleman within pulled and firmly held down the lever, causing the "elbow" rod, which is tapering and hooked, to immediately project outward. This rod was so exactly adjusted to the mail-bag waiting for it on a post four miles away, and to the bags on all the other posts before the train should make another "stop" and receive its mail from human hands, that it caught them by the middle and held them securely until Mr. Applegit removed them into the postal-car.

That was all! The contrivance is very simple, and the wonder lies in the conception that such a thing could be done while a train is moving at full speed. The thought originated, I am informed, in the busy brain of a lad of fourteen years.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Rev. Joseph Cook says that, under the sacredness of the betrothal tie, a Hindoo woman is lower than a slave if her spouse dies. It is different in this country. Here in this country she is lower than a slave as long as her spouse lives.

—The income the Pope could have from the Italian Government, if he choose to take the money, is $650,000.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. MAY 9. 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
"	½ "	40
"	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

MARION CITY, Ohio, was almost completely destroyed by fire on the fourth instant.

THE DesMoines, Iowa, saloons have closed rather than pay the $1,000 license levied by the city council.

CINCINNATI'S dramatic festival was a grand success in every particular, and they are talking of having another next year.

NEW ORLEANS has been selected as the place for the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition.

THE mass meeting held Monday, ratified the action of the meeting held on Saturday, and there can now be no question made as to the elligibility of the delegates when they go into the state convention on the 16th inst.

AN interview, says the Courier-Journal, with a gentleman who has traveled over a great portion of the state in the last few weeks reports a great change for the better in the small grain crops.

THE Cabinet has decided not to surrender Tynan, Walsh and Sheridan, unless England demands their surrender distinctly on the grounds that they have been guilty of murder or a conspiracy to murder, and disclaim that the offense was a political offense.

THE Court of Appeals has decided to consider Craft's case on the 15th inst., and if the decision of the lower court is affirmed, nothing further, unless it be a commutation of sentence from Governor Blackburn, will prevent the hanging, which is fixed for May 25th.

H. CLAY WHITE, a gentleman who has been over the state a great deal, says that the crowd of men that assembles in Burlington on County Court days, surpasses, in appearance, any other crowd that meets at any county seat in the state, except Paris, Bourbon county.

UPON investigation we learn that the Boone delegation is a unit for A. B. Smith for Lieutenant-Governor, while they are divided on the candidates for Register of the Land Office and Superintendent of Public Instruction. Corbett and Smith seem to be the leading candidates for the last two named offices.

PHIL B. THOMPSON, who killed Walter H. Davis, at Harrodsburg Junction, last week, has been indicted for willful murder, and the case was to have been called yesterday, at which time a date for the trial was to be fixed. Several of the ablest criminal lawyers of the state have volunteered their services on behalf of the defense. This will be one of the most noted trials in the history of the state.

An Estimate of the Wheat Crop.

Milwaukee, May 1—Tallmadge, the grain statistician, furnishes the following estimates of the probable wheat crop of 1883: Maine, 500,000 bushels; New Hampshire, 100,000; Vermont, 400,000; Massachusetts, 40,000; Connecticut, 60,000; New York, 12,000,000; New Jersey, 2,000,000; Pennsylvania, 20,000,000; Deleware, 1,500,000; Maryland, 8,000,000; Virginia, 8,000,000; North Carolina, 5,000,000; South Carolina, 2,000,000; Georgia, 3,000,000; Alabama, 2,000,000; Texas, 4,000,000; Arkansas, 2,000,000; Tennessee, 8,000,000; West Virginia, 4,000,000, Kentucky, 9,000,000; Ohio, 26,000,000; Michigan, 24,000,000; Indiana, 30,000,000: Illinois, 35,000,000; Wisconsin, 16,000,000; Minnesota, 32,000,000; Iowa, 22,000,000; Missouri, 23,000,000; Kansas, 23,000,000; Nebraska, 16,000,000; California, 26,000,000; Oregon, 18,000,000; Colorado, 2,000,000; the Territories, 20,000,000 bushels. Total, 275,700,000 bushels.

Democratic Primary.

At a meeting held in the court-house in Burlington, at 1 p. m., Saturday, May 5th, 1883, for the purpose of selecting and instructing delegates to the state convention which meets in Louisville on the 16th inst., B. K. Sleet was chosen chairman, and F. Riddell, secretary.

The object of the meeting was explained by the chairman, and on motion and second, L. C. Norman, Solon Early and W. L. Riddell were appointed a committee to select and report to the meeting the names of nine delegates to represent the county in the state convention.

The committee reported the following delegates and alternates, and the report was adopted:

Burlington—Dr. J. G. Furnish delegate and Hon. F. Riddell alternate.

Petersburg—J. Frank Grant delegate, Hon. G. W. Terrill alternate.

Bellevue and Carlton—Hon. J. A. Wilson delegate, Albert Corbin alternate.

Big Bone and Beaver—Lysander Howlet delegate, Dr. Samuel Adams alternate.

Verona—Dr. R. L. Finnell delegate, J. T. Roberts alternate.

Walton—Hon. Reuben Conner delegate, Dr. W. M. Laurey alternate.

Union—L. C. Norman delegate, R. L. Willis alternate.

Florence—Ben Stephens delegate, Wood Carpenter alternate.

Taylorport and Bullittsville—Hon. J. H. Walton delegate, Dr. J. C. Terrill alternate.

On motion of L. C. Norman the delegates were instructed to cast the vote of the county in the state convention for Hon. Thomas L. Jones for Governor, Fayett Hewitt for Auditor, P. W. Hardin for Attorney-General and J. W. Tate for Treasurer.

J. D. Gaines moved that the delegates be instructed to cast the vote of the county for A. B. Smith for Lieutenant-Governor. On motion of L. C. Norman the motion to instruct for Smith was laid on the table.

On motion of G. W. Terrill all democrats of this county, who attend the state convention were appointed delegates.

The meeting then adjourned.

B. K. SLEET, Chairman,
F. RIDDELL, Secretary.

The democrats of Boone county, in obedience to the call of the County Executive Committee, assembled at the court-house in Burlington, at 1 p. m., May 7, 1881. The meeting was called to order by Dr. J. G. Furnish, chairman of the committee, who stated the object of the meeting.

M. C. Norman was elected chairman of the meeting and F. Riddell, secretary.

On motion the minutes of the meeting held Saturday, the 5th inst., were read.

Dr. J. G. Furnish then offered the following resolution.

Resolved, 1. That this meeting does now ratify the action of the meeting of Saturday the 5th inst.

2. Believing it to be the voice of a large majority of the Democrats of this county, that the delegates selected by the meeting of Saturday should be instructed to cast the vote of this county, in the Louisville convention, for A. B. Smith for Lieutenant-Governor so long as his name is before the convention, and to use all honorable means to secure his nomination, and the delegates are now so instructed.

The first resolution was adopted, and F. Riddell moved to amend the second by inserting after the words "A. B. Smith for Lieutenant-Governor," the names of Z. F. Smith for Superintendent of Public Instruction and Thomas Corbett for Register of the Land Office. Elijah Parker moved to amend the amendment by inserting the name of J. D. Pickett in place of Z. F. Smith, which was refused, and on motion the meeting adjourned. M. C. NORMAN, Ch'm'n.

F. RIDDELL, Sect'y.

A CALL ON N. S. WALTON.

BURLINGTON, KY., May 7, 1883—The undersigned citizens and democratic voters of Boone county, reposing great confidence in the honesty and ability of our fellowcitizen, Nathan S. Walton, hereby request him to become a candidate to represent them in the Lower House of the next General Assembly:

J C Hankins, Benj. Rice, L B Terrill, Lewis Conner, J E Terrill, E E Uitz, Wm E Rouse, R R Uitz, C A Fowler, Noah Sebree, Wm O Kirtley, B R Gaines, Jos A Gaines, W B Corbin, Robert Bradford, J G Gaines L S Pope, John Smith, R S Crisler, E Cropper, J W Kennedy, Joe Reed, N B Stephens, G M Riley, J J Ryle, Cris Barlow, Edward Fowler, J H Lawell, Jonas Rouse, J A Davis, W A Goodridge, R Huey, Clinton Gaines, S M Adams, R A Brady, A Corbin, James Popham, B L Rice, T P Crisler, O Minor, Jacob Tanner, Lystra Aylor, M T Graves, J Frank Grant, A J Rouse, J Wood Riggs, Charles White, T J Porter, D M Snyder, J M Conner, Jasper Sullivan, Thos. Goodridge, James Rogers, J M Moody Feelden Rouse, Fred Pfalzgraf, H P Crisler, John Norris, C L Hensley, C W Riley, Joseph C Hensley, Joel C Clore, A J Douglas, William Sebree, Joseph Graves, William Clore, Robert B Reed, A D Riley, Cyrus Riddell.

IN the Lower Rio Grande section the people fear a yellow fever epidemic.

BELOW we give the instructed vote for the various state offices as compiled by Monday's Courier-Journal, from which it will be seen that the final result is very much mixed, as 373 votes are necessary to a choice.

For Governor—Jones, 187; Knott, 176; Owsley, 65; Jacobs, 72; Buckner, 108.

For Lieutenant-Governor—Allen, 74; Hindman, 90; Young, 78; Johnson, 12; Smith, 73; Griffith, 76.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Edgar, 76; Pickett, 163; Smith, 56; Hayward, 41; Halsell, 20; Taylor, 31.

For Register of the Land Office—Sheldon, 87; Cecil, 93; Corbet, 127; Grant, 25; Boyd, 31.

Of the uninstructed vote 17 are conceded to Jones, besides he is has quite a number of delegates as a second choice.

STATE NEWS.

—Lead of fine quality has been discovered in Ballard county, near Wickliffe.

—The cost to Kentucky of the Neal and Craft murder trials amount to $44,965 85.

—The butchers of Frankfort intend raising the price of beef from 15 to 20 cents.

—In Ohio county, Joe and Caleb Wilson were perhaps fatally poisoned by eating polk root.

—John Berry Smith has found an ear of corn, each grain of which has a heart on each side.—Somerset Reporter.

—Wheat is assuming a great change for the better since the recent rains, and the warm weather.—Williamstown Courier.

—Mr. Geo. Williams, of the Providence neighborhood, has a mare 28 years old which is the mother of a young colt.—Milton Free Press.

—Princeton Banner: The wheat is improving every day. Fields which promised nothing three weeks ago now present a good appearance.

—Shelby Sentinel: The grass and grain crops are looking green, the fruit trees are blooming, and prospects are good for a bountiful yield.

—Tobacco plants in some localities are growing finely, but the fly has put in an appearance and—the trouble begins.—Robertson County Tribune.

—From the present outlook there will be more mule colts—and fine ones at that—in Owen in the next year than was ever before known.—Owen News.

—In Somerset, the trial of Merritt, the jury fixed his punishment at life in the penitentiary, where his father is now serving a like sentence for a like murder.

—Mr. Allen, of Augusta, who lost his life by an accident on the Cincinnati Southern Railroad, was a member of the Knights of Honor, and his heirs will receive $5,000.

—The population of Covington is 32,000. The city council has granted 141 saloon licenses. This gives one saloon to every 229 inhabitants—old and young, male and female.—[Com.

—Colonel Bowman, State Commissioner of Agriculture, has arranged for the distribution of 40,000 silkworm eggs to parties in Kentucky who desires to make experiments in sericulture.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—Mr. Joseph Jefferson has purchased a tract of 300 acres of land near New Iberia, La.

—Richmond, Va., now has a population of 70,684, being an increase of over 7,000 since 1880.

—Japan plums sell at thirty cents a quart in Jacksonville, Fla., and blackberries at forty cents a quart.

—The oil-mill at Yazoo City, Miss. has paid out to people living near that town $90,000 since last July.

—Mr. Jefferson Davis' estate of 500 acres at Brannon, Miss., is now mainly devoted to grapes and oranges.

—The editor of the Tolbotton (Ga) News last week ate ice cream made with the hailstones that fell in the vicinity.

—It is estimated that the vineyards of Arkansas were damaged twenty per cent. by the recent wind and hail-storm.

—Out of 100 negroe men in Oktibbeha county, Miss., who were asked who was President of the United States, not one could tell.

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

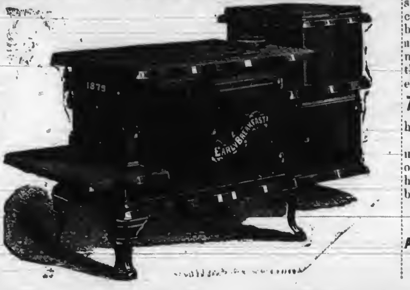
First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.



EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

Every Man His Own Boss.

How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was [illegible] from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC I never met with anything so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & Co., Chemists, New York.

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to me are requested to come forward and settle at once, as I will leave Burlington in a short time. By coming up and settling you will save expense. W. L. GEDGE.

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to the estate of Andrew Gleckin, deceased, will please come forward and settle. Those having claims against the estate will bring them forward well authenticated according to law, and they will be attended to.

N. B. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

NOTICE.

I take this method of contradicting the report being circulated in this neighborhood that a note with my name and my father's attached has been presented or seen in Aurora in the hands of another, and I will give $20 reward for the arrest of any person presenting a note for any amount with our names attached.

I also notify those who are circulating false and slanderous reports in regard to me in this neighborhood, if their slanderous and vile tongues are not at once stopped, that I will prosecute them to the extent of the law. J. W. RICE, Bellevue, Ky

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2½ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Alfred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R. W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises! Title good. For further particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, feb 28-3m Burlington, Ky.

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,

Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonahtan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK,

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green, J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm, L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec 20-6m

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE,

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

TRADE MARK.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

FLORENCE, - - KY.

NOTICE!

Just received a full and complete line of

DRY GOODS

of the finest selections, and the latest styles which will be sold exceedingly low. Also

NOTIONS,
HATS & CAPS,
BOOTS & SHOES,
CROCERIES, &c.

Too numerous to mention. Almost everything that the people may want will be found in my Stock. No trouble to show goods, and orders filled promptly. Call and examine my Stock and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.

☞I feel exceedingly thankful to my friends and patrons for past favors and hoping you all will call again.

Truly Yours,

W. C. TANNER,

Florence, Ky.

CENTRAL

HOTEL,

BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,

(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

SADDLES AND HARNESS AND

ALBERT M. ACRA,

BURLINGTON, KY.

HARNESS MAKER

—AND—

DEALER IN SADDLES

Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed. A full line of everything needed by farmers in the harness line.

REPAIRING PROMPTLY DONE.

☞Give me a call. feb-14-83

—Shop over Rouse's Store.—

W. J. RICE,

CARPENTER & BUILDER,

BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move

EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS

On Short Notice,

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.

(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.

Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.

A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

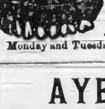
Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.



E. E. IGOE,

Resident Dentist,

Rising Sun, Ind.

WITH

J. P. Ulrey.

Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

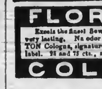
No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

FREE 25 USEFUL ARTICLES, & Beautiful Floral Chromo Cards, Size 5 x 8, and an illustrated Book, to all who send two 2c. stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.



PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N. Y.

FLORESTON COLOGNE

Excels the finest Sewar extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines

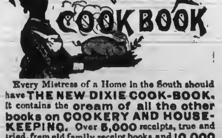
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 8 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.

All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap. All are warranted Circulars mailed free. Newark Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md.

W N. STAGE, Gen, Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky



THE "DIXIE" COOK BOOK

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSEKEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription, AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.

S. A. CLARKSON & CO., ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers

(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Local News.

Saturday was a lively day.

Are you done planting corn?

Done planting corn and been fishing.

Sheep-shearing is now the order of the day.

It is dry and dusty. A nice shower is needed.

Winter left its mark in many places on the road.

The most æsthetic thing in the way of a pet, is a pig.

Diamond Dyes to color Silk Goods, at W. E. Pipers'.

The late frost did not hurt the crop of English sparrows.

If you want to smoke a good cigar, get it at Dudley Rouse's.

We are going to write a book entitled "That garden of Ours."

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure at W. E. Piper's. 2t

Mr. Sam Hind and wife, went east on their wedding tour.

The record in the Mandamus suit has gone to the Superior Court.

The rain-crow made its debut in Burlington last Friday morning.

Thomas Hyne made the first delivery of wool at this place this season.

The weather clerk was in full sympathy with the farmers last week.

The weather the past week has encouraged vegetation considerably.

Albert M. Acra has moved into his new building where he looks happy.

The cool weather Saturday produced an uneasiness about the welfare of the fruit.

Ayer's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly safe, do not gripe, and are a splendid tonic.

Catterpillars are not so n[illegible] this spring. What few there are should be destroyed.

Wm. Sheehan and wife, of Independence, are among Mr. Dunlap's converts at that place.

W. F. McKim is remodeling his residence. Frank is one of the livliest men in this section.

A very large proportion of the corn crop of this county has been planted during the past month.

A Burlingtonite in a town without shade would be as uncomfortable as a fish in a pond without water.

James Conner and Ben Sleet have bought up a large quantity of wool, each buying on his "own hook."

The farmer who puts his land in extra good order before planting, has the work of raising a crop half done.

There are two or three cases of small-pox in Rising Sun, but no cases are near the business part of the city.

The candidates and their representatives commenced showing up in this part of the country last Thursday evening.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

Rev. Dunlap has had over one hundred confessions at Independence. Probably a new church edifice will go up there.

Commissioners set off to Mrs. Mollie Kendall, last week, her dower in the lands owned by her husband, John A. Kendall, at his death.

Our butchers have trouble in securing beef cattle. It is just the time of year when the farmers are not particular about selling their cattle.

Don't know, but from the number of ladies who have been taking lessons in "cutting and fitting," the cost of making dresses in this town will come down a peg or two.

One day last week, Noah Delph found a very brilliant stone, and thinking it was a diamond, he took it to the city to have it inspected. We have not heard from Noah since.

This is the season of the year when the cook pineth, because a complete bill of fare is difficult to make up. Or, in other words, an assortment of rations is not to be had.

J. J. Berkshire, W. B. Adams and Dudley Rouse supplied Henry Clore with a lot of extra melon seed last Saturday, in lieu of which Henry will feast them in due time, on lucious melons.

Mrs. Tousey's sale of household and kitchen furniture was well attended last Saturday. A large amount of old fashioned, and most excellently preserved, furniture was sold, and brought good prices.

Mittie Acra has the cosiest harness shop in this part of the country, and as he has but one thing between him and the heavens, the RECORDER office, you know his earthly career is now through a valley of roses.

Six acres of the land where Noah Clore's house stands, near Burlington, many years since, was given Lewis Conner's father for his wedding coat. In those days land was cheap and fine coats expensive.

We heard that our local tragedian aired his spring suit, Sunday morning, and that it was so obnoxious to the equine sight that he had to consign it to the remote recess of his wardrobe early in the day.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Harry Piper was in town Tuesday.

Miss Fannie Rice has purchased a fine new organ.

Shelby Rich, of Kenton county, was in town Sunday.

H. Clay White, of Williamstown, attended court Monday.

Mr and Mrs Sim Terrill were the guests of Dr. Grant Sunday.

Mr. Isaac Bailey, near Florence, has been quite sick for several days.

Gus Ewing, of Covington, made Burlington a flying visit last Friday.

Last week we neglected to announce the arrival of Miss Julia Stephenson.

John L Conner and wife, of Erlanger, spent the day in Burlington Saturday.

Dr. B F Stephenson, of Visalia, Kenton county, was in Burlington last Saturday.

Miss Mary Light, of Covington, spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives in Burlington.

Hon L C Norman, of Frankfort, attended the political meeting at this place Saturday.

Mrs. F. Riddell was visiting her sister, Mrs. Light, of Covington, the latter part of last week.

A. B. Smith, of Henry county, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, was in town last Friday.

Elder Dicken and wife, of Bellevue, were the guests of Mr. A G Winston and family, Sunday.

James M. Riddell and wife, of Williamstown, arrived last Saturday and remained over till Monday.

Col. Edgar, of Warren county, candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, was in town Saturday.

Another of James Westbay's talents developed itself last Saturday at Mrs. Tousey's sale—that of auctioneer.

Mrs. C. L. Latimer, who has been visiting at this place for several weeks, returned to her home in Missouri last Thursday.

E. W. Smith, of Chattanooga, was visiting his parents at this place the first of the week. Bud is well pleased with the South.

W H McClung, of Covington, passed through this place last Saturday, having spent several days among Boone county people.

Capt Geo W Terrill, J Frank Grant, and Solon Early, of Petersburg, were among Burlington's distinguished visitors last Saturday.

Mrs. Jane Riggs and daughter, of Covington, and Miss Nannie Cornelius, of Kenton, were visiting Mrs. Dempsey and family, Sunday.

Dr. Smith, son of Z. F. Smith, of Henry county, was in town Friday and Saturday, in the interest of his father's candidacy for Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Diamond Dyes to color Carpet Rags, at W. E. Piper's.

On the Wing.

WARRENBURG, Mo., May 2d, 1883.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Dear Sir:—We left home on Monday evening, and took the train at Lawrenceburg, for Cincinnati, Tuesday morning, in company with father, Henry Wingate and that prince of good fellows, J. Frank Grant.

As we went through in the night, will not say anything about the country we passed, except Western Illinois, which has a splendid prospect for a large crop of wheat.

The first town west of St. Louis is Webster, and from Webster to Jefferson City the land is very rough and stony. The railroad between those two places hugs the Missouri bank and none of the land between those two points, except the Missouri river bottoms, is worth anything for agricultural purposes. From Jefferson City to California, a station 25 miles farther west, the land gradually improves. California covers, perhaps, 30 to 40 acres of ground. It is located in Moniteau county. I forgot to mention how beautiful the water of the Osage river looked after traveling beside the muddy Missouri so long.

After leaving California, we passed through a lovely country of gentle rolling prairie. The wheat, oats and meadows look promising, and the majority of the farmers, from what I can see, are about through planting corn. Moniteau, Tipton and Otterville are in Moniteau county, which is a fine county, and are flourishing little villages. Sedalia, county seat of Pettis county, is quite a city, and business place, having a round-house, machine shops, marble works, several steam flouring mills, and many other branches of industry are being carried on within its corporation. The land, so far as I have seen, with but little exception, is simply lovely and is certainly productive. The wheat in Pettis gives promise of a heavy yield. We passed one field of wheat, containing 640 acres, which was about ten inches high. This brings us up to Warrensburg, Johnson county, Mo.

WALTON, WINGATE & Co.,

Diamond Dyes to color Woolen Goods at W. Piper's.

Lost—On the road between Burlington and Mrs. Kendall's, a log-chain, the finder will please return to James Westbay, Burlington.

One day last week we dined with James L. Riley, who is batching near Constance. Jim, with much grace and ease, presided at the table where Mrs. Riley should exercise her authority over the coffee-pot and chinaware. We counseled him to abandon his usurpation of authority, and he smole pleasant smiles that almost pursuaded us that his thoughts were in that channel. Jim knows how to entertain friends.

Diamond Dyes to color Cotton Goods at W. E. Piper's.

Local politics crowded out the court proceedings this week.

W. M. Conner had 20 or 30 head of cattle on the market here Monday.

The funeral of Mrs. W. H. Pope, will be preached by Elder Dicken at the Baptist church in Bellevue, next Sunday at 10 a. m.

Last Saturday Mr. James Hogan took his daughter, Mary, to the city, and had her eyes operated on. She was a little cross-eyed. The operation was performed in three minutes, and her eyes are now perfectly straight.

James A. Riddell had a double team of Hambletonians, sired by the Hambletonian he is handling, in town Monday, and which he did not hesitate pronouncing the best team ever hitched in Burlington. They were toppy.

From our sanctum window we gaze upon the busy farmer as he carefully tills the soil. The scene imbues us with industry, and we feel like casting aside our linen and rushing franticly to some large corn-field, where the hands are busy planting, and quietly takeour position—beneath some good shade tree.

The Burlington and Speedwell base-ball clubs tried conclusions on the grounds of the former last Saturday, The Speedwell team got off its feet in the first inning and was not able to recover during the game. The Burlington boys batted their opponents outrageously and the tallies made are too numerous to speak of. Below is the score:

Innings.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Burlington	22	2	0	6	1	4	0	4	0	—39
Speedwells	0	0	0	0	0	2	1	0	0	— 3

Diamond Dyes to color Cashmere at W. E. Piper's.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Normansville.

BORN—To Wood Miller and wife, a son.
To Thos. Maloney and wife, a son.
To Lee Utz and wife, a son.
To Hampton Adams and wife, twin girls. [Is this all?—EDS.]

Miss Katie Kennedy was at home last week.

Mrs. Grigsby, who with her family, moved from this place to Texas about five years ago, is now visiting friends here, all of whom give her a cordial welcome.

Constance.

Road working has begun.

Most people in the neighborhood are done planting potatoes.

We think your Francesville correspondent worthy of congratulation.

After a long illness of spring fever, Geo. Brown and Jim Loder are able to be out.

The Dry Creek base-ball club has again organized, and will soon be ready to lick anything in the county.

It is thought that Davis Bros., will put an awning over their store porch.

Union.

Mrs. L. B. Stephens has just returned from Fairbanks, Fla., and reports heavy crops of oranges and banannas. Mr. S. will return about the first of June. He reports a great boom in Florida land. The report that he has sold his Boone farm and will move to Florida is not true, although he has offered said farm for sale.

Many of our citizens attended the closing of G. W. Dunlap's evangolistic work at Independance on Sunday last. There were 148 confessions, resulting from his month's labor, 29 of whom made the good confession Sunday night.

Plenty of onions and grass, lettuce and greens, jole and ginger-bread.

L. C. Norman and family came to Union Saturday.

All Union has led down to 5th street, and are now enquiring for combination horses.

Taylorport.

Mrs. Isaac Phelps is lying dangerously ill with hemorage of the lungs.

Bluford Berry has been confined to his bed for several days with affection of the lungs.

Miss Queen Grubbs has returned from her visit to Fairland, Ind., and reports a nice time.

Our boys organized a base-ball club last week, and will play the Bullittsville club at this place next Saturday.

Wm. Bettis is talking of moving to our city again. He is at present located at Stringtown.

Mrs. Lizzie Hinton and daughter, of St. Louis, are visiting their father and grandfather, Mr. Magnus Sederberg.

Those who are in the habit of patronizing the ferry when they cross the river will be rejoiced to learn that Mr. James Berry, who was for several years ferryman at this place, has return to his old position. No man that has had it since he left has given the satisfaction he has, and we hope he may retain it.

Petersburg.

Miss Stella Fisher, of Lawrenceburg, was the guest of Miss Georgie Comer last Sunday.

Henry North has gone to Rising Sun, to work on a farm.

Harry Newman, of Rising Sun, was the guest of S. C. Buchanan, last week.

John Bolen and Bill Casey who have been spending the winter in New Orleans, returned home last Wednesday, looking hale and hearty.

Mrs. Alice Wise, of Louisville, is visiting her many friends here.

The coal barge attached by the sheriff, and lying at the wharf here, was sold last Thursday for $300.

Mrs. Alta Jones, of Versailles, Ind., is visiting her parents at this place.

The Lawrenceburg base-ball club will cross bats with the Almonts at this place Saturday, the 12th inst. Game called at 2 p. m.

Scattersville.

Our roads are getting rough and dry.

Garden stuff is coming up nicely.

Most of our farmers are done planting corn.

Mr. John Roue has had lightning rods put on his house and barn. We did not learn who did the work—but we did see Charlie Fowler and John Huey looking around out here like they would like a job of that kind.

There is a good spring wagon on the road side, out here that has been there for two or three months, and we think the owner had better come and build a shed over it, as it will not be good for the wagon to stand out this summer. What say you Ras?

One of William Clore's calves died one day last week. Bad luck Billy.

Mr. J. S. Huey has moved to Bellevue to live with his father-in-law this summer. The neighborhood has lost a kind and obliging neighbor.

Noah Clore purchased a fine Alderny cow from O. P. Conner, for which he paid a fancy price.

There has been prayer meeting held all winter at the houses of John Mitchell and John Sebree every Thursday night. First at one house and then the other. We are glad to know of so much good being done in our neighborhood.

Hebron.

Mrs. Harrison Clore is in very poor health this spring.

Mr. T. P. Crisler, who has been visiting relatives in Missouri, has returned home well pleased with his trip.

J. C. Clore was at home last Saturday and Sunday, from Springfield, Ohio.

Last Sunday the remains of Mrs. Winners were taken from the vault at this place and interred in the family grave yard, near this place.

Mike Clore has sold his drug store at Bullittsville to Ben Stephens.

Our boys are all preparing to take in the excursion to Louisville, next Sunday.

Wm. L. Aylor will put in about 5 acres of tomatoes this season. Mr. Aylor is one of the finest tomato raisers in the county.

Jeff Snyder and Charles Clore will attend the Morse Telegraph school at Cincinnati this summer.

The Sunday-school organized a few Sundays since with 15 teachers and 77 scholars.

A gentleman, who now lives in this county, sawed a board 90 ft. long 28 inches wide and 2 inches thick which contained 420 ft. of lumber. This was done 56 years ago, by Adam Clore.

[Say! whose photograph was that you put in your communication?—EDS.]

Hamilton.

Capt. Garnett has almost completed his new store-house and dwelling, which will add much to the appearance of our village.

Mr. J. L. Johnson is recruiting his stock of dry goods and groceries, and also receiving a lot of nice tobacco which is bringing him fair prices on the market. J. L. is an energetic, pushing fellow.

Mr. H. A. Pitcher is superintending J. W. Kennedy's warehouse at Normansville.

Our school, under the able management of Miss Allie Carson, is progressing nicely with a good attendance. No one understands the art of teaching the young idea how to shoot better than Miss Allie.

Our turnpike is progressing slowly. By the 1st of October next, we expect to have turnpikes completed that will make Hamilton accessible from all points.

Local option is agitating the minds of our people at this time. The use and abuse of intoxicating drinks has been a curse and disgrace to this community for many years, and we propose to correct the evil next August.

Health of the neighborhood good, except madam rumor reports a couple near this place desperately love sick, with symptoms indicating a severe case of matrimonial fever attended with fatal results.

Babies all reported last week, and Mamas all mad about it and Papas cursing correspondents for their lack of intelligence and judgment in selecting items to report to interest the reading public.

North Bend.

Our school teacher, Miss Hallie Stephens, dismissed school Wednesday afternoon for the remainder of the week, to attend the dramatic festival.

Mr. Irwin Baisly anticipates raising an extensive crop of tobacco again this year. We wish him success in his undertaking.

Mr. Clinton Gaines is going to call the hands out to work the road as soon as his barn is completed.

Mr. Garnett Riley has finished his work as assessor, and has gone to farming.

Messrs. Riley and Gaines have almost finished planting corn.

Mrs. Clinton Gaines has completely eradicated the traces of the flood, by papering and painting her dwelling.

Miss Sallie Scott, of St. Louis, who has been visiting her uncle, June Baisly, will return home this week.

Our Mistress of the birch, says an unusual feat has been performed by her most advanced pupil, Miss Bettie Riley, who recited three hundred and ninety questions in U. S. History in two days. The questions were taken from the Normal Question book, and one question alone contained all the battles fought during the revolutionary war.

The LaBelle river has again returned to her proper channel, and from present indications promises to let the inhabitants of her valley glide along smoothly without the aid of skiffs and rafts.

Misses Bettie and Louie Riley spent Sunday with their friends, Miss Clara and Mr. Leslie Harrison.

Beaver Lick.

Spring is telling the farmers they are rather late, when really, it is spring herself who has been tardy.

Some corn was planted in this locality during the past week.

Aunt Eliza Ossman has added greatly to the beauty and comfort of her cozy dwelling, building a neat portico fronting the road leading out of Beaver to Verona.

C. J. Huston has finished his new barn. Beaver's enterprising citizens are going right ahead with useful improvements.

Everybody in Beaver has the measles.

Last Sabbath by special request of Mr. Jos. Rich, sen., Rev. Lafe Johnson delivered one of the most elaborate and exhaustive sermons ever listened to, at this place, on Immersion as the only baptism taught in the Bible. Mr. Johnson's knowledge on this this much noted subject, enables him to prove conclusively, without the aid of twisting words, that Immersion is the correct baptism.

Quite recently Rev. Geo. Frob, an able divine of the Methodist persuasion, delivered quite an interesting discourse on the subject of sprinkling, claiming it to be the mode of baptism used in the baptising of Christ by John the Baptist, an opinion upon which he and Mr. Johnson greatly differ. If some learned divine will come now and show us that pouring is the correct baptism, we will have to admit that that fact of One Baptism is a thing difficult to understand as explained by the various ministers of the different denominations.

Diamond Dyes to color feathers, at W. E. Piper's.

Diamond Dyes to color Ribbons at W. E. Piper's.

Elder Dicken preached at the Baptist church, this place, Sunday morning and evening. Miss Addie Crisler united with the church.

One day last week while Mr. Charlie Hughes was harrowing, his horses became frightened and upsetting the harrow, one of the horses was thrown back on it, injuring the animal considerably.

J. Frank Grant was searching the Acts of the legislature of an early day, Saturday, for the purpose of exhuming the act chartering the town of Petersburg. As in everything else he undertakes, he succeeded.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.

HENRY ROSS, Adm'r,

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office opposite the Boon House.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.

Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,
Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accommodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors, Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price, selling fast; needed everywhere. Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 20 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
R O
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
R O U S E.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
S E
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

Shoes, Shoes,
Mens' Brogans and Hand-Sewed Stich Downs.
Mens' Fine Dress Shoes.
Boys Fine Dress Shoes & Brogans.
Children & Misses Fine Dress Shoes.
Ladies' Fine Dress Shoes a Specialty.
Mens' Lace Plow Shoes at $1,25, $1,50 and $1 75.

The reliable brands of LAWRENCEBURG PATENT and FAMILY FLOUR all ways on hand. W. E. PIPER.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

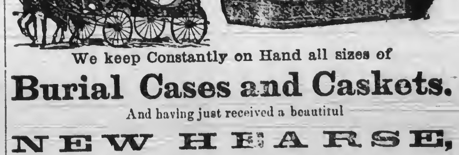
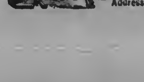
WILLIAM CLORE,
—MANUFACTURER OF—
Rover Steel PLOWS,
Side Hill PLOWS,

Single & Double Shovels,
Jumping Shovels, Gophers, Rolling Cutters, Harrows and Agricultural Implements Generally. Send for Price List.
RISING SUN, - - - INDIANA.

UNDERTAKING.



We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.



$173.75 for a SQUARE or UPRIGHT ROSEWOOD PIANOFORTE, with Stool, Book and Music. Only $30 for an Eight Stop, Sub-Bass and Octave-Coupler ORGAN. Chapel Organs $65, Pipe Organs $94. OTHER BARGAINS fully described in Illustrated Catalogue which is sent FREE with full particulars.
VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME.
Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

THE RECORDER,

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

NOW.

"Quand on est mort c'est pour long temps."

When I am lying pale and dead,
Come not, dear friends, around my bed
And pour your loss in deafened ears
And wash my heedless face with tears.
What thrill of hope or tenderness
Will beat beneath my burial dress?
What look of gratitude arise
And lift the lids of sightless eyes?
What loving voice escape those lips,
From which no speech or language slips?
Alas! I can not rouse and say:
"If ye lament me I will stay."
Speak while I hear, and while I long
To feel your love is true and strong,
While peace can soothe my troubled brow
Wait not to miss me; hold me now!

Set not your kisses on my check,
Nor on my mouth, too cold to speak;
And in your fruitless grief forbear
To shed their sweetness on my hair.
In life I long to feel their breath,
But what are kisses worth to Death?
Like blossoms dropped on ice and snow,
Like songs when howling tempests blow,
A wasted gift; a vain caress
That might have been a power to bless,
A longing answered all in vain,
A touch that Death must needs disdain,
That might a life with joy endow,
Oh! if you kiss me, kiss me now.

Remember not when I am gone
The deeds I did or would have done,
How much I loved, how vainly strove
To find an answer in your love;
Nor weep to think what loss is yours,
Since neither life nor love endures;
Say not with tears and cries and prayers:
"Would that we showed her tenderer cares,
Had patience with the faults we knew,
Clung to the heart so warm and true,
That now we weep with hopeless pain
And know will never come again."
Ah! breathe not then the useless vow;
But if you love me, love me now.

Nor, standing round my wintry grave,
Too late to serve me or to save,
Fling on it all you have to give:
"At last her follies we forgive!"
An angel might repel with scorn
Such speech of poor repentance born,
Might weep to see such Levite pride
Pass coldly by a coffin's side.
No! if within your hearts there be
A kind but slumbering thought of me,
A memory of the vanished past,
A hope of peace and love at last,
A speechless prayer, a silent sense
That sometimes speaks in my defense,
That says: "Our life is not too long,
And we perhaps, were sometimes wrong."
Ah! listen to that pleading voice
And bid a living heart rejoice.
If late remorse or grief allow Forgiveness then, forgive me now.

—Rose Terry Cooke, in Chicago Standard.

MAHALA'S MISTAKE.

"Alice can not keep her eyes on her work."

"Poh!"

"Certain true!" and Helen sang mischievously: "'Last night a braw wooer cam up the lang glen, an' sair wi' his wooin' did he deere me, did he deere me.' But you need not look toward the 'lang glen' to-day, Allie. He won't come in the garish daylight."

"What nonsense is this?" asked Mamma Alston."

"Ask Alice, mamma," answered Helen. "His name and hers; where they met; what he said: what she said; and the result, like the game of consequences?"

"Alice, what is Helen talking about?"

"About a Mr. Harvey Hartington, I suppose. You remember, mamma, my going to the Sabbath-school Convention, at Perham, with papa? I sat in the singers' gallery, and I was listening with all my ears, when a gentleman at my side said: 'Pardon, Madame; but can you tell me the name of the speaker who has just finished his remarks?'

"Rev. Mr. Alston," I replied.

"Of what place, may I ask?"

"Cramwood, sir."

"He thanked me very politely, entered the name and address in his notebook, and then went on to praise papa to the skies. He said he had never heard so much said in a few words. That papa united the wit, wisdom, and eloquence of——. Oh! dear, I forget the names; but they were distinguished men, no doubt. After that, we chatted together quite awhile, for he was evidently a perfect gentleman. And then—and then—" Alice faltered and a bright color dyed her cheeks. "I thought we might never meet again, till last evening. He was at Mary's party and very polite again, and quite amazed to find I was Alice Alston, papa's daughter."

"Very polite," added Helen. "Oh! yes, extremely polite. Couldn't see any one in the room but our Alice."

Just here she was interrupted by the entrance of Aunt Becky Sharp, the village gossip.

"Land sakes, Miss Alston! Hev ye heerd the news?" she gasped, flinging wide her bonnet-strings and plying a palm-leaf fan vigorously.

"I don't know, Aunt Becky, what you mean. Is it that Mr. Beers is dead?"

"Biers? No; coffins nether. 'Taint dyin'; its marryin' that's goin' on. They dew say thet Mahaly's got a beau."

"Mahala Graves?"

"Jes' so, Mis Alston."

"Who is he?"

"Why, a swell kind of feller, loafin' raound here from Philadelfy. Say his name is Haitington—Harvey Haitington, Esq. Saounds real genteel, don't it? But, land sakes! like as not his true name is John Smith. I don't like his style. He's got acquainted with several gals mighty suddin'. Naow there's Mely Squires. She's ridin' in the cars, an' a very genteel fellercome an' sot by her. When she give the conductor her ticket, this feller said: 'I see, Madam, I see you are from Cramwood. I hev offen thought of goin' there, like a pilgrim to a shrine, to lay the offerin' of my hearty admiration at the altar.' Lor', I'm gettin' mixed tryin' to remember his swellin' words; but he talked abaout John Squires es if he was George Washington, Martin Luther, an' Christopher Columbus all in one, an' was quite dumbfounded when Mely said he was her brother. So he begged leave to call; an' he has kept on callin' till he faound aout John's invention didn't realize any great money, for all 'twas so smart, and then he quit. He met Nellie Waters close to her father's factory, an' said he'd come to Cramwood to pay his respects to the greatest manufacturer the world hed ever produced. 'Not in the extent of his work, but its quality'; an' he went on gassin' for ten or fifteen minutes, till Nellie begun to think she was the Princess Royal an' nothin' shorter.

He hung around her a spell; but her pa is sharp and shook him off. Naow he's heerd of Mahala's legacy, and likely 'nough thinks she's poorly, she's so thin, an' he's courtin' her like all possessed.

They say she hain't vases to hold the flaowers he sends, an' actilly got bilious tryin' to eat his French confectionery, she's jes' so savin'."

"Why don't you go and see her, Aunt Becky, and tell her what he is?"

"Why, massy on ye, I did; but not a word will she believe. Says he shown her 'his heart's core.' Ye know she always was kinder sentimental. It's my opinion the man don't own a heart."

At this point the door-bell tinkled, and Helen, who answered the summons, came back with a roguish smile on her face, and in her hand a large, handsome bouquet, with a tiny pink notelet attached, addressed to "Miss Alice Alston, with the compliments of H. H."

"Read it aout laoud Alice, do," urged Aunt Becky, as Alice bent with a flushed face over the paper.

Ere she could refuse, Helen caught the precious missive and read in a dramatic manner:

"SWEETS TO THE SWEET."

Roses for Alice,
The lily's pure chalice,
Shy little violets, lift up your heads,
Whisper a message,
That shall but presage
Somebody's plea, when hither he treads.
Tell her her wooer
Fain would bestrew her
Path with your blossoms robbed of the thorn;
Say to her beauty
Tribute is duty,
Win me her favor and banish her scorn."

"Wall, naaw, that's real pretty," said Aunt Becky, "only it kinder spiles it to think likely he's writ the very same to a dozen gals. Wonder if he writes Mahala poetry. Didn't know he'd tried his hand on your gal. Wall, she's faound him aout naow."

Alice, meanwhile, had fled from the room. She ran on into and through the garden, to the grove beyond, and there, in the depths of the wood, sat down to cool her heated cheeks, to still her fluttering heart; resolutely to reason away the glamour of enchantment which had encircled this Adonis; to call up her womanly pride and righteous indignation. A brief shower of girlish tears, and then she calmly recalled Aunt Becky's hateful story and decided what to do. An hour later she was on her way to Amelia's. Yes, it was true. Amelia had felt his fascinations; but she knew the whole story. Then to Nellie's.—Nellie denounced him in unmeasured terms. After a little hesitation, Alice directed her steps to Mahala's. Miss Mahala Graves was a lady of forty or forty-five years. She was very tall, very slim, and not very straight. Her wisp of hair was fastened behind, in a tight knot, the size of a large thimble. Her round eyes, prominent teeth, small nose, and receding chin were none of them types of beauty. Yet a warm and true heart beat beneath the plain exterior.

Her pride was in her house, which was very old (though in a state of excellent preservation), and in the many heirlooms which had gathered about her.

She greeted Alice with the utmost cordiality, and, after discussing the weather and the health of each member of the Alston family, Alice bent her head over a beautiful bouquet, saying: "What lovely flowers!"

"Yes," said Mahala. "Came this morning, those came last night, these yesterday morning, and those over there the day before. In the parlor are some beauties which came Friday and Saturday; and there are a great pile faded and thrown out the back door."

"I had a handsome bouquet sent in yesterday," said Alice, shyly.

"Eh?" queried Mahala, calmly. "From him, I'll be bou[illegible] thought likely. He's told me about you."

"Perhaps, too, you know about his acquaintance with Nellie Waters and Amelia Squires?"

"Oh! Alice, Alice, you can't believe all you hear. Yes, yes. I know all about it and I am perfectly satisfied. When the yearnings of one's heart are met, Alice, and the golden dreams of one's youth realized; when two hearts beat as one, Alice, no one can sunder them. You'll find it so yourself, my dear," and Mahala sighed affectedly and shook her head in a most significant way.

Then she took Alice over the house, showing her the various Mayflower relies and treasures of one sort and another, which it was her delight to display. Finally, in a burst of confidence, after numerous allusions to Cupid's arrows, Love's young dream (!), golden chains, she said: "The course of true love never did run smooth, you know. Nobody sympathizes with me. Nobody is glad I am happy. They say the cruelest things, but then—they don't know him and I do; and oh! Alice, we're going to put an end to this by being married two weeks from to-day."

Alice "hoped she might be happy."

Now she had begun, it seemed a great relief to tell some one all about it. So she began at the beginning, when he stopped at the gate ten days ago and begged a flower, and admired the old house, and asked leave to call next day and walk through the "ancestral halls" (so he called them). This Mahala declared made her "palpitate." She went on, and gave a detailed account of his brief, but vigorous wooing, until she brought it down to his kissing her under the "laylock" tree last evening, looking just like a "troubadour." This brought them to the wedding.

As Mahala truly said, this was her first wedding, and "might be her last," and, of course, she felt very solicitous that it should pass off well. Having neither kith nor kin of her own, and, in consequence of the unfortunate prejudice existing against him, it could not be brilliantly social. She was determined it should be unique. Now, would Alice please advise whether it were best to make it æsthetic or antique?

Alice was quite at a loss what to advise. Mahala had at first thought of aiming at æsthetic effect chiefly—of swathing her fragile form in creamy lace; not fashions in any vulgar shape; but merely wound about her, fold on fold, just disclosing her blushing face and destitute of ornament except a lily on her breast; but last evening she had discovered a rich yellow brocade dress, which would be elegant. She had also found an old bridal veil.

Therewith she took Alice to the attic to inspect these treasures. On the stairs she suddenly whirled round, and said: "Alice, you must be bridesmaid."

"Oh, no, never!"

"Oh, yes, you must!" said Mahala. "Think of poor me, without pa and ma and not a chick in the world belonging to me. I thought it all out last night, and I am determined I must have you, and Amelia Squires, and Nellie Waters, and then the mouth of scandal will be stopped."

She said it so earnestly that the refusal which was upon Alice's lips died away unsaid, and they passed on to the inspection of the bridal array. The brocade, with its leg-of-mutton sleeves and short waist, was sufficiently æsthetic and antique for any one, besides being really elegant. The veil (Alice secretly opined it was primarily an apron) was of sheerest muslin, elegantly embroidered.

Mahala proceed with exulting volubility to state that the groom would be splendidly arrayed in crimson velvet doublet (!), black velvet breeches, long silk stockings, low shoes, with silver buckles. She said, too, that he would furnish a suit similar, only of sky-blue, for Parson French, if he would wear it. What did Alice think?

Alice had to shut her eyes and bite her lips at the thought of Parson French, with his full figure and red hair, in such a rig.

She thought he would refuse the honor; but, when Alice saw Mahala's blank look of disappointment, she suggested a surplice and bands, as picturesque and entirely suitable.

At this Mahala brightened, and, taking her down stairs, showed her engagement ring, carefully wrapped in jeweler's cotton, in the china closet; also a pair of showy bracelets and a locket, with his portrait on one side, on the other, as Mahala explained, "Our hairs entwined—a symptom of our hearts."

And then Alice went home, feeling like one who has eaten too much of some oversweet dish.

That night quite an indignation meeting was held in Mr. Alston's study, and twenty-five of Mahala's truest friends entered upon a solemn compact to visit and remonstrate with her before the eventful day.

Accordingly, the bridal preparations were very much interrupted. First, Deacon Pratt, then Dr. Clough, then Captain Rogers, then Parson French, Mr. Alston, and a score more came dropping in, one after another, and the burden of each was: "Don't do it. If you do, secure your money; but, best of all, give it up."

Now, Mahala, like the mule and like many excellent people, could not be driven. The result was that, with many tears and lamentations over their prejudice, she was madly in love and more than ever bent on matrimony.

And now came the auspicious day. The first to arrive were two of the bridesmaids, Nellie and Amelia. Mahala had said she didn't care what any one wore so long as it was a little uncommon. She begged the favored three to wear something "æsthetic, antique, or symbolic." The latter idea seemed to strike two of the girls favorably. They talked of personating Night and Morning, or all three representing the graces, or Flora, Ceres and Pomona. Finally, they decided to choose what fancy and convenience dictated at the time. Nellie, accordingly, appeared in the character of fairy godmother, with scarlet bodice, striped skirt, opening over a black petticoat, high, pointed hat, and long wand. Amelia, in a modest suit of dove-colored cashmere, copied from a painting of the "Landing of the Pilgrims," presented a really beautiful "type of the Puritan maiden." Alice, the third bridesmaid, in her fear of too far outshining the bride, was positively shabby in an old muslin, with several darns in the skirt and an old ink-spot in the front breadth. Her curly hair she had pulled back so tight it made her eyes water. She was immediately summoned to the bride's bower.

"Alice, are there many in the parlor?"

"Quite a company, Mahala."

"Oh! Alice, I do so palpitate! I can never go through it before all them jaundiced eyes. Alice, there's nobody loves me but Brindle and old Major; and I am going to take you three girls and be married on the barn-floor."

"Why, Mahala Graves!"

"Why, yes, I'd rather be near Brindle and old Major, that I've driven nearly thir—a longer time than folks who hate him so."

It was in vain to expostulate. Helen Alston was installed at the piano, with instructions to keep the company good-natured and assure them the bride would soon appear.

Accordingly, Parson French; the fairy godmother; the Puritan maiden; Alice, in her shabby gown; and Mahala, buried in an old water-proof, hurried to the barn, and there, with her left hand on Brindle's side, opposite old Major's stall, Mahala "exchanged vows," as she phased it and became Mrs. Hartington. Then, leaning on her husband's arm, returned to the parlor, and received halting congratulations and most portentously dismal good wishes.

Then followed a repast of cold fowl, frozen pudding, charlotte ruse, cake, ice-cream, hot coffee, baked beans, brown bread, pumpkin-pie, stewed oysters, pan-dowdy and everything else.

And then came farewells, hack, trunk, satchels, a few flying slippers, and Mr. and Mrs. Hartington were off on their wedding-tour.

About six weeks later Alice was passing Mahala's old home at twilight. She saw a tall female form moving slowly and stealthily along from the woods toward Mahala's house. It seemed to go in; it looked like Mahala.

After that smoke was seen ascending from the chimney occasionally. A good many neighbors tried the doors, and rapped loud and long; yet no one gained admittance.

One evening Alice thought she would transplant a rose-bush Mahala had given her. She was busily employed in doing so, when she heard a sob, and then another and another. She was just outside the bed-room window, and through the closed blind could easily see that the window was opened.

"Mahala, let me come in and comfort you," she entreated.

And Mahala relented, and let her in (through the window), and sobbed out her pitiful story. Alice was sworn to secrecy and never betrayed her trust. But it was soon whispered round that the abandoned bride was no wife; that Hartington was already married. That friendly remonstrances had induced Mahala to retain her money, and that, foiled in obtaining that to which end he had tried every art, he had left her in disgust.

So "she took up the burden of life again, saying only: It might have been."

But now came another sensation, in the form of a large legal document, addressed to Mrs. Mahala Graves Hartington. In it she was informed, by a lawyer, that Hartington had, indeed, been previously married; that, foreseeing business failure, he had made over his property to his wife. That she had immediately fled to Europe and lived a life of freedom and pleasure. That dying, June 16th, almost immediately on her return to this country, she had left in their hands a will, giving her whole property to the future Mrs. Harvey Hartington, should such a person ever exist. That, since her death occurred at one a. m. and Mahala's marriage at three p. m. of the same day, there could be no doubt of its legality; and, finally, that a fortune of some fifteen thousand dollars awaited her pleasure.

Here was a turn of Fortune's wheel little expected.

Three years later, a stranger, visiting Cramwood, might have noticed a handsome mansion, built in the style of a Swiss chalet, a smooth lawn in front, a large garden in the rear.

Entering, he would find it handsomely and comfortably furnished; a trifle outre, perhaps, the æsthetic and antique overdone in spots.

Entering the dining-room, he might surprise a merry company. A young couple, Mr. and Mrs. John Squires nee Nellie Waters; Amelia, brimful of fun and vivacity; and Alice, sitting beside the young Andover student, "in whom her future lies."

A tempting supper is spread, and Mahala, in an elegant black silk, presides at the tray. The lord and master is absent, as, being a commercial traveler, is often the case. Mahala has shrewdly kept the property in her own hands, while indulging her love for the handsome scapegrace.

A letter is brought in by the servant, and Mahala, reading it with rapture, cries: "Now isn't this quite too awfully touching? My darling writes, when absent from me, that he should sign himself 'Heavy Heart out of town, instead of Harvey Hartington.' Quite a joke, almost a pun, and so tenderly touching." She wiped away a happy tear; but did not tell that he urged his "Precious Pet" to send fifty dollars by return mail.—Mary W. Boardman, in N. Y. Independent.

Considerations of Importance in Feeding.

A good feeder is not necessarily the man who, having an abundance in his crib, throws into the feeding-box according to the abundance on hand. To build up a living organism with success and without interruptions, hence with profit, is something different from what the average farm hand is capable of doing correctly. As regards economizing food, much, of course, depends upon the market value of this, yet not so much as might at first sight appear, because corn at a low price is quite likely to go hand in hand with low-priced beef. And when beef is low in price, no man can make much profit in feeding. This condition, it is true, may be better under this state of things than it would otherwise be, through the moderate prices on articles he is compelled to buy, as low-priced corn and meat are quite likely to be accompanied by moderate prices on some, if not all the necessaries of life.

One of the principal factors in the gain made by a fattening animal is comfort. Discomfort makes war upon the vital forces, and these being sustained only through nutrimen. consumed, it follows that the less the discomfort the less the waste of food. Hence, to reason that, as winter is over, animals can now be left without shelter that have heretofore had protection, is wrong from every point of view. The outer hide and hair, protected through the winter, will be doubly sensitive to cold and wet if exposed during storms in early April. Comfort is the criterion as to probable thrift, and any weather that a domestic animal can not remain out in without showing discomfort, it should not be exposed to.

Animals in the natural state—we refer to domestic animals having their freedom upon the farm—eat regularly and with a degree of moderation, hence are not liable to the repletion which comes to the feeding beast induced to eat immoderately. While artificial stimulants may, under certain conditions, and within certain limits, prove helpful, still we can not always be assured that no disorder will occur to interrupt nutrition. Artificial conditions, when brought to bear upon the living animal, so change it from accustomed influences that, so far as the fattening beast is concerned, it requires good management to insure that it will go through to the end of its short journey, the butcher's block, in good, healthy condition, and yield a profit.

All men who feed stock can not be expected to study physiology, though its principles are brought into requisition every day, and it is really as necessary that the living machine be understood, that they may conduct their business successfully, as that the engineer, to be an expert with the engine, be minutely acquainted with its every part. One of the lessons easily learned in every feeding lot is, that the chilling weather of early spring. tells upon exposed cattle more than the dry, frosty air of a cold winter. If shelter, dry bedding and painstaking care are required at one season more than another, that time is very likely to come in the early months of spring. The mercury may not run low, but the vitality of farm animals will go down in the scale more rapidly when the atmosphere is charged with a damp, depressing chill than when the mercury is well down below the freezing point and the air clear and dry.

While by analysis, and through experience in feeding, it has been often proved that corn leads all of the farm-grown grains in making flesh, still it is equally well-known that as the extreme cold disappears a mixture, made up of the lighter grains, shorts, and bran, with a little oil meal added, will bring better results than corn alone, though, chemically, it may be superior to the combined foods.

No man can feed successfully until he has learned to vary the food according to the condition of his animals, giving rest to the digestive organs as occasion calls. When in good condition it is safe to calculate that a fattening beast will bear a pound of grain per day for each hundred pounds of its own live weight. It will consume more than this in cold weather, because no inconsiderable amount is required to keep up a successful battle with the outside temperature. From early spring till grass comes, it shound be made a rule that the gain be more rapid than during the extreme cold of winter. That gain can be made if due care be taken. The conditions, in some important regards, will be more under control than heretofore during the winter.

There is a double inducement to exert great vigilance in adding to the daily gain, namely, (1) the gain in pounds at that time in the history of the beast when his weight upon the scales is approaching his highest value per pound; (2) the advantage of the increased fleshiness—ripeness—as an important factor in increasing the price of his weight per pound. Then, too, the manure—and no farm anywhere is so good that it does not need all the manure made upon it—is rich, hence valuable, in the ratio of the richness of the food given and its quantity. The matured bullock carries less away from the productive element in the soil than does the load of wheat or other grain sold off the farm, dollar for dollar of value. Yet he does carry something, in fact no inconsiderable amount of bone and flesh elements; but bear in mind that he leaves no inconsiderable substance behind him in the form of manure, while the grain and hay hauled off the farm leaves nothing—is a dead tax upon fertility. It is the fact that the steer provides for others of his kind to follow after him that gives stock-growing one of its most valuable features. That kind of husbandry that will bring the most dollars for the manual labor expended, at the same time taking the least substance from the soil, in view of the returns, is the sort that is each year receiving greater attention from the more intelligent class of farmers.—Live Stock Journal.

—During the past fifteen years the Baltimore American has been defendant in libel suits aggregating in damages over $2,000,000. The sum which the aggrieved parties have actually received reaches just $500.

The Language of Animals.

Those who have ever been much with animals are well aware that they all have a mode of expressing feeling to others of the same species. Who does not understand the language of the mother hen when she "informs" her brood that she has a tender morsel for them to eat, or when she warns them of impending danger, and who has not observed how quickly the little chicks understand the call or the warning? Wolves arrange attacks, hunting together in packs. They are all animated by the same thought, and therefore travel for hours to accomplish that of which each member of the enterprise has a rational understanding. Deer and buffalo act in concert in regard to hunting food or water. Perhaps the government of wild horses through signs which any horse in a band of hundreds instantly recognizes as an imperative command of one individual who prances up and down like one in authority, is about as perfect as anything in natural history. Birds and dogs are extremely sociable, enjoying the society of their kith and kin as much as country cousins when they visit city relatives. Rats and mice, too, and even insects, are supposed to have the faculty of communicating their wishes and opinions to each other. It is interesting to observe animals and to watch them and learn their ways of communicating—studying their language.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Boston Street-Car Incident.

The rule forbidding the stopping of street cars on Tremont street, between Boylston and Broomfield, at places other than street corners, gave rise to an amusing incident a day or two since. It was on a Highland car, which had but two occupants, one of whom was a young lady who was desirous of stopping at Mason street. As the car approached the corner she turned to signal the conductor, but that employe was in the act of kissing his hand to a young woman on the walk, and before his attention could be attracted, the car had passed the stopping-place, and the young lady sank resignedly into her seat and rode to West street. There the conductor rung to stop, and the pretty, but rather indignant, passenger stepped to the platform and, with a slight sparkle in her eye, said: "I am unselfish enough to walk a mile if you could give her a genuine kiss, but this is a little too much."—Boston Herald.

—James Kelly, a brakeman running out of East Portland, Oregon, a few days ago was seized with a fit of vomiting and threw up a live lizard fully two inches in length. The brakeman remarked that it was a comfort to know that it was not a "deadhead."

A BOY with a top tried to spin it,
But his hand got a thorn right in it,
The sport didn't spoil,
For St. Jacobs Oil,
Cured his hurt in less than a minit.

A red-haired clerk in Savannah,
Slipped on a piece of banana,
Great pain he endured,
But St. Jacobs Oil cured,
He now goes dancing with Hannah.

AN evil speaker differs from an evil doer only in the want of opportunity.—Quintilian.

SYDNEY SMITH being ill, his physician advised him to "take a walk upon an empty stomach." "Upon whose?" asked Sydney. Still better steps to take would be the purchase of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are especially valuable to those who are obliged to lead sedentary lives, or are afflicted with any chronic disease of the stomach or bowels. By druggists.

THE diamond is the stone for an engagement; but give us the old cobble-stone in a free fight.

Wrecked Manhood.

Victims of youthful indiscretions and pernicious practices, suffering from premature decay or old age, nervous debility, lack of self-confidence, impaired memory, loss of manly powers, and kindred symptoms, should send three stamps for large illustrated treatise, giving means of certain cure, with numerous testimonials. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

IT is not a lucky word, this same impossible; no good comes to those who have it so often in their mouths.

To Consumptives,

or those with weak lungs, spitting of blood, bronchitis, or kindred affections of throat or lungs, send two stamps for Dr. R. V. Pierce's treatise on these maladies. Address the doctor, Buffalo, N. Y.

IN Yazoo County, Miss., a cow died with hydrophobia from eating the hay on which a mad dog had been lying.

Another Life Saved.

J. Gray, Dadeville, Ala., writes us: I have been using your DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and I can say, of a truth, it is far superior to any other Lung preparation in the world. My mother was confined to her bed four weeks with a cough, and had every attention by as good physicians as there are in the country, and they all failed to effect a cure; but when I got one bottle of your DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, she began to mend right away. I can say in truth, that IT WAS THE MEANS OF SAVING HER LIFE. I knew of five cases that Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam has cured, and my mother is better now than she has been for twenty years.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, May 4, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 25	@ 6 25
HOGS—Common	6 25	@ 6 65
Good packers	7 15	@ 7 65
SHEEP	5 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 13¾	@ 1 15
No. 2 winter red	1 12	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	55¼	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	45	@
Rye—No. 2	65	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 75	@20 00
Lard—Steam	11¼	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 80	@ 4 15
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 23	@ 1 23¾
No. 1 white	1 16	@ 1 16½
Corn—No. 2 mixed	67¾	@ 69
Oats—mixed	50	@ 52
PORK—Mess	19 25	@19 60
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 14	@ 1 14½
Corn—No. 2	55	@ 55½
Oats—No. 2	41½	@
Rye	60½	@
PORK—Mess	19 15	@19 20
LARD—Steam	11-60	@11-62½
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 20	@ 1 20¼
Corn—mixed	66¼	@ 66⅝
Oats—mixed	51	@ 53
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 10
Corn—mixed	54	@
Oats—mixed	46½	@ 47
PORK—Mess	19 50	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—New	$1 14	@
CORN	54	@
OATS—mixed	41	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 5 60

A Burning or Gnawing Pain

Arising from vascular irritation of the stomach, spasmodic or gastralgic pains, and a sense of distension from flatulence or other causes, is immediately relieved by the use of GASTRINE. Sold by all druggists.

JOKE—After the Philadelphia method—in the Press: "The might of Britain just now appears to be mostly dynamite.

25c. buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners and make a boot or shoe last twice as long.

TO AVOID colds, keep your mouth shut. "Most politicians are suffering from colds," says the Rochester (N. Y.) Union.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are excellent for the relief of Hoarseness or Sore Throat.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT Co., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar

Take instanter. Don't neglect a cough. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

Our Citizens Desire no Notoriety, but Are Always Ready to Proclaim the Truth.

MRS. GEO. DAWLEY of 76 Knight street, Providence, R. I. relates to our reporter her experience with the wonderful curative properties of what is destined soon to be the standard and leading specific of the whole wide world, for kidney and liver diseases, etc. Mrs. D. says:

"Early last spring I was severely afflicted with torpidity of the kidneys and enlargement of the liver, and the kidney disease came upon me so fast and suddenly that before I was scarcely aware of the cause of my trouble I became badly bloated, and my body and limbs very much swollen, so that it was with great difficulty and severe pain that I was able to walk any. I became dreadfully troubled by being short-breathed, so that even a slight exertion or a little exercise would tire me almost to exhaustion, and I was so distressed when I retired nights that I could not sleep, and was very restless. One of my limbs especially had a very severe nervous pain, which always seemed to be more severe at night than at any other time, and would frequently ache so sharply as to arouse me from sleep. I was very nervous and uncomfortable all the time, and was being doctored, and taking all kinds of medicine for this complaint and that and the other, but all to no good purpose, until at about the time when I was tired out and somewhat disgusted and almost discouraged with medicines and doctors, a relative and highly-esteemed friend persuaded me try Hunt's Remedy. I began to take it a few days ago, and am happily disappointed by the result, for before I had used a bottle of it I began to feel relieved, and soon commenced to sleep splendidly. The severe nervous pains in my limb which I had to handle so tenderly do not appear any more, my headache and backache have disappeared, I feel well every way, and rest well at night. The swelling has disappeared from my body and limbs. I am now able to do my housework comfortably and easily. Hunt's Remedy has certainly done wonders for me.

MRS. GEO. DAWLEY."

Safe and Reliable.

A. W. BROWN, M. D., of Providence, R. I., says: "I have used Hunt's Remedy in my practice for the past sixteen years, and cheerfully recommend it as being a safe and reliable medicine."

Hunt's Remedy is purely a vegetable compound, scientifically prepared by a first-class registered Pharmacist, and will surely cure all diseases of the kidneys, bladder, liver and urinary organs.—COM.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!

DR. WM. HALL'S FOR THE Lungs. BALSAM

Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME IS COMING. Your Carpets must be Relaid. DO YOU want to save time, temper and backaches? The EXCELSIOR CARPET STRETCHER and Tack Hammer combined will lay your Carpets with EASE. EVERYONE says, "Just the thing, we are delighted with it." For sale by THE HARDWARE TRADE generally. Circulars free. Sample by mail, post-paid, $1.00. Address R. W. MONTROSS, Sole Manufac'r, GALIEN, MICH.

HANDSOME GOLD WATCH. On receipt of $25 we will send a Gent's SOLID GOLD Stem-Winding Watch, and guarantee perfect satisfaction, or will refund the money. Send P. O. order or registered letter. T. MORTON & CO., 803 Broadway, New York.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 100

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR [illegible] Both young and old [illegible] the work. Will prove so for [illegible] Price per Package with directions sealed and postpaid 25 cents, 3 for 50 cts., stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO., Sole Agts, Palatine, Ill.

$65 A MONTH and board for TEACHERS Students, Young Men and Ladies, in a light pleasant Business, in your own county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., 915 Arch St., Philadelphia.

A KEY THAT WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT. SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 25c. Circular free. J. S. BIRCH & Co., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

Money! Patent soon expires, goods must be made now; 1,000 more men, women & children can make from $3 to $10 a day at home. Send 10c for material and begin work. Belmont M'f'g Co., Box 412, Boston, Mass.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

NEVER Out of Legitimate Business. Address Box 1778, BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-Selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

AN ENGLISH VETERINARY SURGEON AND CHEMIST, now traveling in this country, says that most of the Horse and Cattle Powders sold here are worthless trash. He says that Sheridan's Condition Powders are absolutely pure and immensely valuable. Nothing on earth MAKE HENS LAY will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powders. Dose, one teaspoonful to one pint food. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for eight letter-stamps. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

MUSTANG
Survival of the Fittest.
A FAMILY MEDICINE THAT HAS HEALED MILLIONS DURING 35 YEARS!
MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT.
A BALM FOR EVERY WOUND OF MAN AND BEAST!
THE OLDEST & BEST LINIMENT EVER MADE IN AMERICA.
SALES LARGER THAN EVER.

The Mexican Mustang Liniment has been known for more than thirty-five years as the best of all Liniments, for Man and Beast. Its sales to-day are larger than ever. It cures when all others fail, and penetrates skin, tendon and muscle, to the very bone. Sold everywhere.

St. JACOBS OIL TRADE MARK

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

SUPERIOR NUTRITION THE LIFE.
IMPERIAL GRANUM
THE GREAT MEDICINAL FOOD

A Salvator for Invalids and the Aged. An Incomparable Aliment for the Growth and Protection of Infants and Children. A Superior Nutritive in Continued Fevers, and a Reliable Remedial Agent in all Diseases of the Stomach and Intestines.

THIS justly celebrated Dietetic Preparation is, in composition, principally the gluten derived from the WHITE WINTER FLINT WHEAT CEREAL, a solid extract, the invention of an eminent Chemist. It has not only been highly recommended but certified to by a large number of chemists and physicians—representing a very high degree of medical science—as the SAFEST, MOST ACCEPTABLE and RELIABLE FOOD for the GROWTH and PROTECTION of INFANTS and CHILDREN, and for Mothers lacking Sufficient Nourishment for their offspring. Unlike those preparations made from animal or vinous matter, which are liable to stimulate the brain and irritate the digestive organs, it embraces in its elementary composition—That which makes strong Bone and Muscle. That which makes good Flesh and Blood. That which is easy of Digestion—never constipating. That which is kind and friendly to the Brain, and that which acts as a preventive of those Intestinal Disorders incidental to Childhood.

And, while it would be difficult to conceive of anything in Food or Dessert more Creamy and Delicious, or more Nourishing and Strengthening as an aliment in Fevers, Pulmonary Complaints, Dyspepsia and General Debility, its Rare Medicinal Excellence in all Intestinal Diseases, especially in Dysentery, Chronic Diarrhœa and Cholera Infantum, HAS BEEN INCONTESTABLY PROVEN.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS IN THE PRINCIPAL CITIES OF THE UNITED STATES. JOHN CARLE & SONS, NEW YORK.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.

We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

There has never been an instance in which this sterling invigorant and antifebrile medicine has failed to ward off the complaint, when taken duly as a protection against malaria. Hundreds of physicians have abandoned all the officinal specifics, and now prescribe this harmless vegetable tonic for chills and fever, as well as dyspepsia and nervous affections. Hostetter's Bitters is the specific you need.

For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

St. PATRICK'S SALVE TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc., Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 93 Fulton Street, N. Y.

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 186 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

PORTABLE Soda Fountains! Send for Catalogue. CHAPMAN & CO., Madison, Ind.

THE SUN HERE IS ITS PLATFORM;
All the world's news. Everything that interests men and women; good writing in every column; honest and fearless comment; absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 924 18—83

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1883. NUMBER 29.

"FOR MOTHER'S SAKE."

A Scene at a Ferry.

Near the ferry, one winter day,
A woman old, and frail, and gray,
With pins and laces took her stand;
And stretching out a trembling hand
Unto the passing people spake:
"A penny—for your Mother's sake!"

"My Mother!" she had been for years
Beyond earth's cares, and joys, and tears;
Yet, in that windy, wintry hour,
The words had strange and subtle power
To stir fond memories, and make
Me help her—for my Mother's sake!

And then I watched the crowd to see
How many felt the homely plea;
Some heard it not; with faces bent
Toward the ferry, on they went;
But if 'twas heard it left a trace
Of thought or love on every face;

And made all pause. Men old and gray
Dropped her a penny on their way;
And happy mothers kindly stay'd
And made their children give her aid.
Ah! who can tell what memories wake
When giving for a Mother's sake!

Few cared to ask about her life,
To know that she had been a wife,
Had felt a mother's griefs and joys,
And nursed her share of girls and boys.
The cord she touched was one could start
Far deeper echoes in the heart.

Oh, "Mother!" sweetest, dearest word
By which the soul of man is stirred,
To it our love is never cold,
And never can we grow too old
Our better impulses to wake
In kindness, "for our Mother's sake!"

Ah, do not wait until her face
Has gone forever from its place
To do her memory this grace!
But now, while still her heart can know,
While lips can meet and faces glow,
Ere Death the sad regret can make,
Be kindly—"for your Mother's sake!"

—Lillie E. Barr, in N. Y. Ledger.

NONE SO BLIND.

When Captain Thompson built a modest seaside dwelling he had no end of wife's sisters coming to stay with him. He liked it, or them—some of them. If only one would come at a time! He was getting too old to enjoy the stiff breeze such a company created. He preferred Bella. I prefer her myself. She may be twenty-six; a sensible, gracious woman. Where pretty sister's are, somebody's nice brothers will be. Older men and graver came to smoke with the Captain. One of them was a certain Royal McMillan, who, from a crude youth, had mellowed into a rare kind of man, they said who knew. The tide in his affairs that leads to fortune had not long been flood; but he took frequent periods of what more ambitious men would call spendthrift recreation. Being a homeless man, without ties, he was easily persuaded by merry-hearted Mrs. Thompson to stay with them awhile; then another while; then all the while he pleased. He was certainly a pillar of support where the girls were concerned, one to whom nothing was a trouble or a difficulty—a born man of affairs. The girls, admiring his stately figure, charming temper, and—the income—were inclined to love him, also; even the more, when he evidently detected this disposition and was amused by it. But at last, drawn off in other ways, they left him to himself, unless, when he now and then fell to the companionship of Bella, who chaperoned the parties when Mrs. Thompson did not go.

Well as they knew each other it was a rare occurrence to be walking, as they were a certain superb morning, on the hard sands, the long, green rollers breaking twenty feet away at their right, five miles before them of delightful footing, the lighthouse the goal. They were friendly enough to talk or not, as they pleased, and as Bella was the only one who had not sought or avoided him, he felt easy in her presence; so easy that, like his old jacket; he didn't think about it.

At first they talked of the West, and McMillan, who was sometimes retrospective, when he could get any one to listen, had been rather unmerciful in anecdotes of his boyhood, when he suddenly broke a long silence by saying:

"Is there anything more idiotic than the behavior of two people under the delusion called love? Look at the couple before us. They have forgotten we are behind; or, do they suppose they are acting like civilized people?"

"An old maid is idyllic," she said. "To me it is touching." But she suddenly gave a suppressed exclamation of contagious mirth, in which he joined.

"Is it anything particular, Miss Summers?"

"I was reminded of something."

"So was I; do you know I feel convicted by secret guilt. I suspect we have both been fools. If you will not laugh much, I should like to tell a kind of adventure of my own."

"I can sympathize to any extent in a romance."

"I suppose you will call it a romance. I wonder myself how it ever could have happened. It was at the Centennial. I had been lounging about the grounds all day—I delighted in the people—and was resting on a shady bench, when there appeared a remarkable pair—father and daughter, I concluded. They, too, sat down to rest. He was a distinguished-looking man, with white mustaches; she the most beautiful girl I ever saw in my life. Your pretty sister Eve reminds me of her sometimes; but this was a creature divine. I sat and devoured her with my Western gaze, while her companion asked me some questions. And when she turned her eyes full on mine, as she did, presently, I went down—under the waters." He stopped.

"Go on," said she.

"May I have a cigar, Miss Summers?"

"I was going to suggest it."

"Well, I do not know how to go on without giving you the idea that she was too easily wooed. You Northern women are frosty and—perhaps you can not understand?"

"I do, perfectly."

"I was able to be of some service to her guardian and we were constantly together after that first day. He soon found out all about me, and he even left me with her for hours. I reached a desperate point that week."

"Did you not know her name?"

"The old gentleman gave me his card, and though I have it yet I have never been able to read that name. It was a foreign one, and scrawled abominably. I said something as near it as I could get and was never corrected. She took the card and wrote 'Sybylla;' and Sybylla I called her. I made a few attempts to find out about them; but our time was short, and she plainly told me she did not wish me to know who they were. I was to take the present and be patient. It was useless to love her, she said; she was bound by obligations she could not break. If I would be obedient, she would explain before we parted. So one day we left Monsieur sitting in the Spanish office, and with his consent went rambling off by ourselves.

"She was studying to be a singer. She had a voice that promised to be a fortune. Her step-father was educating her as a speculation, I think, and was taking care of her family. She had signed papers binding her to certain promises. Any consideration of love was a breach of contract. I must see it would distract her; for that reason I must know nothing about her. She was ambitious, and believed she had a magnificent future before her; and I believed it, too. When the goal was reached, she said, if I wished, she would send me word. I saw she was right; but I was human and miserable, and—how sweet and tender she was!"

"And is that the end?" asked Bella, who was thinking she must seem very old and aunt-like to this man, or he would never have confided so foolish an escapade.

"I have never seen her since."

"You are still expecting it?"

"I do not know what I expect. I have been to Europe three times. I have heard every debutante. She was seventeen, or so, and of the kind of beauty that might be of any age. The world would be ringing with her name if she were before it."

"You would know her again?"

"Know her!" he exclaimed, looking down at her. "How strange a question. Here is the hulk of an old boat, Miss Summers; you look flushed and tired. Will you sit down? I do not dare ask you what you think about this piece of foolishness."

"It is just that, isn't it?" Then he looked disappointed. "It is very pretty, you know." That was not what she wished to say, either, so she went on:

"She would be twenty-five or more if she is living."

"She isn't dead!" he exclaimed. "There was a promise about that. She has married, probably, some Prince or nobleman. I have about 500 photographs of the great ladies abroad; not one is she."

"She may have lost her voice; she may be poor with that family she told you of, and too proud, in such a case, to send you any message."

"That idea has never occurred to me; but I am rich now; I could assume any obligations."

"I hardly like to suggest it, for it may be a mistake, and cause annoyance," Bella began. She turned her head so he could not see her face very clearly. "But such a person I once knew about. She answers your description in some ways—the time, the age, the voice—but she was ill and lost it."

"Not married?"

"No; do not be so eager about it, Mr. McMillan; you are, indeed, a boy. It is only a suggestion that may lead to nothing, or worse, to disappointment. You know I have had a good deal of experience, and since you have told me the story you must have a little advice, too. She has probably changed in many ways—in face, you may be sure; for such beauty as you describe is all light and color, and goes. You are not the same, either. You have different tastes and opinions. Six years is a life time at that age. You were younger than your years then; you have made your fortune since. Don't you know Captain Thompson thinks there were never such pumpkin pies as his mother used to make; nor such ginger-bread, and do we not know he is unappreciatingly eating better every day of his life?" He did not seem to heed this wisdom much.

"I shall not be easy until this thing is settled one way or the other. I must see for myself. Will you give me this information?"

"When we reach the house," she answered.

"If you could do it now I might be able to leave to-night," he said.

She took the note-book he had opened and wrote a few lines in it. She knew that he would soon come to a blank wall in his search for the unknown.

"I was at the Centennial that month," she suggested, gently.

"Everybody was, I think," said he, looking out at sea.

Bella sighed. "A cigar is a great comfort, isn't it?" she remarked; but he did not hear her; his head was in his hands. She, perceiving he had forgotten her, let her eyes dwell on him. A light came into them, her cheeks glowed, the repressed, resigned look of a woman grieved passed away. She was again eighteen, and wildly indiscreet. But, yes, she would do the same again for just that happy week.

"Well," said he, presently, "shall we go on?"

When at length the straggling party reached the home piazza, McMillan said to Bella:

"I find I can make the six o'clock train, so I'll say good-by. If I have a guardian angel, that being must have inspired me to tell you my story."

"Perhaps it was your bad angel," said she sedately.

"You are not encouraging. Well, again good-by."

She saw him drive off with Captain Thompson, and then locked herself in her room, and wept all the tears she had been keeping back since she parted from him in the gardens of the Centennial.

Would you have told if you had been she?—Detroit Free Press.

* * *

—While the Virginia Court of Appeals was waiting for a case to be taken up the other day, Judge Lacy got off a joke at Judge Richardson, his associate on the bench, which set his honor off on such a violent laugh that he shook a rib out of joint and a doctor had to be called to correct the dislocation.

* * *

—This original composition was produced by a promising youth of Virginia. The subject was "Enterprise:" "Enterprise is a good thing. Columbus enterprised America. If Columbus hadn't done it we should be nowhere, for nobody knew anything about America but the Indians, and they wouldn't tell."

Old Maids.

You are so ready with words of encouragement and helpful sympathy for the weary, overburdened mothers, have you any kind words for another class?—for those who have somehow missed what seems so irksome to many who have it, the blessing of husband and children and home?—for those who at thirty or thirty-five find their youth a thing of the past and the dreaded term "old maid" beginning to fasten upon them? Patiently and lovingly have their best years been given to comfort a widowed father or mother, or in caring for young brothers or sisters. At last the aged parent goes to well-earned rest; the brothers and sisters no longer need her care, and the busy hands of the "old maid" of thirty-five are idle now. No one, not even one little child, depends on her for happiness. What can she do? What work will fill the empty hands and hungry heart? What would she not give for the clasping of little hands, for something, anything, to live for, to work for.

As "misery is said to love company," it might comfort our friend to know that "old maids" are not the only individuals that go through life hungry-hearted. If she will look over the circle of her friends and acquaintances she will find very few with whom she would be willing to change places. She will find many wives married but not mated, many mothers whose children are a source of as much pain and anxiety as of pleasure, and widows whose "crown of sorrow is remembering happier days." This will not lessen the "chill she must feel who warms herself at another's fireside," but it may enable her to bear it with greater fortitude. The best way of managing the stigma of being called "old maid" is to accept the designation heartily, in accordance with the facts, to make no secret of one's age, of one's preference for married life if it could be properly realized, and of the reasons which have compelled single life. These facts need not be obtruded, but when they are suggested their full recognition is the best policy.

It is true, no doubt, that most of those who live unmarried lose not only the greatest happiness but the best discipline of life in never losing the consciousness of self.

Love took up the harp of Life, smote on all its chords with might,
Smote the cord of Self, that, trembling, pass'd in music out of sight.

The blessedness of perfect marriage lies largely in the consciousness that the center of self is in the other and dearer half, and has passed to this center "in music"; or, to use a simile which is exactly in point, the two halves, like binary stars, revolve round a center common to both and common only to both. Each knows all the heart, all the thought, all the being of the other; as the soul and body are one, so the husband and wife are one, in an intimacy as sacred as it is pure and entire, and which in the Scriptures is compared to the relation between Christ and the Church.

Then in the mother-love there is the same or greater abnegation of self. The mother delights in giving her life to her child and for her child if need be, and this devotion, far from requiring an effort it is impossible for her to repress. "Can a mother forget her child?"

It is the want of this discipline and all that it implies, so pleasant to take that it seems to demand another name that prevents the majority of "old maids" from being lovable and lovely, that leaves them narrow and narrowing and "particular." The loving wife easily learns to overlook or make allowance for such faults as she may discover in her husband, and to cure them if they can be cured, not by direct attack, but by gentle and wisely-devised flank movements. She learns also to have her own faults corrected by a loving hand. The mother submits almost with pleasure to the pulling of her hair, the disarranging of her dress, by the dear little hands of her baby, to its "getting into things," and the strewing of its playthings along the floor, and even to the prints of its fingers on the window-pane. It could be wished in some cases that the "divine phrensy" of mother-love were in these matters less pronounced than it is. The single woman has little or none of this special kind of discipline.

"Not even one little child depends on her for happiness. What can she do? What work will fill the empty hands and hungry heart?" And yet orphan asylums are full to overflowing. Innumerable motherless waifs are floating about in society perishing for want of loving care. In such a world as this there is surely enough to do for all who would relieve sorrow and pain and bring joy to the anguished heart and light to the darkened soul. Wisely, indeed, has the "Mother Church" provided "vocations" for the women in her membership, and made it possible for her whose heart overflows with charity and the desire of doing good, but whose hands are empty, to associate herself with schemes of organized benevolence in fields that are always "white to the harvest." Some of our Protestant communion have followed this example, and the "Sisters of Mercy" are happy in their work. Lacking association of this kind, she who is really in earnest to bring happiness to herself by creating it in the hearts of others will find the way open as she advances.

* * *

—A Kentucky farmer announced just before his death that he had saved and hidden seven jugs of gold for his seven children, each jug containg $1,000. He, at the last moment, attempted to tell where the money was to be found, but expired before he could impart the information. Since that time a vigorous search has been maintained, but so far only two of the jugs, each one containing the specified amount of money, have been found—one in the smoke-house, the other in the stable.—N. Y. Sun.

* * *

—William H. Fisher, of Wooster, O., was found standing as immovable and as insensible as a statue the other night, on a Pittsburgh street. His frame was rigid, and his open eyes fixed and glassy. He was taken to a police station and recovered his senses in the morning, but the cause of his entrancement could not be ascertained. He had been in his statuesque position five hours when found.—Pittsburgh Post.

PITH AND POINT.

—"Board wanted"—as the young lady said when she came to a mud-puddle in the side-walk.

—There is no power on earth that can make a good citizen of a man who does not work.—New Orleans Philosopher.

—"I believe," said one man, speaking of another, "that he would do anything—even eat succotash in a strange hotel."

—There appears to be no reason why the English should not now take kindly to that famous American ballad: "John Brown's body lies moldering in the grave."—Boston Post.

—Aristocratic ma, chatting with aristocratic visitor, is interrupted by two little daughters running in: "Oh, ma! ma! we've just seen Uncle Jim! He's upon a wagon, hollerin' barl's!"

—A Piute Princess has just married her twentieth husband. A few enterprising Piute princesses would soon exterminate the male portion of the tribe, and save our Government considerable money.—Norristown Herald.

—A Western paper has an elaborate article on "Some Causes of a Monetary Stringency." If there are any new causes we don't want to hear anything about them. The old causes are about all we care to wrestle with.—N. Y. Graphic.

—A gentleman who has been thinking of buying a hack, having visited a menagerie, comes home radiant with joy. "I'm going to buy one of them zebras," he says: "one of those rifled horses. They must carry much further than the ordinary sort!"

—A man has invented a chair that can be adjusted to 800 different positions, and yet a man who suspected his wife was going to ask him where he was the night before [illegible] a position in that chair which seemed comfortable.—Boston Transcript.

—Latin in a drug store must come down. The green boy learning the druggist's trade has too good a chance to poison customers by mistake where everything is covered by a language he does not understand. Medicine should be taken in straight English.—N. O. Picayune.

—A longshoreman entered a coffee and cake saloon in Barclay street on Friday, and, after eating a plate of fish cakes, called for "a cup ov coffee an' pace ov poi." "Vot kind uf py?" asked the German attendant. "Quinz poi." "Mintz?" "No, quinz, ye thick-headed Dutchman. Do I look loike a man that 'nd ate mate on Friday?"—N. Y. Herald.

—No, gentle Cockney, the George Washington, of whom you seem to have heard for the first time, was never "a 'orse breeder." We have an indistinct recollection, however, that on one occasion he took a Bull by the horns and, as the Irishman said, "gave him a good baiting." George was rather a genius in that line, and if you will look the story up when you return to "Hold Hingland" you will find some reference to him in the British archives.—Chicago Herald.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Some Swedish manufacturers of matches are proposing to set up a large factory in northern New York.

—Glass shingles are now being manufactured at Pittsburgh, which are said to be more durable and impervious to rain than slate or any other material.—Pittsburgh Post.

—A paper watch has been exhibited by a Dresden watchmaker. The paper is prepared in such a manner that the watch is said to be as serviceable as those in ordinary use.

—A German patent has just been taken out for the manufacture of bottles, etc., from cast iron, containing twelve per cent. of silicon, a compound which is said to resist action of the strongest acids.

—Dr. Quesneville stated before the Societe d'Hygiene that he had preserved water potable for more than three years by adding to it half a grain of salicylic acid for each quart. It is recommended for use in expeditions in warm climates.

—After a long consideration of means for stopping a ship suddenly when emergency requires, a German has adopted the principle of a recoil of a gun as the only feasible basis for experiment. He proposes to fasten on the front of the ship an immense cannon charged with some powerful explosive and ready to be fired by electricity at a moment's notice. He supposes that the recoil would exactly counterbalance the momentum of the ship, the armament, of course, being proportioned to the tonnage.

—In a letter to a friend in Berlin, Prof. Nordenskjold lately wrote as follows: "As for my expedition to Greenland, it is my intention, starting from Auleitsivikfjord on the west coast in sixty-eight degrees thirty minutes north latitude, to push into the interior. Relying on the fact that all the winds which reach the coast from the interior are dry and comparatively warm, I believe, contrary to the prevailing opinion, that the interior is free from ice. I further believe that, under the meteorological conditions now existing south of eighty degrees north latitude, ice-covered continents are a physical impossibility."

—The increasing scarcity of tallow of animal origin has attracted the attention of candle and soap manufacturers to a vegetable grease introduced into Europe toward 1848, and the use of which is steadily growing in France and England. The tallow tree is of Chinese origin; it grows also in the northwest of India, and has been introduced into South Carolina, where it has been cultivated for ten years. It produces a fruit the core of which is covered with a layer of thick tallow, and contains a yellowish aromatic oil, used in the same country as a heating agent. After the plucking, which takes place in July in the south and in October in the north of China, hot water is poured on them and the grease is skimmed off after getting cold with spoons, the tallow, molded into the form of bamboo canes, is directly brought into commerce.

Official Corruption in Cuba.

Official corruption is apparently rampant all through the Cuban civil service. Said a Cuban tax-payer to the writer recently: "It would be bad enough to have to pay the awful taxes we do, but it is doubly sickening to have to pay those taxes and know that an immense proportion is coolly pocketed by the Spanish officials." This same gentleman showed me a local tax bill for his house fully paid and receipted. He then pulled out two later unreceipted bills covering exactly the same period, but with "penalty" taxes—for delay—added. The conclusion was irresistible that the first tax had been stolen without entering it on the books at the Tax-office. I have heard, too, from the best authority, of a case where a planter who had gone up to pay taxes on a plantation sold for $300,000 had been invited by the officer to fix the amount at $150,000 and "divide" the tax on the balance. Indeed, it is perfectly amazing here to find how universally accepted is the notion of deep-seated and general official swindling. Some little incidents throw a side-light on the evil. For instance, the regular fee is twenty-five cents for getting a passport vised at Havana before leaving the island. Go to the Government office in the city and try the experiment of not offering an extra fee. You may wait one, two, three days before the passport is handed back. But offer a dollar, and "presto," the little instant of work is done and the document returned. If people here who ought to know—American residents and respectable Cubans—can be half believed, the degree of public swindling would be positively ludicrous, could crime ever be made funny. They aver that Cuban offices are regularly bartered in Spain to men who come over as civic pirates to prey on the island. I have heard of the case of one Customs officer who came from Spain after paying there $10,000 for his place. In two months, as the story goes, he was removed, that his position might be sold over again. "Never mind," said he, "in those two months I made $20,000." No doubt many of these stories are exaggerated or fictitious; but if every one of them was a lie, the undoubted and palpable fact that every one believes them seems enough to sap the confidence and energies of a sturdier race than is found in Cuba.

The vices of the Spanish office-holding class are reflected deeply on those lower orders with whom the stranger has to deal. Of all the places in the world prolific in petty swindles Havana takes the palm. The hucksters, money changers, hotel interpreters, and everybody of the genus cheat with a coolness and hardihood that smacks of genius, and, when detected, calmly lower their price, smiling as at a joke. They have easy scope for fraud in the currencies of the island, which are enough to puzzle more experienced brains than the tourist's. Paper money (depreciated in gold 50 per cent. and not a full legal tender), Spanish gold, Mexican and American coins, greenbacks, all circulate in most puzzling relations of value. Many of the paper bills and shinplasters are so faded, torn, and dirty that the wildest stretch of fancy is required to attribute to them value; while the complexities of foreign exchange caused by this hodge-podge of hybrid currencies are most curious and whimsical.—Havana Cor. N. Y. Evening Post.

Mrs. Caudle in Zuni.

K'ia-wu troubled herself much with her husband's actions. They usually slept along the opposite side of my little room. Night after night, hour after hour, I have heard her, in the peculiar sing-song tone of her race and sex, lecture the silent Governor. The darkness would grow deeper, the embers on the hearth fade to ashes, but the theme lost neither interest nor voice. It used sorely to provoke me; and in my own language, hopelessly striving to sleep, I would sometimes curse both the persistency of the Zuni Caudle and the silence of the matrimonial stoic. The voice would change but not cease. "Ho! the younger brother is thoughtful; to-morrow I will fix his bed better," it would say; and the Governor, filling the exclamation with the most perfect understanding of the situation, would ejaculate, "Humph!" but no more. Undisturbed, the current would then flow on until later, by considerable distance of the stars, the tone would die away. A moment of dead silence, then a cough from the Governor, followed by the bland inquiry:

"Is that all?"

"What more should I say, talkless?" the old woman would reply, in a most injured and ill-controlled tone.

"Well, then" (with a yawn), "let's go to sleep, old girl (o' ka-si-ki), for it is time, and the younger brother is restless." With which he would turn over, cough again, and lapse into silence, hopeless to the tongue-weary woman, as evinced by her long-continued, half-smothered sobs.—Frank H. Cushing, in the Century.

They Settled.

Two men were wrangling in front of the City Hall the other day, when one of them called out:

"I tell you I don't owe you no five dollars!"

"I say you do!"

"And I won't pay it!"

"Then I'll sue you!"

At this point a pedestrian halted and inquired of the one:

"Do you honestly owe him?"

"Not a penny, sir!"

"And will you sue him for five dollars?" he asked of the other.

"I will!"

"Give him seven dollars," continued the pedestrian to the debtor—"give him seven, and be glad to. If he sues he's sure of a verdict, and your expenses will reach at least ten dollars. Give him seven and be thankful that you are beating two lawyers, a justice and a constable, six jurymen and two witnesses out of their fees."

A satisfactory settlement was made on the spot.—Detroit Free Press.

—A Boston paper speaks of having a reformed plumber in that city, and has thereby wrecked what little credit it had for veracity, forever.

Our Young Folks.

PUZZLED.

"Well—whose boy am I, anyway?—
I fell down cellar yesterday
And gave my head an awful bump
(If you had only seen the lump!);
And Mamma called me when I cried,
And hugged me close up to her side,
And said: 'I'll kiss and make it well,
Mamma's own Boy. How hard he fell!"

"When Papa took me out to play
Where all the men were making hay,
He put me on old Dobbin's back;
And when they gave the whip a crack,
And off he threw me, Papa said
(When I got up and rubbed my head
And shut my lips and winked my eyes):
'Papa's brave Boy. He never cries.'

"And when I go to Grandma's—well,
You'd be surprised if I could tell
Of all the pies and ginger-cakes
And doughnuts that she always makes,
And all the jam and tarts and such,
And never says: 'Don't take too much,'
'Because,' she says, 'he must enjoy
His visit, for he's Grandma's Boy.'

"And Grandpa says: 'I'll give him soon
A little pony for his own.
He'll learn to ride it well, I know,
Because he's Grandpa's Boy.' Ho! ho!
And plenty other people say:
'Well, how are you, my Boy, to-day?'
Now, can you tell me, if you try,
How many little boys am I?"

—Sydney Dayre, in N. Y. Independent.

HOW PAPER MONEY IS MADE.

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIEND:—I have said to myself, over and over again, to-day, that I must write you and tell you about something which has interested me very much, and which I am sure will interest you. You will open your eyes a little, perhaps, when I tell you it is about how money is made; but I don't mean by that quite what your papa and business men mean when they talk about making money. What I really want to tell you is about the place where the handsome dollar and five dollar and ten-dollar bills are printed, and something about how it is done.

Yesterday I went through the immense building, which is a block in length, and is called the Treasury Department. It is owned by the United States. Here all the paper money is made for all the banks in the country—every dollar of United States money.

A guide showed me through the immense building, and I had an opportunity of seeing pretty much the whole process of making paper money. How much do you suppose is made thus in a day? I won't bother you with any figures, but if you could have as much as is made there in half an hour, you could live comfortably on it all your life, I venture to say. Almost a million of dollars of old, worn-out money is counted and destroyed there daily. Count a thousand, see how long that takes; then count eight hundred times as many, and you will get at about the number of dollars of worn-out money destroyed every day. Of course new bills are printed to supply the place of those worn out and destroyed.

When they are destroyed they are first counted by several persons, so that there can be no mistake, and the amounts marked. The money is then placed in a large receiver of iron which is nearly the shape of two tin pans with the edges shut together, only very much larger—six or seven feet in diameter. To this iron receiver there is a door which is locked with three locks, each lock requiring a different kind of key. Three men, who are appointed in accordance with law to witness the destruction of this money, have each one of the keys to this door. No one of the men can lend his key to either of the others or to any other person. So you see the door can't be opened without all three of the men are present. Now at the proper time of day these three men get together and each one takes his key and they unlock the three locks of the door, which is then opened. All this old money—so many hundreds of thousands of dollars—is then carefully placed in the receiver, the door is closed and the three men securely lock it. Water is then let in through a pipe and a machine inside beats and grinds all these hundreds of thousands of dollars into the finest pulp. When it is sufficiently ground it is taken out and used to make paper of. No one would suppose the wet pulp that comes out of the receiver had been money only an hour or two before.

A box stood near with perhaps six or eight bushels of pulp in it, which, I was told, was the amount destroyed the day before. You will notice the exceeding care which is taken in counting the money to be destroyed and in its destruction, so that none of the money intended to be destroyed shall be stolen or lost, and so again go into use as money.

Everything in regard to making the money appears to be conducted with the same care, so that it is hardly possible for one person to be dishonest, or even to make a mistake, without the dishonesty or mistake being discovered.

As I said before, new bills are printed to take the place of those destroyed, and also to supply money required to be used in the country. It would have been very interesting to you to have seen the new money made. If you will look very carefully indeed at a new bill, you will notice that it is made of a peculiar kind of paper—very different from newspaper or the paper which papa writes on. It is very tough. Perhaps papa can show you one other peculiarity which is very singular. Take a new bill and you will find in the paper itself something that looks like a fine kind of hair running through each bill in one particular place. Now, that paper is made just so in order that no one may be able to counterfeit the bills, for the Government takes care that no one shall ever get even a sheet of that paper. So if a bill hasn't got those hairs running through it in a particular place, we know at once it is worthless, or, as we call it, a "counterfeit" bill.

This paper is first made in large sheets, and every sheet that comes in to be printed is carefully counted, so that if a single sheet were stolen or lost the theft or loss would be promptly detected. When the paper comes in, in great packages of these large sheets, each sheet is carefully moistened so that it will take up the ink properly, and is then placed under a press, when a die or stamp of the most perfect workmanship makes an impression, of one color only, on one side. When it becomes dry it is moistened again, and is again placed under a press, and another impression of another color is made, and this process is repeated many times, till all the colors of both sides have been impressed. This printing is done in sheets, several bills being printed at once on one sheet. After this is done the sheets are dried and put under great pressure to take all wrinkles out and make them entirely smooth. The bills are then trimmed and separated by machinery, and numbered by a curious little machine that changes its number at every impression, thus: 1, 2, 3, 4, etc., so that no two bills of the same kind have the same number on them.

After the numbering the bills are ready to be counted (you see how careful they are to count the sheets and count the bills—oftener, indeed, than I have told you of—so as to avoid the possibility of a single dollar being lost or stolen among all the millions and millions of dollars of paper money that are printed), and after being counted they are placed in packages to be sent away through the country to the banks and sub-treasuries.

This was all new and strange to me. I had an excellent opportunity to observe it, as my pass permitted me to go among the workmen, and an efficient and very polite guide took great pains in explaining everything to me. But don't you think it must take a good deal of care to look after such an immense business of making money?

Very truly, your friend,
MAX HARKAWAY.

—Christian Union.

A Safe Rule.

Clinton Mills went into his mother's room with a light heart and a bright face.

"Mother," he said, "is it not a splendid day for a drive. I am going to tell John to get out my pony, and then I am going to take my cousin down to the beach. It will be great fun."

"Have you learned your lesson, Clinton?"

"O no; I forgot," said Clinton. "But what if I do not learn that stupid lesson just for once?"

"Your teacher complained of you yesterday, Clinton."

"Well, what if he did?" said Clinton, hastily. "This charming weather is too tempting. I can not stay in the house and fix my mind upon my book."

"But it was just the same in the winter."

"I know it. But then there was the coasting and skating; I could not resist them. It is no great matter if I do not get on very fast in my studies; my father is rich, and I shall have plenty of time to go to school."

"And so, because your father is rich you choose to be an idle, ignorant, useless man?" said his mother, sadly.

Clinton looked both grieved and vexed.

"Why, mother," he said, "how you do talk to me! You know that I do not choose to be such a man as that: I mean to be like my father, and to have every one respect me."

"Then you must begin to form such a character now," said his mother. "When your father was a boy he made this maxim a rule of his life: 'Duty before pleasure.' And however rich you may be you will never succeed in any useful pursuit unless you do the same thing. A baby can not learn to walk unless he uses his limbs, and a boy can not grow wise unless he uses his mind."

Clinton was a lad of sense, he saw that his mother was right. He took his book, threw himself face downward upon the carpet, and so applied himself to his task that he soon sprang to his feet, crying out:

"I know it now, every word of it."

"And there is plenty of time left for your drive," responded his mother, as joyfully. "You can now take your pleasure with a clear conscience."

"So I can," said Clinton. I am so glad that I did not go right off. Father's rule works pretty well, I find."

"Take it for yours, then," said Mrs. Mills. "Wherever you are, in whatever circumstances of life you may be placed, attend to duty before pleasure. Thus duties will not seem half so irksome and pleasure will be doubly sweet."—Baptist Weekly.

A Charmed Mouse.

Did you know that the little creatures were fond of music? Jennie Smith, a Pansy correspondent from Washington, tells of a mouse that made a perfect nuisance of itself in a friend's house.

Various ways were tried to get rid of mousie; but she was too smart for them all, and nibbled around in her small world in high glee over the fact that neither trap nor cat could catch her.

But alas for mousie! It happened with her, as with so many others in this world, pride got the better of prudence.

One fine evening the lady whom she nightly tormented with her sharp teeth had company—a gentleman who played the violin beautifully. As the friends sat enjoying the music, who should steal out of her room but a small mouse dressed in gray velvet.

She had sat with her bit of tail curled up about her, for some time, thinking the matter over. "Ah, but that is too lovely for anything!" she said to herself, as the soft, sweet strains from the violin stole in to her. "Why couldn't I slip out there where I could see as well as hear? I'd risk my being caught; I'm too quick motioned for anybody to hurt me. Now he is playing that lovely tune I've danced to so many times. Dear me! I can't stand that; I just know I can dance charmingly, and I'm so tired of hopping around in this dark room with nobody to see me. I'm going out this minute. I'm not in the least afraid of being caught." And out she went.

For a time all went merrily. Miss Mousie in her gray velvet under the shadow of a friendly rocking-chair skipped about to the sound of music in a way that she imagined was perfectly charming.

At last to her great delight she was discovered and exclaimed over. She came out from the shadow of the rocking-chair in order to give them all a better view. How should she know they were plotting her ruin? Too late she discovered it. Dizzy with dancing, and grown reckless with pride, she actually whirled herself between the feet of a man with a poker. And that was her last dance.—Pansy.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. MAY 16 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
"	[illegible] "	40
"	[illegible] "	20
[illegible] "	[illegible] "	20
"	[illegible] "	10
"	[illegible] "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

RISING SUN has a bonded debt of $4,400.

THE governor makers meet in Louisville to-day at 12 m.

STATISTICS place the number of Baptist in the world at 2.500,000.]

MR. CONKLING is evidently preparing to see his party defeated in 1884.

THE Williamstown Courier and Falmouth Democrat can now sheath their swords, the nomination for State Senator has been made.

CONKLING has the sulks yet, and will do nothing calculated to unite the factions. He is apparently working in the opposite direction.

THE Mason county democratic convention held on the 5th inst., endorsed governor Blackburn's adminstration, being the only county in the State guilty of the act.

A VOTE will be taken on local option in the Hamilton or Big Bone voting precinct at the August election, and the anti-whisky party are very sanguine of success.

MR. KEENE, a Wall Street speculator, sold a picture the other day at a sacrifice of $8,000, and the report that he was weakening financially was soon being buzzed around.

THOMAS L. JONES had 206 instructed votes in the convention that nominated Gov. Blackburn four years ago, and to-day he goes into the convention with 208 instructed votes.

WALTON, Wingate & Co., don't forget the RECORDER while they are bobbing around out west. Bet they are having a jolly time dodging cyclones and killing rattlesnakes.

THE friends of Joseph C. Hughes, of Beaver, are, we understand, prevailing upon his becoming a candidate for representative. He is a practical man, and would make a good representative.

THE thrift of Boone county farmers will compare with that of any other county in the State. They are an industrious, frugal and hospital set of fellows, most of whom can show a healthy bank account.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $7 35@7 50; fair to good packers, at $6 10@7 35; fair to good light, $7 10@7 30; common, $6 10@6 75; culls, $5 00@6 10: stock hogs, $5 50@6 50.

THE second trial of the libel suit of James Francis Malloy against James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, resulted in a verdict of $2,500. Malloy got a verdict for $20,000 on the first trial.

THIS week we announce N. S Walton as a candidate for representative from Boone in the next legislature. Mr. Walton is too well known to need any introduction or praise on the part of the RECORDER.

GEN. GRANT'S mother, Hannah Simpson Grant, died suddenly on the 11th inst., at Jersey City, New Jersey, aged 84 years and 6 months. The remains were brought to Cincinnati and buried in Spring Grove cemetery.

THE Union and Big Bone turnpike company which commenced operation under the new turnpike law, was meeting with serious opposition, and to settle matters has decided to build the road by private subscription. One terminus of the road will be Richwood instead of Union. To this change there is no formidable opposition and the contract has been let, and the neighbors are at peace one with another.

THE cause of education is receiving more attention by the State press than at any time in the past, and the interest in that behalf seems to be reviving throughout the State. The people are becoming alarmed about the inadequacy of their school system, and want it renovated and the funds appropriated in a way that will produce more benefit than has been the case in the past.

GEN. BUCKNER'S chances for nomination for governor by the Louisville convention to-day are as good as those of either Jones or Knott. The followers of the last two named aspirants will very likely become intensely hostile, and when the contest is opened, and it is developed that the vote of the weaker can defeat the stronger by going over to another, it will be done; and Buckner occupies the best position of any of the weaker candidates, when the break comes.

ACCORDING to the Boston American Gazetteer, a paper published nearly a hundred years ago, in 1797, the annual receipts of Tobacco at Petersburg, Virginia, averaged, for ten years up to that date, considerably more than 20,000 hogsheads. Petersburg was a great milling centre at that time also, as, within a radius of a few miles, over 60,000 barrels of flour were annually produced It contained at that time a population of 2,828, nearly one-half of whom were slaves.

THE turnpike from Richwood to Big Bone will be a great benefit to the latter locality and especially to the springs, which, heretofore, have been almost inaccessible. With the pike connecting with the river at Hamilton there is no reason why the proper person can not make Big Bone Springs a popular resort for invalids. The medicinal qualities of the water are understood to be of the best, and with an energetic proprietor a new era will dawn upon Big Bone Springs as a health resort.

THE trial of Phil B. Thompson for the murder of Walter H. Davis, is being put through with a rapidity unusual in murder trials in this state. The defense is represented by Hon. D. W. Voorhees, Hon. J. C. S. Blackburn, Gen. D. W. Lindsay, Col. R. P. Jacobs, Col. T. C. Bell and Col. Phil B. Thompson, sr. The prosecution is in the hands of Lient. Gov. J. E. Cantrill, Hon. W. C. Owens, Capt. Jerry R. Morton and Col. Geo. Denny. Thompson's Cincinnati witnesses testified to what it was claimed they would.

THE Governor pardoned James Siezmore, the other day, sent to the penitentiary from Clay county in 1880, for six years, charged with murder. On his trial he made no defense. His brother, a man with a large family, being the real criminal, he voluntarily took the odium and penalty on himself for the sake of his brother and his family. The brother dying a few days since, made a declaration of his guilt, and gave such unmistakable proof of the truth of his confession that the governor issued the pardon at once when the facts were made known to him.

SEVERAL of those who employed Finnell & McKee and R. C. Green to prosecute their appeals in the Court of Appeals on the supersedeas bonds executed in the bounty fund case, met Finnell & McKee here last Saturday for the purpose of settling their fee as attorneys. Before any conference was had it was evident that the matter would not be adjusted very readily. A meeting was held before noon, and the attorneys informed them that they claimed as a fee ten per cent. of the amount for which they were held by the judgment in the bounty fund case, and ten per cent. of the amount of interest that would have accrued at six per cent. on the judgments against them from the time the judgments were rendered in the circuit court up to the date of the opinion of the Court of Appeals in the appeals on the supersedeas bonds. This did not suit anybody but the attorneys, and the clients, believing they had not bound themselves for more than ten per cent. on the principal for which they were held, refused to shell out the ducats on these terms, and the meeting adjourned for dinner. When the meeting was called to order after dinner, it was soon demonstrated that a good dinner had not wrought any deviation from their morning's determination. To bring about a settlement, the attorneys agreed to take ten per cent. on the principal and five per cent. on the interest that would have accrued on the principal for the time above mentioned. Some of the clients accepted the proposition and settled; others took time to consider, while others say they will not pay any percent on the interest. And the curtain has not fallen on the last scene in the bounty fund case, yet.

THE fire that destroyed the two large lumber yards in the lower part of Cincinnati, Saturday night, was seen by many of our citizens. It lighted up our streets. The loss of property was very heavy.

STATE NEWS.

—Williamstown wants a street sprinkler.

—From almost every part of the state farmers report the destruction of tobacco plants by the bugs.

—Dealers are offering Fayette farmers $1 per bushel for their growing wheat crops, to be delivered at threshing time, and some are selling at that price, while others are holding in anticipation of a rise.

—The latest reports from the tobacco plant beds are to the effect that flies are devouring the plants even in canvassed beds in some sections, and fears are entertained of a scarcity of plants at setting time.—Owen News.

—It is said that fish in the Cumberland river are being killed to an alarming extent with dynamite. A slug of the stuff made to explode in the water will kill all the fish within several hundred yards of it. The persons then pick up and load their skiffs with what they need of the best and let the balance float away.

—Governor Blackburn has returned from an inspecting tour of the camps where convicts are employed, and expresses an opinion that the system of leasing out prisoners is pernicious. He discovered many abuses which he has tried to correct, and found many convicts sick, whom he released from duty by granting them pardons.—Yeoman.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—The Llano live-stock ranch, in McClennan county, Texas, contains 126,000 acres of land, and required two car-loads of wire to fence it.

—A Florida man has grown a radish that was over two feet long, eighteen inches in diameter, and weighed fifteen pounds; also a collard that measured four feet eight inches across the top.

—A negro man living near Griffin, Ga., went with the old members of his family to the field to work, and upon their return found his four-year old girl child, head foremost and dead in a common-sized bucket of water.

—The Ripley (Miss.) Sentinel says that common scrub cows which sold a few years ago in that vicinity at from $8 to $12, are now bringing $25 to $30, with the demand greater than the supply. Texas wants them.

—Capt. Z. M. Mitchell, of Greene, Ga., has a rooster only five months old weighing five and a half pounds; and a pullet from the same brood and of the same age, has laid two litters of eggs, and is now setting on them.

—Albany, (Ga.) special: Several Texans have been buying up cattle in the wire-grass region around here for several weeks for shipment to Fort Worth, Texas. It is said they have thus far procured about 4,000 head at an average of $7 50 per head.

—As an instance of the ingenuity which can be brought out by necessity, the Columbia, (La.) Herald cites the fact that Bob Butler, who is to be hanged on May 4, made a saw of the buckle on his pants, and constructed out of a splinter of wood a key with which he unlocked the chain that bound him to the floor.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Z T Bondurant, Plff
vs
Salathiel Beemen, &c. Defts } Notice of sale in Equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 12 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit: On Gunpowder creek, bounded by the lands of C L Crisler, the late Jonathan Utz and others and contains 65 acres and 40 poles, being the same now occupied by Salathiel Beemon and generally known as the Piles Mill tract, and has upon it the finest mill seat in the county.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $1,437.58. Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

John P Scotts, Devisees, Plffs
vs
America Scott, &c. Defts. } Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 12 months at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Two houses and lots in Burlington, Boone county, Ky. The first house and lot were the homestead of the deceased, bounded on the North and East by Edward Fowler's lots, on the South by an alley which separates it from Jessie Kirkpatrick's property, on the West by Jefferson street.

The second house and lot is the east half of lots Nos. 3, 46 and 66 as represented on the plot of said town of Burlington, bounded thus: Beginning at the Southeast corner of lot No. 46 at the edge of Gallatin and Garrard streets; thence with the latter street Northwestwardly 210 1-2 feet to the Northwest corner of lot No. 46 at the edge of Garrard street and alley No. 5; thence along the edge of said alley Westwardly 105 feet; thence running parallel to the first line Southwestwardly 210 1-2 feet to the north line of Gallatin street; then eastwardly 105 ft. to the beginning, excepting therefrom the lot conveyed by the grantors to the trustees of the Universalist church at Burlington. See Deed Book 31, page 152.

The purchasers will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C.

FOR RENT.

About 25 acres of good grass, with plenty of running water, or will pasture stock. Enquire of W. S. ACRA, Burlington, Ky.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

Every Man His Own Boss.

How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was suffering from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC. I never met [illegible] ... so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & Co., Chemists, New York.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court Kentucky.

Lystra Aylor, adm'r. of Frances Helm, Plff.
vs
Ephreim Helm, Defts | Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a Judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April Term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June, 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of six months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the Judgment to wit:

Lying on the Mineola and Anderson Ferry Turnpike Road: Beginning at a Beech and an Elm tree and stake on the north corner of Mrs. Ann H. McNeal's land, thence with her line S 43¼ E 73 3-5 poles to a stone a corner between the lands of Mrs. Ann H. McNeal and J. H. Walton in the center of the Mineola and Anderson Ferry turnpike road; thence with the center of said road N 80¼ W 88 3-5 poles to a stone in the old line between Alonzo Gaines and Lewis Helm; thence with it S 47¼ W 51 poles to the beginning containing 11a, 2r, and 36 p.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Amount to be raised by sale, $972 01.
Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C

NOTICE.

I take this method of contradicting the report being circulated in this neighborhood that a note with my name and my father's attached has been presented or seen in Aurora in the hands of another, and I will give $20 reward for the arrest of any person presenting a note for any amount with our names attached.

I also notify those who are circulating false and slanderous reports in regard to me in this neighborhood, if their slanderous and vile tongues are not at once stopped, that I will prosecute them to the extent of the law. J. W. RICE, Bellevue, Ky

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonahtan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green.
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.
dec. 20-6m

HARNESS & SADDLES,
ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY.(—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,

I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
TRADE MARK.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '18.

FLORENCE, - - KY.

NOTICE!

Just received a full and complete line of
DRY GOODS
of the finest selections, and the latest styles which will be sold exceedingly low. Also NOTIONS,
HATS & CAPS,
BOOTS & SHOES,
GROCERIES, &c.

Too numerous to mention. Almost everything that the people may want will be found in my Stock. No trouble to show goods, and orders filled promptly. Call and examine my Stock and Prices before purchasing elsewhere.

☞ I feel exceedingly thankful to my friends and patrons for past favors and hoping you all will call again.

Truly Yours,
W. C. TANNER,
Florence, Ky.

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

CENTRAL HOTEL,
BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,
(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

W. J. RICE.
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
38-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Op 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.
(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.

Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.

A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & Co., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!

Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO.,
Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles works of character; great variety; low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

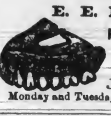
Bellevue—M. B Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Cemer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.



E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its [illegible] to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. I have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

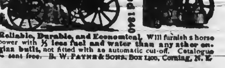
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles, $5.

FREE 25 USEFUL ARTICLES, & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, Size 5 x 8, and an illustrated Book, to all who send two 3c. stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines.
2 to 100 Horse Power.
Established 1840
Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will furnish a horse power with ⅓ less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1200, Corning, N. Y.



$1000 REWARD
For any machine hulling and cleaning as fast for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR Double Huller. It has made $100 often in ONE DAY
VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE. NEWARK MACHINE CO. NEWARK, O.
W. N. STAGE, Gen. Travelling Agt. Louisville, Ky

THE "DIXIE" COOK BOOK

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.

S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Local News.

There will be a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee, of Boone county, in Burlington, Ky., at 1 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 4th, 1883. A full attendance is desired, as matters of importance are to be considered.

J. G. FURNISH, Chmn.

Read the new ads. in this issue.

"Fried" chickens are 30 cents a piece.

All signs failed in dry weather again.

Miss Fannie Rice's new organ is an Estey.

The cool weather checked the growth of vegetation.

J. M. Conner received a large lot of wool last week.

This town is well supplied with Jumbo literature.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure at W. E. Piper's. 2t

Mine host at the Boone House is papering and painting extensively.

F. Riddell has moved his law office to a room over Dudley Rouse's store.

BORN—On the 14th inst., to W. L. Gedge and wife, of Covington, a fine girl.

S. P. Brady, W. M. Rogers and John J. Rucker are supervisors of tax this year.

Don't say anything to W. H. Grant about his handsome present, a new pipe.

We always have a cold spell in the month of May, generally about the tenth.

Attorney Hughes has been going in on his muscles of late, cultivating his garden.

The painters' business is pretty lively hereabout this spring, and artisans of that class are in demand.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla cures all blood diseases, eradicates every impurity, and renews the vital forces.

In some neighborhoods in this county tobacco p[illegible] are not doing well, and a scarcity of plants is feared.

Attorney Tolin had splendid luck hooking or slipping up on fish last week. He took some fine ones.

O. P. Conner sold a fine alderney cow for $80 the other day. Alderneys are the style now and style costs money

The ground got so dry and hard that some persons were compelled to suspend plowing and planting last week.

The four-legged town hog is a very unceremonious caller. It walketh in at any hour of the day without warning.

One beef killed in three weeks by the local butchers. Cattle are scarce and price of beef high—best cuts 15 cents per pound.

Good many sheep dying in this part of the country. The cause of such mortality among the woolly tribe cannot be accounted for.

A heavy locust bloom indicates a good crop year, say the observant, and according to this, good crops will be made this season.

J. O. Huey was in town the other day making trouble with the boys. He was inviting them to a road working over on 'opossum path.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

A gentleman representing a mercantile agency in an interior town in Ohio, was here, last week, informing himself as to the financial standing of Boone county people.

Saturday S. A. Palmer's shop caught fire in the roof, and when discovered had developed a healthy blaze which was extinguished with one or two buckets full of water. No alarm was given.

The Boone County Recorder says: "There are two or three cases of small-pox in Rising Sun, but no cases are near the business part of the city." Of course, when the B. C. R., finds out there was but one case, and none at all now, it will say so.—Rising Sun Recorder.

The commissions for the Justices of the Peace elect have been received by the County Clerk, and the County Judge requests us to say for the benefit of the Justices of the Peace and Constables elect that it is necessary that they shall come forward and qualify before the first of June next.

Two negroes in a small spring wagon, with the horse under a run, came down Jefferson street, Sunday, and in turning the corner at Washington street one of them was thrown overboard, and for about five minutes it seemed that he would journey through the valley. After being worked with for a while he was able to leave town.

A piece of paper thrown in the grate at Mrs. Dempsey's Sunday, about noon, went up the chimney, and falling upon the roof, set fire to the shingles. A timely discovery of the situation by Mrs. Dempsey, who was at the barn, saved the building from destruction. The alarm being given the bucket brigade was soon on hand, but the flames had been extinguished.

Ray Snyder and Joe Der, of Bullittsville, probably were the most successful tobacco raisers in the county last year. They cultivated about 12 acres of tobacco, produced [illegible] pounds per acre, and sold it at an average of $15 per 100 pounds. They gave one-half the crop as rent. They will cultivate the same land in tobacco again this year.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Gene Riley, of Union, graced our town with his presence, Sunday.

Elzie Harper and family, of Hebron, spent Sunday with Mr. Cowen and family.

Judge Geo. R. McKee and Gen. Jno. W. Finnell, of Covington, were in town Saturday.

John H. Kelley, of Elrod, Indiana, was in town last Saturday, looking hale and hearty.

Harry Piper, having enjoyed Burlington society for a few days, left for home last Friday.

Mason Minor and wife, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., were visiting his father's family Sunday.

Miss Nettie Gardner returned, Sunday, from a week's visit to Miss Kittie Riddell, near Hebron.

Alex Buckner and sister, Miss Sophia, of Kenton county, made Burlington a flying visit last Saturday.

Miss Annie Cowen returned, Saturday, from visiting her brother, Dr. L. C. Cowen, of Rabbit Hash.

O. T. Porter, our progressive friend, of Petersburg, was in town Saturday. He spent Sunday with R. W. Neel and sisters.

Hon. Richard Cooper, son of the lamented Robert Cooper, of Bullittsville, is among friends in this county, having arrived last Saturday.

On the Wing.

PAOLA, KAN., May 7th, 1884.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

From Warrensburg we went to Holden, where we spent a day with Mrs. Johnson, sister of J. J. Lillard, of Boone county, Ky. Leaving Holden we went to the Chicago of the west, Kansas city, which has from 80,000 to 100,000 inhabitants. Here we met with our friend and relative T. D. Walton, formerly of Boone county, Ky. He showed us about the city, and from the top of the hill above the Union depot is a grand view. The summit of the hill is 100 feet or more above the city, and from it you have a view of the city and all the railroads entering it. To appreciate the scene [illegible], view it for himself. We will only say it is sublime. We accompanied T. D. Walton to his home, Egerton, Johnson county, Kansas, 35 miles west of Kansas city, where we stopped until Monday morning. Mr. Walton is in the real estate business, and is doing well. Here we met Wm. Fisher, once a citizen of Petersburg, still following his old trade. He is now 81 years old, and enjoyes good health. We have visited Olathe, county seat of Johnson county, Kansas; and Spring Hill a station on the Kansas City and Fort Scott road. We have looked at a great many farms that are for sale. Paola, from where we write, has a population of about 4,000, and is the nicest laid out town we have seen. It is very dry here. Corn is up, is looking well and has been plowed. Wheat, oats and potatoes look well, and everybody is in good spirits.

WALTON, WINGATE & Co.

County Court.

Mrs. Catharine Tousey appointed adm'x., of the estate of Chas. Tousey.

Cy Crisler granted tavern license to keep hotel in Burlington.

W P Conyers granted tavern license to keep hotel in Walton.

E L Northcutt granted tavern license to keep hotel in Florence.

Vallorus Morse's will probated, time given Mary R Morse to qualify as Exr.

Mike Clore granted merchants liquor license for Hebron.

Ben Stephens, of Bullittsville, granted merchant's liquor license.

Viewers appointed to view the place where R D Brashler wants to erect a gate across the public road.

Benj. Lampton, Jr., released from paying poll-tax erroneously assessed.

Veiwers appointed to establish a passway for H C Berkshire—M S Rice, J H Lawell and Jonas Clore appointed viewers.

Henry Pfalzgraf released from payment of county levy in the future.

G T Gaines released from working on public road.

Real Estate Conveyances.

B F Bedinger to Griffith & Jackson, 1 acre at Richwood station—$3,800.

Geo. W Brown to John Peno, 1⅛ a, near Constance—$97,50

Fred Pfalzgraf to Jacob Foshag, lot in Gainsville—$500.

R K Conner to Rachael Anderson, 3r 22 p., near Richwood—$64.

J M Stephens to Jas A Hight, lot in Walton—$338.

S R McPherson to J C Kennedy, 1 a, 25 p, near Verona—$52.

W G Stansifer to R K Conner, 3 a, 16 poles near Union—$116 25.

Thos E Garrison, &c., to Jno S Mason about 1 a, near Union—$45.

Wesley Rice to Joshua Rice 133 a, on Middle Creek—$2,500.

Julia S Dinsmore to Jno E Walton, 117 a, on Middle Creek—$2,000.

Johnson Clore, &c., to Lystra Aylor, 112 a, near Hebron—$6,000.

Marcus Collins to Eva Zimmerman, ½ a, at Aurora Ferry—$180.

He Accepts the Call.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

You will please express my thanks to those who have manifested their esteem for me, in requesting me to become a candidate for the Legislature, and announce me a candidate, subject to the action of the democratic party, with that good, old, familiar promise, that "if elected, I will discharge the duties of the office to the best of my ability."

N. S. WALTON.

Nice shower Monday, but not enough, and weather too cool.

The high sheriff, J. R Clutterbuck, was in town Monday.

M. S. Rouse and wife have a fine daughter at their house.

James Conner shipped about 3,500 pounds of wool yesterday.

Some of our correspondents are n too busy planting corn to communicate this week.

Mr. Cy Kelly, of Bellevue, who has been quite sick for some time is much better.

A fire broke out in Harrodsburg, Monday night, and consumed a large part of the city.

The supervisors of tax commenced their work Monday. They are holding forth in the court-house.

Cut-worms are slaying the corn. Uncle Church Clore and sons, and Asa Cason fear they will have to furrow out and plant over.

The game of ball at Bellevue, last Saturday, between the Burlington-Bellevue club and the Rabbit Hash club, resulted in favor of the former by a score of 26 to 7.

Tuesday, 20 nice two year-old mules, belonging to H. A. Hicks, of Richwood, went through town enroute to Aurora, where they were delivered to a Mr. McGuire, of that place, at $85 dollers per head.

Happy Jack says the reason he is a candidate for the legislature, is because Scott and Walton will lose their reputation if elected, while he cannot be injured in that respect. He wants some good old democrat to send him a bushel of seed potatoes.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Corn planting is over.

The sheep are all sheared.

T. A. Rouse says the fruit will be scarce if the caterpillars are not killed.

Miss Annie Cleyton is very sick with dumb ague.

Potatoes are coming up nicely in this section of the country.

Mrs. Arta Clore and husband, of Indiana, are visiting friends in this neighborhood.

Taylorport.

Harry Piper, the handsome operator, was in town Saturday to witness the game of ball.

Mr. Hugh Kennedy moved into his new residence last Thursday, and started a bakery. We wish him success.

Bluford Berry is very much improved in health, and is able to be out again.

Jas. Berry, Jr., and Chas. Quick have gone to Cincinnati to learn the carpenter's trade.

Our base-ball club played their first match game Saturday with the Bullittsville club, resulting in favor of the latter, by a score of 14 to 13.

Misses Ella Sederberg and Gussie Hinton were in town Saturday. Miss Hinton is the most attractive lady that has visited our city for quite a period.

Constance.

Business is brisk.

Mr. Jacob Hentborn, who has for some time been very low, is able to be out.

Dr. Murat has purchased a fine phaeton.

Jim Loder sold his horse to a Cincinnati man for $200. "Praise the Lord."

Davis Bros. will have to engage one more clerk, to keep the flies off the other two.

Sam Williams has gone to Cincinnati to learn the art of painting.

Joe Bryson has quit shoe making and gone to whitewashing.

The Dry Creek base-ball club has not lost a game this season.

The farmers are very busy at present.

Geo. Brown has sold a portion of the land that he bought of A. G. Winston, to Jno. Peno. Mr. Peno will erect a fine dwelling on it.

Scattersville.

Most of our farmers are done shearing sheep.

We enjoyed ourselves working the roads last week. We had a jolly crowd, and such a good boss.

Some one set fire to a heavy piece of stubble on Gunpowder one night last week, which caused a great deal of excitement.

Mr. James Acra let a fire get the start of him one day last week, while clearing new ground. In trying to extinguish the flames he was taken sick and the doctor had to be sent for.

Mr. Lewis Conner and a Mr. Beemon, of the Florence X-Roads, were down here last week, after seed corn.

Mr. Parsons has commenced moving his mill that he purchased of Dan Bedinger.

Mrs. Jurrey, of Scott county, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Owen Conner.

Plattsburg

Some corn up.

J. J. Loder, of Petersburg, is doing some nice painting in our burg.

Filmore Wingate sold all his tobacco to Lorillard, of New York.

More lightning rod men than enough in this vicinity, and they are all bummers.

W. H. Henseley has the finest piece of wheat in the river bottoms.

J. C. Hensley, who raises more willows than any men in the community, says that the bugs have entirely disappeared.

We get the mail here twice a week from Pete. We get 10 Recorders and about 15 weekly or weakly Enquirers.

Bro. Frob commenced a protracted meeting Monday night, and will continue over the fourth Sunday.

Noah Delph's diamond turned out to be a rock of no value at all.

Orlando Snyder has bought the James Shepherd farm near Petersburg. You can guess the rest.

Arthur Terrill, one of the cleverest little men in the world, was here Monday.

Col. Tom R. Lindsay, of Crittenden, Grant county, was here Thursday, and showed us a piece of silver money that was so old that the moss had growen on it. It is of a quarter denomination and was made in 1724, and is 159 years old.

Sid Gaines is home from Lexington, a full fledged book-keeper.

Jim Loder will go to Nebraska in the fall to take charge of a cattle ranch for his brother, who is a very extensive herder.

John Finn and Morgan Tolin have gone into the shrubbery business. Any person wanting ornamental trees of any kind will please give them a call.

Francesville.

After a protracted absence of nearly one week, we have again returned among those we love, and judging from the broad smiles on the countenances of those we have met since our arrival, they seem as delighted to see us as we are to get back. We regret that our occupation calls us from home so much, as we would much prefer remaining right here the few remaining years we have to live; but such is life. Disappointment is the inevitable fate of men, and we can but abide by the decree of fate.

We find everybody prospering and happy. Corn planting is done, and just now the farmer resteth from his labors.

Billy Hays is holding the strings over a pair of roan mares. His last purchase was from the sale and commission stable of Stephens, Gordon & Graddy, at Bullittsville, a new firm that has recently organized expressly to supply the home market. Billy says they are a responsible firm and fair traders.

The select school taught at this place by Miss Fellows, closed, last Tuesday, with imposing ceremonies. Declamations and recitations by the scholars constituted the programme. The pieces were good selections and were well rendered. All praise is given Miss Fellows.

The remains of old Mrs. Wilbolt were interred in the cemetery at this place last Sunday. Quite a large circle of friends were in attendance.

Mr. James Riley has started a branch store on wheels, at this place, due every Monday morning. Mr. Josh Masters is the gentlemanly clerk.

Mrs. Catharine Huron, has returned from Jessamine county, where she has been visiting her brother.

It snowed some Tuesday morning.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, May 1, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$530,678 11
Overdrafts		137 82
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		41,565 69
Due from other National banks		9,635 61
Due from State banks and bankers		4,961 86
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		3,180 48
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,208 59
Bills of other Banks		4,510 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		102 73
Specie		5,895 00
Legal tender notes		20,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$687,793 80

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,200 00
Undivided profits		20,886 75
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	308,917 44
Due to other National Banks	11,289 28
Due to State Banks and bankers	500 23	320,707 05
Total		$687,793 80

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashire of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of May, 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:

E. J. HICKEY,
M. C. MOTCH,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Sam'l. Delph's, adm'r, vs Noah Craven, &c. and Jas. H. Merick, &c., vs. Saml Delph's, adm'r, &c. } Consolidated cases. } Notice of sale in Equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of six months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment, to wit:

Being lot No. 4, in the division of the lands of Samuel Delph among his heirs, beginning at a stake a corner of lot No. 1; thence 64½ E 51 poles; thence S 24½ W 81 poles to a stone in the road; thence with the road N 84½ W 43½ poles to a stake; thence N 24½ W 48 poles: thence N 62½ E 36 poles to the beginning, containing 25 acres.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Lystra Aylor, &c. Plffs } Notice of vs } sale in
W T Aylor, &c. Defts } equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m, or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction; to the highest bidder, on a credit of 9 months, at the court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

A house and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Ky., bounded thus: Beginning at a stone in the Bullittsville and Dry Creek Plank Road a corner with Mariah Clore; thence S 2 W 26½ poles to a stone in Mrs. Clore's line; thence E 6 poles; thence N 2 E 26½ poles to a corner in said road; thence with its center W 6 poles to the beginning, containing one acre.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to the estate of Andrew Glackin, deceased, will please come forward and settle. Those having claims against the estate will bring them forward well authenticated according to law, and they will be attended to.

N. B. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

NOTICE.

All persons having claims against the estate of John A. Marshall, deceased, will present them properly proven for payment as soon as possible, but before presenting the claim to me they must exhibit it to my attorney, F. Riddell, for examination.

HENRY ROSS, Adm'r.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW.
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office opposite the Boone House.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,
Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accommodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
R O U S E.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

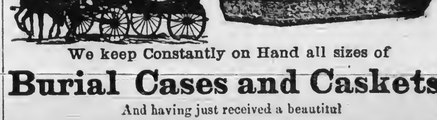
DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

Shoes, Shoes,
Mens' Brogans and Hand-Sewed Stich Downs.
Mens' Fine Dress Shoes.
Boys Fine Dress Shoes & Brogans.
Children & Misses Fine Dress Shoes.
Ladies' Fine Dress Shoes a Specialty.
Mens' Lace Plow Shoes at $1,25, $1,50 and $1 75.

The reliable brands of LAWRENCEBURG PATENT and FAMILY FLOUR all ways on hand. W. E. PIPER.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf28 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.



We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., HEBRON, KY.

$173.75 for a SQUARE or UPRIGHT ROSEWOOD PIANOFORTE, with Stool, Book and Music. Only $30 for an Eight Stop, Sub-Bass and Octave-Coupler ORGAN. Chapel Organs $65, Pipe Organs $94. OTHER BARGAINS fully described in Illustrated Catalogue which is sent FREE with full particulars.
VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME.
Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, · KENTUCKY

Scandinavians in the United States.

The census of 1880 shows that there were then in the United States of America 440,262 persons born in the Scandinavian countries, of which 181,729 were born in Norway, 194,337 were born in Sweden, and 64,196 were born in Denmark.

As the immigration from Scandinavian countries has been very great in 1881 and 1882, it is a fair estimate that there are now in this country over 500,000 persons born in the Scandinavian countries.

By different counts it has been proven that children born in this country of Scandinavian parents number at least as many as their parents and others born in the Scandinavian countries and now living here; so it is not too much to say that the Scandinavian population in the United States now at least amounts to 1,000,000; or that every fiftieth person in the United States is either born in the Scandinavian countries, or is born in this country of Scandinavian parents, and, further, that every 100th person in this country was born in the Scandinavian countries.

Those born in the Scandinavian countries are divided among the States and Territories as follows:

	Norwegians.	Swedes.	Danes.
Alabama	24	119	69
Arkansas	33	211	96
California	1,765	4,209	2,748
Colorado	354	2,172	567
Connecticut	168	2,086	428
Delaware	6	71	36
Florida	79	231	259
Georgia	23	138	53
Illinois	16,970	42,412	6,029
Indiana	182	3,121	583
Iowa	21,586	17,559	6,901
Kansas	1,358	11,207	1,838
Kentucky	21	95	73
Louisiana	78	270	285
Maine	99	988	273
Maryland	108	177	128
Massachusetts	639	4,756	576
Michigan	3,520	9,412	3,513
Minnesota	62,521	39,176	6,071
Mississippi	56	392	99
Missouri	373	3,174	970
Nebraska	2,010	10,164	4,511
Nevada	119	317	350
New Hampshire	79	131	30
New Jersey	229	1,622	1,264
New York	2,185	11,164	3,145
North Carolina	10	24	58
Ohio	178	1,156	642
Oregon	574	983	385
Pennsylvania	381	7,575	945
Rhode Island	56	776	55
South Carolina	5	63	60
Tennessee	25	251
Texas	880	1,293	489
Vermont	10	68	35
Virginia	29	49	60
West Virginia	3	21	38
Wisconsin	49,349	8,138	8,797
Arizona	45	106	151
Dakota	13,245	3,177	1,447
District of Columbia	19	5	45
Idaho	278	323	586
Montana	174	280	190
New Mexico	17	39	23
Utah	1,214	3,750	7,791
Washington	580	648	206
Wyoming	74	249	188
Total	181,729	194,337	64,196

The greatest number of Norwegian-born are to be found in: Minnesota, 62,521; Wisconsin, 49,349; Iowa, 21,586; Illinois, 16,970.

The population born in Sweden is largest in: Illinois, 42,415; Minnesota, 39,176; Iowa, 17,559; Kansas, 11,207; New York, 11,164; Nebraska, 10,174.

Of persons born in Denmark the number is largest in: Wisconsin, 8,797; Utah, 7,791; Iowa, 6,601; Minnesota, 6,071; Illinois, 6,029.

The cities which have the largest Scandinavian-born population are:

	Norwegians.	Swedes.	Danes.
Chicago	9,783	12,930	2,558
New York	733	3,194	1,090
Brooklyn	195	2,848	1,814
Milwaukee	1,025	179	229
Minneapolis	2,661	3,184	204
St. Paul	664	1,897	218

—Fædrelandet og Emigranten.

The Invention of Matches.

"Did I ever tell you what Charles Sumner once said to me about the manufacture of matches?" queried Lucius C. Allin, the veteran armory foreman. "It was about fifty years ago now, when I was in doubt whether it would pay to go into the business, and asked Mr. Sumner what he thought about it. He turned around quick as a flash and said: "Mr. Allin, how many pins do you suppose are made in a year?" I thought there must be a good many millions. 'And how many times,' he continued, 'is a pin used?' 'Perhaps twenty on an average,' I replied. 'Then at least twenty times as many matches will be needed as pins,' he concluded, 'and of course it will pay.' Now, did even Charles Sumner ever size up anything neater than that. I made matches several years, and, not only that, but I invented them. It was away back in the '30s, when I was a boy. I was always fooling with the ingredients, brimstone and the like, till finally I struck an idea. Then I went to work and made a few matches, rather crude, of course, and showed them to a few friends, but they didn't think it would amount to anything, and I didn't either, at first, so I minded nothing about it till 1834, I think it was, when a friend persuaded me to apply for a patent. It was quite a trip to Washington in those days, but in a few days I got word that a Chicopee man had filed a similar application a short time before mine arrived. I was satisfied that I could get the patent by fighting for it, but I didn't think then it would pay, and so I made an arrangement with the Chicopee man by which I was to offer no opposition to his getting the patent, but could have the privilege of manufacturing matches on my own hook. He got the patent and I went into the business. I had quite an establishment on Walnut street, hiring about thirty hands, mostly girls, and kept it till '37, the time of the great panic. The Chicopee man was a drunken peddler, and he went to Boston on a spree, and gambled the patent away to men who have made their fortunes out of it. I had sold matches all through the country, but there was a good deal of opposition to their manufacture. The papers said it was a bid for incendiarism, and many shopkeepers wouldn't sell them. The railroad had got as far as Worcester then, but they wouldn't carry matches, and I had to hire men to drive them through to Boston. There were some other matches in the market that would crack like a pistol when you lit them, and when we put some in a box and set them afire it sounded like a small cannonade. But my matches were like what we have now, and were the first ever made that I know of."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The National Health Society, London, has introduced a form of garment, made of mackintosh, to be worn by those people who are compelled to enter the apartments of persons suffering from contagious diseases. Used in conjunction with a medicated cotton respirator, it is said to be a protection against contagion.

—"What county do you represent, sir?" asked one individual of another in front of a saloon in St. Paul, Minn., one day last week. "I'm not a member of the Legislature," was the reply, "I'm only a private citizen on a drunk."

The Boylston Meteor.

The Associated Press dispatches the other day contained an account of the falling of a most remarkable meteor in the State of Texas at some place near Fort Worth. The preposterous story has not even the poor merit of being original. It is so exact a counterpart of the "Boylston meteor hoax," which people residing in Oswego twenty-two or three years ago will well remember, that there can be but little doubt that the originator of the Texas hoax has read or somehow heard of the Boylston affair.

The "Boylston meteor" business originated in the fertile brain of the late Chester Hull, Jr., who had a positive genius for "sells." He was born in this city, grew up here, and was the "local" on several papers at different periods, the Times included. It was a theory of his that it would not do to let the paper go to press without interesting local news. If something didn't turn up during the day, "Chet" always turned up something. He was at one time employed upon some of the Toronto and Hamilton papers, and it was said of him there by newspaper men that he would get more news out of fewer facts than any other "local" living.

It was while he was doing the local of the Palladium that he caused the meteor to fall in the town of Boylston. It was before telegraph wires penetrated every nook and corner of the country, and it was not long after the opening of the railroad from Rome to Watertown. The information came to "Chet" in a letter, describing the fall of the meteor, its great height, the extent of ground it covered, the distance it had sunk into the ground, and that it was still hot and steaming. It will thus be seen that the Texas story is too near a counterpart of "Chet's" to be accidental. The next day another letter came, after things had had time to cool off a little. The second letter deprecated the "exaggerated statements" sent out the day before, and proceeded to give exact measurements which had been made. As we remember it, the stone as measured was fifty or sixty feet above ground, and had probably sunk into the earth by the force with which it struck some fifteen or twenty feet, and was about as broad as it was high. It fell into an open field close by a piece of woods, and the angle at which the meteor approached the earth could be determined by the slope of the stubbs of the trees in its path, which it cut off as smooth as the work could have been done by a saw. Mr. Hull's account was copied all over the country, and the savants were greatly excited and started for Boylston in large numbers. Many of them had some difficulty in finding the locality of the town upon their maps. Ira D. Brown, who had lived in Oswego previously, was then "local" upon the Utica Herald. He knew just where it was; he had stumped it all through that region of Oswego County, and knew the very man on whose farm the meteor had fallen. He volunteered to pilot a lot of "scientific men" from the Dudley Observatory and other institutions to the very spot, and he was bound to give the world the first accurate description of the wonderful phenomenon through the columns of the Herald. The "scientists," led by Brown, took the Rome and Watertown Railroad to Sandy Creek station, now Lacona, where they hired a farmer with a "lumber wagon" to take what could "pile in." The others engaged a "buckboard." The distance from the station to the "meteor" was about twelve or thirteen miles over as rough and as muddy a road as can be found in Oswego or any other county, which had not been particularly improved by the rains and sleet of the November weather. How the "scientists" enjoyed their "overland ride" to and from the "meteor" can only be judged by the language they used after they returned to the station. It was said to have been more emphatic than "scientific." An "indignation meeting" was held in the fore part of the passenger coach, and the perpetrator of the "infamous hoax" was most emphatically denounced and held up to public execration.

The author of the Boylston meteor hoax, later in life, went to San Francisco, where he originated some of the most remarkable of "facts." Among other things he became an "our own correspondent" of the New York Herald, and wrote to that paper a most glowing account of a voyage made by a steamer from San Francisco to the then recent purchase of Alaska, describing its vast mineral resources and rich diamond mines, which greatly excited the public mind. Immediately after the publication of this letter, which was of course over an assumed name in the Herald, he came out in an article in the paper with which he was connected in San Francisco, and in most unmeasured terms denounced the Herald for publishing such a batch of most preposterous lies, and purposely misleading the public in relation to such a cold, sterile and worthless region of country as every schoolboy knew Alaska to be. "Chet" was never so happy as when putting somebody on a wrong scent, and when any of his victims came to his office to reprove him he was the most innocent of mortals, and was full of denunciations of those rascals who had "misled" him into making such statements, and he could not, for the life of him, understand "how people could lie so!"—Oswego (N. Y.) Times and Express.

American Eyes.

Generalizing about eyes is by no means an easy task, particularly in a city like New York, where the intermixture and intermarriage of races has obliterated or obscured all national types. A lady who assumes to be an authority on such questions avers that dark eyes predominate in this city in the ratio of seventy-five in every hundred, while twenty in every hundred possess blue eyes, and the remaining five eyes are of light gray or hazel. Black eyes, however, are less common than the majority of observers imagine, and it is not often that one encounters a pair of orbs that are absolutely black in all lights. Fifteen per hundred will probably cover the proportion, according to the authority just quoted, and at least ten of these may be relegated to the category of the small, heavy organ, as metallic in its luster as a globe of Pennsylvania coal, but with a dash of cunning in its depths sometimes that tends very decidedly to strengthen one's belief in Darwinism. There is a small black eye with a reddish luster beind it, as if smouldering embers flickered for a moment and then subsided, which must not be confounded with the preceding. The category is rare even in this city of mingled types, and as a rule the owner is a person not to be trifled with. Two notable types of black eyes remain to be mentioned. The first is large, well opened, full of lambent light, limpid, laughing. It dances with mirth, moistens with sympathy; is capable of carrying on a long conversation with all its shades and subtleties without the least assistance from the lips, and when shaded with the long, dark lashes that usually accompany it its glances are so magnetic and irresistible as to make one thank Heaven for its rarity. The next category is large, long cut, half-opened, liquid, sad, slumberous and solemn—the true eye, capable of such reveries of mysticism, such fanatic fires, as colder, Gothic natures can never understand. Tragedy lurks in such orbs as these, and happily for our staid social countenances they are not more than one in a hundred as compared with the mass. The variety of expression of which the eye is capable has been the pons asinorum of the second-rate novelist ever since fiction was invented. Even in the old Greek days the authors of the Milesian tales, of whose versification Bulwer made such a bungle, were troubled to find descriptive epithets. Homer could only describe the royal orbs of Juno by using the epithet of ox-eyed; the goddess had bovine eyes, with the large motion and liquid pupil. But what a range of adjectives second-class fiction has discovered—the second-class fiction of the English language in particular! Eyes sparkle, flash, burn, blaze, flame, yearn, languish, threaten, darkle, lighten; they are haughty, laughing, limpid, liquid, sad, slumberous, solemn, spiritual, dreamy, shadowy, velvety, and so on to the bottom of the column. It is remarkable how writers of the first order despise and discard this jargon. Dickens finally appreciated the finest shades of difference between eyes, but he wasted no adjectives, and when he wished to describe, as he occasionally did, he always employed some distinctive mode. He had observed the vindictive flicker the spot of red light that appears in the eyes of angry persons sometimes, and is due to the fact that the pupil dilates and the rays of light meet and form a blazing point just behind the crystalline lens. When such persons are excited vision grows indistinct and hazy; there is temporary astigmatism. Mr. Obenreizer had the faculty of drawing a vail over his eyes when he meditated evil. That is, he had acquired control over the muscles of the iris, and could contract the pupil until the window of the soul was closed.

Our English oculist's attention was arrested by the relatively large proportion of gray eyes in the United States, although it was what he half-expected to see as a consequence of the admixture of races. And this proportion he finds to be pretty evenly divided between the blue gray and the orange gray. Of course, in speaking of beautiful eyes the great mass of common orbs must be disregarded. They answer very well, no doubt, as things to see with, and thus serve a purpose; but, according to our English authority, no more than one pair of eyes in fifty in England, and not more than one pair in twenty in the United States should be considered at all in a dissertation on the subject. Among the remarkable types of beauty that he saw here he mentioned a woman with large, dark, Eastern eyes, a complexion as white and cold as ivory and abundant masses of flaxen hair turbaning a superb Greek head and Greek features.

In physical structure the American eye is rather less spherical than the European, the antero-posterio diameter exceeding the lateral measurement very considerably on the average. The frontal surface of such an eye is comparatively small, and, as a rule, this variation in the two diameters pretty accurately gauges advance in culture and physical type. The African races possess nearly globular eyes, and the Asiatic shares this peculiarity with the Ethiop. Hence the eyes of the more cultivated races appear smaller and less striking in their beauty than those that Mohammed put beneath the brows of his houris. As intellectual culture advances, gazelle-eyed sirens and ox-eyed Junos vanish from humanity, and if Americans, as a rule, have smaller eyes than the European races, at least they may extract a compliment from the fact, for as taste increases in the delicacy of its perceptions beauty is discovered not to consist in the large and striking, but in the finely molded. It was Mr. Beresford Hope who described Spanish beauty as a confused mixture of hair, complexion and eyes whose recollection follows you like a ghost. Happily such orbs are fast disappearing with the progress of intellectual culture. —N. Y. Tribune.

Conceit of the Hungarians.

The regular Hungarians are the most intensely conceited men on earth on everything pertaining to their own nationality. They believe themselves to be the greatest people on the earth, the only people really worth saving, and this good opinion of themselves runs through everything. There are only 16,000,000 of them, and they are so surrounded as to make their complete absorption into other and stronger races only a matter of time. But they do not believe it. They hold themselves to be the most important factor in the Austrian system, and look upon the German as an inferior and the other nationalities making up the Empire as people hardly worth associating with. At their theaters the Bohemian is the standing joke, and, next to him, the German. The stupid fellow in their farces is always a German or Bohemian, the Sclav and Croation not being considered of enough importance to burlesque.

Their delicious pride and conceit compels them to hold to their semi-barbarous language. The Bohemian has humility enough to know that his dialect must give way to the German, but the Hungarian will none of it. He is a Hungarion, and proposes to live and die one. The Hungarian is the only language permitted in their schools, and Hungarian is the official language of the country. The members of their Parliament charge each other with corruption in the choicest Hungarian, and accuracy in speaking the language goes much farther than facts and figures.

They even aspire to a literature of their own, and they erect statues to poets who were never heard of outside of Pesth, and to statesmen whose counsels have had no more to do with the politics of the world than the vaporings of George Francis Train.

However, it all these things please them, and it is well. They are a simple, guileless sort of people, thriftless to a degree, generous to a fault, and delightful because of their qualities. Isolated from the rest of the world, their belief in themselves is very natural and not to be wondered at.—D. R. Locke, in Toledo Blade.

—The climatic conditions of Arizona are changing in a marked manner and the once arrid Territory, in consequence, is now blessed with considerable moisture. The gratifying change it attributes to the deflecting of electric currents by the railroads.

HOME AND FARM.

—It is estimated that $25,000,000 worth of small fruits are sold annually in the city of New York.

—A Culpepper (Va.) farmer three years ago bought a flock of sheep, for which he paid three hundred dollars. From that flock he has since realized $2,100, and has on his farm two hundred lambs.

—It is stated that half a cup of vinegar in the water will make an old fowl cook nearly as quickly as a young one, and does not injure the flavor. The vessel in which it is cooked should be of material that vinegar will not affect.

—It is a great improvement to bake apples in an earthen crock or jar with a cover on it. Put in a half-teacupful of water and bake in a hot oven for an hour, or until soft. The different varieties of the crab and other small apples are particularly fine baked in this way.—Rural New Yorker.

—It is reported that in one instance where a few tobacco plants grew in a field of cabbage and in another where a tobacco patch adjoined the cabbage-field, not a cabbage-worm could be found, in a neighborhood where during the previous three or four years not a sound head could be raised because the cabbage-worm was so destructive.—Chicago Tribune.

—Clam Cakes: Make a batter of one egg, beaten light, with one cup of milk, two and one-half cups of flour, and a little salt; beat well together and then stir in lightly three dozen clams that have been washed and drained, and drop in hot fat with a tablespoonful of batter, and one or two clams in each spoonful, fry brown and drain in a colander. Serve immediately.—The Household.

—A writer in the Mirror and Farmer would like to say to those who are troubled with "disorderly hens" (or those who will pluck eath other's feathers), if they will put as much salt in their warm food once a day as they would for themselves, they will have no further trouble; at least, that has been our experience. Having been troubled in the same way a year or two ago we were advised to try salt and did so with perfect success.

—Megrims is sometimes caused by organic disease of the brain, and when it can be traced to this cause a radical cure is out of the question. It, however, frequently occurs from temporary congestion of the blood vessels of the brain from a too tight-fitting collar, from checking too high, and from a damaged state of the digestive organs. Horses which are liable to be attacked with megrims should wear a wet sponge on top of the head in warm weather, and should not be compelled to wear a check-rein. Proper attention should also be given to the fitting of the collar. —Chicago Tribune.

—A suet pudding that is not too rich helps to make variety at the dinner table. Here is an excellent receipt: One cup of chopped suet, one cup of raisins, stoned and chopped, one cup of sweet milk, four cups of flour, one cup of molasses, one teaspoonful of salt and one of soda; steam for three hours. This makes a large pudding, enough for a dozen people, and half the quantity may of course be used. If you have an old-fashioned cake tin with a spout in the center it is the very best kind of dish to steam this pudding in. Serve hot with sour or wine sauce. This pudding is good the second day after it is made, and seems even lighter after the second steaming than after the first.— N. Y. Post.

Farmers' Sons and Agricultural Colleges.

A great deal is being said about the sphere and usefulness of agricultural colleges. Prof. G. C. Caldwell argues that the fault is with the farmers, who take no interest in the matter, and that "ninety-nine hundredths of the farmers do not see any use for a course at one of these colleges, either for themselves or their children; * * and will neither go near the college nor send their sons there;" while Peter Henderson, in criticising the Professor's article, seems to carry the idea that an agricultural education fails to make a successful farmer, and for this reason farmers will not "walk up to the rack, fodder or no fodder."

It seems to me there is another feature which enters into the consideration of this subject. It has been said that agricultural schools are a failure, inasmuch as they educate boys off of the farm. If a medical school or law college turn out fifty graduates you naturally look upon that number as so many recruits to the ranks of the law or medicine; but if an agricultural college turns out fifty graduates you don't know what to expect. You may anticipate that five out of the fifty will go back on to the farm. Now, then, what is the matter? Where lies the trouble? There is a nut loose somewhere, and many persons are apt to say "this is the fault of the college."

I think that is laying the charge at the wrong man's door. The seeds of this growth were sown on the farm. No matter how much the man may like farming, and no matter how strong his desire that the son should continue on the old homestead and make a successful farmer, the chances are nine to one that the course which he has pursued with the boy has turned the latter's mind directly against the business and made him swear to himself, when he started off to college: "If you ever catch me on a farm after I'm my own boss I hope somebody will kick me across a ten-acre lot." The fault is in the home-life of the farmer—in the gradual and unconscious training (or, rather, lack of training,) which the boy has received from the time he was big enough to carry water to the field until he had to do a man's work. The alpha and omega of his instruction have been, "Work, my son, work." He has never been told that it is not simply work, but intelligent work which achieves the highest result; and without any distinct idea of the aim of life he has long since resolved that the aim of a boy should be to get off of the farm.

What is the remedy? Any suggestion of a remedy would require a long chapter, and I shall simply ask, does not this subject resolve itself into the old question, "How shall we keep the boys on the farm?"—Clem Auldon, in Rural New Yorker.

—A pair of Delaware lovers visited Wilmington recently to get married. They got the license, but while the bridegroom was waiting for the bride to slick up her hair, he went out and treated himself—in fact he treated himself about seven times—and when he returned the expectant bride wanted to comb his hair. They finally went home without being married, and now she says he has got to sign the pledge before the knot is tied.

—There are sixty thousand orange trees at Bay St. Louis, Miss.

It Got Too Hot.

Three or four years ago two residents of the same town in Michigan who had always been the warmest of friends, were nominated in opposition for the same office. They had a consultation, and agreed that while it was necessary that each should call the other a liar and a horse-thief and a thorough scoundrel, for the benefit of the public, their personal friendship should not be broken. Everything went all right until the canvass warmed up, and then one day as A. was abusing B. before a meeting, calling him a demagogue, trickster, hypocrite, liar and so forth, B. mounted the platform and whispered:

"Say, A., I want you to do me a great favor."

"Yes, of course—what is it?"

"My side of the house is kicking because I stand your abuse without a row. You must let me knock you down!"

"But I thought we were to be friends?"

"Certainly, but unless I exhibit a proper spirit you'll lay me out by 600 majority, and I know you don't want to send me to the political graveyard. Here I go!"

And he hauled off and knocked A. head over heels, and taking his place on the platform, observed:

"Gentlemen, the hydra-headed opposition must be crushed and the Union preserved if it takes every drop of blood in this country! Let freemen rally!"— Detroit Free Press.

One Cat on the Head of Another.

A relative of mine residing near the Blue Hills has developed a mania for cats. He is possessed of sixteen cats of all ages and sizes. Being on a visit to him last week and conversing with him in the kitchen, I heard a rattling of the latch of the door leading to the cellar. Supposing some one was in the cellar who wanted to get out and could not readily find the latch, I opened the door myself, and there sat a grave and sedate old cat on the landing, and standing on her head was a half-grown cat, steadying herself by the frame of the door with one paw and with the other striking the thumb piece of the latch with the evident intention of opening the door. Finding the door open, they gravely walked in and seated themselves in the family circle.

"Do these cats ever open the door in that way?' I asked in great astonishment.

"Oh, yes; we've left a pane of glass out in the cellar window, and when the cats are tired of staying outside they come up the cellar stairs and open the door for themselves; it saves us the trouble."

"Did you teach them to do it?"

"Oh, no; they found out the way themselves."—Z. A. W., in Boston Transcript.

The Little Busy Bee.

The bee has long been a type of the industrious worker, but there are few people who know how much labor the sweet hoard of the hive represents. Each head of clover contains about sixty distinct flower-tubes, each of which contains a portion of sugar not exceeding the 1-500th part of a grain. The proboscis of the bee must therefore be inserted into five hundred clover-tubes before one grain of sugar can be obtained. There are 7,000 grains in a pound, and, as honey contains three-fourths of its weight of dry sugar, each pound of honey represents 2,500,000 clover-tubes sucked by bees.—Chicago Tribune.

—A thief snatched a tray of rings in a Buffalo jewelry store and darted out of the door, but the proprietor seized the seizer by the coat-tails and he suddenly sat down on the sidewalk just as if he had stepped on a banana peel. As there was no policeman on the other side of the street when the robbery was committed, of course the rascal escaped.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

—A reflective hunter in Georgia comes to the conclusion that the vital force brought into play by the killing of a wild turkey gobbler would, if properly exerted between the plow-handles, prepare 47½ acres of land for the cotton-planter.

—"C. P. Huntington, after drawing his check for nearly $3,000,000 to pay for a railroad, had enough left to provide a fine dinner for General Diaz, says the Utica Herald. Most people would have made sure of the dinner first.

—A Pennsylvania manufacturing company has bought all the liquor licenses within several miles of the establishment, and thinks it has solved the temperance problem for its employes.—Philadelphia Press.

—Mark Twain is the name of a Colorado mine. There should be millions in it.

An Elder was cramped with an ache,
St. Jacobs Oil did the pain slake;
He was so highly pleased,
That again he was greased,
And took a lot home to Salt Lake.

A soldier on guard at Fort Wayne,
Was suddenly stricken with pain,
He thought he was gone,
But when he rubbed on
St. Jacobs Oil, was all right again.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, May 11, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 25	@ 6 25
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 65
Good packers	6 75	@ 7 35
SHEEP	5 25	@ 6 00
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 16	@ 1 16¼
No. 2 winter red	1 13	@ 1 14
Corn—No. 2 mixed	55	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	40	@
Rye—No. 2	66	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 75	@
Lard—Steam	11⅛	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 85	@ 4 15
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 22	@
No. 1 white	1 16	@ 1 16¼
Corn—No. 2 mixed	64½	@ 66
Oats—mixed	49	@ 52
PORK—Mess	19 25	@19 60
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 13¾	@ 1 14
Corn—No. 2	53⅛	@ 54¾
Oats—No. 2	40½	@ 41½
Rye	66	@
PORK—Mess	20 05	@ 20 10
LARD—Steam	11·90	@ 11·95
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 winter red	1 21	@ 1 21¼
Corn—mixed	66	@ 66½
Oats—mixed	50	@ 51
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	21 00	@
Lard—Refined	12½	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9⅞	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 10
Corn—mixed	54	@
Oats—mixed	46½	@ 47
PORK—Mess	20 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 14	@
CORN	53½	@
OATS—mixed	42	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 00

THE motto for the stamping-clerk at the post-office—Whenever you see a head, hit it.

Henry's Carbolic Salve.

Is the BEST SALVE for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all kinds of Skin Eruptions, Freckles and Pimples. Get HENRY'S CARBOLIC SALVE, as all others are counterfeits.

WE always say that it was an apple which caused all the disturbance in the world of morals, but it was really a pair.— N. Y. Herald.

Gastrine

Relieves the unpleasant feeling one experiences on arising in the morning at sea. GASTRINE has been tried for sea-sickness, and found to be the only remedy. Sold by druggists.

LADIES, a piece of advice—never send your letters by male.—Burlington Free Press.

ONE pair of boots or shoes saved every year by using Lyon's Patent Metallic Heel Stiffeners.

MILITARY men always find difficulty in keeping a crack company together.—N. O. Picayune.

ASK your druggist for Redding's Russia Salve. Keep it in house in case of accidents. Price 25c.

A NEW book is entitled "A Look in Japan." It is probably a sequel to a Pekin, China.—Yonkers Statesman.

LADIES, buy for your husbands, brothers and sons Chrolithion Collars and Cuffs and save trouble in washing.

A NEW YORK dude fell under a Broadway omnibus wheel the other day, and was completely sub-duded.—Lowell Courier.

WHY don't you use St. Patrick's Salve? Try it. Use it. 25c at all druggists.

BUSINESS MAN: No; you can not sustain a high musical note merely by indorsing it.

COUGHS.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" are used with advantage to alleviate Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness and Bronchial Affections.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap

Is a reliable remedy for local skin diseases. Any physician acquainted with it will say so.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

Relieves and cures

RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers

(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

HOUSE CLEANING TIME IS COMING Your Carpets must be Relaid. DO YOU want to save time, temper and backache? The EXCELSIOR CARPET STRETCHER and Tack Hammer combined will lay your carpets with ease. Everyone says, "Just the thing, we are delighted with it." For sale by THE HARDWARE TRADE generally. Circulars free. Sample by mail, post-paid, $1.00. Address R. W. MONTROSS, Sole Manufac'r, GALIEN MICH.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

Money! Patent soon expires, goods must be made now; 1,000 more men, women & children can make from $1 to $10 a day at home. Send 10c for material and begin work. Belmont M'f'g Co., Box 2112, Boston, Mass.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 2 cts. by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

BOILERS LOVEGROVE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA. ENGINES

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

DIPHTHERIA CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, NEURALGIA.

Johnson's Anodyne Liniment (for Internal and External Use) will instantaneously relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives, sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., BOSTON, MASS.

If you are Interested

In the inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.

The World Moves.—Skill and Science Triumphant.

OUR reporter relates the following remarkable experience of one of our most reliable and substantial merchants, Deacon Stephen G. Mason. Mr. Mason says that from 1869 to 1880 he suffered terribly from frequent very severe attacks of inflammatory rheumatism. The last attack in the winter of '79 and '80 was so severe as to render him unable to take a step in four months. His physicians thought that one side of him was paralyzed, and both knees became so stiff that he could not bend them. The doctors pronounced his case incurable, leaving him in a terrible condition. He was then induced to try Hunt's Remedy, by a medical friend who told him that his whole sickness and trouble arose from kidney disease, and convinced Mr. Mason that such was the case, and after taking it six weeks was entirely cured, and is now in such excellent physical condition that neither damp weather nor wet feet affect him disagreeably. Mr. Mason says that his cure is complete, as it is more than two years since he has had the disease. "I attribute my most remarkable cure solely to Hunt's Remedy, the infallible Kidney and Liver Medicine," says Mr. Mason.—Providence Evening Press.

The Best.

WILLIAM H. WILSON, M. D., Springfield, Effingham Co., Ga., says: "I prescribed Hunt's Remedy in a complicated case of dropsy which I had been treating for eight years, and I find Hunt's Remedy is the best medicine for dropsy and the kidneys I have ever used."

Owe My Existence.

ABIGAIL S. COLES, of Moorestown, Burlington Co., N. J., says: "Eighteen months ago I had dropsy around the heart. My physicians and friends despaired of my ever getting well. The first bottle of Hunt's Remedy gave me great relief. I feel I owe my very existence to Hunt's Remedy, and I am deeply thankful."

Aladdin's lamp wrought mighty things, but Hunt's Remedy works mightier. Try it.

PSALMS.

[REVISED]

HEAR this, all ye people, and give ear all ye invalids of the world, Hop Bitters will make you well and to rejoice.

2. It shall cure all the people and put sickness and suffering under foot.

3. Be thou not afraid when your family is sick, or you have Bright's disease or Liver Complaint, for Hop Bitters will cure you.

4. Both low and high, rich and poor know the value of Hop Bitters for bilious, nervous and Rheumatic complaints.

5. Cleanse me with Hop Bitters and I shall have robust and blooming health.

6. Add disease upon disease and let the worst come, I am safe if I use Hop Bitters.

7. For all my life have I been plagued with sickness and sores, and not until a year ago was I cured, by Hop Bitters.

8. He that keepeth his bones from aching from Rheumatism and Neuralgia, with Hop Bitters, doeth wisely.

9. Though thou hast [illegible], pimples, freckles, salt rheum, erysipelas, blood poisoning, yet Hop Bitters will remove them all.

10. What woman is there, feeble and sick from female complaints, who desireth not health and useth Hop Bitters and is made well.

11. Let not neglect to use Hop Bitters bring on serious Kidney and Liver complaints.

12. Keep thy tongue from being furred, thy blood pure, and thy stomach from indigestion by using Hop Bitters.

13. All my pains and aches and disease go like chaff before the wind when I use Hop Bitters.

14. Mark the man who was nearly dead and given up by the doctors after using Hop Bitters and becometh well.

15. Cease from worrying about nervousness, general debility, and urinary trouble, for Hop Bitters will restore you.

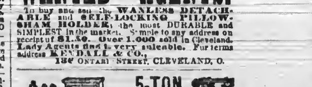
HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

There has never been an instance in which this sterling invigorant and antifebrile medicine has failed to ward off the complaint, when taken duly as a protection against malaria. Hundreds of physicians have abandoned all the officinal specifics, and now prescribe this harmless vegetable tonic for chills and fever, as well as dyspepsia and nervous affections. Hostetter's Bitters is the specific you need.

For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

WANTED---AGENTS.

To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER, the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.



$60 5-TON JONES

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM, JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address

JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

PECK'S COMPENDIUM OF FUN Has a Joke in every paragraph, and a laugh in every line. Contains PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA, the escapades of and all the master-pieces of the greatest humorist of the day. A Literary Marvel. 100 illustrations. Price, by mail, $2.75. AGENTS WANTED. Terms and Laughable Illustrated Circular free—or to save time, send 50 cents for outfit and secure choice of territory. FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 100

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

THE SUN OVER A MILLION A WEEK.

THE SUN now has a circulation very much larger than that of any other American newspaper. Last year it printed 55,586,050 copies of its several editions. People of all conditions of life and all ways of thinking buy and read and like THE SUN. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year.

I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

THE SUN HERE IS ITS PLATFORM:

All the world's news. Everything that interests men and women; good writing in every column; honest and fearless comment; absolute independence of partisan organizations, but unwavering loyalty to true Democratic principles. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

HANDSOME GOLD WATCH. On receipt of $25 we will send a Gent's SOLID GOLD Stem-Winding Watch, and guarantee perfect satisfaction, or will refund the money. Send P. O. order or registered letter. T. MORTON & CO., 203 Broadway, New York.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 23, 1883. NUMBER 30.

YOU.

If I could have my dearest wish fulfilled,
And take my choice of all earth's treasures, too,
Or choose from Heaven whatsoe'er I willed,
I'd ask for you.

No man I'd envy, neither low nor high,
Nor King in castle old or palace now,
I'd hold Golconda's mines less rich than I;
If I had you.

Toil and privation, poverty and care,
Undaunted I'd defy, nor fortune woo.
Having my wife, no jewel else I'd wear,
If she were you.

Little I'd care how lovely she might be,
How graced with every charm, how fond, how true;
E'en though perfection, she'd be naught to me,
Were she not you.

There is more charm for my true loving heart,
In everything you think, or say, or do,
Than all the joys that Heaven could e'er impart,
Because it's you.

—H. A. F., in N. Y. Sun.

AN UNPLEASANT SURPRISE.

"Louise," said Miss Harrison, pausing at the foot of the stairs on her way through the hall from the kitchen to the sitting-room. "Are you ready? I think I hear the sleigh-bells."

"Oh, aunty!" called back a girlish voice from a bedroom at the head of the stairs. "I haven't even begun to dress. Do come up and help me, please."

"My dear child! Why, I supposed you were ready long ago," said Miss Harrison, as she entered her niece's room. "What has been the matter?"

"I became so interested in that book," replied Louise, indicating with a nod a volume lying on the floor by the table, "that I forget all about the sleighing party," and as she spoke she caught a dress from one of the hooks in the closet, and threw it over he head.

"Stop, stop," said her aunt, "don't put on your dress until you change your skirt, Louise. I see that the ruffle has been torn almost all the way around."

"But I pinned it on again," said the girl.

"Why did you not sew it?"

"Oh, I hadn't time. Never mind, it won't show. I can't stop to find another skirt now."

"But surely you are going to arrange your hair, Louise," said Miss Harrison. "It is in a most untidy condition."

"I mussed it lying down on the sofa. But it will have to do as it is. I haven't time to fix it now," and Louise hastily buttoned her dress and tied a scarf about her neck. "I'll put my veil on and it won't show. Where's my ulster? Oh, there's the sleigh stopping at the door now," and she seized her hat and caught up a pair of gloves lying on the window sill.

"Louise, stop, my dear. "Don't run off half-dressed. Your shoes are not even buttoned, and the fingers of those gloves are all out. Where can I look for another pair?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," hurriedly answered the girl. "Never mind. I'll keep my hands in my muff," and tying her veil about her hat, she ran down stairs and out of the front door before her aunt could utter another word.

By the curbstone a large sleigh, drawn by four powerful horses, stood waiting. It was filled with happy-faced young people, and as Louise ran down the steps, a young man pushed aside the buffalo robes and sprang out to meet her, a general smile going round as he did so; for Harry Valiant's attentions to Miss Harrison's niece had been too marked during the past few weeks to escape notice, and had caused a good deal of gossip in Briartown.

Harry was a general favorite by virtue of his wealth, good looks and pleasant manners, and he had already acquired considerable reputation as a lawyer. So there was a large number of young ladies in Briartown who would willingly have exchanged places with Louise in his regard, and who thought it rather hard that his choice should have fallen upon one who was comparatively a stranger to them all. For Louise's home was in a large city several hundred miles distant, and she was visiting her aunt for the first time.

The sleighing party had been arranged by the young lawyer in Louise's honor, and it proved a very important event in her life; for, coming home in the moonlight, Harry asked and obtained her consent to become his wife, subject to the approval of her parents.

Miss Harrison was sitting up for her niece when at ten o'clock she came in, her eyes sparkling and her cheeks flushed with excitement.

"Aunt Margaret," she said, throwing herself on a hassock at the lady's feet. "I am just the happiest girl in the world. Can't you guess why?"

"I think I can, Louise," said Miss Harrison, in a low voice. "My dear child, you are to be congratulated. Harry Valiant is one of the finest young men I have ever met."

"And you don't think father will object?"

"Why should he? I think he will be very much pleased that you have done so well. And you must try to make Harry happy, Louise."

"Oh, I shall, of course," said the girl, with a little laugh. "I will begin at once to copy after you, Aunt Margaret. You are as nearly perfect as any woman I know."

Her aunt smiled.

"I do not think Harry will find you unamiable or exacting," she said. "I only fear.—"

"That I will shock him by my careless habits," interrupted Louise. "Now, you know that was what you were going to say, Aunt Margaret."

"Something like that, my dear. Of course, when you marry you will live at home with Mrs. Valiant. Harry would never desert his widowed mother. And there is not a neater housekeeper in Briartown than she is. I don't think you could get a teaspoonful of dust if you poked in every crack and chink of her house."

"I shan't ask her to let me try," laughed Louise. "But, really, Auntie, I think you are inclined to exaggerate my untidiness a little. Surely it is not a crime to have one's shoes unbuttoned or a collar loose? The horrid pins never will stay."

"They would stay if you put them in properly, Louise," said Miss Harrison, gently. "But you don't seem to think neatness or order of the slightest importance."

"I haven't been brought up to give them much thought, that's a fact," said Louise. "At home everything is at sixes and sevens. Yet we all get on well enough. As mother says: 'What is the use of worrying about little things when we have minds to improve and cultivate?'"

Miss Harrison sighed.

"One need not neglect self-improvement while looking carefully after the ways of the household," she said. "But I must not keep you up any longer, my dear. It is time you were asleep. Go to bed now, and perhaps to-morrow I may be able to convince you that it will be well for you to have a little more regard for Heaven's first law when you become Harry Valiant's wife."

"I fear you will find me incorrigible, Aunt Margaret," said Louise, as she left the room. "'What is bred in the bone will come out in the flesh,' you know."

A troubled look came upon Miss Harrison's face as the door closed upon the graceful figure of her niece.

"So pretty, so talented, so accomplished and so amiable," she murmured, "and yet I fear her one fault will bring her many a heartache in the future."

Miss Harrison accompanied her niece to Mrs. Valiant's to make a formal call, and Louise—thanks to her aunt's care—was so beautifully and neatly dressed that Mrs. Valiant, sharp as were her eyes to detect a flaw, had no fault to find, and was completely won by the young girl's charming manners and lovely face.

"I can congratulate you, Harry, with all my heart," she said to her son that evening. "I like Miss Louise so well that I hope you will soon bring her home to me."

"And you will like her still more when you know her better, mother," said the young man, much pleased by this praise of his betrothed. "She is wonderfully clever. Young as she is—only twenty, you know—she has already written several essays for scientific magazines, and helps her father continually in his law work."

"I think you have every reason for believing she will make you happy," said Mrs. Valiant as she bent over her son and kissed him tenderly. "But Harry—you know my hobby—is she neat? That is a virtue of great importance in my eyes, since you are to make your home with me."

"And in my eyes, too," said Harry, smiling. "The necessity of order and cleanliness has been so impressed upon me from my youth up, that a slovenly woman is my especial aversion. But I have never seen Louise otherwise than well and neatly dressed, mother."

"Miss Harrison is a model housekeeper, I know," said Mrs. Valiant, "and very probably Louise's home is as well kept."

"I will take notes for your special benefit when I pay her my first visit," said Harry, laughing.

Three days after her call upon Mrs. Valiant Louise was summoned home by the illness of her mother. Harry accompanied her some distance on her journey, and promised to visit her as soon as his business would permit him to do so. Meanwhile they were to correspond. Mr. Harrison having given by letter his free consent to their engagement.

* * * * * * *

It was a cold, rainy day in March. A very dismal, uncomfortable day, Louise Harrison thought as she sat in her bedroom and looked out on the muddy, wet street. Before her was a small table littered with writing materials, fancy work, patterns, and various odds and ends. But she was not working, for she had just received a letter from Harry in which he announced the pleasant news that he would be with her on to-morrow, and she could think of nothing else.

"I wonder what time he will call," she murmured, as she opened the letter for about the tenth time and scanned the closely-written pages. "I must have the parlor fixed up and tell Susan to build a fire in the grate."

At this moment the door opened and her father, a tall, handsome, but rather careworn-looking man, entered.

"Why, father, I supposed you had gone to your office long ago," said Louise, looking up in surprise.

"No; as usual breakfast was late, and I've been looking for the last hour for that bundle of newspapers I put on the shelf of the library closet a week ago. Some one has meddled with them, of course, and they are not to be found. Can't you make a search for them, Louise?"

"Certainly," answered Louise, with cheerful alacrity, "and if I find them I will bring them down to your office this afternoon. A walk will do me good, and I don't mind the rain at all."

"I want them as soon as possible," said Mr. Harrison. "They are of importance as reference in a case that I have coming up soon. Is that a letter from Mr. Valiant? and when are we to have the pleasure of seeing him?"

"To-morrow," answered Louise, blushing, "and I am sure you will like him, father."

"I hope so, my dear, for your sake. But will he like you if you appear before him in that wrapper? It strikes me that your toilette is calculated to shock any well-regulated young man out of all sentiment."

"How you love to tease, father," said Louise, laughing merrily. "You know very well that nothing would induce me to appear before Harry in such a state as this," and she glanced down at her dress, an old woollen wrapper, faded, worn, soiled, and bearing the marks of various ink stains. "I have a new blue dress to wear. Blue is his favorite color."

Mr. Harrison smiled and left the room, and Louise, only waiting to put Harry's letter safely away in the top drawer of her bureau, ran down stairs and into the library to search for the papers.

Never had her appearance been less attractive. It amply justified her father's remark, and would have given her aunt, could she have seen it, the heartache for a week. The soiled wrapper was minus a belt, and hung loosely about her; her hair, gathered in an untidy knot at the back of her head, was held in place by a broken comb, and a dilapidated ruche surrounded her slender neck. She wore no cuffs, no pin at her throat, and the braid which should have bound her dark petticoat trailed on the floor for nearly a yard behind her. A pair of black slippers, worn at the toes, and run down at the heels, completed her costume.

While searching in the library closet for the papers, she came across a book on a subject which had interested her deeply, and forgetting everything else, she threw herself into a chair which stood before the open grate fire and began to read.

So completely absorbed did she become that she did not mark how time was flying. Her slippers fell off, and her feet, clothed in dark stockings, sadly in need of darning, rested conspicuously on the fender. But she heeded nothing, had thought for nothing but the book which so fascinated her. She was unaware that the library door had opened, and that a young man stood upon the threshold, regarding her with eyes in which astonishment and disgust could be plainly read.

Nothing was lost to his view. The soiled, ink-stained wrapper, the untidy hair, the dilapidated ruche, the slipshod slippers and tattered hose made up the details of a costume such as he had never seen before, and which he fervently hoped he might never see again.

"Louise!"

"Harry!"

With a face suffused with blushes, Louise sprang to her feet, letting the book fall with a crash to the floor.

"I found that I could get off a day sooner than I supposed when I wrote you two days ago," said the young man, in a voice so stern that the girl scarcely recognized it as that of her lover, "and I did not telegraph, thinking to give you a surprise. I fear, however, that it is an unpleasant one for us both," and without another word, and unmindful of the look of entreaty in the eyes of his betrothed he turned on his heel and left the house.

Louise cried herself to sleep that night. She saw that there was but one course open to her to pursue. The next day she wrote to Harry, releasing him from his engagement.

His answer was to return to her all the letters she had written him.

She never saw him again, for her pride would not permit her to revisit Briartown, and run the risk of meeting him there, and she steadfastly declined the urgent invitations of her aunt, who would gladly have been instrumental in bringing the young couple together again.

Years have passed, and Louise Harrison is well known in the literary circles of her native city, and has many friends who both love and admire her. But she has never married, and the one bitter enemy of her life is that dark March day when her young lover gave her an unpleasant surprise.—Florence B. Hallowell, in Chicago Standard.

Slang Words and Phrases.

Just listen for a moment to our fast young man, or the ape of a fast young man, who thinks that to be a man he must speak in the dark phraseology of slang. If he does anything on his own responsibility, he does it on his own "hook." If he sees anything remarkbly good he calls it a "stunner;" the superlative of which is a "regular stunner." If a man is requested to pay a tavern bill, he is asked if he will "stand Sam." If he meets a savage-looking dog he calls him an "ugly customer." If he meets an eccentric man he calls him a "rummy old cove." A sensible man is a "chap that is up to snuff." Our young friend never scolds, but "blows up;" never pays, but "stumps up;" never finds it difficult to pay, but is "hard up;" never feels fatigued, but is "used up." He has no hat, but shelters his head beneath a "tile." He wears no neckcloth, but surrounds his throat with a "choker." He lives nowhere, but there is some place where he "hangs out." He never goes anywhere or withdraws, but he "bolts"—he "slopes"—he "mizzles"—he "makes himself scarce"—he "walks his chalks"—he "makes his tracks"—he "cuts his stick" or is "fired out." The highest compliment you can pay him is to tell him he is a "regular brick." He does not profess to be brave, but he prides himself on being "plucky." Money is a word which he has forgotten, but he talks a good deal about "tin," and "the needful," "the rhino," and "the ready." When a man speaks he "spouts;" when he holds his peace he "shuts up;" when he is humiliated, he is "taken down a peg or two," and "made to sing small."—Ex.

How Almanacs Are Made.

In the course of the trial of John H Tice vs. Jacob S. Merrell, in the United States Court in St. Louis, there leaked out several bits of evidence of interest to those who believe almanac-makers are possessed of some occult science by which they are able to wrest from futurity its weather secrets. One Doran, a commercial traveler, testified that he had charge of Merrell's Almanac for 1877. "I made the forecasts from guess work and from old almanacs. For instance, I would put it, '1st to 3d, sunny weather; 4th and 5th, wet.' The forecast for April was a literal copy of that for April of the previous year. The same electrotype plate was used. September was taken from an almanac of 1875 or 1876, and the other months were guessed at. In the almanac, as it finally appeared, December was allowed only thirty days, and November was given thirty-one. I deny the authorship of that. It wasn't my blunder."

The defendant, Mr. Merrell, testified that he had given instructions to have the calculations, forecasts, etc., rewritten and made up from old almanacs, but not to use Prof. Tice's, as that was copyrighted.

"When I found that he had clipped the forecasts for April, 1877, from April, 1876, and was using identically the same thing, I didn't like it. I knew that the whole thing was a humbug, but I thought the printing of the old forecast was too barefaced."

—Recent excavations at Pompeii have uncovered the remains of a man with both hands resting on his stomach. This would seem to indicate that the early cucumber was not unknown to the ancients.

Religious.

TAKE COURAGE.

Be brave, O Heart, and fear not earthly shame,
Cringe not to men, but make thyself a name.

Take up thy cross, and walk erect through life,
Fight for the Truth, however fierce the strife.

Yield to no folly, crush thy tempting sin,
And heed no murmur of complaint within.

Bend meekly down to sorrow's chastening rod,
And chafe not at the wise decrees of God.

Slay thy most selfish and presumptuous will;
Whate'er thy burden, bear it, and be still.

Lift thy sad, doubting eyes to God above,
Know that His Name and Nature both are Love.

Love is the guardian of the gate of Heaven;
Through Love alone thy sins shall be forgiven.

But if thou hatest, even in a thought,
Apparent virtue will avail thee naught.

Love God, thy Maker; love thy fellow-men;
Love without stint; thou shalt not love in vain.

Rouse thee, O Heart! and do thy work in faith:
Love is the conqueror over sin and death.

And when thou'rt free to seek thy native skies
Thou shalt find Love the light of Paradise.

—Youth's Companion.

CHRISTIANITY AND THE CHURCH.

The following extracts are from a recent discourse by Prof. David Swing, of Chicago, based on the passage in John xv., 15: "Henceforth I call you not servants, but I have called you friends."

The passage read as a text asks us to admit at least among competitive plans the religion and the morals and the machinery set in motion by Him who could say: "I call you no longer servants, but friends." When the word servant occurs it means friend, and friend means willing servant. Out of that personage came three influences—a religion, a system of morals and an active brotherhood. Combining, they constitute a trinity which might well rival any three graces outside of the Christian field. Look at these potentates.

Religion, the belief in a good and just and infinite God, and in an endless existence, a system of morals pointing out every path of duty and happiness, a brotherhood or church attending to the spread of these ideas through education and persuasion and all love—religion, morals, church—these agencies combine for the general welfare of mankind. The philosophy of a God and of a second life would alone seem an unequaled friend of the people. There are theories which accomplish much though they lie only upon the pages of books. Silently they work outward, and at last appear in the lives and characters of men. Thus the theory of a God and of man's immortality if separated from any priest or pew would seem full of the spreading, contagious energy. But when to such great ideas we add the force of a brotherhood whose aim is the actual persuasion of the millions, we have a combination which ought to be a friend indeed of humanity. To an unprejudiced mind such an array of idea and mediation ought to offer some charm as a scheme for helping the people.

That modern society is attempting to live independently of religion seems admitted to be more true than ever before. It is seeking some new solution of the enigma about the public weal. It will not admit for a moment that it has become reckless. It will maintain to the last that it is seeking its highest happiness. The conclusion must be that it is looking to other fields than those marked all over with the footsteps of the saints, not that the plurality is thus gazing right and left, but that a larger throng than ever before in Christian times is thus wandering seems not to be denied.

The recent sermons of Dr. Dix may have been colored too darkly, spoken as they were in the spirit of the Lenten season, but his words are worth weighing when he says: "Religion in Germany is fast dying out among the people; literature, art, science, politics, poetry, music, popular amusements attempt to fill the void. * * * The houses of God are empty. In Russia the outlook is one which baffles conjecture. * * * In France we watch with painful interest the unrolling of a programme of atheism." In England and in our own country the rector of Trinity finds almost as painful evidences that the public is departing from the old beaten and flowery paths of piety. Unable to say how much too dark the distinguished clergyman has painted the spiritual condition of our times, we need not hesitate to admit that the theory of Jesus and His organized brotherhood is not to even any small degree appreciated by the millions. They are following false friends and are crucifying as of old the truest and best.

Often blunders are made by the millions of minds just as by one mind. Greece put to death her best men. Thus afterward did Rome. France has beheaded her best patriots. Napoleon Bonaparte led a million soldiers into the snows and famine and death around Moscow. Thus great errors are made by nations and by multitudes as well as by some one heart, and if our age shall refuse or fail to see in Christianity its benefactor, that will be only one more sad fact in a long and fluctuating history. To many of us the present status of many men toward religion is only a mistake. It comes not from an improved logic nor from the discovery of better paths, but by way of an error as thoughtless as that which put to death Socrates or crucified Christ or beheaded the patriots of France or burned the Bishops in England. From either error or wickedness our age is making a bad estimate of all the forms of religion. It is allured by false leaders, and will terminate its steps in the ditch along with its blind guides.

It would seem that a moment's reflection would convince any open and free mind that the church is philosophically and historically the best friend of all who come into the world. Even infidels and atheists all agree in declaring that Christ never was surpassed or equaled as a friend of all mankind. Rousseau and Voltaire and Hume and Mill, and all other great names in the roll of unbelief, have paid willing tribute to this sympathy of Jesus. None can ever deny it, for it was not a little rivulet of affection hidden away in rocks where human foot never trod, but was an ocean with nations on its shores and the sun on its vast expanse. Issuing from such an origin, the church must not be a hater of the poor—an arch enemy of the people—for it is not easy to empty an institution of all its early teaching and spirit.

It is a common accusation made by the socialists that the houses of worship are built along the fashionable streets, and that the church bells are to call the rich to worship. The inflammatory speakers who pour such poison into the popular soul have not the reflection to perceive that the philosophy of God and of the divine origin of man has always created a taste and an industry which have transformed the beggar into a happy citizen. When the modern rational and kind Christianity lays the foundation of a town or city, that town reveals all the taste of an art, for there is an everlasting affiliation between religion and beauty. If an uprightness of life and conduct helps create beautiful homes out of the marsh or the forest or the prairie, the church has a right to stand upon the scene of its own triumph. If out of the high ideals of purity in part there comes the wide village street with its white cottages and with its long lines of maples or elms the spire of God's house should rise up and its bells ring in the midst of its own work of enchantment; in the large city the same poetic justice is repeated and the church stands among the homes it has rescued from barbarism by its estimate and direct lessons of life.

Most of the members of all religious societies are in the middle class, and from these come the pecuniary resources of the church, and in these repose its power and hope. Any one surveying the whole continent or the entire Christian world will perceive that that vast body of men wearing the name of Christ are in that middle condition which carries the most of human nobleness in all its forms. Those called aristocrats and monopolies are in the minority in the temples of praise just as they are out of it. The majority of those who compose the church membership are in the middle rank where flows and mellows the most of honor and charity. It is the homes of these which for the most part make up the scenes of prosperity and happiness and beauty around the church. Instead of being a reproach to Christianity it is its glory that beautifies the street where its temple stands as it beautifies the soul that contains its virtues. Yes, the churches rise along the best avenues in obedience to an everlasting justice. As the shops of the vendor of spirits and the resorts of gamblers and of the infamous are found amid the scenes of their destruction and look around upon the poverty and into the brazen faces they have created, so the house of prayer makes its own surroundings, and as the Raphael in his studio sat down each morning among his works of finished or unfinished beauty, here an angel, there a cherub face, there an ideal woman, there an outline of noble manhood, thus the genius of Christianity gathers around her the homes she has redeemed and sets up her altars near the faces she has made intelligent with thought and bright with her hopes.

In its power to assemble together the component parts of a great soul or a great age Christianity has not only no equal, but not even a rival. It can enlist the most allies into its service. It can use all learning and all taste. It can sanctify either poverty or riches. It can reveal the uses of adversity and of success. To the upright in heart it can make all things work together for good, and sorrow is only joy wearing a thick veil. The sadness of the tomb and the joyous beauty of spring meet in its delicate processes of fashioning the soul. It uses two worlds in its amazing process, making the winds of immortality blow to and fro, breathing health and hope to the shores of time. O, reckless multitude, asking for new guides in a world where there is a Guide forever, saying: "I call you not servants, but I call you friends," and where the truth of the words stand attested by the benevolence and self-denial of the Christian host, and by the new homes and new laws and new equality and new intellectual greatness which spring up wherever this new religion extends the wand of her enchantment. Oh, misguided millions, it is toward the mire of sin all irreligion is most able to lead! It does not contemplate such an ending, but history is no teacher if common people have not found their best condition to come from the life made upright by the laws of God, and made happier by the taste and fellowship and hopes of His temple.

Contradictions in the Bible.

Nothing is more common than to find apparent contradictions in the language of persons of veracity: and nothing is more usual than to find that those seeming discrepancies, when explained, afford fresh evidence of the truthfulness of those whose testimony has been impugned. Thus it is with the Bible. Its seeming discrepancies become fresh evidence of the truth. For example, the Lord said of the disobedient Jewish King, by the mouth of Jeremiah the prophet: "And Zedekiah, King of Judah, shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the King of Babylon, and shall speak with him, mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes; and he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the Lord." (Jer. xxxii. 45.) But when the Lord spoke by the Prophet Ezekiel of the captivity of Zedekiah, he said: "My net will I spread upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare; and I will bring him to Babylon, to the land of the Chaldeans; yet shall he not see it, though he shall die there." (Ezek. xii. 13.)

The Jewish historian, Josephus, informs us that the King regarded this threatening as self-contradictory. He was to die in Babylon, and yet he was not to see Babylon; and as he could not reconcile the two statements he disbelieved both. Josephus tells us that "the two prophets agreed that the city should be taken by force, and Zedekiah carried into captivity. Jeremiah said the King should convey him prisoner to Babylon; while Ezekiel predicted that he should not see that city. This apparent inconsistency in the prophecies led Zedekiah to doubt the truth of the whole, but it will hereafter be seen that he was mistaken in his conjecture." Josephus' Antiquities, book x., chap. x. —Clark's Translation.

When the prophecy was fulfilled all was plain. "The King of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes; he slew also all the Princes of Judah in Riblah. Then he put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the King of Babylon bound him in chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison to the day of his death." (Jer. lii. 11.) The "self-contradiction" vanished when the guilty King reaped the harvest of sorrow for which he had sown the seeds of sin. He saw the King of Babylon, but he never saw the city; he was led thither as a blind captive, and there ended his days.—Church Union.

Choice Extracts.

—To get weak sermons, discourage your pastor. To get strong and joyful ones, encourage him.—Interior.

—The Church never gains by catering never so slightly to the vicious elements in society. Better be hated than courted by them, be they rich or poor. —Golden Rule.

—Endeavor to be always patient of the faults and imperfections of others; for thou hast many faults and imperfections of thine own that require reciprocation of forbearance. If thou art not able to make thyself that which thou wishest to be, how canst thou expect to mold another in conformity to thy will.

—If you think it is right to differ from the times, and make a stand for any valuable point of morals, do it, however rustic, however antiquated, however pedantic, it may appear; do it, not for insolence, but seriously, as a man who wore a soul of his own in his bosom, and did not wait until it was breathed into him by the breath of fashion.—Exchange.

—Americans do not lack feeling, but they are sadly wanting in the expression of it—in the little deferences, the tender courtesies, the free, ready signs of affection that make home so satisfying and contenting. To give to the white-haired father or mother not only respect but confidence, to tell the joke and secret to them first, to accord to them cordially the central place in the merry-making, seem trivial matters. Yet it matters much to them who at the end of life begin to think that they are useless and forgotten; and to question whether they shall be missed when they go out into the nearing night.—N. Y. Tribune.

—"What is the use? I have no influence, and can do nothing in the world." Are you sure of that, brother? Do you know that God uses words and examples of yours to effect more than you imagine? There goes the turbine with wheel far down under ground, blindly revolving in the dark. But the millwright, with his shafts and cranks and cogs and cams, leads off the power from it, and sets it spinning, weaving, winding, folding, in busy and lighted rooms far away. No more than the wheel knows of what it is accomplishing do you of what your quiet and seemingly obscure life is effecting. Work on in patient hope, till God's time comes for the revelation of all He has done through you!—Chicago Advance.

Our Young Folks.

MR. AND MRS. CHIPPING BIRD'S NEW HOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Chipping Bird
Came from the South to-day;
And this is what I saw them do,
And almost heard them say:

Their last year's house stood empty still—
'Twas in Crab Apple Row,
On Grape Vine corner, where the grapes
In autumn sweetest grow.

The house was only one year old—
Last spring they built it new;
But snow and rain all winter long
Had drenched it through and through.

And winds had rocked it back and forth,
And torn it on one side;
'Twas but a shabby little house
It can not be denied.

Still, if't were patched, as birds know how,
It might do one more year;
And Mr. Chipping Bird, I think,
Believed that this was clear.

Eying it round, and round, and round,
He hopped about the tree,
And chatted gayly to his wife,
As pleased as he could be.

"A little here and there," he said,
"'Twill be as good as new!
Upon my word, my dear, I think
That we can make it do!"

"Humph!" said the wife (at least she looked
As if that were the word)—
"I think you must have lost you head,
Dear Mr. Chipping Bird!

"To patch up such a shell as that
Is worse than building new;
I doubt if we could mend it so
'Twould last the summer throught!"

"My dear, you're wrong. 'Tis not so bad—
'Tis all your silly pride!
'Twill answer!" Mr. Chipping Bird
In shriller accents cried.

"Ha! Will it?" chirped the little wife,
And at the tree she flew,
And in a jiffy, with her feet,
She tore the house in two!

"Now let's see you mend that," she said,
"Smart Mr. Chipping Bird!"
And then she cocked her eye at him
And never spoke nor stirred.

Wise Mr. Chipping Bird, he laughed;
What better could be done?
And off they flew, and in an hour
The new house was begun!

—St. Nicholas.

A LECTURE ON MONEY.

After the audience had assembled in Barn Hall to listen to the sixth of the John Spicer course of lectures the speaker took his usual stand, bowed, and proceeded as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: My subject is Money. Money is the best thing there is to get [applause], because when you have money you can get anything you want to. I mean if you are where it is or can send for it, and the one that owns is willing to sell and you have money enough. The ones that own taffy and other good things are willing to sell, and most always you are where they are or can send for them—I mean where the taffy and other good things are or can send for them—but you do not always have money enough. [No! Oh, no! from the audience.] Money is very hard to get. [Applause.] People do not give you money for nothing—I mean people that are not your father and mother, or your uncles and aunts, or your grandpa and grandma, or some kin to you. It is very hard to keep from spending money when you have any. [Applause.] The reason it is so hard to keep from spending money is because there are so many things people have to sell. ["That's it!" from the audience.] My father says Robinson Crusoe lived in a good place to keep money in. When you have a cent in your pocket you keep thinking about it and taking hold of it, and first thing you know you have bought something with it, and next thing you know you have eaten it all up. I mean eaten what you bought up.

Fellows try to get money in a good many ways. One way is to pick up old iron to sell to the man that buys it. Sometimes ashes barrels have nails in the ashes, and sometimes you can find nails and spikes and other old iron by crawling under places and around wharves. Another way is to sell bones to the one that buys bones, but I've forgot what he wants them for. Back yards are first-rate places to find bones in. Once I almost got bitten by a dog, trying to get a bone that dog buried up. Once my cousin Tom found most a whole dead horse's bones up in a pasture.

You can get money by keeping hens, if they lay. Red pepper is good for that. Once I sold a hen to another fellow, and while he went to get a basket, she laid. I did not know whether that was my egg or that other fellow's, and he did not know. My father said we must call a meeting of the hens and let them settle the matter. My mother said she knew a way better than that, and she broke the egg in a dish and stirred quite a lot of sugar up in it and gave us two spoons and we both ate it up.

Once I got sixty cents by selling a kitten. First my aunt bought her for sixty cents, but she scratched the baby, and she gave me ten cents to take her back. Then I sold her to my grandmother for ten cents, but she could not keep her from clawing the cushions and carpets, and she offered me ten cents to take her back, and I took her. Then I sold her for ten cents to a woman to catch mice, but she was too lazy to catch any and stole things to eat, and she said she would give me ten cents if I would take her back, and I did; and six times ten makes sixty.

I know a good many money stories that my father and my aunt and Tom and other people [illegible] girl about seven years old wanted to give her mother something for a birthday present, and a poor woman came along with some good holders to sell for ten cents, and the girl bought one, and one of the cents the girl paid her was an old one that wouldn't pass, and that girl knew it wouldn't pass! [Groans from the audience.] I know a big fellow that borrowed a cent of a little fellow ever so long ago and he's never paid him yet! [Groans, and cries of Name!] I shall not tell his name. He is not one of these here. One boy did two mean things. When he was sweeping out a school-house, he found a [illegible] and kept it private. And when a store-keeper gave him back a cent too much change, he spent the cent, when it wasn't his cent. Once there was a boy and he had a sister and they were both small children and they both had banks, and they heard about the great Michigan fire. That fire burnt up a great many people's houses, and barns, and cows, and horses, and clothes, and everything they had. This boy and girl heard about the Michigan children that had to go without stockings and shoes, and they took the money there was in their banks and wrapped it up in a piece of brown paper and got somebody to write on it: "To help buy shoes for the children that had theirs burnt up." And that money was sent to Michigan with grown people's money. [Applause.] Ever so many years ago, two girls, one named Susan, and one named Rebecca, were friends to one another, and Susan was going away somewhere to make a visit, and she gave the other girl, the one named Rebecca, a tin box with thirteen quarters of a dollar in it to keep for her. And while she was making the visit, her uncle came there and bought her very good clothes, and carried her somewhere to go to school, and she grew up and got married to a Captain of a vessel, and went to sea with him in that vessel. The girl that was named Rebecca took care of the thirteen quarters, and when she grew up and her husband died, and she could not get enough for her children to eat—five children—people said: "Why don't you spend the thirteen quarters you've kept so long?" She said: "I will not; they are not mine." When she was an old woman, then people said: "Oh, Susan will never come back! no use keeping the thirteen quarters any longer." And her grandchildren said: "Come, grandma, buy us something with the thirteen quarters!" She said: "They are not mine." One day a young man named Charlie came to that town to see the house his grandmother lived in when she was a small child. His grandmother used to be that Susan that never came back. She was not alive. Aunt Rebecca said to him: "Here is your grandmother's money—thirteen quarters—in your grandmother's tin box. I have kept them over sixty years; take them." Charlie said: "You have taken care of them over sixty years; keep them." She would not keep them, and he would not take them, and they sent them to the people that had their clothes burnt in that great Michigan fire. [Applause.]

My aunt says that sometimes money makes people do very mean things. She thinks we ought to spend some of our money, and keep some to give away. Here is a verse she made. She says it is not very good because she made it herself.

There was a mean fellow named Benny,
Who had many and many a penny,
But would not give anybody any.
He spent every one for his own self alone,
This stingy old fellow named Benny.

—Mrs. A. M. Diaz, in Wide-Awake.

"For Fun."

Four boys were full of fun; they wanted to see the people get a tumble as they came out of church, so they stretched a rope across the sidewalk and hid behind the hedge to "have a good laugh."

Little Alice came running down the street; she had been carrying a basket of fruit and flowers to Auntie Comstock, who was ill; and the cheery words spoken by the invalid made the little girl very happy; so she came hopping and singing along, gay as any bird. The night was dark, the street-lamps dim and far apart. The little girl fell. The boys ran away!

After service the people found the rope; they found something else lying near, lying quite still, and bore it to the light—poor little Alice! It was long before she opened her eyes again: and then it was only to know she could not skip about any more, could never even sit in her cozy chair; but must lie on her couch all the years of her life. Just for fun!

Johnie and Charlie wanted a laugh. "Girls are such sillies, you know!" Johnie made a dough face and put it on Charlie, wrapped him in a sheet, and hid him behind the tall old clock on the stairs.

Dear little Mamie came down the long corridor hushing Dollie in her arms.

An awful groan and a flourish of white from out the shadows!—a shriek, a flying figure, and a fall! The boys had their fun, but Johnie has no sister now.

Some young men in college must "have a little fun you know," so they pinioned a companion and poured brandy down his throat. A few hours later this telegram went flashing over the wires into a peaceful home: "Come at once; your son is dead!

To-day those boys are wanderers over the face of the earth; behind them is a desolate home, an early grave—"all for fun!"

Five or six idle boys wanted a "jolly time," so they caught a little homeless dog, saturated its tangled and matted hair with kerosene, then applied a lighted match. In a moment the poor creature was in a blaze. With cries of agony it ran hither and thither—oh, how the boys laughed!—then rushed into the open barn and hid beneath the close-packed hay. In a moment all was ablaze, and before assistance could arrive, barn, house and the entire contents were destroyed. The boys had their fun; mamma and the little ones were left homeless.—Humane Journal.

—The dog is said to be a noble animal, sometimes. But it would be difficult to convince Frank McCormick and wife, of Pottsville, Pa. A few days ago their four-year old boy ran out in the yard to play. Getting into an adjoining yard, with childlike confidence he went forward to play with a large dog, chained. Although represented as docile, some mad freak took possession of the brute. He seized the child, dragged it into his kennel, and literally bit him to pieces, so that he died within a few minutes.—Pittsburgh Post.

—Felix L. Oswald says: "The true basis of National wealth is not gold, but wood. Forest destruction is the sin that has cost us our earthly Paradise. War, pestilence, storms, fanaticism and intemperance, together with all other mistakes and misfortunes, have not caused half as much permanent damage as that fatal crime against the fertility of our Mother Earth.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. MAY 23. 1883

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor.
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer.
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

For Superintendent of Instruction,
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette.

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

THEY have cyclones out west this spring that blow bung-holes out of barrels.

THE result of the last two State Conventions have caused pretty severe criticisms.

THE Northwestern States flatter themselves that they are going to have a good wheat crop.

IF Isaac Caldwell should ever pop his head up for a state office it will be ingloriously mashed.

THE speeches in the star-route trials consume from three to seven days each. The defendants may possibly be living when the trial ends.

WHEN Col. Jones was addressing the convention, the Chairman certainly wished that he could have been somewhere else. He undoubtedly looked muttonish.

THE last ballot taken for governor in the Louisville convention, gave Jones 9 2-5 votes majority, but owing to the corruption of the chairman the vote was not announced.

COL. A. R. CLARKE, of Pendleton county, has been nominated by the democrats of his district for re-election as state senator, beating Judge Simmons, of Williamstown, about 1,100 votes.

THE headquarters of the democratic state central committee has been changed from Louisville back to Frankfort, and J. Stoddard Johnston made chairman, all of which is a good change.

THE man who expects fairness and purity to prevail in large political conventions, is not familiar with the frailties of the human family, and especially with those that manage political conventions.

IN a very neat little speech before the convention, Col. Jones accepted the situation, and said: "I am too old a soldier to be disappointed or to repine over the result. It requires patience and philosophy to beat wrong."

ISAAC CALDWELL will never preside over another State Convention. His friends will be afraid to trust him, and his opponents will not dare to allow him to take the chair. If the charges against him are true, he is a whole electoral commission of himself.

THE wire-grassers cannot hereafter complain that the blue-grass country has all the State offices. The wire-grassers gobbled up the first two offices on the ticket this time. The nominee for Governor and Lieutenant Governor are from adjoining counties.

THE jury that tried Phil B. Thompson for killing Walter H. Davis was only an hour and twenty minutes making a verdict of acquittal. The verdict was received with a burst of applause on the part of Thompson's friends. He was acquitted on the grounds of emotional insanity.

HON. J. PROCTOR KNOTT, the next governor of Kentucky, was born August 29th, 1830, in Marion county, Kentucky. He received a fine literary education; studied law; settled in Missouri in 1850; was elected to the state legislature in 1858; in 1860 was elected attorney-general of that state; returned to Kentucky in 1862; was elected to congress in this state in 1867, and on the 17th day of April, 1883, was nominated for governor of Kentucky.

HON. J. PROCTOR KNOTT is the nominee for governor; but he is not to blame for it. For ought we know he will make a good governor—as good as any of his competitors. He has been in public life for many years, and certainly has acquired a store of information that will be of great benefit to him in his new office.

So near yet so far—Col. Jones.

It's better than I expected.—P. Knott.

It's only 4 years between heats.—Gen. Buckner.

If at first you don't succeed; try, try again.—Judge Owsley.

If I can't be Governor of Kentucky I'll be Mayor of Louisville.—Jacobs.

CHORUS.—We'll gather at the river.— All the defeated candidates.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 17.—The Louisville Post prints the following editorial to-night:

"A Fraud—Jones Nominated—The Vote Not Announced—The Knott Men Buy—One Thousand Dollars a Vote or More if Necessary. The Hon. Proctor Knott is nominally nominated, after Col. Jones had secured a majority of the votes. There is every reason to believe the result was secured by money. We have the name of a reliable gentleman who was called from his seat in the convention and told that Mr. Roach and Mr. Atherton wanted to see him. He answered the call. Mr. Atherton and Mr. Roach then told him they would give $5,000 for four votes. The gentleman declined to have anything to do with such a transaction. Other offers were made to other parties. The proof is at hand. Who wants it? The Post was not in favor of Mr. Jones, but the Post is against practices which are calculated to divide and destroy the democratic party of Kentucky. We are going to the bottom of the matter. We are authorized by Col. Jones to say that his name was withdrawn without his knowledge or consent, and without any authority from him whatever. Colonel Jones is to-day the nominee of the convention.

The Post also prints the following interviews:

Mr. A. O. Robertson, of Pendleton county, one of the secretaries of the convention, was seen at the Galt House by a reporter of the Post and asked concerning the charges of fraud

"At the last call of the counties," he began, "the vote stood, Jones 373 3-5 and Knott 361 2-5. Ten or fifteen minutes elapsed, during which time there were repeated calls for the announcement of the result, over one hundred persons joining in it. Mr. Caldwell paid no attention to these cries, and did not call it. Finally the chairman of the Owen delegation, who was sitting near Caldwell got up and said he desired to change the vote of his county from Jones to Knott. Mr. Caldwell decided that the chairman had to vote his delegation, and the result was announced as you already know."

The Owen county case was the beginning of the wrangle. Previous to this the galleries and the floor of the convention had been crowded with a Louisville mob, who, by their yells, clearly showed that they were there in the interest of Knott. Men of this class crowded upon the stage, forcing the reporters from their tables, and surrounded the Chairman, who seemed glad to have so much backing at his elbows. Men who were not delegates or reporters held the stage and added to the confusion.

The Chairman of the Owen delegation was W. G. Revill, son-in-law of Dr. Gale, Superintendent of the Anchorage Insane Asylum. The vote of Owen had been cast and recorded, 8 for Knott and 5 for Jones. Dr. Gale went to Revill and spoke a few words, after which Revill announced that the county gave a solid vote for Knott. Colonel J. W. Bryan, of Kenton, says that in this time he went down near the stage and learned from the Secretary that the vote was ready to be announced. He asked that the vote be announced, to which Mr. Caldwell replied that he would hold the vote five hours, if it was necessary, until the result was settled. The Owen delegation then retired to consult.

From Judge O. B. Hallam I learned the following facts: "We retired to consult, and agreed that the vote should be cast eight for Knott and five for Jones. No sooner had we agreed than Revill rushed back into the convention, and the delegation, suspecting that Revill intended to go back and try and cast the vote for Knott, voted to depose him, and authorized me to cast the vote as agreed. When we returned we found him casting the vote that way, and we tried to get the Chair to allow us to vote as we had agreed; but you know he did not."

It was during the second effort to call the seventh ballot that Buckner was withdrawn, and there was a perfect stampede of Buckner votes to Jones. When it was certain that Jones would carry the convention the Chairman stopped the call and announced that there had been a great deal of noise and confusion the Secretary would begin again with the call of the counties. This gave the Knott men a chance to rally, and it was in trim that the Post charges that corrupt arrangements were made and then it was that the outside mob took practical possession of the convention.

There is but one expression here to-night, and that is that Jones was robbed of a nomination fairly earned and made. A prominent official of this county said to-night that he saw negotiations made for votes at $1,000 each, and saw a part of the money paid.—[Special to the Enquirer.

THE very best that can be said of Caldwell's action as chairman of the Louisville convention is, it was ignominious. He clearly demonstrated that fairness is not one of his attributes. He and Thomas J. Pettitt with all their intelligence, can not write a card that will disguise the fact that Jones was swindled out of the nomination for governor.

PROCTOR KNOTT is now among the senatorial possibilities.

PROGRAMME
—OF THE—
SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION
—OF—
North Bend Association

TO BE HELD

AT SAND RUN CHURCH,

BOONE COUNTY, KY.

JULY 20th and 21st, 1883.

FRIDAY MORNING AT 10:30 A. M.

Introductory sermon.........W. H. Felix
Subject—Early Conversion.
Organization.
Adjourn for dinner.

AFTERNOON 1:30 P. M.

Essay.........................C. M. Roudebush
Subject—Would Christ have approved of Sunday-Schools?
Discussion by E. N. Dicken and J. A. Kirtley.
Essay.........................James Walker.
Subject—The Difficulties of a Sunday-School Superintendent.
Discussion by Jno. S. Huey and John Sebree.
Essay.........................J. H. Averill
Subject—The relation of the Sunday-School to the Church.
Discussion by J. V. Riley and W. H. Felix.

SATURDAY MORNING 9 A. M.

Essay.........................E. E. Utz.
Subject—Man's Religious Necessities only met by the Teachings of the Scriptures.
Essay.........................John Cropper
Discussion by A. L. Vickers and W. H. Felix.
Essay.........................Lee Utz.
Subject—Sunday-School music.
Discussion by N. S. Walton and E. N. Dicken.
Practical report from field by Superintendents.

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, May. 18, 1883.

G'n Trash and Lugs	$2 50@	$3 00
Common Smokers	3 50	5 00
Colory Smokers	5 00	6 00
Colory Trash	6 50	9 00
Good Br't Trash	10 50	17 00
Fine Br't Trash		none
Fancy Bright Leaf	00
Dark Lugs	4 00	5 00
Common Lugs	5 50	7 00
Colory Lugs	7 50	10 00
Good Stripping Lugs	12 00	16 00
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17	28 00
Common Leaf	6	10 00
Com. Med. Leaf	12 50	21 00
Good Med. Leaf	21	24 25
Good Br't Leaf	24 50	27 00
Fine Br't Leaf	28 00	31 50
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 00
Good Lug Fillers	12 00	16
Fine Lug Fillers	18	23
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 50	21
Good Med. Fil'rs	22	24
Good L'f Fillers	25 00	27 00
Fine Leaf Fillers	27 50	31 00

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, May 1, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$530,678 11
Overdrafts		137 32
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		41,565 69
Due from other National banks		9,635 61
Due from State banks and bankers		4,961 36
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		3,180 48
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,208 59
Bills of other Banks		4,510 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		102 73
Specie		5,895 00
Legal tender notes		20,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$687,793 80

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,280 00
Undivided profits		20,886 75
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	308,917 44
Due to other National Banks	11,289 38
Due to State Banks and bankers	500 23	320,707 05
Total		$687,793 80

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashire of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of May, 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
M. C. MOTCH,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

Farm for Sale.

A good farm containing 101 acres of land on the head waters of Middle Creek, Boone county, Ky., 2½ miles southwest of the county seat adjoining the lands of Alfred Cason and W. S. White, and known as the Thomas Neel farm, now occupied by R. W. Neel. This farm is well watered, well adapted for stock farm, and has all the necessary buildings in good repair. It has two good orchards, 2 barns on the premises! Title good. For further particulars inquire of the undersigned. R. W NEEL, Burlington, Ky.
feb 28-3m

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics. Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

Every Man His Own Boss.
How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was suffering from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC. I never met with anything so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & CO., Chemists, New York.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court Kentucky.

Lystra Aylor, adm'r. of Frances Helm, Plff.
vs
Ephraim Helm, Defts
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a Judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April Term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June, 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of six months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the Judgment to wit:

Lying on the Mincola and Anderson Ferry Turnpike Road: Beginning at a Beech and an Elm tree and stake on the north corner of Mrs. Ann H. McNeal's land, thence with her line S 43½ E 73 3-5 poles to a stone a corner between the lands of Mrs. Ann H. McNeal and J. H. Walton in the center of the Mincola and Anderson Ferry turnpike road; thence with the center of said road N 80¼ W 88 3-5 poles to a stone in the old line between Alonzo Gaines and Lewis Helm; thence with it S 47¾ W 51 poles to the beginning containing 11a, 2r, and 36 p.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Amount to be raised by sale, $972 01. Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

John P Scotts. Devisees, Plffs
vs
America Scott, &c. Defts.
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 12 months at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Two houses and lots in Burlington, Boone county, Ky. The first house and lot were the homestead of the deceased, bounded on the North and East by Edward Fowler's lots, on the South by an alley which separates it from Jessie Kirkpatrick's property, on the West by Jefferson street.

The second house and lot is the east half of lots Nos. 3, 46 and 66 as represented on the plot of said town of Burlington, bounded thus: Beginning at the Southeast corner of lot No. 46 at the edge of Galiatin and Garrard streets; thence with the latter street Northwestwardly 210 1-2 feet to the Northwest corner of lot No. 45 at the edge of Garrard street and alley No. 5; thence along the edge of said alley Westwardly 105 feet; thence running parallel to the first line Southwestwardly 210 1-2 feet to the north line of Gallatin street; then eastwardly 105 ft. to the beginning, excepting therefrom the lot conveyed by the grantors to the trustees of the Universalist church at Burlington. See Deed Book 31, page 152.

The purchasers will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C.

NOTICE.

I take this method of contradicting the report being circulated in this neighborhood that a note with my name and my father's attached has been presented or seen in Aurora in the hands of another, and I will give $20 reward for the arrest of any person presenting a note for any amount with our names attached.

I also notify those who are circulating false and slanderous reports in regard to me in this neighborhood, if their slanderous and vile tongues are not at once stopped, that I will prosecute them to the extent of the law. J. W. RICE, Bellevue, Ky

NOTICE.

All persons indebted to the estate of Andrew Glackin, deceased, will please come forward and settle. Those having claims against the estate will bring them forward well authenticated according to law, and they will be attended to.

N. B. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne,	M. C. Motch,	Sam Hind,	E. J. Hickey,	E. J. Green,
J. S. Matson,	J. H. Mersman,	A. R. Mullen,	L. H Dills,	F. P. Helm,
		L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially solicited by this Bank.
dec. 20-6m

HARNESS & SADDLES,
ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY. (—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in

Saddles. Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c,

I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call,

Dr.
CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

TRADE MARK.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, 1883

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonahtan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county. Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all.
25-3m

CENTRAL HOTEL,

BURLINGTON, KY.

MRS. MARY J. GREEN,
(widow of the late R. C. Green,)

assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS On Short Notice,

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

38-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.

(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.

Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.

A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!

Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO., Lock Box 438 Washington, D. C.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

YOUNG, OLD, AND MIDDLE-AGED. | All experience the wonderful beneficial effects of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Children with Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, or any scrofulous or syphilitic taint, may be made healthy and strong by its use.

Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

FREE 25 USEFUL ARTICLES, & BEAUTIFUL FLORAL CHROMO CARDS, Size 5 x 8, and an Illustrated Book, to all who send two 3c. stamps for postage and packing. Mention this paper. E. G. RIDEOUT & CO., NEW YORK.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.
50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines.
2 to 100 Horse Power.
Established 1840

Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will furnish a horse power with ⅓ less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.

All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap. All are warranted. Circulars mailed free. Keller Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md.

W N. STAGE, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky

THE DIXIE COOK BOOK

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.

S. A. CLARKSON & CO., ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Local News.

There will be a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee, of Boone county, in Burlington, Ky., at 1 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 4th, 1883. A full attendance is desired, as matters of importance are to be considered.

J. G. FURNISH, Chmn.

Corn planting No. 2 has commenced.

Nice shower Friday morning.

Sheep all sheared and wool sold.

Strawberry festivals are in order now.

The locust bloom is the heaviest for years.

The Ivory soap is the best. For sale by Dudley Rouse.

A negro near town commenced planting tobacco last Sunday.

Union neighborhood was pretty badly blown up Saturday night.

Save money and buy your Drugs at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

J. M. Conner shipped a lot of wool from Bellevue last Friday night.

Several of our citizens went to the city this week to interview Jumbo.

Pure Paris Green, only 30 cents per pound, at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind

W. H. McClung, of Covington, was in town Saturday with his portable tin shop.

A job lot of french harps, at less than cost, at D. C. Thorn's drug store, Rising Sun, Ind.

The tobacco shops are not in operation. The weather is to dry for handling weed.

Our local lightning-rod men were enthusiastic in their efforts to sell rods last Monday.

The Burlington and Florence pike is in uncommonly good condition for travel this spring.

The political cyclone that struck [illegible] last week was very destructive to candidates.

An infant cyclone passed south of town Saturday night, blowing down trees and fencing.

Vitality, exhausted by overwork or disease, is surely restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Jonas and W. L. B. Rouse bought of Wm. Walton an eight months-old calf that weighed 800 pounds.

Col. Jones was the nominee of the Louisville convention for about half an hour—then he was Knott.

Uncle Elzie Bruce says he is clear of the musty bounty fund tax at last, having settled with the attorneys.

W. E. Huddleston, son-in-law of R. E. Bruce, this place, died at his home in Lawrenceburg, last Sunday.

The remains of John A. Kendall were moved from Highland cemetery and interred here last Saturday.

Squirrels are very gentle this spring—George Piper killed two the other day, if he didn't find them dead.

A fine shower visited this section last Saturday evening and continued over Monday. It was much needed.

LOST—A black sow—will weigh near 200. Information of her whererbouts thakfully received. SAM HALL.

O. P. Conrer has a very fine Jersey pig which is somewhat of a curiosity, in as much as it has five toes on one foot.

We had a right lively dash of snow here Monday afternoon. It gave a fellow visions of fresh spear-ribs and sausage.

I. G. Hamilton says he remained in the office of the Clerk of United States Court as long as his democracy would admit.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

Next Sunday is Rev. C. C. Conner's regular appointment at this place, at which time he will deliver the last of his series of lectures.

Owen Minor, who lives near town on the Bellevue pike, had a stroke of paralysis last Thursday, since which time he has been very low.

Prof. Steinberger, of California and everywhere else, delivered a lecture to a very small audience in the Courthouse, Tuesday evening of last week.

At Richwood, last Thursday, we met Mr. Daniel Piatt. He has been in bad health for some time. He informed us that in next August he will be 82 years old.

The game of ball here, last Saturday, between the Burlington club and the Speedwell-Tanner Combination, resulted in a score of 53 to 4 in favor of the former.

We warn the farmers not to sign any contracts or notes for any stranger who is canvassing the county. The country is full of swindlers doing business on that scheme.

J. J. Berkshire says of the fruit crop: There will be very few damsons; about one-third of a crop of apples, and some pears. The apple bloom was much large than the crop indicated by it will be. Sorry to hear it.

S. G. Given, who has for several years been a very popular salesman in Chambers, Stevens & Co's., dry goods store, of Aurora, Ind., has accepted a position in Shillito's dry goods emporium in Cincinnati, where he will be glad to see all of his old friends.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Elijah Hogan, of Gallatin county, was in town Tuesday.

Capt. Finch was quite sick for several days last week.

Mrs. Minerva White returned from a visit to Missouri last week.

Mrs. Agness Fuguit, of Ghent, was the guest of Mrs Dr. Grant, Saturday.

D. D. Grant, of Florence, is in very bad health. A lung trouble is the cause.

Mr. John Hall and wife, of Covington, are the guests of W. E. Piper and family.

Mrs. F. P. Martin and Mrs. Lenox, of Ohio, are the guests of Judge Dills and wife.

Mrs. Kate Creager, of Loveland, Ohio, is visiting her parents, A. O. Hall and wife of this place.

Mrs. W. N. Jury, of Scott county, and Mrs. O. P. Conner, were the guests of Mrs. C. L. Crisler last Thursday.

B. M. Allen and J. N. Aylor, two prosperous farmers from the lower Gunpowder valley, were in town last Friday.

G. G. Hoover, of Florence, who has been confined to his room since February, we are glad to know is able to be out again.

Mr. Palmer requests us to say that the report that he is going to leave Burlington, is not so.

Some fields of wheat in the county now indicate a good yield, while a majority of the crop is very thin on the ground.

The ticket at the head of another column shows the result of the Louisville convention. Now, let's make its majority 75,000.

Barbed-wire fences have one redeeming quality. The hired-man does not stop to rest every time he has to climb them.

After services, last Sunday morning, at the Baptist church, the congregation repaired to Mrs. Dempsey's pond where Rev. Dicken baptized Misses Passons, Louisa Delph and Addie Crisler.

Last Saturday, Joe Hitter, one of the employes at the Boone House, fell out of the stable loft, running a snag into the fleshy part of his right leg, near the body. It left an ugly wound, which keeps Joe close to his room.

Portions of Missouri and Illinois were devastated by a cyclone last Saturday. Many lives were lost and hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property was destroyed. There seems to be a tribe of cyclones traveling through the west this spring, and they are particularly lively and destructive.

Last Sunday a suit of clothes was presented Joe Wilson, the wandering pauper, by the boys of the town, who hired a negro man to take him to the creek, denude him and put him through a solution of soap and corn-cob. The Mountain Meadow massacre was out done.

We met Dr. S. S. Scott, candidate for representative, in Florence the other day, and he was complaining of being disabled in his right arm. It occurred to us that it is rather a bad time for the doctor to be afflicted in that particular member, as he will be expected to shake hands very freely for the next few months.

Last Friday C L Crisler, Feelding Crisler, W B Adams, W E Piper, F Riddell and T W Finch, equipped with a good seine, visited Laughery Island just above Bellevue, where they captured about 100 pounds of the finny tribe, the largest of which weighed about 16 pounds. This was the nicest supply of brain-food that has been brought to the town for some time.

Last Thursday business called J. R. Clutterbuck, sheriff; W. E. Vest, county surveyor and the writer to the Richwood neighborhood. Noon found the trio enjoying the hospitality of Mr. J. H Hughes and family, who occupy a beautifully located home in what is considered the garden spot of Boone county, where hospitality is dispensed in true Kentucky style.

The memory of the oldest inhabitant has been out done again by the freaks of the weather. When the snow commenced falling Monday afternoon, it was considered remarkable for the 21st of may, but when at 9 p. m. the snow was about two inches deep, it was considered more than remarkable. Had it not melted it would have been three or four inches deep. Vegetation was not materially injured.

Everett Walton returned from his western tour last week. His father bought 645 acres of land in Bates county, Missouri, about 4 miles southeast of Butler, for which he paid $25 an acre. The farm is well improved, has three good dwellings, an abundance of timber and a coal mine on it. A large crop is under cultivation, of which he gets one-half. Henry Wingate bougth a farm in same county on conditions that if he can sell his land here.

Saturday night, about nine o'clock the lightning struck Jack Tanner's residence, a two story building, about two miles southeast of Burlington, and setting it on fire it burned to the ground. Everything in the house, except 2 beds and bedsteads, 1 table, 1 safe and some chairs was consumed by the fire. The meat house which stood near the dwelling was also burned, but the meat and lard were saved. The loss is estimated at about $2,000, No Insurance. Mr. Tanner had just finished repairing his house, and in a few days would have had it roöfed. But one of the family was shocked.

Winter in the lap of spring.

Some time since a man named Hawkins, a resident of Lawrenceburg, Ind., abandoned his wife and sixteen year-old daughter, and took up with another woman. In order to make her support, his daughter went to Cincinnati and secured employment as a domestic, where she remained till her health failed her, when she returned to her father and requested him to allow her lodging at his house, when, like a cruel beast, he turned upon her and beat her unmercifully. On last Friday the inhuman father assaulted her the second time, and through the interference of neighbors was compelled to desist his cruel treatment. Being brutally treated and denied parental protection by her father was more than the poor girl could stand, and to end her troubles, she procured a dose of morphine, which she swallowed, and walked the streets till the sleep of death overtook her, when she sat down on the door step of a neighbor to die. Medical aid was summoned, but Susie Hawkins was beyond their skillful treatment, and she died in a few hours. The girl's death and cruel treatment by her father so incensed the people of the town, that Saturday night about 100 men took the brute out, stripped him, and then gave him a coat of tar and feathers. Having received his new suit, Hawkins was notified that if he did not leave the town within 24 hours, he would be visited by Judge Lynch and his men. The woman with whom he was living was also given 24 hours in which to shake the dust of Lawrenceburg from her feet.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Bullittsville.

Ben Stephens reports business very brisk demanding the attention of two clerks.

Lystra Aylor says the wheat will be short but good.

Clore & Snyder are busy prizing and hauling off tobacco.

Sheep are dying with a strange disease.

A S Gaines has shipped a large lot of wool this season.

John Moxley, of Vevay, Ind, has moved to this community.

Jamoson Aylor has the finest potatoes in this section.

Jerry Graves, of Saline county, Mo., is in this community. Thos. O. Graves of this place expects to make Saline county his future home.

The Almonts, of Petersburg were beaten at Bullittsville by that club Saturday 9 to 6. They will play the Speedwell-Tanner club at this place Saturday.

Scuttersville.

Sweet potatoes about all set out.

The farmers are most all very busy now on their tobacco ground, as the plants are growing very rapidly.

We hear a good deal of abuse heaped upon the little innocent mole for taking up so much corn.

John Rue has dug a cellar. He says he loves good cool milk. Mighty good, Johny.

Most of the houses in our neighborhood have been presented with new coats and new lightning rods this spring.

Mr. Editor, if you will come out here just once, and listen to "them thar" shot guns, you will think young squirrels are ripe.

J. O. Huey worked the roads through Huntsville last week.

Gardens are looking nice, and the prospects are that they will look better in the sweet by and by.

John Huey has become a resident of this vicinity. He is plowing for corn at present

Hamilton.

Well, well! It is hard to please everybody. Dr. J. A. Wood comes to the front, mad as any other old woman, and indignantly says: "Babies not all reported." His were not—not one of them. And as for the health of the neighborhood, he never was so busy.

Next comes Madam Rumor and says she never intended to convey the idea that there was anything alarming in the case of lovesickness. She knew the little fellow had retired from business and could not work; but it was so convenient and agreeable to watch and wait for the coming of his beloved teacher, and receive a vocal lesson preparatory to other lessons, and requires so little exertion.

H. A. Pitcher has just returned from a flying trip to Louisville, and says he was a little off, or he would not have gone this time; and if he fully recovers his senses that he will do so no more.

Capt. Garnett has moved into his new dwelling and store room, and thinks he is now above high water.

Mrs. J. W. Sanders and daughter, of West Virginia, are visiting Mr. D. L. Sanders, of Normansville.

Petersburg.

The Almonts loom up in their new suits.

Lawrenceburg was well represented here last Thursday.

Dr. W. H. Terrill is having his house repaired and an addition built to it.

Mrs Fraza, of Harrodsburg, Ky., is visiting her many friends here.

E. V. Newman, of Rising Sun, Ind., made us a flying visit last Thursday.

Mr. Will McWethy has moved his barber shop from Front street to Market str., next door to J. H. Snyder's grocery.

Morgan Davis, who is driving J. D. Norris' horses has three that can trot it in 2:40.

Billy Stott still wears the belt as the champion whitewasher.

Dr. I. H. McWethy has quit practicing medicine, and has hired to A. B. Holabird as captain of a corn boat.

Mr. Joe Wymond, of Aurora, was up to see the boys one day last week.

The Almonts will cross bats with the Aurora boys, here next Saturday. A good game is anticipated.

S. C. Buchanan visited Rising Sun one day last week.

The game between the Loan Stars, of Lawrenceburg, and the Almonts, May 12, resulted in a score of 19 to 14 in favor of the former.

J. Frank Grant, N. S. Walton and J. W. Berkshire, attended the convention at Louisville, last week.

Dr. Ed. Torrill and Jack Carson made a flying visit to Bellevue last week.

Hebron.

Cutworms are destroying the corn. Some farmers will have to plant the second time.

Elzie Harper is erecting a large barn.

The gardners were busy, last week, planting tomatoes and sweet potatoes. About an average crop of garden truck will be cultivated in this locality this year.

When completed J. W. Davis' residence will be the finest in town.

We see in your last issue Hebron was favored with a new correspondent.

The Hebron ball tossers beat Taylorport last Saturday 33 to 14. During the game Richard Gordon was badly hurt. These clubs meet at Hebron again Saturday.

The tobacco raisers are preparing their ground.

Wm. Clore and wife, of Warren county, Ill., are visiting friends and relatives in this community.

Bradford's harness shop and Conner & Clayton's hardware store have been re-painted.

Notwithstanding the dull times this place is made lively with croquet, base-ball, eucher, &c., J A Davis and Wm Clayton are the boss croquet players (in a horn); Chris Ernst and Hub Davis take the cake at eucher.

Mr. Kiser preached an interesting discourse on conversion last Sunday. He will preach here no more for a while. His place will be hard to fill

Beaver Lick.

Our farmers during the past two weeks have been enduring a seige of real old melancholy, brought on and kept up by the drought. Truck, however, is promising and a rain has never failed yet in this locality to reach us in time.

Thus far we have heard no expression of opposition to Mr. Nathan Walton, which is to say his chances to sail into the next General Assembly are just lovely. He is spoken of highly here by those who have been blest with an opportunity to cultivate his acquaintance.

George Noell, of Springfield, Ind., has been spending the past two weeks, with friends in and about Beaver. He left for home this week.

Sunday, May 13th, was a day of nice religious exercises at the Hughes Chapel. It was the day of their quarterly meeting, and Dr. Taylor, of Millersburg, was present with them. In the afternoon the Doctor delivered quite an interesting lecture on the manners, customs and peculiarities of the heathen Chinee. The Doctor spent five years in China, consequently is able to show them up as they really exist. He repeated the Lord's Prayer in the Shanghai dialect, by no means a trivial accomplishment for an American scholar.

Huxter Frich, one day last week, while coming from Southfork to Beaver stuck in a mud hole and broke his wagon. He pronounced a curse on this country that will ruin it if it is ever executed. We'll have to make better roads or do away with the huxter business entirely.

Mr. Ben O'Neal, of Verona, was among us last week.

Quite a number of our town folks have been and some are suffering still with the measles. The measles has been fearless, tackling everybody that had failed to have the old grudge.

Base-ball is becoming quite a fashionable game among us, and if the Burlington nine will visit the Big Bone grounds at an early date, they will learn something that will greatly benefit them.

Mr. Lee Conner, of Walton, is furnishing our people with fish. He comes regular every Saturday morning.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Coudt, Ky.

John A Kendall's Adm'r vs John A Kendall's heirs, &c,	Plff Defts	Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m, or thereabout (being county court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 9, 12 & 18 months equal installments, at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in 23 1-2 acres of land on the Dry Creek and Bullittsville turnpike, bounded by the lands of Jas A Riddell, Jas L Riley, the McNeal heirs and others. Also 153½ acres on the Burlington and East Bend road, bounded on the North by the lands of Mrs Lucy Rogers and Noah Clore, on the West by E A Hughes, on the South by the dower of Mrs Mary E Kendall, on the East by I. S Pope.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $4,104 63 Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Z T Bondurant, vs Salathiel Beemen, &c.	Plff Defts	Notice of sale in Equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 12 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit: On Gunpowder creek, bounded by the lands of C L Crisler, the late Jonathan Utz and others and contains 65 acres and 40 poles, being the same now occupied by Salathiel Beemon and generally known as the Piles Mill tract, and has upon it the finest mill seat in the county.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $1,437-58. Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Sam'l. Delph's, adm'r, vs Noah Craven, &c. and Jss. H. Merick, &c., vs. Saml Delph's, adm'r, &c	Consolidated cases.	Notice of sale in Equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of six months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment, to wit:

Being lot No. 4, in the division of the lands of Samuel Delph among his heirs, beginning at a stake a corner of lot No. 1; thence 64¾ E 51 poles; thence S 24½ W 81 poles to a stone in the road; thence with the road N 34½ W 43½ poles to a stake; thence N 24½ W 43 poles: thence N 62½ E 36 poles to the beginning, containing 25 acres.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Lystra Aylor, &c. vs W T Aylor, &c.	Plffs Defts	Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction; to the highest bidder, on a credit of 9 months, at the court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

A house and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Ky., bounded thus: Beginning at a stone in the Bullittsville and Dry Creek Plank Road a corner with Mariah Clore; thence S 2 W 26½ poles to a stone in Mrs. Clore's line; thence E 6 poles; thence N 2 E 26½ poles to a corner in said road; thence with its center W 6 poles to the beginning, containing one acre.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.☜

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application to G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
☞Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec, 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

SANDFORD HOUSE,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
Keenes R. Robbins, Prop.,
Having rented the above well known Hotel, I am now prepared to furnish the public first-class accommodations at the most reasonable prices. The table will be carefully supplied at all times. Stock well cared for. The best of Cigars and Liquors. Your patronage is solicited. apr-1y.

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constrntly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS,
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
R O U S E.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand. and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES.)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Potersburg, Ky.
☞Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

Shoes, Shoes,
Mens' Brogans and Hand-Sewed Stich Downs.
Mens' Fine Dress Shoes.
Boys Fine Dress Shoes & Brogans.
Children & Misses Fine Dress Shoes.
Ladies' Fine Dress Shoes a Specialty.
Mens' Lace Plow Shoes at $1,25, $1,50 and $1 75.

The reliable brands of LAWRENCEBURG PATENT and FAMILY FLOUR all ways on hand. W. E. PIPER.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23
J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS. HEBRON, KY.

$173.75 for a SQUARE or UPRIGHT ROSEWOOD PIANOFORTE, with Stool, Book and Music. ☞VISITORS ARE ALWAYS WELCOME. Address or call upon DANIEL F. BEATTY, Washington, New Jersey.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

Stamp Collecting.

"Where did we get that quantity of stamps in the window? Why, it is only a sample of what we have inside," a stamp dealer said. "Look here," opening a large casse closely packed with stamps, "and at these," displaying a pile of albums more or less filled. "I'll tell you where we got them. We buy them from every civilized country in the world. Only this morning we got in a quantity of rare Belgian stamps, which cost us three thousand dollars. We have agents and correspondents in the capitals of every country, who are always on the lookout for anything rare in our line. Besides, we purchase large quantities from small collectors in the United States, many of whom make a fair living nosing about importing houses and begging the stamps from foreign letters."

"Do you have any customers?"

"I should say we do. Besides the large number of retail dealers throughout the United States to whom we sell, we have valuable customers in the army of stampcollectors which has sprung up of late. You would be surprised at the number of persons absorbed in the hobby. Stamp collecting is no longer a school-boy pastime. It has become the serious occupation of thousands of persons, the most of whom, as I find by experience, are far past their youthful days. You have no idea of the avidity with which they scrape together these odd-looking stamps, and the large prices they pay for them. I have heard of some who keep their stamp albums under double lock, and of others who even keep them under their pillows at night. Stamp collecting is the most alluring of hobbies. There are 6,500 different stamps known. The value of certain single stamps is equal to many a persons yearly income. A leading banker, whose residence is in Madison avenue, has an album of stamps worth at the lowest estimate $30,000. Another album, owned by a lady, is valued at $25,000. I could name several more, varying in value from $20,000 down to $5,000."

"What inducements have they to expend such large sums in intrinsically worthless articles?"

"Well, some are enthusiasts, and they collect stamps from pure love of the rare and curious. Just as many expend fortunes on rare manuscripts and works of art. Others, and I believe they compose the larger class, have more characteristically American views. They see the almighty dollar behind these tiny pictures, and they buy them up for the same reason that a keen Wall street man buys up stocks which he knows will bring profitable returns. From two to five years will double the value of nearly every one of these stamps, and these collectors know what they are doing when they invest largely in the article."

"Are corners in the stamp market possible?"

"Certainly; many collectors are at present buying up all the match-box and medicine revenue stamps which pass out of use in July. They hope in a few years to create a corner in the market and get them off their hands at immense prices. We sold a match-box stamp yesterday for $15."

"What collections have been sold at notably large prices?"

"There was one sold in London in 1876 for £8,000. Another sold in Paris last fall for 40,000 francs. We ourselves have sold several $5,000 collections. This may surprise you, but remember that some of these little stamps sell for more than $200. There is one of the old local stamps issued by the Brattleboro, Vt., Post-office in 1846. We would not sell it to-day for less than $200. We have many others of equal value. The stamps which are most in demand and bring the highest prices are the provisional stamps issued from 1844 to 1846 by the Postmasters of Baltimore, St. Louis and Brattleboro. Here is the Baltimore stamp—a simple frame of single lines enclosing a fac simile of the autograph of James Buchanan. The St. Louis stamp displays the arms of the State of Missouri, with 'St. Louis' and the large numeral of value above, and 'P. O.' below. The Brattleboro stamp consists of the autographic initials 'T. N. P.' in an octagon ground of vertical lines, with 'Brattleboro' above and 'P. O.' at the sides. Any of these can be sold for $200."

"It is said," the reporter remarked, "that many rare stamps have their birthplace in stamp factories in Chicago and other enterprising towns."

"That is not true. Stamp counterfeiting has been entirely broken up in the United States since we overturned one of the concerns in Philadelphia in 1876, and had the proprietor sentenced to State prison for twenty years. Besides, the stamp dealers are generally experts, and can no more be deceived by counterfeit stamps than the bank teller by counterfeit bank notes."

"When and where did this mania for stamp collecting begin?"

"It may be said to have originated in London in 1862 when Mount Brown, Esq., published the first list of postage stamps. Dr. J. E. Gray, of the British Museum, followed with a similar and more complete work in the same year. These works were widely read, excited much curiosity, and caused thousands to become stamp collectors. The mania went on increasing until at present I can safely say there are more than a million persons seriously devoted to collecting stamps."—N. Y. Sun.

A Yankee Word After All.

The now just popular word dude, meaning an empty-headed, languid-mannered young swell who bangs his hair, proves to be no foreign importation, but, like many another expressive term, to be of good New England parentage. The word (pronounced in two syllables) has been used in the little town of Salem, N. H., for twenty years past, and, it is claimed, was coined there. It is common there to speak of a dapper young man as a "dude of a fellow," of a small animal as "a little dude," of a sweetheart as "my dude," and of an esthetic youth of the Wilde type as a dude. But how the word attained so sudden and widespread a notoriety puzzles Salem. Its revival in New York is credited to a disgusted Englishman, who remarked, after visiting a rich club, that the young men were all "dudes."—Springfield Republican.

—The world is indebted to science for the discovery that a double chord struck violently on a piano will kill a lizard. This is gratifying news, indeed; but what the world is suffering for is some kind of chord that will destroy the amateur piano pounder.—N. Y. Advertiser.

Grass Farming.

The selection and cultivation of grasses is a feature in farming entitled to more attention than it receives in this country. In the dairying districts of Switzerland, where the production of choice milk, butter and cheese has been carefully cultivated for ages, cows are fed on nothing but grass the year round—green grass in the summer and hay in the winter. This would be considered very insufficient diet, the hay part of it, particularly, in this country. But the Swiss say our grass and hay both are inferior to theirs, and we can never hope to equal their dairy products, either in quantity or quality, till we improve their nutritive property. As long as we remain content with coarse grasses, deficient in the nutriment that animals require, we shall have to resort to what is called high feeding, with grain, bran and cake-meal, to secure the same quantity of meat, milk, butter and cheese that the Swiss animals yield on a simple diet of hay. The English speak disparagingly of our pasturage, and particularly of our hay, the best of which, they assert, would not command more than half price in an English market. Our best grasses are clover, blue grass and red-top; and, by common agreement, in the West the very best hay is timothy, which commands nearly double the price of any other in the markets. What is the explanation of the low esteem in which these favorite grasses and this favorite hay is held in Europe? Is our timothy really the indifferent hay that the English declare it to be, or are the English ignorant of its virtues? Lucerne, rye-grass and san foin are said to be the favorite pasture grasses and hay in England. American farmers know little about them, and that little is not favorable; and it may be, after all, that what are esteemed the best European grasses are not suited to our climate and soil, and our best grasses do not reveal their virtues when cultivated there.

The subject ought to receive careful attention and experiment. Our grass crop, green and in the form of hay, is the most valuable crop of the country, and, as it furnishes more than one-half of the subsistence to the one hundred and thirty million of domestic animals in the land, no pains ought to be spared to make it more valuable by improving the quality of it. It is generally held that land that is too wet for anything else is at least good enough for grass. But the truth is the grass grown on low, wet land is coarse, fibrous and nearly tasteless. Drainage is quite as important in grass culture as in grain raising, and there is little doubt that all our grasses, those for summer pasturage as well as those for hay, may be made sweeter and more nutritive by growing them in favorable positions and giving them careful cultivation. If the European grasses are really better than ours and can be raised in perfection on our soil, let us adopt them; if not, let us take the best varieties of our own native grasses in hand, and, by experimenting to find what they need, bring them to the greatest sweetness and richness they are capable of.—St. Louis Republican.

Mosquitoes vs. Malaria.

In a paper read before the Philosophical Society of Washington, February 10, 1883, Dr. A. F. A. King endeavored to sustain the thesis that malarial disease is produced by the bites of insects inoculating the body with malarial poison, the mosquito being considered in this country the most active agent.

Whatever value may be ascribed to mosquito bites as a cause of disease (and there are several very strong and, to our mind, fatal objections to the theory, and especially the fact that malaria prevails at seasons when no mosquitoes occur), it is interesting to observe how the properties and phenomena usually ascribed to malarial vapors become susceptible of explanation on the above insect theory, and how easily coincidences are made out. In the course of his remarks he presented the following series of twenty statements culled from leading medical authorities, in relation to malaria, and which, he maintained, are explicable on the mosquito theory.

1st. Malaria affects by preference low and moist localties. Such localities are the natural abode of mosquitoes.

2d. Malaria is seldom at a lower temperature than 60 deg. F.; neither are mosquitoes.

3d. The active agency of malaria is checked by a temperature of 32 deg. F. The same may be said of the mosquito.

4th. Malaria is most abundant and most virulent as we approach the equator and the seacoast. So, under specified conditions, are mosquitoes.

5th. Malaria has an affinity for dense foliage, which has the power of accumulating it, when lying in the course of winds blowing from malarious localities. Trees accumulate mosquitoes in the same manner.

6th. Forests and even woods have the power of obstructing malaria and of preventing its transmission under these circumstances. So of mosquitoes.

7th. By atmospheric currents, malaria may be transported to considerable distances, probably as far as five miles. Mosquitoes also.

8th. Malaria may be developed in previously healthy places by turning up the soil, as in making excavations for the foundations of houses, tracks for railroads and beds for canals. Such excavations when containing stagnant water may also serve as mosquito nurseries.

9th. In certain localities malaria seems to be attracted and absorbed by bodies of water lying in the course of such winds as waft it from miasmatic source. Such bodies of water may also arrest the passage of the mosquito, under certain circumstances, as in the absence of a strong wind to waft them over.

10th. Experience alone enables us to determine the presence or absence of malaria in any given locality. Conversely, the absence of the mosquito, it was claimed by Dr. King, appeared to prevent malarial disease.

11th. In proportion as countries previously malarious are cleared up and thickly settled, periodical fevers disappear. The consequent better drainage, disappearance of under-brush, and the more free-play of fly-catching birds may also contribute to lessen mosquitoes.

12th. Malaria usually keeps near the surface of the earth; it is said to "hug the ground." The same is true of mosquitoes.

13th. Malaria is most dangerous when the sun is down, and seems to be almost inert during the day. The mosquito is active at night, at rest by day.

14th. The danger of exposure to malaria after sunset is greatly increased by the person exposed sleeping in the night air. Persons while awake brush away mosquitoes; those asleep submit to being bitten.

15th. Of all human races the white is most sensitive to marsh fevers, and the black least so. The black man is less easily seen by the mosquito, and the odor and greasiness of his cutaneous secretions are assumed to be offensive to the insects.

16th. In malarial districts the use of fire, both indoors and to those who sleep out, affords a comparative security against malarial disease. Mosquitoes, attracted by the light, fly into fires and lamps at the cost of life.

17th. The air of cities in some way renders the malarial poison innocuous, for though a malarial disease may be raging outside, it does not penetrate far into the interior. Mosquitoes also, during their nocturnal flight, will be arrested by the houses, fences, lamps and fires of the suburbs, so as to be prevented from penetrating far into the interior of cities.

18th. Malarial diseases are most prevalent toward the latter part of the summer, and in the autumn. Mosquitoes are more plentiful during those seasons.

19th. Malaria is arrested not only by trees, but by walls, fences, hills, rows of houses, canvas curtains, gauze veils, mosquito nets, etc. So are mosquitoes.

20th. Malaria spares no age, but it affects infants much less frequently than adults. Infants, however, from the care with which they are housed and covered with gauze to keep off house flies, and also shielded from mosquito bites.—Scientific American.

Various Skirts.

A very full effect is given to the skirts of foulard, China crape, or nuns' veiling dresses not merely by the long loose plaits that form the entire skirt, or that appear in clusters wherever the drapery does not conceal the lower skirt, but also in a new and simpler way by a single deep gathered flounce that begins just below the short and bouffant drapery that surrounds the hips, but does not extend far below them. This flounce falls straight and full to the foot, with perhaps a border, embroidery, or lace on its lowest edge. It must be remembered that under all this appearance of a straight round skirt such as was worn a generation ago there is a closely gored narrow skirt well faced with crinoline to make it a substantial foundation skirt, and finished with a silk plaiting outside and a muslin and lace balayeuse plaiting inside. This silk foundation is now often of a color in contrast to that which covers it, or else to match the basque and drapery in preference to the lower skirt; thus a red silk foundation skirt is under a changeable green and red silk in which green predominates, and an ecru silk foundation is under a maroon silk skirt that has ecru cashmere draperies. Simple and stylish silk skirts of checked silks, the plain Surahs, and the striped Surahs fall full from the waist over the foundation skirt, and descend below the knees, where they are gathered to the foundation to form two flounces, lapping, each about six inches deep. These straight flounces have the lower edges faced with silk that does not appear outside, and many of the flounces of thin summer silks are lined throughout with thin crinoline lawn in the old-fashioned way, and are then faced with silk as just noted. The little plaiting at the foot of foundation skirts seems to be a necessity for supporting the flabby flounces of soft silks and cashmeres; even dresses of Chambery and of linen lawn have a silk skirt and plaiting underneath, with utter disregard of the question how they are to be laundried. The box-plaited skirts with the plaits sewed together at the top are allowed to fall in flowing plaits below the knee.

One of the prettiest simple "footings" for the skirt of a dress, either silk or wool, is three knife-plaitings, each a finger deep when finished, placed to lap so deeply that only an inch of the lower flounces is visible after the top one is stitched on by machine an inch below the top, leaving an erect heading of an inch-wide frill. Another stylish finish for the foot of a silk skirt is one bias gathered ruffle of silk six inches deep after the edges are turned up. This is gathered an inch below the edge, and a row of lace or of embroidery three inches deep is gathered with it and falls on the silk flounce amid its fullness. This is handsome when made of black ottoman or gros grain with French lace gathered upon it, or of white moire with black French or Spanish lace, or of Havana brown silk or satin with ecru embroidered batiste lightly gathered upon it. For more elaborate dresses of black silk, or of white silk, or muslin, French lace is used in three lapping flounces, or else there is a deep lambrequin flounce of wide lace made by arranging broad double box plaits of the lace, and putting a gathered festoon of the lace between each box plait. This festoon is merely the lace flounce gathered at the top and sewed on in a deep curve. Sometimes a square bow of satin is set on top of each box plait, and in other cases it is placed on the curved part.—Harper's Bazar.

A Proper Use of Wives.

It is not to sweep the house, and make the beds, and darn the socks, and cook the meals, chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all he wants, hired servants can do it cheaper than a wife. If this is all, when a young man calls to see a young lady, send him into the pantry to taste the bread and cakes she has made; send him to see the needle-work and bed-making; or put a broom in her hands and send him to witness its use. Such things are important, and the wise young man will quietly look after them. But what the true man most wants of a wife is her companionship, sympathy and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and man needs a companion to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortune; he meets with failure and defeat; trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to stand by and sympathize. He has some stern battles to fight with poverty, with enemies and with sin, and he needs a woman that, as he puts his arm around her, feels that he has something to fight for, will help him fight; who will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand to his heart and impart new inspiration. All through life—through storm and sunshine, conflict and victory; through adverse and favorable winds—man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's and mother's love will hardly supply the need. Yet many seek nothing further than housework. Justly enough, half these get nothing more. The other half, surprised above measure, obtain more than they sought. Their wives surprise them by giving a nobler idea of marriage and disclosing a treasury of courage, sympathy and love.—Chicago Herald.

—The fortifications of Strasburg are just completed. The construction of the first series of outer forts was begun in 1872, and that of the circumvalation of the city in 1876.

—Wilmington, N. C., for the first time since the war, is free from bonded debt, and its six per cent. bonds are in demand at par by investors.

HOME AND FARM.

—Scalded milk given to calves constantly often produces bad results.

—Look at your horse's feet every night and see that there is no stone between the hoof and shoe.

—Ginger Pudding: Five eggs, two cups of sugar, two cups of butter, four cups of flour, one cup of molasses, one cup of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, ginger and allspice to taste. Bake in a pan or steam in a mold or pan.—Toledo Blade.

—Very young ducklings are tender at first, and should be neither allowed to go into cold water nor be exposed to chilling winds, while they are under twenty days old. Such exposures cause cramps, and they often die suddenly from these assaults.—Chicago Journal.

—The American Agriculturist is friendly to the crow. It says: "Don't kill the crows. A few years ago we had a chance to watch the operations of an assemblage of crows on a grub-infested lawn. Their skill in finding and dislodging the grub should have been witnessed by all opponents of the crow."

—The several kinds of pond lilies can be easily grown in almost any pond in which there is a bottom of rich mud. They are beautiful flowers, several of them have a most delightful odor, and their presence on the farm or in the house will prove a source of great pleasure, inexpensive and lasting.—Chicago Tribune.

—Tomato Soup: To one pint of canned tomatoes, or four large raw ones cut up fine, add one quart of boiling water and let them boil till done; then add nearly a teaspoonful of soda; when it foams up add one pint of sweet milk, pepper, and a plenty of butter or one cup of sweet cream instead of the butter, a few crackers rolled fine, and serve.—The Household.

—Kerosene oil may be used for destroying insects on plants by taking a tablespoonful of oil and mixing it with half a cupful of milk and then diluting the mixture with two gallons of water. Apply the liquid with a syringe, and afterward rinse with clear water. This substance is death to plant insects, and we have never heard of its injuring the most delicate plants when used as here directed.

—When mixed with hay and other dry feed, parsnips are valuable for horses and cows, the feeding being commenced gradually, as with roots generally. They possess an important advantage over other roots, in that the crop may be safely left in the ground all winter, as freezing does not injure them when they thaw out in the ground, and thus the labor of late autumn harvesting is avoided.—N. Y. Post.

—A supply of roots for stock feeding purposes next winter should be taken into consideration now. It is not necessary to vary the food of cattle as much as that intended for man, but reason and experience show that a change is very desirable. The bulk of our stock are kept on a dry feed during winters, consisting of hay, corn stalks or straw, with occasionally a little grain. Every animal tires of the same kind of food if fed for a long time. Roots furnish the best substance for a change. In all parts of the country some kind of roots can be raised for stock to good advantage.—Prairie Farmer.

A Garden in a Cornfield.

The old-fashioned kitchen garden, fenced in, surrounded with current bushes and berry plants which often spread far out toward the center, with a few bushes of peonies and here and there a rosebush and a clump of hollyhocks, where possibly the plow might be used with a good deal of turning and tugging, but more likely the spade with still harder work, belongs to a by-gone age, and savors more of penance than of profit. Nowadays, with the perfect implements for planting and cultivating, gardening may be made easy. If there is no better spot, one corner of the cornfield may be taken, and all of the seeds be planted in rows, thickly or thinly, according to their habit of growing. Let the rows extend across the field, and if too long make part of them corn or potatoes. The ground need only be well prepared, as for corn, and made fine with the harrow and marked with a corn-marker. For the fine seeds like lettuce, onions, etc., the garden rake may be used to smooth the surface along the rows.

When these seeds come up, scrape the earth and weeds away on each side from the young plants with a light touch of the hoe, and leave the row clean. The plants will then be seen distinctly; although small, and the cultivator will mellow the ground between the rows and destroy the weeds, and its occasional use will do most of the garden work. A little hand weeding may be required in the row, if the ground is weedy, otherwise the gardening may be done with a horse and cultivator. Cucumbers, melons, beets and everything may be planted after the marker and be covered with the hoe or the garden rake. One man in a day can plant seeds enough for a bountiful supply for a large family. Vegetables and plants raised in this way will grow faster than in a garden and mature sooner. A row or two may be left for the later planting of radishes and winter cabbage, and meanwhile the cultivator will keep the ground clean and mellow.

When July comes the open spaces between the rows of onions and lettuce, and where vacant spots have been made, may be strewn with turnip seed and raked over, and so all of the ground will be utilized. The pea-rows, later in the season, and where the early potatoes grew, may also be converted into a turnip patch. A few extra loads of manure—the best rotted—plowed under where the garden is to go, will make stronger growth; and the quicker most vegetables grow the better the quality. The first of June the radishes may be put in and they will be crisp and tender. A little wood ashes and hen manure, mixed together and worked into the soil, will give vegetables a rapid start. Hen manure and plaster is also a superior fertilizer, but not quite so active as the other. Plenty of vegetables are a blessing to a housewife, and help wonderfully to surround the farmer's table with good cheer.—F. D. Curtis, in N. Y. Tribune.

—Charles Resh, who has been an inmate of the alms-house at Lancaster, Pa., for twelve years, having obtained a pension, was recently removing his goods in order to go to housekeeping with his wife and child. He put a cook stove on the elevator, and the moment he added his own weight to the load the rope broke and he was instantly killed by the fall. The Coroner's Jury discovered that the rope had been cut with a knife by some of the inmates.

—At Fort Calgary, Montana, coal-oil is worth five dollars per gallon and flour fifteen dollars per hundred pounds.

Spare the Sparrow.

In the summer, writes a friend of the sparrow in the Boston Transcript, the robins eat my cherries, but I am willing to divide with them; they also eat my strawberries, but I have not once discovered the sparrow in mischief. They are pleasant, friendly little birds, who stay with us in the winter when our native birds abandon us. They are easily tamed. One cold winter, when I was ill and confined to my room, I gave them crumbs every morning; they soon became so tame that if I left my window open they would come in. I have sometimes seen twenty at a time on a table in the middle of the room. They formed quite a friendship for my canary bird, and one friendly little fellow used to drop seed into the canary's mouth, and the canary returned the compliment. If I happened to be late with my crumbs they pecked at my window until I came. Other birds came to look, but only the sparrow could be induced to enter the room. They came every day, and by their engaging way did much to make life pleasanter. Nowhere in the world are there more birds than in Germany and Switzerland. The law protects them. In any little grove or large garden you will hear the warbling of hundreds of birds of many kinds. Where we have hundreds of sparrows they have millions and yet the other birds seem to hold their own very well. In England when a cold storm comes the papers remind the people to "feed the sparrows." Mr. Brewer, the eminent ornothologist, was instrumental in introducing them into this country, after a careful consideration of the whole subject. Not the sparrow, but man, is driving away our native birds.

—England has $10,000,000,000 invested abroad.

A TOURIST leaning out of a nook,
Fell on his head near a brook,
The hurt he received,
St. Jacobs Oil relieved,
And he says it cured "like a book."

Great oaks from little acorns spring,
Great aches the little toe-corns bring;
But for every corn
That ever was born,
St. Jacobs Oil is just the thing.

THE Hindoos of Madras recently had a procession in honor of seven umbrellas that were to be presented to an idol god at Terrapety. His idolship is evidently preparing for a long reign.—Boston Post.

Our Grandmothers

taught their daughters that a "stitch in time saves nine." A pill in time saves not only nine, but ofttimes an incalculable amount of suffering as well. An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pellets (Little Sugar-coated Pills), to cleanse the stomach and bowels, not only prevents diseases but often breaks up sudden attacks, when taken in time. By druggists.

DURING the winter we feel that we can hold our own pretty well as an average liar, but now that the circus bill is beginning to adorn the wall we feel our utter insignificance.—Evansville Argus.

How to Shorten Life.

The receipt is simple. You have only to take a violent cold, and neglect it. Abernethy, the great English surgeon, asked a lady who told him she only had a cough: "What would you have? The Plague?" Beware of "only coughs." The worst cases can, however, be cured by DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. In Whooping Cough and Croup it immediately allays irritation, and is sure to prevent a fatal termination of the disease. Sold by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

IF a book-binder "rips and tears" he should be "bound over."—Gouverneur (N. Y.) Herald.

DR. PIERCE'S "Favorite Prescription" perfectly and permanently cures those diseases peculiar to females. It is tonic and nervine, effectually allaying and curing those sickening sensations that affect the stomach and heart through reflex action. The back-ache, and "dragging-down" sensations all disappear under the strengthening effects of this great restorative. By druggists.

"WHY does a kiss raise the spirits?" "Because it's the cream of ta-ta."—Harvard Lampoon.

For weak lungs, spitting of blood, weak stomach, night-sweats, and the early stages of Consumption, "Golden Medical Discovery" is specific. By druggists.

A GOOD watch is known by its works. It may be real good without having a pretty face.—Philadelphia Chronicle.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, May 18, 1883.
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 50	@	3 75
Choice butchers	5 25	@	6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@	6 70
Good packers	6 90	@	7 35
SHEEP	4 75	@	5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@	6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 17	@	1 18
No. 2 winter red	1 13	@	1 14
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54¾	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	45	@
Rye—No. 2	65	@	65½
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@	12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@	9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 50	@
Lard—Steam	11-30	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@	32
Prime Creamery	25	@	28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@	2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@	4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 85	@	4 15
Good to choice	4 60	@	7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 23¼	@	1 24
No. 1 white	1 16	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	64¾	@	66½
Oats—mixed	49	@	52
PORK—Mess	19 25	@	19 60
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@	5 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 13	@	1 13½
Corn—No. 2	55¼	@
Oats—No. 2	41¼	@	41⅜
Rye	65	@
PORK—Mess	19 40	@	19 45
LARD—Steam	11-90	@	11-95
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 12	@	6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 20	@	1 20¼
Corn—mixed	65	@	65¼
Oats—mixed	50	@	51
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	21 00	@
Lard—Refined	12½	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@	4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 10	@	1 12
Corn—mixed	54½	@
Oats—mixed	46	@
PORK—Mess	20 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 11	@
CORN	54	@
OATS—mixed	42	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@	4 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@	5 60

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

1868—Gastrine.—1883.

This remedy for dyspepsia has been on sale since 1868, and is known and recognised by physicians and druggists. It is now offered in a new wrapper, bearing the signature of "The Gastrine Manufacturing Co."

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin. 15c.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap

Permanently beautifies your complexion. Think, Ladies! Hill's hair and whisker dye, 50 cents.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

GET Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners for those new boots or shoes before you run them over.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, irritation. $1.

"BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES" are of great service in subduing Hoarseness.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Personal!

THE VOLTAIC BELT CO., Marshall, Mich., will send Dr. Dye's Celebrated Electro-Voltaic Belts and Electric Appliances on trial for thirty days to men (young or old) who are afflicted with nervous debility, lost vitality and kindred troubles, guaranteeing speedy and complete restoration of health and manly vigor. Address as above. N. B.—No risk is incurred, as thirty days' trial is allowed.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE.

Hunt's Remedy—Its Many Merits.

THERE are no diseases more prevalent, with, perhaps, the exception of Consumption, in this country than the kidney and liver complaints; and to find a remedy that would effectually relieve them has long been the aim of many afflicted sufferers. Whether our habits as a people are conducive to these diseases, or whether they may result from the peculiarity of our climate, is beyond our comprehension, and is of little value since an efficacious remedy can be had; but of one thing we are sure, that the long-afflicted public will hail with joy the specific which has again and again proved its ability to effectually cope with and eradicate these diseases. The name of this medicine is Hunt's Remedy, and it is manufactured by the Hunt's Remedy Company of Providence. It is not often that mention of a patent medicine occurs in these columns; but, when one comes under our notice possessing such undoubted merits as the one of which we speak, we can not refrain from giving it the credit it deserves. It cures when all other remedies fail, as it acts directly on the kidneys, liver and bowels, restoring them all at once to healthy action. It is sure to eradicate all diseases of the kidneys, bladder, urinary organs—such as gravel, diabetes, incontinence, retention of the urine. It has a wonderful effect on weakness or pain in the back, sides, or loins, and has proved itself the most reliable medicine extant for general debility, female diseases, disturbed sleep, loss of appetite, and all complaints of the urino-genital organs. Its efficacy in cases of that dreadful scourge and insidious destroyer, Bright's disease of the kidneys, has been remarkable; and, if its merits rested on its success in coping with that disease alone, it would be worthy of high rank as a public benefactor. In all diseases of the liver—as billousness, headache, dyspepsia, sour stomach and costiveness—it quickly induces that organ to healthy action, and removes the causes at the same time. It is purely vegetable in composition, being entirely free from all mercurial or mineral poisons, and possesses rare virtues as a remedy for heart disease and rheumatism. We have neither time nor space to do this medicine full justice; but the public can obtain full particulars in the shape of pamphlets and circulars by addressing Hunt's Remedy Company, Providence, R. I.—Scientific Times.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

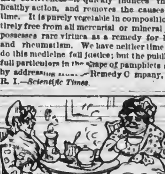
TEA CLUB ORDERS.

We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS



There has never been an instance in which this sterling invigorant and antifebrile medicine has failed to ward off the complaint, when taken duly as a protection against malaria. Hundreds of physicians have abandoned all the officinal specifics, and now prescribe this harmless vegetable tonic for chills and fever, as well as dyspepsia and nervous affections. Hostetter's Bitters is the specific you need.

For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

HANDSOME GOLD WATCH. On receipt of $25 we will send a Gent's SOLID GOLD Stem-Winding Watch, and guarantee perfect satisfaction, or will refund the money. Send P. O. order or registered letter. T. MORTON & CO., 203 Broadway, New York.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

A KEY THAT WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT. SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 25c. Circulars free. J. S. BIRCH & CO., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

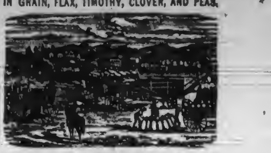
$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS
MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD
And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

AGITATOR
What Farmers & Threshermen say about the Agitator. Manufactured by
J. I. CASE T. M. CO. RACINE, WIS
"Don't Change it." "Perfect as it is."
IN GRAIN, FLAX, TIMOTHY, CLOVER, AND PEAS.



PORTABLE (8, 10, 12 and 16 Horse)
TRACTION (8, 10, and 12 Horse,)
STRAW-BURNING (Portable only, 8, 10, 12, 16 Horse)
And 8, 10, 12, 16, 20, 25 and 30 Horse
SKID ENGINES!
We make the most Practical Straw-Burning Engine in the World.
The Popular Double Pinion 4-Wheel Woodbury Horse-Power Reversible Bull Wheel. Runs either way, Low or High Speed. The BEST Power made. Ours Exclusively.
Do you live near Timber? If so, buy our
PORTABLE SAW MILL
Take it to the timber. SAVE HAULING Logs to the Mill. 5,000 TO 10,000 FEET PER DAY.
ALL MACHINERY WARRANTED.
Write for Catalogue. Costs Nothing

The Wonderful Efficacy of
DR. SCHENCK'S
MANDRAKE
PILLS

Has been so frequently and satisfactorily proven that it seems almost superfluous to say anything more in their favor. The immense and constantly increasing demand for them, both in this and foreign countries, is the best evidence of their value. Their sale to-day in the United States is far greater than any other cathartic medicine. This demand is not spasmodic, it is regular and steady. It is not of to-day or yesterday, it is an increase that has been steadily growing for the last thirty-five years. What are the reasons for this great and growing demand?

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills contain no mercury, and yet they act with wonderful effect upon the liver. They cleanse the stomach and bowels of all irritating matter, which, if allowed to remain, poisons the blood, and brings on Malaria, Chills and Fever, and many other diseases. They give health and strength to the digestive organs. They create appetite and give vigor to the whole system. They are in fact the medicine of all others which should be taken in times like the present, when malarial and other epidemics are raging, as they prepare the system to resist attacks of disease of every character.

Dr. Schenck's Mandrake Pills are sold by all druggists at 25c. per box, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in English or German, is sent free to all. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.

WANTED—AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

PORTABLE
Soda Fountains!
Send for Catalogue.
CHAPMAN & CO.,
Madison, Ind.

THE SUN 55 MILLIONS A YEAR.
Double It! To present all the news in readable shape, and to tell the truth though the heavens fall, are the two great purposes of THE SUN. It is a newspaper for everybody, a friend to everybody, barring the rogues and frauds. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year.
I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

PECK'S COMPENDIUM OF FUN
Has a Joke in every paragraph, and a laugh in every line. Contains the escapades of PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA, and all the master-pieces of the greatest humorist of the day. A Literary Marvel. 100 Illustrations. Price, by mail, $2.75. AGENTS WANTED. Terms and Laughable Illustrated Circular free, or to save time, send 50 cents for outfit and secure choice of territory.
FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
25¢ 100

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR
Forces luxuriant Mustache, Whiskers, or hair on bald heads in 20 to 30 days. Both young and old supplied everywhere. 1 or 3 Pkgs does the work. Will prove it or forfeit. Price per package with directions sealed and postpaid 25 cents. 3 for 50 cts., stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO. Sole Agts. Palatine, Ill.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of MOODY'S NEW TAILOR System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

XX.—NOTICE.—XX.
AS BLUE FLANNEL GARMENTS
Of Inferior Quality of Goods
are sold as the "genuine Middlesex," which are not made by that mill, The Middlesex Company, in order to protect their customers and the public, give notice that hereafter all Clothing made from THE MIDDLESEX STANDARD INDIGO BLUE FLANNELS AND YACHT CLOTHS, sold by all leading clothiers, must bear the "SILK HANGERS," furnished by the Selling Agents to all parties ordering the goods.
WENDELL, FAY & CO.,
SELLING AGENTS, MIDDLESEX COMPANY,
86 and 88 Worth St., New York; 37 Franklin St., Boston; 214 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C. O. D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 926 20-83

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, MAY 30, 1883. NUMBER 31.

PITH AND POINT.

—There is one search that is never unsuccessful—namely, the search for trouble.

—Mrs. Partington, dear old lady, says that there are very few people nowadays who suffer from "suggestion of the brain."

—The phonograph is like the small brother of a young lady. It will repeat everything said in its presence without regard to blushes.

—"Any fule kin kick agin circumstances," says Uncle Mose, "but it am de wise man who conquers misfortune an' spits on his hands to tackle advarsity."

—A clergyman asked some children: "Why do we say in the Lord's Prayer, 'who art in Heaven,' since God is everywhere?" A little drummer boy answered, "Because it's headquarters."—N. Y. News.

—"What a bore Jenins is?" exclaimed Connery; "just met him, and he talked about that confounded horse of his for half an hour, and I couldn't get a word in edgeways about my new dog."—Boston Transcript.

—An Easy Job.—Robinson (after a long whist bout at the club): "It's awfully late, Brown. What will you say to your wife?" Brown (in a whisper) "Oh, I shan't say much, you know. 'Good morning, dear,' or something of that sort. She'll say the rest."—Continental Magazine.

—An unfortunate, who was climbing the steps of the scaffold upon which he was about to be executed, slipped and fell headforemost, but was caught before reaching the ground. "Good gracious!" he exclaimed, "but that was a narrow escape. I might have been killed."—Washington Critic.

—"Oh, my dear, noble, generous husband!" murmurs the fond wife, "how grand you are! I only wish I could be you for just one day!" "Why, dearest?" asks the unsuspecting man. "Because, then I [illegible] new bonnet for my loving little wife!" replies the designing creature.—Cleveland Herald.

—It is said a bill is to be introduced in the Legislature, looking to an amendment of the State Constitution, giving the dude the right to vote at constable elections. The dude, it must be confessed, does resemble a human being somewhat, but not enough to bestow upon him the rights of citizenship to that extent.—Norristown Herald.

—"Very cur'ous, very cur'ous," muttered Farmer Furrow, as he stumbled into the house late one evening, after attending a protracted meeting at the grocery. "What's curious, John?" asked his patient wife, who was waiting for him. "Why, old 'oman, 's I 's comin' 'long, I heerd a dog howl s' much like a man that I cud most tell what it said. Whatteryer think 'bout it, old lady?" "I think you tarried too long at the whine, John," said his helpmeet, as she gave him a hoost that sent him sprawling over the woodb —N. Y. Advertiser.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The experiment is being made in Massachusetts of raising ivory hickory trees for the purpose of disposing of them for hoop-poles.

—A new industry in Japan is said to be that of lacquering plaster so as to resemble marble. On a basis of clay this lacquer work is especially novel and effective.

—A letter from St. John's, N. F., says that this season's sealing voyage will be one of the best for many years, the number of seals taken being estimated at 450,000, valued at $1,500,000. —N. Y. Herald.

—A Brooklyn (N.Y.) man is reported to have obtained an interest in a discovery by which common vegetable fibers can be converted into a substitute for wool. The discovery was made by a German chemist.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—A process by which planks can be manufactured from straw has been perfected, and in Chicago a building six-stories high, and occupying an entire block, is being erected for the new industry. The board is manufactured by converting straw pulp into thin paper-like sheets, which are passed through a bath containing certain chemicals in solution. They are subjected to enormous pressure, and finally to a thorough drying process.—Chicago Herald.

—Captain Holstein, of the Danish Army, has invented, for the use of infantry soldiers, a shield, which, though weighing but seven pounds, is bullet-proof and handy. It is of steel, twenty inches long by eighteen broad. Two spikes at the bottom enable the soldier to fix it firmly in the ground, and a hollow at the top can be used as a rest for his rifle. The experiments that were made with the shield at Copenhagen a short time ago were deemed highly satisfactory, but will be repeated on a larger scale before the Danish Government decides as to its adoption for the army.

—Albany has the only celluloid billiard ball factory in the world. It already does a large business, and the owners are confident that in a little time their product will drive the ivory article quite out of the market. The inventor has another composition called bonisiliate which is even better, and it is said that balls made of it are often mistaken for ivory by experts, while the cost is much less and there is no shrinking and change of shape. The factory works from twenty to twenty-five men, and has a capacity of three hundred to four hundred balls a day.—Albany (N. Y.) Journal

—The Women's Silk Culture Association of Philadelphia is composed of a number of wealthy and philanthropic women of that city who desire to introduce and encourage this industry among American women and girls. They are glad to furnish all needful information concerning the business or application, and will supply eggs at about five dollars an ounce—the ounce containing 40,000 eggs. In former years a good deal of disappointment resulted from the attempt to grow silk in this country. Recent experiments have in many cases met with better success.—Philadelphia Press.

The Process of Stone-Cutting.

"There is a perfect specimen of the lapidist's art," said J. W. Beath, as he handed across the counter a fine specimen of the cairngorm.

"Observe," he continued, "the number of facets on that stone. There are three hundred in all, and each one is perfectly true in shape. This stone weighs nearly two ounces, and yet so truly is it cut, the oval shapes so geometrically perfect, that it will stand on its pivot, which is not so large as a pin's head," and, suiting action to word, the lapidist deftly placed the stone on a sheet of glass, and, the center of gravitation falling within its pin-head base, it remained nicely balanced on its lower point or pivot.

"Will you tell me how the transformation of the opaque, muddy-looking stone in the rough to the sparkling gem is effected?" asked the visitor.

"The rough gem goes through three processes before it is ready for the jeweler's window. First, a piece of the stone must be cut off as nearly as possible the size required. The saw used in doing this is a circular piece of sheet-iron, without teeth, set in a wood-worker's saw, and operated by a foot-treadle. Two men stand at this saw, each having a foot upon the treadle. One man holds the stone to be cut tightly against the edge of the saw, while the other, using a feather dipped in oil, applies diamond dust to the edge of the saw. The saw being made of very ductile metal, the tiny particles of diamond become imbedded in it, and, acting as cutting points, soon wear through the hardest stone. Now the piece cut off passes to the cutting table. Here is a wheel strapped through the center that revolves parallel to the top of the table. The stone to be cut is fastened to a stick about six inches long with cement. The lapidist takes the stick in his right hand, steadies his hand on a wooden rest, which is adjusted to the right of the wheel, and holds the stone firmly to the wheel until one facet is ground down. To the wheel, I should add, is applied diamond dust and water. The table and upper facets of the stone are cut this way, and the stone is then removed from and re-adjusted to the stick before the lapidist cuts the under side collets and remaining facets.

"The manipulation of the stone in the third, or polishing, process, is identical with that of the cutting. The wheel, however, is composed mainly of tin, and tripoli and rottenstone are used in the polishing. If you will look closely at a small diamond or crystal, and notice the number of facets, their equality of size and harmony of form, you will be able to get an idea of the skill, care and long practice called for by the work.—Philadelphia Press.

Taken for the Colonel.

Colonel Fitz Wallace O'Donovan was, certainly, a handsome-looking man, and he knew it, and his wife knew it. He was a lion in society. He was a leader of fashion. He introduced the "O'Donovan Cravat," and the "Fitz Wallace Shoulder-Brace;" and at the club they compounded the "O'Donovan Cocktail," and the "Fitz Wallace Julep." His wife introduced equally sounding fashions into female use.

In the town, also—and making his way into just such circles as pleased him—was the publisher and editor of the "Daily Sledge-Hammer"—plain Wallace Donovan. Somebody—one of the uneducated—once asked Mrs. O'D. if her husband and the editor were in any way related to one another. The great lady looked upon her questioner in pitying surprise.

"Related? What! with the O'Donovan! My dear Madam, the O'Donovans are descended directly from the O'Donovans of Tara's Hall! Those simple Donovans are nobodies."

And that settled it.

On a certain evening one of the nabobs gave a big party; and the O'Donovans were there, large as life. Late in the evening, after he had got his paper to press, Wallace Donovan looked in, and made himself at home. By and by a lady, in his presence, remarked upon the appearance of the Colonel, who had just passed them.

"I declare!" she said, with considerable animation, "Colonel O'Donovan is a handsome man!"

"And would you believe it?" returned the editor, laughingly—"I have been taken for him twice."

Mrs. O'D. chanced to be standing directly at his elbow at the moment, and overheard.

"You—you taken for my husband?" she cried, with cutting disdain. "What an idea! You taken for the O'Donovan!"

"Do not misunderstand me, Madam," returned the literary man with a polite bow. "You force me to explain. It was not the similarity of personal appearance that to the error to which I alluded; but the similarity of our names. That simple thing was the occasion of my being twice arrested by the sheriff, for debt! However—no great damage was done. I very quickly convinced him of his error, and put him on the right track! I wish you a good evening, Madam."

It was said that the irate lady tried to persuade her husband to call the man out! But the O'D. was too wise to burn his fingers in an editorial fire, even had the courage been his.—N. Y. Ledger.

—John Mitchell, the Irish patriot, was asked by a friend while here if he had ever viewed Niagara Falls from the Canadian side. He replied in his broad accent: "No, sir; I've too much respect for my neck to indulge in any such curiosity. As the Queen keeps such a sharp eye on me, a view from the Falls on that side would doubtless insure the prospect of another fall which might not prove so enjoyable to me."—N. Y. Sun.

—The shutting out of American hog products from Germany is evidently intended to stimulate and protect stock raising in that empire. German farmers are enabled to raise their own hogs when freed from the competition of America. It may work some hardship upon the laboring classes there, but the farmers are made happy.—N. Y. Times.

The Moving of the McFingals.

Silas McFingal and Mrs. Silas McFingal have been keeping house in the vicinity of the writer's residence during the last year. For some reason Mr. McFingal decided to move last week. We do not mean that last week was a movable festival, like Shrove Tuesday or Easter Sunday, and that Mr. McFingal tried to move it. It was not last week but himself and his wife and other household goods that McFingal decided on moving. This English language of ours is calculated to misrepresent what one means to say. There is too much of it.

Why McFingal wanted to move we can not say. We do not know. Probably the landlord would not fix the pump or wait for the rent, or was otherwise disobliging and unaccommodating. The first intimation that we had of the moving of our neighbors was a violent and phenomenal discharge from their back windows of empty pickle jars, vacant sardine boxes and hard-boiled ham bones that had accumulated on the premises during its occupancy by the McFingals. Then Mr. McFingal, with his head tied up in a napkin, a streak of soot down the side of his nose and some tomato sauce on his pants, came over to borrow a broom and a screw-driver from us. McFingal is of domestic habits. He is not the kind of husband who stays away from home when furniture is being moved and carpets are being pulled up. He labored from the rising of the sun until noon, with cobwebs in his his hair and his mouth full of tacks, packing trunks, lifting down pictures with a broom handle, kicking the dog out of the pantry and pulling plaster off the wall in vain efforts to unscrew a hat rack from a corner. Harmony reigned throughout the humble McFingal abode until Silas accidentally knocked The Model Housekeeper (vol. II) off a top shelf and broke a three-dollar lamp. After that, for some time, the proceedings were not so harmonious. Mrs. McFingal said some bitter things about the natural clumsiness of the male portion of the human race, and the everlasting stupidity of that fraction of it that she has the misfortune to be connubially related to.

Some beer, crackers and sausage, procured from the grocery by Mr. McFingal, restored harmony to the household, and amid the debris of dismantled furniture they partook of a frugal meal. It was a stormy day, however, in the McFingal family. The furniture wagon ran over the dog's tail, and when McFingal expostulated with the driver of the wagon, a bundle of bed slats and a roll of stair carpeting hit him on the back of the neck. It was almost dark before all the furniture was out of the old house. Then for an hour McFingal, with a lantern in one hand, a piece of water pipe in the other, and the dog at his heels, pursued his cow all over the Eighth Ward in a vain effort to induce her to migrate to the new premises.

The cow disappeared in the gathering gloom, and the McFingals retired to their new home, where Mrs. McFingal, on an impromptu bed on the top of a bureau, and Mr. McFingal on the floor, rested after the arduous toil of the day.

They both swear that they will not again move for twenty-seven years at least. And they are delighted with their new house, but of course before a year they will have discovered many defects in it; the roof will leak, there will be rats in the cellar, or the walls will be damp; anyhow, they will not stay more than a year. That is usually how it is. Just now, however, the McFingals are delighted, and having got the furniture in order they sit all day on a sofa with smiles on their faces, waiting for the neighbors to call—neighbors that they will not be on speaking terms with before the May moon wanes. The country is swarming with movers of the McFingals class just at present.—Texas Siftings.

A Disagreeable Job Quickly Completed.

"Clara, dearest," began Mark Frankton, "often has the question which I am about to ask you trembled upon my lips."

"What is it, Mark?" exclaimed Clara, a feeling of undefined terror taking possession of her as she gazed into his unblanched face.

"Clara," continued Mark, taking her hand in his and fondling it in a reassuring manner. "Clara, I love you—pray don't be alarmed—I would have you with me always; that is to say, will you be mine?"

"And do you love me truly and disinterestedly, Mark?"

"Yes, Clara, as the world goes. I would be happy, and I believe you are the woman who will make me happy."

"But this is so sudden, Mark," murmured Clara, bending her head to hide her blushes.

"I know it is sudden. I didn't think of it myself till a day or two ago. But the fact is I have come to the conclusion that I might as well get married. I want somebody to keep house for me and do my washing, ironing and mending. I won't say that you are the only girl I ever loved, but as you appear to think a good deal of me it is natural that I should think a good deal of you."

"Yes, Mark."

"And I don't suppose it will cost much more; if it does, you know, you will be only too glad to take in washing or dressmaking or something of that sort to eke out our income."

"O, Mark! you know I love you, and I can not resist your eloquent appeal. Yes, I will be yours forever."

"Very kind of you, Clara; really, I am much obliged to you. You have saved me a deal of trouble. If you had refused me I should have been obliged to ask some other girl. I had half a dozen in mind, but now that it is settled I shan't bother to call on any of them."

"You don't know how happy I am to hear you speak thus, dear Mark. It shall be my aim to watch over your happiness day and night. Henceforth I live only for you."

"Yes, Clara, that's what I want. Now that we have settled that question I'll be going, as I promised Tom Badger I'd come over and play a game of pool with him this evening. Good night."

"Good night, Mark."

Our Young Folks.

THE ELEPHANT SOLDIER.

Long, long ago, on India's plains,
There raged a battle fierce and strong;
The din of musketry was heard,
And cannon's roar was loud and long.
Old Hero marched with stately tread
His part to act in the affray;
And on his back, above all heads,
The royal ensign waved that day.

Fondly the soldiers viewed their flag,
Which shook its colors to the air.
Proudly the mahout rode and sent
His watchful gaze now here, now there,
Till "Halt!" he cried; and Hero heard,
And instantly the word obeyed,
When, lo! a flash, a shriek, and then
His driver with the slain was laid.

Oh, fierce and hot the conflict grew!
Yet patiently old Hero stood
Amidst it all, the while his feet
Were stained, alas! with human blood.
His ears were strained to catch the voice
Which only could his steps command,
Nor would he turn when men grew weak,
And panic spread on either hand.

But yet the standard waved aloft;
The fleeing soldiers saw it. "Lo!
We are not conquered yet," they cried,
And rallying, closed upon the foe.
Then turned the tide of conquest, and
The royal ensign waved at last
Victorious o'er the blood-stained field
Just as the weary day was past.

Yet waited Hero for the word
Of him whose sole command he knew—
Waited, nor moved one ponderous foot,
To his own Captain's orders true.
Three lonely nights, three lonely days,
Poor Hero "halted." Bribe nor threat
Could stir him from the spot. And on
His back he bore the standard yet.

Then thought the soldiers of a child
Who lived one hundred miles away;
"The mahout's son! fetch him!" they cried;
"His voice the creature will obey."
He came, the little orphaned lad,
Scarce nine years old. But Hero knew
That many a time the master's son
Had been the "little driver," too.

Obediently the brave old head
Was bowed before the child, and then,
With one long, wistful glance around,
Old Hero's march began again.
Onward he went. The trappings hung
All stained and tattered at his side,
And no one saw the cruel wound
On which the blood was scarcely dried.

But when at last the tents were reached,
The suffering hero raised his head,
And trumpeting his mortal pain,
Looked for the master who was dead;
And then about his master's son
His trunk old Hero feebly wound,
And ere another day had passed
A soldier's honored grave had found.

—Mary D. Brine, in Harper's Young People.

IDLE WORDS.

"Yes, we had a most magnificent time at the sociable. All the people were perfectly delightful and the music was charming and the decorations just too lovely for anything! The room was frightfully hot, though—I was fairly melted."

"Yes, the room was rather warm," remarked Lucy.

"And I got tired to death before it was over, things dragged so dreadfully. I thought that Glee Club would surely go on singing all night. And what an awfully shrill voice Janet Granby has!—it really deafened me. Don't you think that dress of hers is horrid—with flounces piled on by the dozen?"

"I thought it had only seven."

"The salt must have got into the ice-cream, did you notice? There was enough in the saucerful I ate to freeze a whole freezer full. Wasn't that a splendid bouquet they threw to Susy Merton! So big it almost covered her up."

"Indeed!" quietly exclaimed grandfather, who was sitting near. "I should like to have seen it. I have heard of the wonderful things florists construct nowadays with cut flowers, but I had no idea they made them so large as that."

"As what, grandfather?" asked Mabel, pausing before launching into another stream of talk, she having, as was usual with her, forgotten her trifling words almost as soon as uttered.

"It must have been—well, you did not give the dimensions, my dear, but I should guess it could not have been less than four or five feet in diameter."

"What diameter, grandfather."

"Why, the diameter of that bouquet."

"What bouquet?" Mabel looked bewildered.

"The one you have been telling about."

"I never told of a bouquet four or five feet in diameter, grandfather. You must be dreaming, sir. I never saw such a thing in my life."

"Then the lady you spoke of must be very small, dear."

"What lady, grandfather?"

"The lady whose bouquet almost covered her up."

"Oh-h-h!" Mabel burst into a hearty laugh. "Why, grandfather, that's just my way of talking. Of course I did not mean that she had a bouquet as large as that."

"Then why did you say so, Mabel?"

"Oh, well—mamma does scold me most outrageously for it. She says I exaggerate things horribly, but what harm does it do?"

"I am sorry to hear that of your mother," said the old gentleman, gravely. "I had always supposed that her behavior was far within the limits of decency and propriety."

"My mother! Grandfather, you are very queer to-day! What do you mean?"

"Look in the dictionary for the definition of things done in an outrageous manner, dear. I am only taking you at your word. But I am afraid, Mabel, that your health will suffer from the effects of eating so much salt."

"I hav'n't been eating salt, grandfather."

"I understood you to say your ice-cream contained enough salt to freeze a whole freezer full."

"Oh, now, grandfather, you are a most fearful critic."

"I shall try not to be alarming. How did you manage to reduce yourself to a solid condition so soon after being melted?"

"Oh, I only meant that the room was so roasting hot."

"It must have been quite a dangerous place—you were attacked with deafness, too, you say?—you seem to be recovering from it."

"But you know I didn't mean any such thing."

"Then why did you say it, dear? Was it true?"

"Why—it wasn't so, of course."

"If it was not true, what was it?"

Mabel looked as if this was a soberer view of the matter than she wished to take.

"Did you really think the Glee Club would sing all night?"

"No, sir."

"Then, when you said you thought so did you tell the truth? If not, what did you tell?" The tears came into Mabel's eyes.

"Grandfather, do you think I would tell an untruth?"

"No, dear, not intentionally, but, Mabel"—he laid his hand tenderly on her head—"I want you to think how many things you have said in the last fifteen minutes which are simply not true. I want to caution you earnestly against indulging in this habit of loose, thoughtless speech. I am sorry to hear so many young people giving way to it. It is vulgar, it is foolish—and if not wicked, its direct tendency is to wickedness, for remember, what is not true is false. And even where careless expression does not involve disregard of truth it may be well to reflect that it is heard by the Lord, who has assured us that 'for every idle word that man shall speak he shall give an account in the day of judgment.'"—Sydney Dayre, in Chicago Standard.

Doing Things Thoroughly.

Laura came into the disorderly sitting-room, put a sweeping-cap on her head, and began listlessly drawing a broom over the dirty carpet. In a few moments a goodly pile of dirt was swept out the door, when she took a duster and looked around, quite puzzled where to begin.

"I wish I'd never been to Aunt Sarah's," she said, dropping down on the lounge with a more discontented look than before. "It's all very well for her to talk about keeping things in order, but her children seem different from ours. Just look here."

It was rather discouraging. On one chair lay some crusts of bread and molasses; on another a torn picture-book and some paints over which the glass of water used with them had been spilt. On the table mother's over-filled work-basket was running over, some spools of thread tangled among broken toys. The ashes [illegible] grate were widely scattered, and every corner seemed to have its separate litter.

"Who sweeps a room well, does God's service." Something like this Laura had heard said while at her aunt's house.

"I don't believe God has much to do with such a room as this," she said, fretfully, to herself. "And it don't make much difference how it's swept, I'm sure." But her eye noted rather uneasily the untouched corners, and the dusty patch under the table which her lazy broom had not reached. Aunt Sarah's cheery watchword: "Thorough, my dears, thorough," seemed to sound in her ears as she remembered how she had come home with a firm determination to institute a better order of things.

"I'll try it, anyway." She dusted and carried out every movable article of furniture, sprang to her broom again, and this time wielded it with an energy which left little chance of peace to the seldom-disturbed dust. And into the fire went many a fragment of broken playthings that would surely never be missed. Aunt Sarah believed in a judicious keeping down of worthless trash.

The dirt being gathered this time in a dust-pan and sent after the trash, Laura straightened and dusted the pictures, then the curtains. Books not needed were carried away, the others piled neatly in order. Newspapers were sorted, and those not to be saved taken to the kitchen for kindling. A basket was found for the toys, and the rubber shoes and a slate which had lain under the lounge were put away in the closet. There was not time for a thorough cleaning of finger-marked windows, but a quick rub with some soft paper brightened them amazingly. Then she washed up the oil-cloth before the grate, and when the furniture was back in place sat down with the work-basket, glad of a rest.

"I do think it's the most hopeless snarl I ever saw, but I'll try what 'thorough' will do here." A number of pieces for chance mending were rolled into a bundle, the thread untangled as far as it could be, wound and fastened. Needles were placed in the needle-book and buttons in a box by themselves. A jumping-jack and tin horse on wheels was rescued from a woeful entanglement in a skein of darning yarn, which was wound up and laid with the stockings, mated ready for mending. Almost everything went back into the basket which had been there before, but it was not half full.

Lastly Laura went to the parlor and brought out a gay-colored tidy for the large chair and a worsted mat for a vase, which she hastily filled with flowers. "I'm not going to keep all the pretty things out of sight," she said, "and I'm going to have a cretonne cover for this old lounge. It won't cost much and will lighten up the room."

Even baby gave a crow of delight as he came into the room on mother's arm; then scrambled down and laughed aloud as he crept toward his tin horse, which had been lost for a week. And mother looked around the room with a brighter smile than Laura had seen on her face for many a day.

"Oh, my daughter—have your little hands done all this? Why, I didn't know the old carpet could look so fresh, and what a cheery-looking, pleasant room it is after all. What a precious comfort you are, my darling!"

Laura looked around the tidy room with great satisfaction.

"I've been over every inch of it, mother. How pleasant it is to feel that you've done a thing thoroughly."

Try it girls. Try what satisfaction there is in bringing order and sweetness out of confusion. Try what a joy there is in lightening mother's cares and in making dear faces brighter because the dear home is brighter. And be sure that the Master who has said: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," will tenderly bless even a smaller service, conscientiously and heartily performed, than that of a "room well swept."—N. Y. Observer.

—Princess Louise says she was very much pleased with Boston, and the Bostonians are so proud over it that they think of building a wall around the city and charging an admission fee.—Philadelphia News.

Religious.

REST.

Oft, like the Psalmist, do we cry:
Oh that a dove's swift wing had I;
Where evil could no more molest,
I'd fly away and be at rest.

But what if, with a stronger wing,
Evil were ever following?
And what if pain and grief and care
Should haunt and hurt me even there?

What but the grave can give release?
The wicked there from troubling cease;
Its quietness is manifest,
And there the weary are at rest.

Can rest no other where be found?
Mine ear has caught a winsome sound:
"O, heavy-laden, come to Me,
I only will give rest to thee."

I know the voice of Him I love—
The Friend of all other friends above—
I come to Him; so ends my quest.
Return, my soul, unto thy rest!

Didst Thou not make me for Thine own?
Light in Thy light to see alone,
And restless evermore to be,
Till I should find my rest in Thee?

Thine easy yoke, O Christ, I take,
Thyself my true yokefellow make.
I ask no more; supremely blest,
Mine is at length the perfect rest.

My home, my hope, my heart above,
Light, life and rest to me Thy love;
What more than this, in Thee to live,
Have I to ask, hast Thou to give?

—A. R. Thompson, D. D., in S. S. Times.

International Sunday-School Lessons.

SECOND QUARTER.

May 27—Paul and Barnabas in Cyprus..........Acts 13: 1-12
June 3—At Antioch.....Acts 13:13-16 and 43-52
June 10—At Iconium and Lystra Acts 14: 1-18
June 17—End of the First Missionary Journey..........Acts 14:19-28
June 25—Review.

"It Is Beautiful."

How often the wish of the Syrian prophet as he stood on the top of Peor has been echoed by human hearts! But the coveted "death of the righteous" receives its chief significance from a righteous life that precedes it. The "edifying" deathbed of Louis XIV, of France, after his mean and immoral career, impresses one more as a successful theatrical performance than as the closing scene of a sincere Christian experience. No such unhappy suspicion hung over the dying hours and utterances of Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett Browning, and no such contradiction mars her biography or the beauty of its end. Hers was a lovely Christian life, and its close fulfilled the Scriptural promises. A severe cold in the summer of 1861 soon developed into a threatening illness, which confined her to her bed, in her home in Florence from whose "Casa Guidi Windows" she had so often looked with wisely wondrous eyes. She rallied, however, and on the sixth day an intimate female friend who had visited her went away with no suspicion of what was so soon to be the terrible reality. Mrs. Browning's own bright boy bade his mother "good-night," cheered by her oft-repeated "I am better, dear; much better."

Only one watched her breathing through the night—her husband, who for fifteen years had ministered to her with all the tenderness of a woman. It was a night void of suffering to her. As the morning approached, and two hours previous to the fatal moment, she seemed to be in a partial ecstasy, and, though not apparently conscious of the coming of death, she gave her husband all those many words of love whose value death has made priceless.

Such moments are too sacred for the common pen, which pauses as the woman-poet raises herself up to die in the arms of her poet-husband. He knew not that death had robbed him of his treasure until the drooping form grew chill, and froze his heart's blood. At half-past four on the morning of the 29th of June Elizabeth Barrett Browning passed away.

Her last words were: "It is beautiful!"

God was merciful to the end, sparing her and hers the agony of a frenzied parting, giving proofs to those who were left of the glory and happiness in store for her, by those few words: "it is beautiful!" The spirit could see its future mission even before shaking off the dust of the earth.

Mrs. Hemans wrote hopefully and beautifully of the crowning hours of a Christian life. In her last days she said: "I feel like Mary, sitting at the feet of my Saviour, and learning of Him to be meek and lowly." No pen, she said, could describe the visions of blessedness that rose upon her spiritual sight.

Like Mrs. Hemans, Mrs. Browning wrote confidently of life's harvest days. In connection with this anecdote, how like a prophecy is her poem: "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep."

"Beautiful!" Yet only those who, after hard struggles, climb to the high summits of an unselfish and pure-hearted life, see at last these beautiful prospects. Not all good people have such disclosures here, even at the last, but to every one who does his duty to God, day by day, the prospect of the future life is beautiful.—Youth's Companion.

Discount and Compensation.

One of the most vexing problems connected with human life is the inequality existing in the earthly lots of men; and the more we study the subject the more manifest is the fact that this is one of the most prolific sources of discontent. But the great difficulty is that we are misled by appearances, and put utterly false estimates on the apparent advantages of others, while we depreciate our own. If we could only be wise enough to take right views of our relations and resources, we might find comfort in the discovery that things are much more impartially balanced than we are accustomed to think, that there is much less inequality than we generally imagine, and that, therefore, we have no good reason to be dissatisfied with God's appointments.

As we come to know the facts in each case, we learn that the advantages and disadvantages of different individuals are very evenly balanced; and, generally speaking, whatever drawbacks are to be recognized in the outward condition of some men, it is not difficult to discover that they are not without some compensation. And, on the other hand, whatever pre-eminent advantages any one may boast, there is sure to be somewhere a subtraction from the sum total of his comforts. In this view we see that a truthful estimate can only be reached by an impartial and careful estimate of the different circumstances of individuals.

Subjected to this test, there can be no doubt we would be reluctant to accept the lot of those we are often tempted to envy, and, in the majority of cases, with all the circumstances necessary to form the basis of an honest judgment, we should be forced to see an illustration of the truth of that Scripture: "God hath set the one over against the other."

Connected with the humblest earthly lot there is an infinite sum of blessings that we are too prone to overlook, and overrating fictitious distinctions, and giving undue importance to incidental advantages, we are in constant danger of losing sight of all the richest gifts of Heaven and of yielding to the temptation to murmur against the allotments of Providence. But if, in any case, our miseries are more than our mercies, we should not forget that they have their uses, and that it becomes us to make them serve the high end for which they are appointed. Such experiences are for our discipline, and because we may thus make our troubles and disappointments and afflictions ministries to our moral advantage, we may well count them among our best ministries, esteeming the benefit to be derived from them a full compensation for their cost.—Baptist Weekly.

"No Thanks for Your Labor."

How often persons seek to dissuade others from a course of well-doing by the remark: "You will get no thanks for your labors"—and how many persons, when looking over the toils of long years, feel a secret pang as they think how little their kindly efforts are appreciated.

But the work of the servant of God is not done to win the thanks [illegible] he labors with a higher aim; he has a grander object in view; he is a servant, not of men, but of God; and the work he does is not for the hope of earthly praise or earthly pay, but for the glory of God and the honor of his Heavenly Master.

He who labors to secure the thanks of men will find himself doomed to perpetual disappointment. He lives in an unthankful world; his labor is a thankless task, and he will often become discouraged, and perhaps abandon his undertakings. On the other hand, he who labors to please the Lord and has only the glory of God in view, will find the blessing of the Divine approval resting upon him during his pilgrimage, and at the end he will receive from the Master a gracious welcome and a great reward.

Let us purpose in our hearts to do right, thanks or no thanks, and not be turned away from our fidelity to God and our efforts to benefit man by any ingratitude or neglect which we may experience. A coming day will right all wrongs, and in that day the neglected and despised servants of God shall know of a truth that their labor was not in vain in the Lord.

Listen to the words of the great Teacher: "As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same. And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again. But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again; and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest; for He is kind unto the unthankful and to the evil." (Luke vi, 31-35.)—Church Union.

"Rejoice with Them that Do Rejoice."

The word sympathy, signifying originally, as its derivation shows, "feeling with" another, referred of course to a harmony of feeling in sorrow and in joy. As too generally used it refers only to the feeling called out toward those in affliction. This use of the word is expressive. We are commanded "to weep with them that weep"—how easy, comparatively, is this Christian duty! To visit the afflicted, to succor the poor, to console the bereaved—are they hard tasks?

But "to rejoice with them that do rejoice"—to see our old neighbor with no higher endowments than our own, obtain honor, position, fame—to see the wealth and luxury we would gladly possess gained by others, to see the goal reached by those who started in life's race more heavily freighted than ourselves, while we still plod the dusty road, then to frame our lips to speech of kindness and congratulation, is hard, to teach our hearts content and cheerfulness, harder yet.

"To rejoice with them that do rejoice"—who can do this truly and unfeignedly before the Searcher of hearts—surely he is not far from the Kingdom.—[illegible] Rule.

Effective Christian Work.

"What is to become of the multitudes that throng our city streets, many of them no better than heathens?" Such was the question of a friend the other day as we were walking together. And the remark was added, in substance, that in some aspects of the matter their case looked very hopeless. This is true. The mass of evil, seen at least from some points of view, seems so immense, and those who are laboring to overcome it are so few, that it is easy to be discouraged. And yet there is another side to the matter. We can see that progress has been made. There is more doing in our great city to relieve and uplift and Christianize the great masses than ever before. And these labors are not in vain. But whatever may be the case as regards the matter in general, this at least is true, that each of us as individuals can do something to let the light in on this darkness. Without waiting much to see what others are doing, we can exert our own personal influence. How much of the darkness we may scatter only eternity will reveal.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Proprietors.

BURLINGON, KY. MAY 30. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
	"	40
	"	20
"	"	20
"	"	10
"	"	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (except the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor.
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer,
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction.
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette.

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

IN Alabama low lands the cotton crops has been materially damaged by the cold weather this spring.

COMMISSIONER Bowman says that the wheat crop of the State will be about eighty per cent of the average yield.

GEN. BEAUREGARD thinks the negroes are decreasing in the South, while crime among them has increased.

EX-SECRETARY Bristow indorses Walter Evans' appointment as commissioner of the internal revenue. He thinks he is the right man in the right place.

AN examination of the cash vault of the Treasury, the first for ten years, shows an excess of only three cents in a package of fractional currency, and an excess of one cent on the interest-teller's cash. The cash has been found exactly correct in every division examined.

THE republicans nominated their state ticket last week, which now reads: T. Z. Morrow, of Pulaski, for governor; Speed S. Fry, of Boyle, for lieutenant governor; L. C. Garrigus, of Logan, for attorney general; T. R. Hawthorne, of Campbell, for auditor; Edward Farley, of McCracken, for treasurer; Jas. P. Pinkerton, of Carter, for superintendent of public instruction; J. W. Asbury, of Harrison, for register of the land office. The gentleman to whom the land office business was assigned is a colored preacher.

FRIDAY night a mob visited the Mount Sterling jail for the purpose of taking out and lynching three prisoners confined therein and awaiting the action of the grand jury then in session. The jail was guarded and a fire was opened on the mob which was soon repelled, two of its members being badly wounded and left by their fleeing comrades. One of the wounded men was the sheriff of Menifee county, from where the prisoners were sent. None of the guards were hurt, but the jail windows were riddled with bullets.

CRAFT did not hang last Friday as per appointment of Judge Brown. Taking the case to the Court of Appeals gave him another lease on life, and when the performance will come off is now very uncertain. The extention of time is not unsatisfactory to him, and he only smiles to think how he has, thus far, baffled the law, which has so long been seeking vindication. By the time he mounts the gallows many will have forgotten the offense with which he is charged, and have to ask for what he is being hanged.

THAT the interest in the cause of education is on the increase in this county, is manifested by the number of good school-houses that now dot the county. Ten years since, as a class, the school-houses were the poorest buildings in the county, and they were an index to the manner of schools taught therein. The progress in all branches of business is marked by the facilities for its prosecution, and the advancement made in education in the same manner. Every step made for the encouragement of good schools is one that redounds to the wellfare of our State, which has been pointed at by the finger of scorn for many years, by those of her sisters more blessed with schools.

TWELVE out of the thirteen delegates from Owen county to the Louisville convention publish a card in which they say as follows:

"After Gen. Buckner had been withdrawn, it was unanimously agreed on suggestion of Mr. Botts, a supporter of Knott, that in consideration of the Jones delegation who were in a majority, withdrawing their claim to cast the vote in proportion to strength, and giving Knott 8 votes and Jones 5, that the Knott delegation would waive any claim to have the vote cast solid for Knott, and the vote was accordingly so cast, and that when the Chairman afterwards proposed to change the vote solid for Knott, and the county retired for consultation, it was agreed, only two delegates dissenting, that the vote should not be changed, but stand as it was 8 to 5, and that the delegation never did unanimously agree that the vote should be changed, but several were protesting loudly when the vote was changed."

IT appears the question as to who is the nominee of the Democratic party for Governor is not yet settled by considerable, that it will be taken by friends of Col. Jones to the two State Committees for settlement. The withdrawal of Col. Jones' name amounts to nothing, as it was done on the supposition that Owen county had changed its five votes from Jones to Knott, while in the consulting room which was not the case, as it was there agreed that the vote should stand as voted. But Revel, of the Knott faction, rushed out of the room and to the side of the Chairman and had the Secretary (also a Knott man) to announce that Owen cast her whole thirteen votes for Knott, which was done, and when the Chairman of that delegation arrived at his position on the floor to make the true report, he was drowned out by noise and confusion and the Chairman would not recognize him. Hence the appeal to the State Committees. Judge Lindsay, of Frankfort, late of the Court of Appeals, says no court on earth can justly decide other than Col. Jones was the nominee of the party of the State for Governor. So the question is yet open.—Newport Journal.

PALOUSE CITY, W. T. May 8, 1883,
To the Editors of the Recorder:

I think that I can not occupy my time better than by giving my friends and acquaintances a little sketch of our great Palouse county.

We are now having some rain, but to one just coming to this country, he would think it nothing more than a drizzle. We have a good deal of that kind of weather in the fall and spring.

The winter here has been pleasant except four or five days were very cold. The oldest settlers say it was the coldest weather they ever experienced in Washington Territory. In the five days excepted the thermometers indicated from 18 to 42 degrees below zero. In cold weather we have no cold winds blowing—the coldest weather here does not seem as cold as I have seen it in Kentucky.

Spring opens here the first of March and the weather is pleasant until the first of April, when we have a wet spell, which lasted, this spring, for three weeks; but the farmers continued their work as though it was not raining.

This country produces grain of all kinds, except corn, which can not be raised successfully. All kinds of vegetables grow as near perfection here as anywhere. Fruit of hardy varieties grows well here.

The Territory is filling up very rapidly. Emigrants by the hundreds are coming from Missouri, Iowa and Kansas. In fact, every state, and nearly every county in the states, is represented here; but it seems that John Chinaman will have the largest representation.

In a couple of years there will be no lands to be taken up. All that is now deeded is advancing in price having gone up about one-third since I arrived here.

Should any of my old friends and acquaintances ask me questions, I will answer them truthfully as I view them. HENRY UTZ.

STATE-NEWS.

--At New Liberty two negro boys were fooling with a pistol, and one was shot and instantly killed.

—The boiler in a Spencer county saw mill exploded last Saturday and killed the owner.

—Perry Wherritt, of Cynthiana, died last Wednesday. With the exception of four years he had been county clerk since 1850.

—A portion of the roof of the Southern Exposition building at Louisville fell and injured several of the workmen.

—Geo. Neal, col., on trial in Lexington for killing a white man in Fayette county last fall, was acquitted on the grounds of self-defense.

—The jailer at Owinsville, Bath county, went into the jail to put the prisoners in their cells, when two of them overpowered him, took the keys from him, unlocked the jail door and made their escape.

Sixty Thousand
DOLLAR STOCK
TO SELECT YOUR GOODS FROM
At COLTER'S
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH STORE,
Rising Sun, Ind.

GRAND SPECIAL BARGAINS
Just Placed on our counters!

We received a message three days since from our New York buyer that he had just shipped us a case of All Wool Cassimere Clothing at fifty cents on the dollar, from a party that was obliged to raise money at once, and they have arrived, and true enough they are a snap. The first comers are first served. No. 3859 is 13 All Wool Suits, for ages 9 to 12, at $3 55. No. 3728 is 16 Fine Cassimere Suits, medium light, ages 8 to 12, at $4 45. No. 2661 is 18 Medium Light Colored Suits, strictly all wool, ages 13 to 17, at $4 75. No. 3858 is 11 Light Wool Suits, ages 13 to 16, at $4 60. Lot No. 5525 is [illegible] Snow-Flake Suits, ages 13 to 17 $5 40.

TO-DAY, MAY 17th,

These Suits are made and trimmed equal to any merchant tailor's work, and are actually just one-half of the manufacturers' wholesale price. There will be no deviation in prices. The price for each number will be as above stated—no more, no less. If you will copy the numbers you can see what the goods will cost you as well as we can tell you. We could get double this price for these Suits, but we want to let the people know by experience that when we get a bargain we give our customers the benefit of it.

☛ All other departments are chucked full of goods, and are for sale, and at prices to insure immediate sale. Fresh goods are ordered nearly every business day in the year.

Our Millinery Department
Looms up with all the novelties that can be selected from all the Eastern Markets.

Special Bargains in Parasols,
Black Satin lined with Silk, all colors at $1 90, $2 50, $3 up to $5.
Extra such in Black Satin lined with all Silk lace at $3 25 and up.
Best Serge parasols at 88 cents and up.

Our Stock is truly a Mammoth one, and customers will find almost everything they want right under one roof.

We offer great drives in Dress Goods, Black and Colored Cashmeres, Black and Colored Dress Silks, Summer Silks, &c. Black and Colored Buntings at 12½c to 60 cents Lawns at 5c to 20 cents.

Special Prices on Muslins. Standard Prints and good at 5c, choice 6c.

Boots, Shoes and Hats
a specialty, as well as all other goods. Stock to large to give particulars.

Our Sales in 1882 were over $64,000, and we are giving all Inducements possible to sell $70,000 in 1883.

Ladies' Hoops 25, 40, 50 cents and up.
Fancy Hankerchiefs at 6 1-4c. worth 12c & up
Custom Kid Shoes at $1, lower and higher.
Mens' Fine Boots $2 00 to $4 00.
Over 20,000 Suits to select from at $3 to $22.
10,000 pair hoes at 5 cents to 75 cents.
Corsets at 50c, 65c, 75c, $1 and $1 25.
Men's harvest hats 10 and 15c, reduced from 25c.

Very Truly Yours
Wm. COLTER,
RISING SUN, IND.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

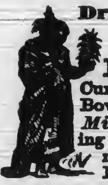
You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE
has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by
W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.



TRADE MARK.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St, New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the [illegible] medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:—

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

REPORT OF HE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, May 1, 1883.

RESOURCES.
Loans and discounts		$530,678 11
Overdrafts		137 32
U.S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		41,565 69
Due from other National banks		9,635 61
Due from State banks and bankers		4,961 36
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		3,180 48
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,208 59
Bills of other Banks		4,510 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		102 78
Specie		5,895 00
Legal tender notes		20,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$687,798 80
LIABILITIES.
Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,200 00
Undivided profits		20,886 75
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	308,917 44
Due to other National Banks	11,289 38
Due to State Banks and bankers	500 23	320,707 05
Total		$687,798 80

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashire of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.
J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of May, 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
M. C. MOTCH,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

CENTRAL HOTEL,
BURLINGTON, KY.
MRS. MARY J. GREEN,
(widow of the late R. C. Green,)
assisted by F. P. Walton, will continue the Private Entertainment and Stable branches of the business at the above stand.

First-class accommodations will be furnished throughout, and no pains will be spared to make the Central a desirable stopping place.

We thank you for your liberal patronage and solicit a continuance of the same.

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonathan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a
BRICK DWELLING
of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county. Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.
C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Erlanger Hotel.
JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.
First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

Opened 1822 THE DENNISON. Re-opened April 26, 1883.
(At U. S. Custom House,) Cincinnati, Ohio.
Best of attendance, Beds and Food without display. Incandescent Electric Lights. Heated by Steam, Hot and Cold Water, Hydraulic Elevator, All-night Service. Double fire escapes with balconies and Iron ladders. BOARD from $2 per day.
A. GUNNISON, Proprietor.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 210 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!
Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO., Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

E. E. IGOE,

Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:
"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.
W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

YOUNG, OLD, AND MIDDLE-AGED.
All experience the wonderful beneficial effects of
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Children with Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, or any scrofulous or syphilitic taint, may be made healthy and strong by its use.
Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.
50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. $1 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines.
2 to 100 Horse Power.

Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will furnish a horse power with ⅓ less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1350, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.

All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap. All are warranted. Circulars mailed free. Newark Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md.
W. N. STAGK, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSEKEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO., ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 Colleaa St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

Let the people bear in mind,
That better goods they cannot find.
Yea! not in all the land,
Than W. E. Piper has on hand,

Chicken food at W. E. Piper's.

Green pickers traverse the country in all directions.

Garden "sas" has done very little growing to date.

Some say the cold weather destroyed the crop of cutworms.

The crop of dog-fennel will be large in Burlington this season.

James M. Conner handled 12,000 pounds of wool this spring.

The clerk has commenced making the sheriff's tax book for 1883.

Mrs. Laura Martin's baby was quite sick for several days last week.

Save money and buy your Drugs at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

W. T. Smith, an observant farmer, says that the corn is snow burnt.

Uncle Church Clore's tally sheet says 56 snows have fallen since last fall.

The colored folks inaugurate the picnic season at Viola Park next Saturday.

The new Constables and Justices of the Peace will go on duty in a few days

Robert Rice, our industrious meat dispenser, is nursing a sprained ankle.

Pure Paris Green, only 30 cents per pound, at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind

The Commissioner will make several sales of real estate next County Court day.

The rain and the sunshine divided time Sunday, the sun getting slightly the best of the divide.

We have in this impression a very nice letter from a Boone county man in Washington Territory.

The County Clerk took a run out in the country the other day to take acknowledgment of deeds.

Joe Wilson has taken lodging in the poor-house, again. The authorities can not get him anchored there.

The weather, last week, was too much for Jumbo, and he did not appear in the ring at Cincinnati.

The colored folks of Florence give a daylight and moonlight pic-nic for the benefit of their school, Saturday.

Why wear out with continual coughing at night, when Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve, soothe, and cure?

Last week a case error destroyed a name, and it was Mrs. Duguit instead of Mrs. Fuguit visiting Dr. Grant's.

Jack Tanner knows how to expedite matters. Since his house was burned he has erected another and moved in.

The Walton neighborhood was visited by a wind and hail storm Sunday. Hail fell to the depth of half an inch.

The snow, last week, chilled a great many sheep to death, where they were not put under shelter during the night.

Our local lightning protectors have been especially active the past week, having more work than they could do.

Howard & Kirtley say if they can find Scattersville, they can get plenty of squirrels, but they cannot locate the ville.

The farmers have been very busy for the last few days. Those having ground to break have been afforded the opportunity.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

Our local tobacco merchants have no hand the larger part of the best tobacco in their last purchases. They have worked off the lower grades.

The $20,000 damage suit of Patrick Keough vs. J. J. Dulaney, in the Kenton Circuit Court, was decided last Friday in favor of the defendant.

Fine sport is anticipated at the Latonia trotting course. The races commences there on the 9th of next month. The society is very much flattered.

That mild-eyed friend of ours, who descended from the Emerald Isle, contemplates investing in real estate in Indiana, on Goose creek, near Featherville.

Be it said to the praise of Boone county, that the jail has been empty nine-tenths of the time for the last two years. This kind of praise does not pay the jailer anything though.

Elihu Alden, of Petersburg and clerk of the Steamer Minnie No. 2, and Miss Carrie Caldwell, of Aurora, were married last week. Elihu and his bride have the best wishes of the RECORDER.

Attorney Tolin brought to town, the other day, a hen egg which was somewhat of a curiosity. It was a very large egg with a soft shell, and when broken, was found to contain a yolk and white besides a smaller egg on which was a hard shell.

Within the last month, J. M. Barlow, who lives between here and Union, has lost 80 head of 150-pound stock hogs, with cholera. His neighbors, Early Rouse and Noah Barlow, have the cholera among their hogs.

Our patrons manifest their appreciations of the RECORDER by their desire to get it as soon as printed. When we go to press before night, they flock to the office in numbers and receive their papers from the press. It is our earnest desire that they shall continue to appreciate our efforts.

Elijah Howard and W. O. Kirtley, passed through town last Thursday, armed with their breech loaders, enroute to J. J. Weaver's, where they expected to enjoy themselves shooting squirrels. They are both good shots and when they draw a bead on an article of game it has to tumble to their racket.

The candidates for the legislature, being very quite and modest men, the probabilities are the race will be conducted in the most peacable and amicable manner. Neither of the gentlemen are desirous of cultivating stump oratory to excess, and will trust in a great measure, to the intelligence of the people to choose between them.

The following shows the kind of weather had on the 22d of May in each of the years below given, as shown by J. W. Kirkpatrick's diary, which he keeps carefully:

1858, pleasant; '62, pleasant; '64, warm; '65, pleasant; '66, nice day; '67, cold day; '68, nice day, rain in evening; '69, nice day; '73, pleasant; '74, very nice day; '75, nice day with hard rain in the evening; 77, nice day but windy; '78, warm; '79, cool; 81, hot; '82, rain in the morning; '83, name it and take it.

Some time since our druggist gave a customer a bottle of pills, on the label of which he put the figures 3—5—'82, which is the druggists' mode of dating prescriptions. The customer mistook the date for the directions, and before retiring at night he took three of the pills, and in the morning he took five. When the time came to take third dose he noticed the 82, when he put the bottle in his pocket and came back to the store and said to the clerk: "I took 3 of these pills, and then I took the 5, but I be d—d if I can take the 82."

The following Justices of the Peace have executed bonds under their last election:

E. H. Baker, Burlington, with F. M. Howlett security; F. M. Howlett, Hamilton, with E. H. Baker security; T. F. Curley, Walton, with D. M. Bagby security; M. B. Green, Bellevue, with R. H. Brashier security; A. G. McConnell, Carlton, with B. H. Ryle security; B. H. Ryle, Carlton, with A. G. McConnell security; T. H. Sutton, Bellevue, with D. G. Rice security; L. A. Loder, Petersburg, with F. P. Walton security.

Mr. Thomas Underhill, who resides about two miles south of town on Gunpowder, is 73 years old, and was born and raised in Boone county. He remembers when the north part of the county was a dense forest, and where the town of Hebron now stands was a crab orchard. Mr. Underhill's sight has never failed him, and to-day he can take his rifle and go to the woods and kill as many squirrels as any of the young men in this section. He is very agile and has a fondness for athletic sports, and last Saturday he accompanied a base-ball club of his neighborhood to Bullittsville to witness a match game, which he enjoyed very much.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the items for this column.]

Allen Martin was in town Sunday and Monday.

Lafe Wilkie, of Covington, was in town Sunday.

Miss Sallie Hind, of Walton, is the guest of Mrs. L. H. Dills.

Gardner Palmer, of Lawrenceburg, spent Sunday in Burlington.

Mrs. Lettie Jett, of Frankfort, is visiting T. W. Finch and family

Mr. Wm. Glen, of Cincinnati, spent Sunday with his aunt at this place.

Joe Birkle and family, of Bellevue, were visiting in this neighborhood Sunday.

Mrs. J. R. Clutterbuck, wife of Sheriff Clutterbuck, has been quite sick for several days.

Milton Vauter and family, of North Madison, are the guests of Noah Sebree and family.

W. E. Price, of Eminence, was visiting his friends and relatives at Florence, the first of the week.

Dr. L. H. Platt and wife, of Bellevue, were the guests of his mother, Mrs. Platt, last Thursday.

Esquire Loder, of Petersburg, came to town last Saturday, and qualified as a Justice of the Peace.

T. C. S. Ryle, a thrifty farmer from East Bend, was in town Thursday, and made this office a pleasant call.

Prof. I. J. Daughters, of Hebron, took in the "capital" the other day, and while here made the RECORDER a brief visit.

S C Johnson and W M Rogers, of Walton, were in town Tuesday. Mr Johnson qualified as Justice of the Peace.

Miss Rosa Dempsey returned, Saturday, from Cedarville, Ohio, where she has been attending school since last October.

H. P. Stephens, of Union, with a pair of rubber boots on, bounced into town Thursday on business, and disposing of the business, and having gased with the boys awhile, bounced home again.

Mrs. Tousey and daughter, Miss Julia, left for Visalia, Kenton county, where they will make their future home. They resided here many years, and the citizens hated to see them take their final departure.

That garden of ours looks like it has the jaundice.

Read Mrs. D. G. Rabb's two advertisements in this issue.

J. F. Blythe caught a fine lot of fish in Gunpowder, Monday.

In East Bend they have a large acreage of potatoes and a mint of bugs.

R. L. Newman, of Frogtown vicinity, was delivering tobacco here Tuesday.

A job lot of french harps, at less than cost, at D. C. Thorn's drug store, Rising Sun, Ind.

We are having a prolonged tobacco season, and those having plants are busy putting them out.

We stop the press to announce the arrival of the Hon. Harry Monroe Piper, of Cleves, Ohio.

N. S. Walton, his wife and mother, started Monday evening to Illinois, to attend his aunt's funeral.

Our local harness maker is selling his goods lower than you can get the same articles anywhere else.

A swarm of bees coming from one of T. W. Finch's hives, Tuesday about noon, stirred up the town. Small boys, dirt, clubs and a shot gun were instrumental in pursuading them not to leave. Charles Saxton chaged them.

A second attack has been made on the Mount Sterling jail, and the governor has been called upon for troops to protect the jail from an attack of a mob of 500 men from Menifee county. A company of state guards have been ordered to report to Judge Robert Riddell, at Mount Sterling. There are 11 men in the jail that the mob wants to hang. They were sent there from Menifee, and are doubtless a pretty hard set of fellows.

A. Q. Baker writes us from Trimble county, that they are all well and well satisfied. He is done planting corn, has one acre in watermelons, one acre in potatoes and a good garden, and will plant 2 or 3 acres of tobacco. The prospects for fruit in Trimble are only tolerably good—their will be about one-fourth of a crop of peaches, that being the principal fruit. Quilla is now in the banner democratic county of the State, where he will inhale democracy till his political anatomy will be so permeated with it, that in a few years the party will adopt him. Of course the RECORDER will be his weekly visitor.

Base Ball.

Bullittsville, May 26.—Bullittsville, 12; Speedwell, 17.

Hebron, May 26.—Hebron, 17; Taylorport, 6.

Petersburg, May 26.—Almonts, 14; Aurora, 20.

The Burlington club will play with the Aurora club at that place, Saturday, June 2d.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Constance.

Base-ball is still the game around here. Sho-fly, is the cry of Loder and Brown. Harry Piper, of Cleves, Ohio, was in town last week.

During the late cold spell, hcucumbers were mostly killed.

The prospect for fruit is pretty good.

Several of Jumbo's friends were disappointed last week.

Francesville.

May 25.—DIED.—Near this place on last Sunday, of consumption, Mrs. Amanda Smiley, wife of Samuel Smiley. Her remains were placed in the vault at Bulettsburg.

Mrs. Sarah Scothorn is confined to her bed with acute rheumatism.

Soap-making, whitewashing and house-cleaning are the order of the day; and ever since I was a little boy, I have been glad when house-cleaning time comes around, just to have the pleasure of taking down the stovepipes, cleaning them out and putting them up again, whitewashing the ceilings overhead and dusting the carpets, etc. A man that never has any of this to do is certainly deprived of many sweets of this life.

I see, Mr. Editor, that you contemplate writing a book entitled "That Garden of Ours." For one, I am anxious for something of that kind to come out, as I have a garden which I am cultivating under the directions of "What Horace Greely Knew About Framing," and what I know (and that's not a few), and with your experience in book form, I think I would have the mystery pretty well solved, and by putting all this knowledge together, I think by another year, I can run my farm on a scientific plan, and do away with so much weeding and hoeing. Please send me a copy of your book as soon as published.

Winter still lingers in the lap of spring. Last Monday we had a beautiful snow, making it quite unpleasant for our moonlight hops and strawberry festivals; but then the novelty of the thing afforded great pleasure to those who had their linen suits.

Spring chickens begin to wear a melancholy look, as they are aware that some great calamity will soon overtake them.

Scattersville.

Corn is looking very badly since the snow storm last week.

Tobacco plants are growing very slowly at this writing, although some of our farmers have commenced setting out.

Our gardens stood the last snow a great deal better than people thought at the time it made its appearance.

William Rue, of Gunpowder, is very low at this writing with fever. Dr. Furnish is waiting on him.

John Rue is feeding a small bunch of hogs, and they are about ready for market. Look out, you hog men!

What a pity! Someone has come and hauled our spring wagon off, and never said thank you to any body. Aunt Susan says she misses it very much.

On the 21st inst., court assembled in the temple of justice (Owen Conner's barn) at this place, J. O. Huey, J. J. Weaver and Wm. Adams presiding. The only case for trial was between Noah Utz and Wm. Day. The witnesses not being in attendance court adjourned till next day, when it again met and disposed of all the business on the docket. When the case was taken up O. P. Conner was called upon, and expounded, most ably, the law applicable to and governing arbitrations. Owen's speech to the court was in good style, and made plain the duties of the judges, who are men of good judgment and business capacity. When your reporter left, the court had not delivered its opinion. At noon the court adjourned and stopped with Mr. Conner where they were entertained in the best manner.

Petersburg.

Miss Pauline Berkshire spent last Saturday and Sunday at home.

Solon Early and Sam Raridon have the contracts for plastering four houses at Lawrenceburg.

Eds., just come down and take a glass of soda water with us. We have a new fountain at Buchanan's drug store.

Mrs. Mary Walton's three months school closed here last Friday.

From the general appearance of things, one of the Aurora captains will soon carry off one of our Petersburg girls

W. T. Stott, of white washing notoriety, is driving the quill on the Str. Minnie, in place of Capt. Alden, who is off on his wedding tour.

A little family trouble arose between Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, last Friday night, and Mr. Hoffman thinking he could not live with her in peace, they agreed to divide the furniture and separate. So Martin Gisler, Dr. Ed Terrill and F. M. Cox were called in to make the division. Mr. Gisler acted as lawyer for Mrs. Hoffman, Dr. Ed Terrill for Mr. H. and F. M. Cox as clerk. An agreement was drawn up by the clerk and signed by Mr. and Mrs. H. that the things should be divided and they be recognized no more as man and wife. She wished to be called by her former name Mrs. Paul, and the court agreed.

Our genial little friend, Capt. Elihu Alden, after living a single life for sometime, was married, last Thursday, May 24th, in Covington, at the residence of Rev. Briny's to Miss Cora Caldwell, of Aurora, Ind. After the ceremonies they were congratulated by a few friends, after which they took the boat for the sunny south, to be gone several days. They were accompanied by Misses Lou Wheeler and Kate Grandy, of Aurora, and Mr. Chas. Schramm, of this place. They have our best wishes through their journey of life. Charley, let Elihu be an example Go thou and do likewise. [Good advice Charley, why don't you accept?—EDS.]

Beaver Lick.

The past week, although rather cool for the season, was productive of great good for the farmers. We had one of the longest, nicest, gentlest rains that has visited this vicinity for many seasons. Everything is putting forth with promising vigor, lending hope for an abundant harvest.

Several of our fast farmars set out tobacco during the past week; they report it doing well up to date.

Considerable complaint is coming from the farmers in regard to the color the "beautiful snow" gave our corn. Quite a number of acres of good corn in this locality had to be furrowed out and replanted, the snow killing the first planting.

Mrs. Ambros Hoard has been quite ill during the past week, but is some better at this writing. We have had considerable sickness here this spring, but, happily, none of a serious type.

Many of our folks are straightening up to take in the Latonia races. This is owing to a sad derelict on the part of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association in failing to have their fair ground in condition. They should build and be ready for next season. It would bring lots of money and fine stock into Boone.

Everybody, I believe, down here will support the nominee for governor, but a great many who have read the papers rather think "it might have been" different if the northern delegation had acted more cautiously when an opportunity urged itself upon them; but they say "maybe Knott". The entire ticket is pronounced entirely foreign, as respects this end, but at the same time considered tolerably good.

Mrs. Frances Noell has improved the looks of her cozy cottage with a new plank fance.

Mr. Ed Seniour's saw mill near Beaver, is doing a big thing in the lumber line. Mr. Ed understands the business.

Base-ball and checkers still hold the idle minded from becoming entirely oblivious of the inviting cornfields lying contigious. Labor is dreadful where amusement, twice as laborious, is looked on with eminent content. BILL LLOYD.

L B Stephens has returned from Florida, highly delighted.

Every Man His Own Boss.

How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was suffering from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC I never met with anything so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & Co., Chemists, New York.

FOR SALE.

Very low, for cash—A quantity of new and second hand honey boxes, glass sides, two and four pounds. Also American and Langstroth bee hives—will sell very cheap, to any one taking the lot.

MRS. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.

FOR RENT.

One half mile above Rising Sun, Ind., a very desirable residence of seven rooms, out buildings, pasture, garden and fruit adjoining. Some farming land—or the farm of 130 acres can be rented with it. Good school in town. Enquire by mail, or at the place, Maple Grove. Mrs. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Coudt, Ky.

John A Kendall's Adm'r vs John A Kendall's heirs, &c,	Plff Defts	Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will on Monday, the 4th day of June 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m, or thereabout (being county court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 9, 12 & 18 months equal installments, at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in 23 1-2 acres of land on the Dry Creek and Bullittsville turnpike, bounded by the lands of Jas A Riddell, Jas L Biley, the McNeal heirs and others. Also 153½ acres on the Burlington and East Bend road, bounded on the North by the lands of Mrs Lucy Rogers and Noah Clore, on the West by E A Hughes, on the South by the dower of Mrs Mary E Kendall, on the East by I. S Pope.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale $4,104 63 Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. I. RIDDELL, M C B C C

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.☜

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. S. I. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
☞Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY, JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
R O U S E.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES.)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

DRUGS & MEDICINES
I have nearly filled up my stock of
PURE DRUGS, MEDICINES & PATENT MEDICINES.
I also have Dye Stuffs, Sewing Machine Oil, Spices, Flavoring Extracts and Baking Powder in bulk so I can sell any quantity. I will add in a short time a nice line of
Stationary, Fancy and Toilet
—Articles. Also have a fine line of—
CIGARS AND TOBACCO.
I will keep Pure Wines and Liquors for Medical use, but will sell only on the Prescription of a Physician. Asking your patronage I remain,
Respectfully, S. C. BUCHANAN, Petersburg, Ky.
☞Third door from the corner, in Mr. Bradly's building.
N. B.—PRESCRIPTIONS, FAMILY AND PRIVATE RECIPES A SPECIALTY.

HARNESS & SADDLES,

ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY. (—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,
I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.
Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, A. R. Mullen, L. C. Stephens, E. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm.
The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., HEBRON, KY.

AT EVENTIDE.

If sometime, when the day was wearing late,
And stars were coming in the darkening sky,
As once for you I might in rapture wait,
And feel your presence surely drawing nigh;

Could I but hear your quick and happy feet
Come up the pebbled pathway as of yore,
And hasten with a beating heart to meet
And welcome you before you reached the door,

And draw you in beside the household fire,
And sit beside you, looking in your eyes;
To read within them, as the flame burned higher
The love that answering love alone descries—

I think—but no! the past is far away;
Its dear and mournful memory is mine;
And in the gladness where you walk to-day
I would not have you know that I repine.

For if again you sat beside me here,
Your eyes would read the lines made deep by pain,
And see the cheeks whose youthful bloom was dear,
Like flowers grown pallid in autumnal rain.

And I, perhaps, should fear to meet those eyes
That in the light of Heaven had grown so clear,
Lest in their love should be a sad surprise
At what had worn my soul from year to year.

I will not let my longing soul grow wild
With useless visions of what may not be;
While in the glory, radiant, undefiled,
You stand and stretch your angel hands to me.

—Amelia D. Alden, in the Continent.

MARKED ON THE HEELS.

The Stubborn Yankee Baby that Caused a Commotion in London and Paris.

In the pretty walk, bordered by bright flowers and low, overhanging shrubbery, which lies back of the Albert Memorial, in Kensington Gardens, London, Jonas sat on a green bench, with his baby on his knee. A few nurses were pushing baby carriages about in different parts of the walk, and there were children playing not far away. It was drawing toward the close of the afternoon, and Jonas was thinking it was nearly time to go home, when Pomona came running to him from the gorgeous monument, which she had been carefully inspecting.

"Jone," she cried, "do you know I've been lookin' at all them great men that's standin' round the bottom of the monnyment, an' though there's over a hundred of 'em, I'm sure, I can't find a American among 'em! There's poets, an' artists, an' leadin' men, scraped up from all parts, an' not one of our illustrious dead. What d'ye think of that?"

"I can't believe it," said Jonas. "If we go home with a tale like that we'll hear the recruiting-drum from Newark to Texas, and ten to one, I'll be drafted."

"You needn't be makin' fun," said Pomona; "you come an' see for yourself. Perhaps you kin find jus' one American, an' then I'll go home satisfied."

"All right," said Jonas.

And, putting the child on the bench, he told her he'd be back in a minute, and hurried after Pomona to give a hasty look for the American.

Corinne, the offspring of Jonas and Pomona, had some peculiarities. One of these was that she was accustomed to stay where she was put. Ever since she was old enough to be carried about, she had been carried about by one parent or the other; and, as it was frequently necessary to set her down, she had learned to sit and wait until she was taken up again. She was now nearly two years old, very strong and active, and of an intellect which had already begun to tower. She could walk very well, but Jonas took such delight in carrying her that he seldom appeared to recognize her ability to use her legs. She could also talk, but how much her parents did not know. She was a taciturn child, and preferred to keep her thoughts to herself, and, although she sometimes astonished us all by imitating remarks she had heard, she frequently declined to repeat the simplest words that had been taught her.

Corinne remained on the bench about a minute after her father had left her, and then, contrary to her usual custom, she determined to leave the place where she had been put. Turning over on her stomach, after the manner of babies, she lowered her feet to the ground. Having obtained a foothold, she turned herself about and proceeded, with sturdy steps, to a baby carriage near by which had attracted her attention. This carriage, which was unattended, contained a baby somewhat smaller and younger than Corinne, who sat up and gazed with youthful interest at the visitor who stood by the side of her vehicle. Corinne examined with a critical eye the carriage and its occupant. She looked at the soft pillow at the baby's back, and regarded with admiration the afghan, crocheted in gay colors, which was spread over its lap, and the spacious gig-top which shielded it from the sun. She stooped down and looked at the wheels, and stood up and gazed at the blue eyes and canary hair of the little occupant. Then in quiet but decided tones Corinne said:

"Dit out!"

The other baby looked at her, but made no movement to obey. After waiting a few moments, an expression of stern severity spreading itself the while over her countenance, Corinne reached over and put her arms around the fair-haired child. Then, with all her weight and strength, she threw herself backward and downward. The other baby, being light, was thus drawn bodily out of its carriage, and Corinne sat heavily upon the ground, her new acquaintance sprawling in her lap. Notwithstanding that she bore the brunt of the fall upon the gravel, Corinne uttered no cry; but, disengaging herself from her incumbrance, she rose to her feet. The other baby imitated her, and Corinne, taking her by the hand, led her to the bench where she herself had been left.

"Dit up!" said Corinne.

This, however, the other baby was unable to do; but she stood quite still, evidently greatly interested in the proceedings. Corinne left her and walked to the little carriage, into which she proceeded to climb. After some extraordinary exertions, during which her fat legs were thrust through the spokes of the wheels and ruthlessly drawn out again, she tumbled in. Arranging herself as comfortably as she knew how. She drew the gay afghan over her, leaned back upon the soft pillow, gazed up at the sheltering gig-top, and resigned herself to luxurious bliss. At the supreme moment, the nurse who had had charge of the carriage and its occupant came hurrying around a corner of the path. She had been taking leave of some of her nurse-maid friends, and had staid longer than she had intended. It was necessary for her to take a suitable leave of these ladies, for that night she was going on a journey. She had been told to take the baby out for an airing, and to bring it back early. Now, to her surprise, the afternoon had nearly gone, and hurrying to the little carriage she seized the handle at the back and rapidly pushed it home, without stopping to look beneath the overhanging gig-top, or the green bench, with which her somewhat weary soul had no concern. If anything could add to Corrine's ecstatic delight, it was this charming motion. Closing her eyes contentedly, she dropped asleep.

The baby with canary hair looked at the receding nurse and carriage with widening eyes and reddening cheeks. Then, opening her mouth, she uttered the cry of the deserted; but the panic-stricken nurse did not hear her, and, if she had, what were the cries of other children to her? Her only business was to get home quickly with her young charge.

About five minutes after these events Jonas and Pomona came hurrying along the path. They, too, had stayed away much longer than they intended, and had suddenly given up their search for the American, whom they had hoped to find in high relief upon the base of the Albert Memorial. Stepping quickly to the child, who still stood sobbing by the bench, Jonas exclaimed: "You poor itty—!"

And then he stopped suddenly. Pomona also stood for a second, and then she made a dash at the child, and snatched it up. Gazing sharply at its tear-smeared countenance, she exclaimed: "What's this?"

The baby did not seem able to explain what it was, and only answered by a tearful sob. Jonas did not say a word; but, with the lithe quickness of a dog after a rat, he began to search behind and under benches, in the bushes, on the grass, here, there, and everywhere.

About nine o'clock that evening, Pomona came to us with tears in her eyes, and the canary-haired baby in her arms, and told us that Corinne was lost. They had searched everywhere; they had gone to the police; telegrams had been sent to every section; they had done everything that could be done, but had found no trace of the child.

"If I hadn't this," sobbed Pomona, holding out the child, "I believe I'd go wild. It isn't that she can take the place of my dear baby, but by a-keepin' hold of her I believe we'll get on the track of Corinne."

We were both much affected by this news, and Euphemia joined Pomona in her tears.

"Jonas is scourin' the town yet," said Pomona. "He'll never give up till he drops. But I felt you ought to know, and I couldn't keep this little thing in the night air no longer. If it's got a mother, she's bound to want to see it before long; an' if ever I ketch sight of her, she don't git away from me till I have my child."

"It is a very extraordinary case," I said. "Children are often stolen, but it is seldom we hear of one being taken and another left in its place, especially when the children are of different ages and totally unlike."

"That's so," said Pomona. "At first, I thought that Corinne had been changed off for a p'incess, or something like that, but nobody couldn't make anybody believe that my big, black-haired baby was this white-an-yaller thing."

"Can't you find any mark on her clothes," asked Euphemia, "by which you could discover her parentage? If there are no initials, perhaps you can find a coronet or a coat of arms."

"No," said Pomona, "there ain't nothin'. I've looked careful. But there's great comfort to think that Corinne's well stamped."

"Stamped!" we exclaimed. "What do you mean by that?"

"Why, you see," answered Pomona, "When Jone an' I was goin' to bring our baby over here among so many million people, we thought there might be danger of its gittin' lost or mislaid, though we never really believed any such thing would happen, or we wouldn't have come. An' so we agreed to mark her, for I've often read about babies bein' stole an' kept two or three years, an' when found bein' so changed their own mothers didn't know 'em. Jone said we'd better tattoo Corinne, for them marks would always be there, but I wouldn't agree to have the little creature's skin stuck with needles, not even after Jone said we might give her chloryform; so we agreed to stamp initials on her with Perkins' Indelible Dab. It is intended to mark sheep, but it don't hurt, and it don't never come off. We put the letters on the back of her heels, where they wouldn't show, for she's never to go barefoot, an' where they'd be easy got at if we wanted to find 'em. We put R. G. on one heel for the name of the place, and J. P. on the other heel for Jonas an' me. If, twenty years from now," said Pomona, her tears welling out afresh, "I should see a young woman with eyes like Corinne's, an' that I felt was her, a-walkin' up to the bridal altar, with all the white flowers, an' the floatin' veils, an' the crowds in the church, an' the music playin', an' the minister all ready, I'd jist jerk that young woman into the vestry-room, an' have off her shoes an' stockin's in no time. An' if she had R. G. on one heel and J. P. on the other, that bridegroom could go home alone."

We confidently assured Pomona that with such means of identification, and the united action of ourselves and the police, the child would surely be found, and we accompanied her to her lodgings, in a house not far from our own.

When the nurse reached home with the little carriage it was almost dark, and snatching up the child, she ran to the nursery without meeting anyone. The child felt heavy, but she was in such a hurry she scarcely noticed that. She put it upon the bed, and then lighting the gas she unwrapped the afghan, in which the little creature was now almost entirely enveloped. When she saw the face, and the black hair, from which the cap had fallen off, she was nearly frightened to death, but fortunately for herself, she did not scream. She was rather a stupid woman, with but few ideas, but she could not fail to see that some one had taken her charge, and put this child in its place. Her first impulse was to run back to the gardens, but she felt certain that her baby had been carried off; and besides, she could not, without discovery, leave the child here or take it with her, and while she stood in dumb horror, her mistress sent for her. The lady was just going out to dinner, and told the nurse that, as they were all to start for the continent by the tidal train which left at 10 o'clock that night, she must be ready with the baby, well wrapped up for the journey. The half-stupefied woman had no words or courage with which to declare, at this moment, the true state of the case. She said nothing, and went back to the nursery, and sat there in dumb consternation, and without sense enough to make a plan of any kind. The strange child awoke and began to cry, and then the nurse mechanically fed it, and it went to sleep again. When the summons came to her to prepare for the journey, in cowardly haste she wrapped the baby, so carefully covering its head that she scarcely gave it a chance to breathe; and she and the lady's waiting-maid were sent in a cab to the Victoria Station. The lady was traveling with a party of friends, and the nurse and the waiting-maid were placed in the adjoining compartment of the railway-carriage. On the six hours' channel passage from Newhaven to Dieppe, the lady was extremely sick, and reached France in such a condition that she had to be almost carried on shore. It had been her intention to stop a few days at this fashionable watering-place, but she declared that she must go straight to Paris, where she could be properly attended to, and, moreover, that she never wanted to see the sea again. When she had been placed in the train for Paris she sent for the nurse, and feebly asked how the baby was, and if it had been seasick. On being told that it was all right, and had not shown a sign of illness, she expressed her gratification, and lay back among her rugs.

The nurse and the waiting-maid traveled together, as before, but the latter, wearied by her night's attendance on her mistress, slept all the way from Dieppe to Paris. When they reached that city, they went into the waiting-room until a carriage could be procured for them, and there the nurse, placing the baby on a seat, asked her companion to take care of it for a few minutes. She then went out of the station door, and disappeared into Paris.

In this way the brunt of the terrible disclosure, which came very soon, was thrown upon the waiting-maid. No one, however, attached any blame to her; of course, the absconding nurse had carried away the fair-haired child. The waiting-maid had been separated from her during the passage from the train to the station, and it was supposed that in this way an exchange of babies had been easily made by her and her confederates. When the mother knew of her loss, her grief was so violent that for a time her life was in danger. All Paris was searched by the police and her friends, but no traces could be found of the wicked nurse and the fair-haired child. Money, which, of course, was considered the object of the inhuman crime, was freely offered, but to no avail. No one imagined for an instant that the exchange was made before the party reached Paris. It seemed plain enough that the crime was committed when the woman fled.

Corinne, who had been placed in the charge of a servant until it was determined what to do with her, was not at all satisfied with the new state of affairs, and loudly demanded her papa and mamma, behaving for a time in a very turbulent way. In a few days the lady recovered her strength, and asked to see this child. The initials upon Corinne's heels had been discovered, and, when she was told of these, the lady examined them closely.

"The people who left this child," she exclaimed, "do not intend to lose her! They know where she is, and they will keep a watch upon her, and when they get a chance they will take her. I, too, will keep a watch upon her, and when they come for her I shall see them."

Her use of words soon showed Corinne to be of English parentage, and it was generally supposed that she had been stolen from some travelers, and had been used at the station as a means of giving time to the nurse to get away with the other child.

In accord with her resolution, the grief-stricken lady put Corinne in the charge of a trusty woman, and, moreover, scarcely ever allowed her to be out of her sight.

It was suggested that advertisement be made for the parents of a child marked with R. G. and J. P. But to this the lady decidedly objected.

"If her parents find her," she said, "they will take her away, and I want to keep her till the thieves come for her. I have lost my child, and as this one is the only clew I shall ever have to her, I intend to keep it. When I have found my child it will be time enough to restore this one."

Thus selfish is maternal love.

Pomona bore up better under the loss than did Jonas. Neither of them gave up the search for a day; but Jonas, haggard and worn, wandered aimlessly about the city, visiting every place into which he imagined a child might have wandered, or might have been taken, searching even to the crypt in the Guildhall and the Tower of London. Pomona's mind worked quite as actively as her husband's body. She took great care of "Little Kensington," as she called the strange child, from the place where she had been found; and therefore could not go about as Jonas did. After days and nights of ceaseless supposition, she had come to the conclusion that Corinne had been stolen by opera singers.

"I suppose you never knew it," she said to us, "for I took pains not to let it disturb you, but that child has notes in her voice about two stories higher than any operer prymer donner that I ever heard, an' I've heard lots of 'em, for I used to go into the top gallery of the operer as often as into the theayter; an' if any operer singer ever heard them high notes of Corinne's—an' there was times when she'd let 'em out without the least bit of a notice—it's them that's took her."

"But, my poor Pomona," said Euphemia, "you don't suppose that little child could be of any use to an opera singer; at least, not for years and years."

"Oh, yes, ma'am," replied Pomona; "she was none too young. Sopranners is like mocking-birds; they've got to be took young."

No arguments could shake Pomona's belief in this theory. And she daily lamented the fact that there was no opera in London at that time that she might go to the performances and see if there was any one on the stage who looked mean enough to steal a child.

"If she was there," said Pomona, "I'd know it. She'd feel the scorn of a mother's eye on her, an' her guilty heart would make her forget her part."

Pomona frequently went into Kensington Gardens, and laid traps for opera singers who might be sojourning in London. She would take Little Kensington into the gardens, and placing her carefully in the corner of a bench would retire to a short distance and pretend to be absorbed in a book, while her sharp eyes kept up the watch for a long-haired tenor or a beautifully-dressed soprano, who should suddenly rush out from the bushes and seize the child.

"I wouldn't make no fuss if they was to come out," she said. "Little Kensington would go under my arm, not theirn, an' I'd walk calmly with 'em to their home. Then I'd say: 'Give me my child, an' take yourn, which, though she probably hasn't got no voice, is a lot too good for you; an' may the house hurl stools at you the next time you appear, is the limit of a mother's curse.'"

But, alas for Pomona, no opera singers ever showed themselves.

These days of our stay in London were not pleasant. We went about little, and enjoyed nothing. At last Pomona came to us, her face pale but determined.

"It's no use," she said, "for us to keep you here no longer, when I know you've got through with the place and want to go on, an' we'll go, too, for I don't believe my child's in London. She's been took away, an' we might as well look for her in one place as another. The perlice tells us that if she's found here they'll know it fust, an' they'll telegraph to us wherever we is; an' if it wasn't for nuthin' else, it would be a mercy to git Jone out of this place. He goes about like a cat after her drowned kittens. It's a-bringin' out them chills of hisn, an' the next thing it'll kill him. I can't make him believe in the findin' of Corinne as firm as I do, but I know as long as Perkins' Indelible Dab holds out (an' there's no rubbin' nor washin' it off) I'll git my child."

I admitted, but not with Pomona's hopefulness, that the child might be found as easily in Paris as here.

"And we've seen everything about London," said Euphemia, "except Windsor Castle. I did want, and still want, to see just how the Queen keeps house, and perhaps get some ideas which might be useful; but her Majesty is away now, and, although they say that's the time to go there, it is not the time for me. You'll not find me going about inspecting domestic arrangements when the lady of the house is away."

So we packed up and went to Paris, taking Little Kensington along. Notwithstanding our great sympathy with Corinne's parents, Euphemia and myself could not help becoming somewhat resigned to the affliction which had befallen them, and we found ourselves obliged to enjoy the trip very much. Euphemia became greatly excited and exhilarated as we entered Paris. For weeks I knew she had been pining for this city. As she stepped from the train she seemed to breathe a new air, and her eyes sparkled as she knew by the prattle and cries about her that she was really in France.

We were not rich tourists, and we all took lodgings in a small hotel to which we had been recommended. It was in the Latin Quarter, near the river, and opposite the vast palace of the Louvre, into whose labyrinth of picture galleries Euphemia and I were eager to plunge.

But first we all went to the office of the American Consul and consulted with him in regard to the proper measures to be taken for searching for the little Corinne in Paris. After that, for some days, Jonas and Pomona spent all their time, and Euphemia and I part of ours, in looking for the child.

In spite of the attractions of the city, our sojourn in Paris was not satisfactory. Apart from the family trouble which oppressed us, it rained nearly all the time. We were told that in order to see Paris at its best we should come in the spring. In the month of May it was charming. Then everybody would be out-of-doors and we would see a whole city enjoying life. As we wished to enjoy life without waiting for the spring, we determined to move southward and visit during the winter those parts of Europe which then lay under blue skies and a warm sun. It was impossible, at present, for Pomona and Jonas to enjoy life anywhere, and they would remain in Paris, and then, if they did not find their child in a reasonable time, they would join us. Neither of them understood French, but this did not trouble them in the slightest. Early in their Paris wanderings they had met with a boy who had once lived in New York, and they had taken him into pay as an interpreter. He charged them a franc and a half a day, and I am sure they got their money's worth.

But before we left Paris we determined to go to the Grand Opera, which we had not yet visited, and Euphemia proposed that we should take Pomona with us. The poor girl was looking wretched and woe-begone, and needed to have her mind diverted from her trouble. Jonas, at the best of times, could not be persuaded to any amusement of this sort, but Pomona agreed to go. We had no idea of dressing for the boxes, and we took good front seats in the upper circle where we could see the whole interior of the splendid house. As soon as the performance commenced the old dramatic fire began to burn in Pomona. Her eyes sparkled as they had not done for many a day, and she really looked like her own bright self. The opera was "Le Prophete," and as none of us had ever seen anything produced on so magnificent a scale, we were greatly interested, especially in the act which opens with that wonderful winter scene in the forest, with hundreds of people scattered about under the great trees, with horses and sleighs and the frozen river in the background where the skaters came gliding on. The grouping was picturesque and artistic; the scale of the scene was immense; there was a vast concourse of people on the stage; the dances were beautiful; the merry skaters graceful; the music was inspiring.

Suddenly, above the voices of the chorus, above the drums and bass strings of the orchestra, above the highest notes of the sopranos, above the great chandelier itself, came two notes distinct and plain, and the words to which they were set, were:

"Ma-ma!"

Like a shot Pomona was on her feet. With arms outspread and her whole figure dilating until she seemed twice as large as usual, I thought she was about to spring over the balcony into the house below. I clutched her, and Euphemia and I, both upon our feet, followed her gaze and saw upon the stage a little girl in gay array, and upturned face. It was the lost Corinne.

Without a word, Pomona made a sudden turn, sprang up the steps behind her, and out upon the lobby, Euphemia and I close behind her. Around and down the steps we swept from lobby to lobby, amazing the cloak-keepers and attendants, but stopping for nothing; down the grand staircase like an avalanche, almost into the arms of the astonished military sentinels, who, startled from their soldier-like propriety, sprang, muskets in hand, toward us. It was only then that I was able to speak to Pomona, and breathlessly ask her where she was going.

"To the stage door!" she cried, making a motion to hurl to the ground the soldier before her. But there was no need to go to any stage door. In a moment there rushed along the corridor a lady dressed apparently in all the colors of the rainbow, and bearing in her arms a child. There was a quick swoop, and in another moment Pomona had the child. But clinging to its garments, the lady cried in excellent English, but with some foreign tinge:

"Where is my child you stole?"

"Stole your grandmother!" briefly ejaculated Pomona. And then, in grand forgetfulness of everything but her great joy, she folded her arms around her child, and, standing like a statue of motherly content, she seemed, in our eyes, to rise to the regions of the caryatides and the ceiling frescoes. Not another word she spoke, and amid the confusion of questions and exclamations, and the wild demands of the lady, Euphemia and I contrived to make her understand the true state of the case, and that her child was probably at our lodgings. Then there were great exclamations and quick commands; and, directly, four of us were in a carriage whirling to our hotel. All the way, Pomona sat silent with her child clasped tightly, while Euphemia and I kept up an earnest but unsatisfactory conversation with the lady; for, as to this strange affair, we could tell each other but little. We learned from the lady, who was an assistant soprano at the Grand Opera, how Corinne came to her in Paris, and how she had always kept her with her, even dressing her up, and taking her on the stage in that great act where as many men, women and children as possible were brought upon the scene. When she heard the cry of Corinne she knew the child had seen its mother, and then, whether the opera went on or not, it mattered not to her.

When the carriage stopped, the three women sprang out at once, and how they all got through the door, I can not tell. There was such a tremendous ring at the gate of the court that the old concierge, who opened it by pulling a wire in his little den somewhere in the rear, must have been dreadfully startled in his sleep. We rushed through the court and up the stairs past our apartments to Pomona's room; and there in the open doorway stood Jonas, his coat off, his sandy hair in wild confusion, his face radiant, and in his hands Little Kensington in her night-gown.

"I knew by the row on the stairs you'd brought her home," he exclaimed, as Little Kensington was snatched from him and Corinne was put into his arms.

We left Jonas and Pomona to their wild delight, and I accompanied the equally happy lady to the opera-house, where I took occasion to reclaim the wraps which we had left behind in our sudden flight.

When the police of Paris were told to give up the search for an absconding nurse accompanied by a child, and, and to look for one without such incumbrance, they found her. From this woman was obtained much of the story I have told, and a good deal more was drawn out, little by little, from Corinne, who took especial pleasure in telling, in brief sentences, how she had ousted the lazy baby from the carriage, and how she had scratched her own legs in getting in.

"What I'm proud of," said Pomona, "is that she did it all herself. It wasn't none of your common stealin's an' findin's; an' it aint everywhere you'll see a child that kin git itself lost back of Prince Albert's monnyment an' git itself found at the operer in Paris, an' attend to both ends of the case itself. An' after all, them two high notes of hern was more good than Perkins' Indelible Dab."—Frank R. Stockton, in Century Magazine.

Fashion Notes.

Ribbons grow more and more gorgeous, and no color seems too brilliant to be used by itself or in combination with several others, as a trimming for bonnet or dress.

Tailor-made costumes in tweed, pepper-and-salt mixtures, cheviots, in heather mixtures, mottled cloths and undefined stripes and plaids are selling in large quantities for fatigue costumes.

Very pretty bonnets for spring wear are in the Kate Greenaway shape, the brim formed of flat ruffles of cream lace and the crown of dark velvet, which is sometimes replaced by interlacing ottoman ribbons an inch and a half in width, one strand being of cream and the other of a contrasting color.

Ribbon trimmings were never worn in greater profusion or showed greater variety of material, coloring and design. The most expensive of these are hand-painted, broad silk or satin sashes, with groups of flowers, Cupids' heads, mosses, ferns and swinging garlands of strawberries and vines, painted on the ends. These sashes make an elegant finish to a child's or young lady's toilet.

The daintiest and most convenient of spring trifles are the new "manchons," or muffs, matching the costume and trimmed with velvet, lace, flowers, or, prettiest of all, with small birds. A little concealed pocket in the muff affords a hiding-place for card-case, handkerchief, purse or vinaigrette. The latest fancy is to attach these manchons to a tiny gold or silver chatelaine, which is fastened by a clasp to the belt.

The most fashionable of the white toilets worn this summer, instead of being relieved by the usual colors of rose-color, blue or mauve, will be enlivened by the newer shades of French terra-cotta, tea-rose, shrimp pink, and the like, and a leading toilet will be one of white nuns' veiling or vigogne, with broad sash and other satin ribbon trimmings of pale primrose yellow, with primroses in the corsage and hair, and necklace and chatelaine of amber beads.

It is whispered that the glory of the cropped heads of hair is departed, and the brown "nimbus" or flaxen halo of little rings of hair coiled into "Marguerites" or "Montagnes" all over the head by the magic of bandoline is to be supplanted by the hair drawn up to the top of the head and coiled there like a wavy coronet, leaving the nape of the neck en evidence again. This will certainly be a change; but how the tresses which have so long been trained downward to form this "glory" are to be made long enough to reach the top of the head is a mystery to be solved only by the crafty hairdresser, who is generally equal to any emergency in his "profession." The girls who have clung to their tresses, affecting the little Grecian door-knockers throughout it all, certainly have their reward now; for while the unfortunate owners of cropped locks are undergoing all the torments of a new growth, their sisters of the long locks will be coroneted and crowned with an abundant wreath of hair which is to be accepted as "all their own."

A dress of Worth's designing has the train of the skirt disposed in a tea-rose-colored brocade, with tiny shell plaitings of plain tea-rose satin around the foot of the dress. The petticoat is of moss-green velvet, bordered at the lower edge with a magnificent applique embroidery of beads and ornamentation resembling jewels in emerald and pink tints, the emeralds forming leaves, and the pink beads composing roses and half-open buds. The bodice is in old cuirass shape, and at the sides of the "casement" opening is set a Medici collar, narrow here, and widening to a depth of six inches as it encircles the back of the neck. This collar is completely covered with the beaded embroidery. The sleeves are merely straps of satin, also glistening with the bead-work, and finished with a fall of rose point lace.—N. Y. Evening Post.

—New York exports thousands of baby carriages to Europe, and American manufacturers make carriages for the future crowned heads, now peacefully trundled along like any other babies.

—The difference between a rope-walker and a bookkeeper is that a rope-walker takes a trial balance before he begins business and the bookkeeper afterward.

Sunlight Not White, but Blue.

Since the time of Newton it has been assumed that all the radiations of the sun were to be found in the spectrum, and that these reunited make white light. There is also a tacit assumption that white light is pure sunlight. Some of the early experiments at Allegheny have been mentioned which showed that the light as we receive it has been somewhat altered by the sun's atmosphere. The change is an absorption of rays from the blue end of the spectrum. It follows that our sunlight is more red and less blue, and far less intense, than it would be if the solar atmosphere did not intervene. But we are concerned with something nearer home. Our own atmosphere repeats the performance, strangles many rays at the blue end of the spectrum, and comparatively few at the red end. What does this mean? Let us shake hands with our friend who wears green goggles. We, too, have all our lives seen things in a false light. If we could place ourselves outside our atmosphere—say, on the moon—we should find that sunlight is not white; that the sun itself is really blue. To the inhabitants of "other worlds than ours" the sun may be a bluer star than Vega.

—A Santa Fe paper says: "Lorenzita, the belle of Cochita, walked into this city behind a burro with her father, yesterday, a distance of sixty miles, did her shopping, and started on her return at four o'clock. She is the handsomest Pueblo maiden in all this section, and is particularly noted for her modesty and good nature."

A stand fell down with a crash,
A number of men it did mash,
But the entire ten
Were soon well again—
St. Jacobs Oil cured every gash.

A baker who lives in Duluth,
Went crazy one night with a tooth,
He rubbed the gum boil,
With St. Jacobs Oil,
It cured him, and this is the truth.

"SURELY, you've not washed this morning, Tommy?" "No, mamma! I was in bed so late last night that I didn't think I required it."—London Punch.

"Golden Medical Discovery"
for all scrofulous and virulent blood-poisons, is specific. By druggists.

"STORIED urn and animated bust"—Telling a lie for one dollar and getting drunk on the proceeds.

RHEUMATISM, disordered blood, general debility, and many chronic diseases pronounced incurable, are often cured by Brown's Iron Bitters."

BITTER reflection by an industrious and frugal mendicant: "Here I am—I've been a beggar for twenty years, and I ain't rich yet."—Paris Wit.

"Best of All."

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—My family has used your "Favorite Prescription" and it has done all that is claimed for it. It is the best of all preparations for female complaint. I recommend it to all my customers.
G. S. WATERMAN, Druggist, Baltimore, Md.

"YOUR presents are better than your company," exclaimed a young lady who had been receiving handsome gifts from an obnoxious lover.

JOPLIN, MO.—Dr. J. B. Morgan says: "I find that Brown's Iron Bitters gives entire satisfaction to all who use it."

A WELL-KNOWN litterateur and humorist modestly says that his chief literary acquirements are the books he has borrowed and never returned.

The Bilious,

Dyspeptic or constipated, should address, with two stamps and history of case for pamphlet, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

"WHAT is the worst thing about riches?" asked a teacher. "Their scarcity," replied a boy, and he was immediately awarded a prize.

FAIRFIELD, IOWA.—Dr. J. L. Myers says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best iron preparation I have ever known in my thirty years of practice."

GREEN apples will soon be here; but, in the meantime, the small boy can continue playing with the toy pistol.

DR. EVERETT, Cooper Plains, Steuben Co., N. Y., mentions two cases of Scrofula and Erysipelas in which Scovill's Sarsaparilla or Blood and Liver Syrup effected a cure, and says: "I think it one of the best purifiers of the day. It has met with perfect success in every case where I have used it."

A BURGLAR being asked by a magistrate his occupation, facetiously replied: "A house-cleaner, your Honor."

Palpitations of the Heart,

Coming on at uncertain intervals; shortness of breath, and a sort of dry cough are not unfrequent symptoms of dyspepsia, and tend to confirm melancholy impressions. Gastrine, remedy for indigestion, gives instant relief.

I WAS TROUBLED with Chronic Catarrh and gathering in my head, was very deaf at times and had discharges from my ears, besides being unable to breathe through my nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health. C. J. Corbin, 923 Chestnut st., Field Manager Philadelphia Pub. House, Pa. See advertisement.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS AND THROAT DISORDERS, use "Brown's Bronchial Troches," having proved their efficacy by a test of many years. Sold only in boxes at 25 cts. a box.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, May 25, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 50	@ 3 75
Choice butchers	5 25	@ 6 25
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 90	@ 7 35
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 15	@ 1 16
No. 2 winter red	1 14	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	56¼	@ 56½
Oats—No. 2 mixed	45	@
Rye—No. 2	62	@ 62¼
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 25	@
Lard—Steam	11-20	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 85	@ 4 15
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 20	@ 1 20¼
No. 1 white	1 13	@ 1 15¼
Corn—No. 2 mixed	65¼	@ 66¾
Oats—mixed	48½	@ 52
PORK—Mess	20 00	@20 10
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 13¼	@
Corn—No. 2	56½	@ 56¼
Oats—No. 2	41½	@
Rye	62½	@ 63
PORK—Mess	19 10	@ 19 15
LARD—Steam	11-90	@ 11-95
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 12	@ 5 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 19¼	@ 1 19¾
Corn—mixed	65	@ 65¼
Oats—mixed	53	@ 55
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 75	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¼	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 10
Corn—mixed	53	@ 54
Oats—mixed	45	@
PORK—Mess	20 50	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 10	@
CORN	53¼	@
OATS—mixed	42	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	3 75	@ 4 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 5 60

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap
Is used in Hospitals as a disinfecting agent. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

REDDING'S Russia Salve has proved its efficiency by a test of 75 years' constant use. Try it.

STRAIGHTEN your old boots and shoes with Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffener, and wear them again. Sold by shoe and hardware dealers.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

CELLULOID Collars and Cuffs, while thoroughly waterproof, feel as soft as velvet around the neck and wrists.

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

FOR burns, scalds, bruises, chapped hands, sores or piles, use St. Patrick's Salve.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Stinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

St. Jacobs Oil
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

CATARRH
ELY'S CREAM BALM
POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH COLDS IN THE HEAD
HAY-FEVER
ELY'S CREAM BALM will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds; completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
There has never been an instance in which this sterling invigorant and anti-febrile medicine has failed to ward off the complaint, when taken duly as a protection against malaria. Hundreds of physicians have abandoned all the officinal specifics, and now prescribe this harmless vegetable tonic for chills and fever, as well as dyspepsia and nervous affections. Hostetter's Bitters is the specific you need.
For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

PECK'S COMPENDIUM OF FUN Has a Joke in every paragraph, and a laugh in every line. Contains the escapades of PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA, and all the master-pieces of the greatest humorist of the day. A Literary Marvel. 100 Illustrations. Price, by mail, $2.75. AGENTS WANTED. Terms and Laughable Illustrated Circular free, or to save time, send 50 cents for outfit and secure choice of territory.
FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

BOOKS 20 to 50 per cent. below Publishers' prices. Catalogues free. LENOX BOOK CO., 523 Broadway, N. Y. P. O. Box 780.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE! BY RETURN MAIL—A full description of Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. D. W. Moody & Co., 31 W. 9th, Cincinnati, O.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

BOILERS LOVEGROVE & CO., PHILADELPHIA, PA. ENGINES

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD
And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

LIST OF DISEASES
ALWAYS CURED BY USE OF THE MEXICAN
MUSTANG
LINIMENT.
OF HUMAN FLESH. Rheumatism, Burns and Scalds, Stings and Bites, Cuts and Bruises, Sprains & Stitches, Contracted Muscles, Stiff Joints, Backache, Eruptions, Frost Bites,
OF ANIMALS. Scratches, Sores and Galls, Spavin, Cracks, Screw Worm, Grub, Foot Rot, Hoof Ail, Lameness, Swinny, Founders, Sprains, Strains, Sore Feet, Stiffness, and all external diseases, and every hurt or accident.
For general use in family, stable and stock-yard, it is
THE BEST OF ALL
LINIMENTS

March on, March on to Victory.
UNDER date of Nov. 21, 1882, Mr. Albert W. Hendy, of Pratt and Whitney Company, Hartford, Conn., writes:
"Having been a great sufferer from a severe attack of kidney disease, and endured for a long time the intense pain, many aches, and extreme weakness that always attend this dread disease, including the terrible backache, after trying doctors' prescriptions and many other so-called cures, without gaining any benefit, I was finally persuaded to take Hunt's Remedy; and, after using it a very short time, I find myself entirely relieved from the backache and other pains; and, better than all the other improvements in my general health, my kidney disease is cured. It affords me great pleasure to recommend Hunt's Remedy to all who may be suffering as I have been, as it is a safe and reliable medicine for kidney disease."

Honest Indorsement.
MR. C. T. MELVIN, of Providence, R. I., says:
"Believing, as I do, that an honest indorsement of all you claim for the virtues of Hunt's Remedy, I with pleasure attest to the fact that its action in restoring a healthy condition to diseased kidneys and liver is, in my case, little less than miraculous."
"So say we all of us,
One, two, three, four of us,"—
and so on up to thousands, that Hunt's Remedy is incomparably the best Kidney and Liver medicine known.

A-Great-Problem.
TAKE ALL THE Kidney & Liver Medicines,
BLOOD
PURIFIERS, RHEUMATIC
Remedies,
Dyspepsia
And Indigestion Cures,
Ague, Fever,
And Bilious Specifics,
Brain & Nerve
Force Revivers,
Great Health
Restorers,
IN SHORT, TAKE ALL THE BEST qualities of all these, and the best qualities of all the best Medicines of the World, and you will find that HOP BITTERS have the best curative qualities and powers of all concentrated in them, and that they will cure when any or all of these, singly or combined, fail. A thorough trial will give positive proof of this.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!
DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE Lungs.
Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

WORTH SENDING FOR!
Dr. J. H. SCHENCK has just published a book on DISEASES OF THE LUNGS
AND HOW TO CURE THEM
which is offered FREE, postpaid, to all applicants. It contains valuable information for all who suppose themselves afflicted with, or liable to any disease of the throat or lungs. Mention this paper. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.
(State if you wish English or German Book.)

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first class and fast-selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free.
DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati Ohio.

THE SUN EVERYBODY'S NEWSPAPER.
THE SUN'S first aim is to be truthful and useful; its second, to write an entertaining history of the times in which we live. It prints, on an average, many more than a million a week. Its circulation is now larger than ever before. Double it! Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1 per year.
I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CENTS
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$60. 5-TON
JONES
Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM, JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warrants 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address
JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

WE SELL THE BEST $65 ORGAN in the world. Address MILLER ORGAN CO., Lebanon, Pa.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar. 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1883. NUMBER 32.

PITH AND POINT.

—A bread famine is threatened in Vienna. This comes of scattering the Vienna bakeries all over the inhabitable globe.—N. Y. Graphic.

—So Gould has retired upon $100,000,000. Some men with that amount of money would sit up all night.—Boston Transcript.

—An amateur poetess anxiously wails: "Oh, where can I find rest?" Get a position as saleswoman in a store that doesn't advertise, darling.—N. Y. Commercial.

—A man sitting in the back room of a saloon playing euchre breathes about eighteen times per minute. A female voice suddenly falls upon his ear and his respiration jumps to forty-nine quicker'n scat.—Detroit Free Press.

—Did you ever think what you would do if you had Vanderbilt's income?—Norristown Register. Well, no; but we have often wondered what Vanderbilt would do if he had our income.—Philadelphia News.

—A new song is entitled "Brother's Hair was Cut by Mother." It is a companion piece to that soul-stirring hymn called "Father's Pants Will Soon be Brother's," "Leaning on my Brother's Breath," "Sister's Teeth are Plugged with Zinc," and the other familiar family ballads.—Chicago Herald.

—Gentleman—"You ask me for a small gift and do not even take off your hat from your head. Is that any way to act?" Beggar—"Excuse me, most honorable sir. I dare not do it, for yonder stands a policeman. If he should see me take my hat off it will occur to him at once that I am a beggar and he will arrest me. At present, as we are now, he merely supposes that we are two old acquaintances having a friendly chat."—Fliegende Blatter.

—"I say, Jim, what are you doing there with those cards?" observed a gentleman to his colored gardener. "I is doin' some tricks." "Give me a little evidence of your ability," said the gentleman. Thereupon the colored man shuffled up the cards in true magician style and performed some very clever work with them. The gentleman dropped a quarter into the man's hand and said to him: "Jim, you are quite a juggler." "Oh, no, massa, I am only a negro man, sir."—Pretzel's Weekly.

—"What time does the State Road train leave?" asked a lady of a railroad man. "Two forty-five," was the ready reply. "Well, I declare," she said, with a puzzled look covering her face. "Atlanta is the strangest place I ever saw about giving information." "Why so?" asked the railroad man. "Because, just now I asked a gentleman what hour the train left, and he said a quarter to three, and now you say two forty-five; I can't understand it to save my life." The man walked off leaving her to study out the problem.—Atlanta Constitution.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The Longfellow copper mines at Clifton, Arizona, employ over 1,000 Mexicans and Chinamen.

—Jefferson Davis' estate of five hundred acres at Brannon, Miss., is now mainly devoted to grapes and oranges.

—Three factories in the United States consume nearly two million eggs a year in making a peculiar kind of paper used by photographers.

—Mr. Walsh, a Mississippian, has invented and patented an ingenious quilting frame, by which the work can readily be done by any sewing-machine. —Detroit Post.

—The Commissioner of Agriculture has arranged for the distribution of forty thousand silk-worm eggs to parties in Kentucky who desire to make experiments in sericulture.

—A Canadian has invented a method of putting glass in sash without the employment of putty. Every family man who has ever tried to get old putty out of a sash in order to put in a new pane, will rise up and call the Canadian "blessed."—Philadelphia News.

—An interesting feature at a recent county exhibition in Great Britain was an iron watch, which has been turned out by Messrs. Crowther Bros. & Co., in Kidderminster, for the purpose of showing the extraordinary malleability of their metal. The watch is said to be very perfect in every respect.

—It will be but a short time until you can have your picture taken free of cost. A German has invented a safe with an attachment that on being touched flares an electric light on the scene, and at the same instant uncovers a prepared plate, on which the burglar's photograph is taken, while an alarm is sounded. It will be a "safe cure" for burglars.—N. Y. Herald.

—Sam Collier, the veteran pugilist, is about to apply for a patent for a swimming machine. It is called "Collier's Improved Automatic Swimmer." Small screw propellers are placed on each foot, and they are revolved by the wearer kicking out vigorously. Mr. Collier has experimented in a bath-tub with great success, and when the weather is warmer he will give exhibitions in the Delaware River.—Chicago Journal.

—The taste for frogs' legs is now spreading rapidly in this country, after a long period of comparative stagnation. One of the largest dealers in the country, a Boston man, has set a hundred expert frog-catchers at work in the New England States, and estimates that the demand this summer will be double that of last year. An experiment in breeding bullfrogs in England is about to be made and a considerable supply of spawn will be sent over for that purpose next month.—Boston Post.

—There is a curious clock in the cathedral at Lubeck, Germany. On the end of the hour-hand there is a little clock which keeps exact time with the large clock. This little timepiece of course goes round and round the larger dial, and reminds one of a "wheel within a wheel." In a Swiss museum there is a watch that is only three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter. It is inserted in the top of an old-fashioned pencil-case such as our grandmothers used to possess. Its little dial not only indicates hours, minutes, and seconds, but also days of the month.

Does Good Work Pay?

Properly considered, this question admits of but one answer, and yet there are advocates of "cheap" work and excuses of slighted jobs among our manufacturers; men who claim that close competition and close bargaining are circumstances which permit, if they do not exact, passable rather than excellent work. A business run among the shops and factories in the same line of production, in the same or adjacent localities, where each shop has equal or similar facilities, shows that no two of them will furnish the same estimates of the same job. Indeed, in some instances, the difference in the terms is quite surprising when it is considered that the materials and the methods and facilities of working them are the same. Under these circumstances the only possible means of lowering price is by slighting work, sure to be detected sooner or later, to the injury of the maker's reputation and the ultimate loss of the cream of his business. This is particularly true of the manufacture of tools and machinery; in either case poor workmanship is certain to reveal itself. And when a tool gives out in the using, or a machine breaks down, the user and owner does not console himself with the consideration that he "got it cheap," but he execrates the maker as heartily as though he had paid the highest market price; and he goes no more to the low-priced manufacturer, neither does he recommend his productions.

The manufacturer who "puts the work" into his tools and machinery is building up for himself a cumulative extending reputation for excellence of product that is far more valuable than a reputation for low prices only. In fact, the price of a piece of work is not absolutely high nor low; it bears a relation to its cost of production. A high-priced article may be cheaper than a low-priced one, and should be if the proper relation between price and value is preserved. In fact, high prices do not repel so many would-be customers as first-class workmanship attracts.

The truth of this could be attested by the success of a firm whose productions have a reputation extending far beyond the limits of this country. Their specialty is the manufacture of machine tools, and within less than twenty-five years has grown from a shop of four employes to an establishment of more than seven hundred hands. At the beginning the tools made by this company bore a high price, and as compared with most others in the same line of manufacture the prices have always been high. Yet the fact of the building up of a large business from insignificant beginnings proves that the high prices have not offset the benefits arising from good work. And that has been the main object for which this company have striven from the first. No job ever went out from this establishment "scrimped" in workmanship because of an error in contracting too low. "Better lose dollars than reputation," has been the principle of the company. They have always used the best materials, employed the best skill, exacted the finest work, and aimed at producing superior tools. For years their name has been synonymous with the highest possible excellence in their line, and their tools are regarded as standards of comparison. Substantial prosperity has kept pace with constant improvements, and it is much more the result of producing first-class work than of shrewd business management or fortunate contracts.

This single case, taken as an example for illustration, is not an isolated and peculiar one. There are producers by manufacture in this country and others whose name is a guarantee of excellence, a protection to purchasers and users, and an evidence of the prosperity almost certain to follow earnest, honest endeavor to do good work.—Scientific American.

The Summer Tourist.

The season is almost here when the summer tourist makes his periodical visit to the rural districts. It is not generally known whence he comes or whither he goes. He springs up at the first approach of warm weather, even as the mushroom rears its stately head after an April shower. He resembles the mushroom in another peculiar—he is generally about as soft. He is one of those persons who is too poor to go to a fashionable watering-place, and too proud to stay at home. You can easily distinguish him from other animals, such as tax collectors and book agents, by his personal appearance. He wears a linen ulster cut demi-train and held in place by a diagonal equator of the same material. He will also usually wear a pair of green goggles and carry a formidable looking grip-sack in his hand. He wears the goggles because he started out with the intention of finding everybody green, and it is easy to do this when looking through green glasses. He will engage board of some unsophisticated farmer for ten dollars per month, and growl because he does not get fifty dollars' worth of attention. Beside all this he will expect the privilege of flirting with the farmer's daughter, and should she refuse, he considers that he has been shamefully treated. Flirt he must and will with some one, if it is only the hired girl. You are expected to religiously believe all the yarns he may choose to tell concerning city life, and even encourage him occasionally to make them a little more unreasonable. He will curse the country, and you must enjoy it with as keen relish as if you were swallowing sugar-coated pills on the half-shell, and even lay aside your religious scruples once in a while and help him curse it. The food never suits him. He is as fastidious as a stall-fed cow, and one would judge from his conversation that he was raised on the livers of birds of paradise and the distilled essence of roses. The truth probably is that he boards at a fifteen cent lunch stand and picks his teeth in front of a popular hotel. Sometimes the summer boarder is a woman. Then it is that you can realize something of the nature of that country where ice-cream is unknown. Such is the summer boarder. You never like him so well as when you see him leave. Let us pray that we may never be afflicted with him at least not the average summer boarder.—Waynesboro (Ga.) Herald.

A Prisoner's Plea.

Death sentence was passed on Saturday last upon three men—Martin Joseph, a negro, who killed two men; Tu-al-is-to, an Indian, and William H. Finck. They were sentenced to hang on the 29th of June. Finck is a quadroon, with decided Italian features, and a man of unusual intelligence. As was expected by many, Finck, when asked by the Judge if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, arose, calm and collected, and said in a distinct and rather musical voice:

"May it please the Court: I know not which weighs the heaviest upon me—wonder or grief. Both weigh heavily upon me. I must first call to mind the occasion which I am called upon to make my appearance before the Court to-day. This to me is most solemn and serious. It is as the sadness of death itself—death which in a brief while will come to me with sickle and terror. Alas! alas! for such unlucky stars that beamed at my birth. But I am not possessed of that obstinate stubbornness characteristic of one who is about to have sentence of death passed upon him, or, more generally speaking, a hardened criminal. Being truly sensible of the singular and serious position in which I am placed, I can not help but shudder, and must say that these are the saddest moments of my life.

"Death is the destiny of all men; and being a debt of nature which must be paid, I do not fear to meet it in its natural form. But I shudder—I fear—the best of us do so, to die a disgraceful and ignominious death. I do not make this talk as an effort to save my life. It is an effort to seek justice, and to save the reputation of my family, whose honor is dearer to me than my life. For what is life? It is but a vapor; it appears but a little while and then it vanisheth away. It is but a spark struck out of nothingness and expires in darkness. Nay, it is but a flash out of darkness, soon again to return. As the old Saxon imagination pictured it, it is, 'like the swift flight of a bird from the night without, through a lighted chamber filled with guests, heated with the breath of passion, back into the cold night again.' The strange uncertainty of life is but a mock theme of pathos. No description can touch all the sorrowful tenderness which death in me excites, now becomes so tragic and so bitter. Oh! ignominy! thou art bitterer to me than the gall which Socrates drank. It is not death I fear—it is the form of death—its ignominy and the shame of the gallows. Under my present circumstances I can not but fill my mind with the gloomy images of death, and to torment the present by apprehensions of the future.

"But religion does not countenance any such morbid anxiety. She comes bearing in her hands the flowers of hope, and, like the angel which she is, whispers of the crucified Christ, 'He is risen.' The star of hope that first beamed upon men like me shone from the murderer's dying faith, as he hung from the cross, a companion in death with Christ, and that same star of hope scatters its rays in my heart. Yet I find it hard to banish the dread events from me. Yet why so? I have always been honest, and stand guiltless to-day of the crimes for which I am about to be sentenced. I stand here and boldly say, and with a clear conscience, that I did not kill those two men. If I speak falsely, miserable or happy souls, whoever you are, make your appearance upon the threshold of this room and cry out, 'Thou liest!' And to you [addressing the Judge] whose duty it is to be tender as well as just, I ask all clemency you can give. And now, farewell, earth, made wet with tears and blood, farewell; and to my enemies, farewell. Time's brief work in the face of eternity, a ray of celestial joy falls upon me and takes away every fear, and I now know how easy it is to die."

Thus ended the most eloquent plea ever made by any prisoner at this court. The effect on the Judge and audience was marked. The prisoner was impassioned in his utterance, and was more than ever pathetic and touching.—Fort Smith special.

Comfort in Politics.

"There is very little comfort to be extracted from politics," said a distinguished United States Senator the other evening. "You are harassed from one year's end to another by office-hunters, and you have to leg it through the departments and scheme continually to slip some hungry constituent into a $1,200 clerkship. I have done things for my friends during my term in the United States Senate, I would never think of doing for myself. I have asked favors, nay begged for them almost, of men from whom I would not ask the slightest consideration for myself.

"And, what does it all amount to? When you do succeed in getting a place for somebody a hundred others who were after the same thing, and expected you to get it for them, become bitterly incensed, and the chances are they will be your enemies for the rest of your life. When you have gone the limit, and obtained all the offices it is possible for one man to secure, what a little crumb it is compared to the great loaf that is expected. There is nothing in politics to attract a man with sense enough to earn a living outside. Get a place for a friend, and hundreds of fellows who do not care a nickel for you will chorus: 'There it is. I told you he was a hog; always keeping everything worth having among a ring of time-serving friends. What does he care for the boys?' On the other hand, if you find a place for 'one of the boys,' your friends kick, and say that a man who will not stand by those who stand by him is no good, and they will go back on you. Where you make one friend you are certain to make a hundred enemies. I am heartily sick of the whole business. I may be fool enough to stand for re-election, but don't think I shall be."—National Republican.

—"Again the cat." Vincent Morgan, who inhabited a solitary hut at the head of Grizzly gulch, near Helena, Montana, was recently awakened by the vigorous clawing of his faithful tabby just in time to escape through the window from his blazing domicile. The cat went with him.—Detroit Post.

Religious.

CHRISTIAN ASSURANCE.

"Forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.—I Cor. 15: 58.

Go when the skies are brightest,
And smoothest is the road;
Go where the fields are whitest,
And gather sheaves for God.
To cheerful toil inviting,
O, what a blest employ,
When, all our powers exciting,
God's service is our joy.

Go when the way is dreary,
And fears the bosom thrill,
When heart and steps grow weary,
God guides and guards thee still.
O, dally not with seasons,
The weakness nor the pain;
Ask not the Savior's reasons—
Ye cannot toil in vain.

What though thy foes are strongest,
And cruel be their rage,
Thy day of conflict longest,
And none thy wounds assuage?
Though fainting now, and bleeding,
Doubt not thy strength and shield;
The Savior still is leading,
And all thy foes shall yield.

O blest, Divine assurance!
Our weary toil and tears
But sweeten faith's endurance—
A day of triumph nears,
When Christ, His trophies bringing,
Will call from pain and strife,
And we, victorious, singing,
Receive the Crown of Life!

—N. Y. Examiner.

MORAL TRAINING THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

Rev. Arthur Little, of the New England Congregational Church, Chicago, on a recent Sunday preached on the subject: "A Trained Moral Nature Necessary to Full-Grown Manhood," taking for his text the following:

But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil.—Hebrews v. 14.

The following extracts are taken from the reverend gentleman's discourse:

Quite enough inclined are we to put our trust in trained intellect. Indeed, there are localities where culture is enthroned as God and worshiped. If we fail as a people it will not be for lack of knowledge.

This is, indeed, an era when manual training-schools are becoming popular and felt to be a necessity. The right hand is learning a cunning in all workmanship it never knew before. There is no department in business that does not demand skill and is not willing to pay for skill. If we are to have mechanics, we expect to train them. If we are to have book-keepers and accountants, we expect to train them. If we are to have architects, engineers, millers, railroad officials, detectives, salesmen, teachers, musicians, orators, lawyers, doctors, we expect to train them. The question which I am concerned to ask is: Whether we are not in danger of forgetting that one may be a mechanic, artisan, soldier, editor, doctor, publicist, orator, etc., without being a man—whether our fondness for specialties may not make our training one-sided and defective. The thought I would emphasize is that the whole man must be exercised and trained, or there can be no valuable, reliable manhood. The man who is morally robust is greatly wanted just now here in Chicago. Moral rectitude compensates for many deficiencies elsewhere.

We could perhaps get along for awhile without any more smart men—keen, adroit men—with whom success is everything and honor nothing, provided we could increase the number of thoroughly reliable, trustworthy men, with whom it would be safe to leave the books, or the banks, or the public treasury, or the home for a few hours—men who would have some slight preference as to the character of the clients whom, as attorneys, they defend—men who would be willing to wait until the perfume of the orange blossoms has departed, before asking for a divorce—men who would enjoy money honestly obtained, better than ill-gotten gains. Such men are possible. The moral nature can be trained. We may have a race of moral gymnasts. The eye is not more responsive to the light, the lungs to pure air, the ear to music, than an incipient moral nature to appropriate training. It will either slumber or grow abnormally, unless it be trained. The demand for the hour is "stalwarts"—not in politics but in righteousness.

The ethical faculty can be trained to alertness, to reliability in its pronouncements, to swift and unerring decisions, to clear discernment of things that differ.

How? By use—the way almost everything comes. "Those who by reason of use have their 'senses' exercised to discern both good and evil." That word "use" is Aristotle's favorite word and signifies habit—the result of long and careful exercise—gymnastic activity. It is fatal to suppose that the moral nature does not need as constant and careful training as the physical or mental. We may put it down as a certainty that a neglected moral nature will be a distorted, misleading moral nature whose end will be blindness, blundering, disaster, death. It is by long usage of the senses, until a habit is formed, that they are exercised to discern both good and evil.

Habits form early. Therefore the work of moral training must begin very young and be continued with utmost assiduity and faithfulness. Nothing else deserves to be called training except the steady, firm handling of the child from the first moments of dawning consciousness through all the years of pupilage. The danger is that the lower nature—the unruly masses—will early get the ascendency. That is the trouble with the children of our time. They have either been neglected or pampered and indulged until the attesting and protesting voice of conscience is silenced and the appetites and desires have the place of supremacy. It almost surely forbodes evil when there is a rapid unfolding of any of the other powers either of the body or mind in advance of the moral and spiritual. The moral sense ought to be exercising itself as soon, at least, as any other. This was the supreme glory of the training in the Christian homes of New England. Duty was the first, middle and last word heard by the child. "I ought" and "I ought not" were very familiar phrases. Attempts were made to quicken the conscience at the expense of the feelings. This was a mistake. The New England parent would have been wiser if he had given more play to the emotions, made more frequent appeals to the affections, striven to create a more genial and sunny atmosphere in the home. But duty was the watchword and "usefulness" the end in life. Conscience was supreme over the feelings, emotions, appetites and passions. But now children have what they want—what is pleasant for the hour. The moral development does not keep pace with the physical, the social, the intellectual. It is dwarfed. The other parts of the wondrous child nature are too rapidly pushed towards maturity. If it is ever good to smoke, it isn't good for boys to smoke; but they want to, and so they do. If it is ever right to drink, it is certainly not right for children to drink; but they want to, and so they do. If it is ever right to keep late hours, it isn't right for children to do it but they want to, and so they do. If it is ever good [illegible] to the the[illegible] is not a very [illegible] place for children; but they want to go, and so they do. They do not like to be curbed, held in, restrained, exercised in moral gymnastics. They chafe under it. Hence the juvenile crime. Hence the great mass of men who have almost no moral nature to which an appeal can be made—men to whom it signifies nothing to tell them "they ought." Their reply is: "We don't feel like it"—"We don't want to." Hence, under powerful temptation they fail, unable to bear the strain. Hence, when a religious life is or seems to be superinduced upon the former life, there is no basis, no substratum to build upon, no moral fiber, and the zealous laborer for souls violates the laws of God and man by forming an unhallowed alliance with a convert.

Doubtless a well disciplined ethical nature is not Christianity, but it is a splendid foundation upon which to build—a toneless, fiberless nature touched and suffused with a momentary gush of religious sunshine is a dangerous character.

This training means that children shall be taken young, very young, and exercise like a gymnast, in right-choosing, in self-restraint, in obedience to all rightful authorities, in self-surrender, in keeping the body under, in silencing the clamors of appetite, in flinging out an imperious "No" to the demands of passion, in self-content, in stoutly refusing to do any most pleasant or desirable thing unless it is right.

Only so can one get a sense of self-mastery. Only so can one be a man. Only so can one secure a robust, trustworthy moral nature—ethical habit—that will be his unfailing friend and stand him in good stead amid the heavy and frequent assaults of temptation. We are living in an era of cyclonic temptations, in whose awful swirl men go down. They think for the moment that there is something easier and better than to do right. We legislate in the interests of morality and find that nobody is interested to be moral or thinks it worth while. We attempt moral reforms, and find no moral sense in those who need reform, and not much in the reformers. There is a kind of quid pro quo, will-it-pay morality. "Is it safe, and will it hurt nobody."

The need of this hour is a voice crying in the wilderness and summoning men back to first principles, and reminding them of some well-nigh forgotten primal truths of their being. Training-schools in ethics—moral gymnasia with God as the law-giver, the Bible the code, and Christ the inspiring and vitalizing agent in the work. Drilling-schools to evoke, marshal, equip and bring to the line of battle the slumbering moral forces so aggressive, so bristling with resistance to evil that Satan shall be deterred from making any most subtle and insidious proposals.

For what purpose this training? "To discern both good and evil." This is the reason for a well-developed moral faculty. This is the purpose and end of the training. Good and evil abound. The problem of life is to choose the one and avoid the other. In order to do this we must know the difference between them, and, in order to know the difference between them, we must have the discerning mind and heart. These are the product of careful training. It is believed that the primary reference in the text is to good and evil doctrine. How much we need our senses exercised, the moral habit formed, so that we may do this. Was there ever a time when there was greater need of clear thinking and clear discernment with respect to doctrine? For false prophets and teachers are abroad in the world. Almost everything is challenged and doubted. It is a time to know what and why we believe, to discriminate between things that differ.

Arnold, of Rugby, once said that he had seen boys enough who loved God. He wanted to see one who hated the Devil. We want boys and men who can both recognize and hate the Devil—the devil of greed, of impurity, of dishonesty, of slander, of deceit, of Sabbath-breaking, of intemperance, of infidelity, of atheism—under whatsoever plausible and insinuating disguise he may come. May God grant us a clarified and trained vision that we may discern both good and evil, and obtain grace to choose and love the one and refuse and hate the other.

Dr. Withrow on False Professors.

It is a big thing to be a Christian. Yet there are false professors of religion. Remember, however, that counterfeiters work in gold, not in copper. They find their greatest success in the highest denominations of coin or notes, not in pennies. It is because true religion is so intrinsically valuable that it is counterfeited. It was always so. All sects suffer, but the proportion is not so large as when Judas lived. Not one in twelve now is a fraud. There are some black sheep in every flock, and [illegible] is shown to be divine to carry so many loads and yet live. There are more faithful wives than there are unfaithful ones. Infidels admit that "churches die hard." Many true men are falsely charged, though some who are of Israel are shown to be not Israelites indeed. In 1800, but one in seventeen was an Evangelical communicant; now, one in five in our land is the proportion. Trade sales in New York furnish one of the best tests of the tastes of this reading generation. I examined the list at a recent large sale, and found in a long catalogue but two books, the aim of which was openly anti-Christian. Is not this an evidence of the comparative strength of Christianity in our community?—Church Union.

Gems of Thought.

—If Satan ever laughs, it must be at hypocrites; they are the greatest dupes he has.—Cotton.

—All other knowledge is hurtful to him who has not the science of honesty and good nature.—Montaigne.

—Envy is a passion so full of cowardice and shame that nobody ever had the confidence to own it.—Rochester.

—The truest view of life has always seemed to me to be that which shows that we are here not to enjoy, but to learn.—Roberson.

—Science has no faith-begetting power: therefore a Christian faith should not rest upon scholastic wisdom, but on the power of God renewing the heart.—Heubner.

—It never pays to be afraid of a shadow, and yet nine-tenths of the wear and tear of life comes from trouble that is not here but is simply shadowed by some passing event.—Golden Rule.

—Look not mournfully into the past, it can not come back again; wisely improve the present, it is thine; go forth to meet the shadowy future, without fear and with a manly heart.—Longfellow.

—No one is loyal to the truth, to himself, to his God, or is worthy of Heaven, who has not faith enough, pluck enough, patience enough, to endure, without fainting, apparent defeat and delayed rewards.—Morning Star.

—"No man liveth to himself." "Out of all lives, actual and possible, each one of us appropriates continually into his own. This is a world of hints only, out of which every soul seizes to itself what it needs."

—When you lie down, close your eyes with a short prayer, commit yourself into the hands of your faithful Creator; and, when you have done, trust Him with yourself, as you must do when you are dying.—Jeremy Taylor.

—Rev. Dr. W. M. Taylor relates that an eminent citizen of Brooklyn, while a passenger on a British steamship, overheard a conversation concerning the Eastern question between two English officers who have served the Queen in the East, in which one of them expressed the opinion, not knowing that he was speaking within hearing of a citizen of the United States, that "American missionaries and American schools are doing more than all of us to solve the Eastern problem."

—A good lady employed a Deacon of one of our Baptist Churches to do some carpenter's work which amounted to quite a large sum of money; and she said, when speaking of the job: "I would just as soon hear Deacon ——— pray now as I would have done before he did that work for me." That's it! We want Deacons and all other members of our churches to do in all business relations just that which is right. We believe in a practical religion. Spurgeon asked a young girl, who served as a domestic in one of his families, when she presented herself for membership in his church, what evidence she could give of having become a Christian, and she meekly answered: "I now sweep under the mats." And the renowned preacher said it was good evidence, and we agree with him. Real religion leads one to do work thoroughly.—Watchman.

Our Young Folks.

THE HOME FAIRY.

There's a funny little fairy
On his rounds by night and day,
And he goes about his e[illegible] and
In a very funny way.
Such a tiny wand, so starry,
Bears he in his tiny hand,
And he visits every mansion,
Every cottage in the land.

Then he looks up in our faces,
With a quaint and quizzing bye,
When he finds them dark and frowning,
Off he goes without good-pye,
But if sunny smiles and dimples
Meet his glance, to work he goes,
And before a body knows it,
Pop! He jumps astride our nose.

To our ears he creeps and whispers
Many sweet and lovely things.
In our eyes he scatters sunshine
From his pretty diamond wings.
Then he smooths away our wrinkles
With the dazzling wand he bears,
While he sings a song, so cheery,
That he lightens all our cares.

Oh, his task is never ended
Till the world in slumber lies!
Even then we dream so sweetly,
With his sunshine in our eyes.
Has he met you on his journey?
Listen while his name I tell:
He's the merry sprite "Good Nature,"
And I hope you know him well.

—George Cooper, in Golden Days.

A BRAVE BOY.

Joe and I are great friends. I do not know how our friendship came about, nor, indeed, do I know just when we first became acquainted. We were both newsboys, he a little one of a dozen years, and I of "twenty summers," as the story-books say. He sold newspapers and I helped to write the reports that go into them, of fires and parties and sermons and circuses and all of the queer things that happen in this queer world of ours.

Joe and I often met. He was an active little fellow, and seemed to be everywhere with his bundle of papers, always calling at the top of his sturdy little voice: "Mornin' papers! Inter Ocean, Times, Tribune and News!" He sold them all, and though he had his regular "beat" and regular customers at certain hours of the day, he seemed to find a great many odds and ends of time, when he could dart off and sell a few extra copies around the depots or in front of the hotels when people were coming down in the omnibuses and carriages for the early morning trains. What first attracted me to him I do not exactly know. There were dozens of newsboys on the streets who seemed to be as energetic as he, and numbers who were better looking; for, truth to tell, Joe is far from handsome. But his big gray eyes were so bright and happy, and he had such a jaunty, pretty way of doffing his hat that one quite forgot that it was ragged, or that the eyes which shone forth so bravely were almost the only handsome feature of the rugged, boyish face. As I said, we met often. I became one of Joe's regular customers and was much laughed at for "carrying coals into Newcastle," as I came into our newspaper office every day with a bundle of dailies under my arm. Joe sold the evening papers, too, and, on my recommendation, applied for and got the task of bringing up the extra papers which were desired by the men in our office. They all had a kind word for him when he came in of an evening, but Joe was loyal to me, and though our acquaintance did not for a long time progress much beyond our "good-morning" and "good-night," I came to feel a sort of proprietorship in the boy. I fell to saving up my odd pennies in an unusually economical way. Joe's thin coat and worn breeches appealed to my self-denial in an unaccustomed way, but a way that I am sure was good for me. It is always good for any human heart to feel care for another's welfare, and I am not sure it is not a sign of growth when we begin to love to do for other people. But be sure I did not think much of all this at that time. I helped Joe because I liked him. I wheedled him into the tailor's after some coaxing, and on Christmas day I gave him a fine new suit. He was very much pleased, but to my great surprise resolutely refused to take the clothes as a gift.

"You must tell me how much they cost," said he, "and let me pay the money back to you as soon as I can. I need the clothes, and I would have bought them myself, only I had to give all the money I had saved to—" He stopped short with his face as red as fire.

"To whom, Joe?" I said, kindly.

He burst into tears and put his head down on my table, for we were alone in my office at the time.

He cried for about a minute, big sobs which shook him all over. "There, sir," said he, suddenly straightening up, "I won't be a baby any more. Don't remember crying before since I really was a baby," and he brushed his sleeve across his face. "Well, I won't bother you any more to-day," said he, "and I know you'll let me pay for them, sir?" half inquiringly.

"Why, yes, if you want to, but don't be in a hurry. Next year will do nicely. The whole suit was only ten dollars, any way."

"Ten dollars! O, dear!" and Joe's faced looked for a minute as though it would not be very hard work to burst into tears again.

"Indeed, I can't afford it," he began, when I interrupted, taking him by the collar and shaking him around.

"Now stop your nonsense, you young scamp! I'll give you till you're twenty-one to pay me the money, and I'm not afraid to prophesy that you'll be rich enough to make me quantities of presents before that time, and I'll take them fast enough. I won't make any such silly fuss, I promise you."

So Joe took the clothes and went away, leaving me to wonder a little about his life and his history. He had always been very reticent, and someway I had always hesitated about asking him. He seemed to command the same delicacy of treatment that one usually exercises only toward an older man.

Not long after I saw Joe in his home. It was a bitter winter night, and I was sent by my office over into one of the poorest wards of the city to inquire into the particulars of a case of wife-beating which had been reported at police headquarters as one of peculiar severity:

To my surprise, in answer to my rap the door was opened by Joe. He seized my hand and drew me inside.

"O, I thought you would come," he cried. "What can we do for her?" and with Joe still leading me, I went into the miserable room where his poor mother was lying. I had never seen any one die, but I knew she was dying. Joe seemed to realize it, too, for the first time, as he looked at her, and springing forward with a heart-broken cry, he knelt down beside her. She smiled and patted his hand.

"God will be good to my son," were her last words. I telephoned for another man to come and gather the facts necessary to be published, and I devoted myself to Joe. A doctor who had been sent for arrived soon after I did, but it was too late. He sent for a woman to prepare the poor woman for burial, and when it was all over, Joe went with me to my home.

That little newspaper paragraph next morning, glanced at by thousands of eyes, unnoticed by thousands more, was the record of a brave boy's work for two long years. The paragraph only said something about the drunken brute who had finally beat his wife to death and would probably receive life imprisonment, and ended with the sentence: "The family had been supported by the twelve-year-old son, who sold newspapers for a living."

The brave boy had borne his burden and his disgrace all alone, and had never told even me, his best friend, of his life and trials. If I were not writing a true story, I might tell you that we made up a purse for Joe; but we did nothing of the kind. We only encouraged him to work on, and as fast as he showed himself worthy, a better position was given him. Last year he announced that he had saved up money, and was going to leave us for school, and on examination he proved to be ready for the last year of high school. Now, at eighteen, he is studying in his first year at college, and is just as always—a brave, independent boy, strong in all the qualities which go to make up a pure, earnest and successful man.—Royal Road.

The Working Tools of Insects.

I wonder if you know that the smallest insects you see about you have tools given them to do their work with. There is a little fly called a saw-fly, because it has a saw to work with. It is really a very much nicer saw than you could make, if you were ever so old.

The fly uses it to make places where the eggs will be safe. What is more strange, it has a sort of home-made glue, which fastens them where they are laid.

Some insects have cutting instruments that work just as your scissors do. The poppy-bee is one of them, whose work is wonderful. The bee has a boring tool, too. Its nest is usually made in old wood. This borer cleans out the nest ready for use. When all is ready the insect cuts out pieces of leaves to line the nest and to make the cells. These linings are cut in the shape of the cells. You would be surprised to see the care taken to have every piece of just the right size, so that it will fit. When they are fitted, the pieces are nicely fastened together and put into the nest.—Our Little Ones.

Mystery of Minerals.

It is painfully evident to the most advanced scientists that, in the multitude of theories, and in the best light that the slowly accumulated wisdom of centuries has thrown upon the question, our real knowledge of the character and formation of minerals is very limited and uncertain. Wonderful progress has been made during the last half century in regard to some of the constituent elements of the most common metals and the methods of fitting them up for utility, but the great problem of their creation and union with other primary elements is still a hidden mystery. Metallurgists have discovered something of the effects of oxygen, and of hydrogen gas and its intimate and almost inseparable affinity with iron, but the real facts are hidden behind a veil that never has been penetrated.

Iron is generally understood to be a synonym for solidity and enduring permanence, yet science now proves that pure iron is nearly as unstable as water, and exists only as a curiosity in the laboratory. Some chemists claim that hydrogen is itself a metal, and it may be yet shown that many of the so-called pure metals, now supposed to be simple elements, are in reality compounds which science may be able to separate, perhaps almost into endless divisions. Alumina has recently come into notice, and a wide field, in view of its inexhaustible resources, opens up and stretches out beyond our grasp into the future. By its discovery our common clay is to be the mother of a mineral whose usefulness in the future can not now be measured.

It may be found that the great oceans of air and water are the prolific mines from which the miners of the future will draw their supplies of mineral to satisfy the demand of their day and generation. It is already well proved that the atmosphere, the water of the ocean, the planets and comets, contain a perceptible quantity of mineral matter.

From a general harmony of the manifest workings of Nature, it would not be strange if it should be discovered that the vast variety of mineral substances now known, and the perhaps greater variety to be revealed, can be traced back to a common primal center, and it will be shown that the infinite varieties of form and character are but different manifestations, under special circumstances, of the same great force driven out into modified expression. Our increasing knowledge of the imponderable force, electricity, will throw much light into the hidden mysteries of the metallic world, and by its sun-like torch we may be enabled to follow with reverent steps, from the dim threshold of our present knowledge, the footprints of mineral creation to the cradle of its existence.—Mining Review.

—The eight railroad lines having their termini in Boston have carried over forty million passengers the past year, with only eight fatal accidents.—Boston Post.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JUNE 6, 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
"	½ "	40
"	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor.
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General.
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer.
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction,
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

WE have a Florida letter which will appear in our next issue.

THE colored folks national convention will meet in Louisville in September.

THERE has always been a seedtime and a harvest in this country, and we are not prepared to believe that this season will be an exception.

THE county Democratic Executive Committee adjourned its meeting until next court day, at which time all members of the committee are expected to be present.

MRS. WALTER DAVIS, backed by her husband's relatives, will institute a suit for damages against Phil Thompson for the purpose of vindicating her husband's character.

WE conversed with many farmers, Monday, and they agreed that wheat will make about half a crop; and that the 1883 crop of tobacco will not be as large as the 1882 crop, but they think the quality will be better.

THE candidates for the legislature made brief speeches in the court-house Monday. There was no issue between them, and they simply introduced themselves to the public as men seeking their suffrage.

MOST discouraging accounts concerning the crops in different sections of Virginia are being received in consequence of the protracted drouth. Cotton is coming up badly, tobacco plants are small, and in some instances are drying up in patches. In the peanut section many farmers have been compelled to replant in consequence of the seed planted becoming rotten.

Gen. Buckner still has the mare on which he rode through the war at his home in Hart county. She is now about twenty-five years old.—Glasgow Times.

Dr. S. S. Scott, one of the candidates for the legislature in this county, has the mare that served him in the army, and she is about twenty-five years old. Don't know whether the doctor will canvass the county on her or not.

THE trial of United States Marshal Strobach, at Montgomery, Ala., is causing much bad blood. Judge Riley swore that he would not believe one Franklin, a witness for the prosecution, on oath, and a fight resulted; and Wilson, a United States Money Receiver, and one Weigand a special agent from Washington, had a fist fight in which Wilson's teeth were knocked out. The Court keeps itself ready for any emergency.

THE master commissioner made sales of land in the following suits, Monday: Frances Helm's admr. vs. Ephraim Helm, 11 acres, 2 roods and 35 [illegible] A. G. Win[illegible], $778; Samuel Delph's admr. vs. Noah Craven, &c., 25 acres near Burlington, to F. Riddell, $600; John P. Scott's devisees vs. America Scott &c., house and lot in Burlington to S. P. Brady, $1,225, and house and lot in Burlington to C. W. Saxton, $900; Z. T. Bondurant vs. Salathiel Beemon, &c., 65 acres on Gunpowder creek, to Z. T. Bondurant, $1,375; Lystra Aylor &c. vs. W. T. Aylor, &c., house and lot in Hebron, $560; John A. Kendall's admr. vs. John A. Kendall's heirs, &c., an undivided ½ interest in 23½ on the Bullettsville and Dry Creek turnpike, to C. O. Utz, $800, and 37 acres near Burlington, to Noah Clore, $1,119 25.

MRS. PHIL B. THOMPSON has been interviewed, and, of course, she contradicts everything reflecting on her conduct at the St. Clair Hotel.

1816 is remembered as "the year without a summer." In the Northern States April went out in snow and ice. In May ice formed an inch thick. In June ice and snow. Almost everything green was killed. Farmers replanted, ploughing with overcoats on. In July heavy frost. Corn killed. In the New England and Middle States very little corn ripened. No fruit. Flour $13 a barrel in New York.

A WRITER in the Lebanon Standard says: "A few friends were at Mr. Knott's headquarters when he received the tally sheet of the last ballot, according to which it appeared that Col. Jones had 91-5 votes majority. After conversing a few moments with his friends, he arose and said: 'I must go to the convention and make a speech, of course, to tender thanks to my friends and promise a hearty endorsement and support to Col. Jones.'"

THERE has already been a heart-rending disaster on the East River bridge connecting New York and Brooklyn, and which was opened to the public about ten days ago. It seems that crowds moving in opposite directions met on the bridge at the head of the steps leading to one of the approaches, when a jam resulted, several persons being crushed to death and many others badly injured. The bridge company may have the pleasure of defending some heavy damage suits.

STATE NEWS.

—Louisville claims to be free of visiting thieves.

—A negro was convicted of rape in Lexington last week, and his punishment fixed at death.

—Col. Ike Wingate, of Franklin county, has sold his crop of white Burley tobacco for $20 48 per 100.

—A sorry white man was fined $21 for attempting to hug a respectable colored woman on the streets of Cloverport.

—Simpson county has a "muley scrub" cow that gives seven gallons of milk a day, according to the Franklin Favorite.

—James Warner a highly respected citizen of Bath county, suicided by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a pen-knife. Cause—father objected to his marriage.

—150 sheep were killed in one neighborhood in Logan county. One man fastened his sheep up in a barn but the dogs scratched under and killed thirty of them.

—According to the Maysville Republican, 'Squire Beasley, of Aberdeen, Ohio, has all he can do, when the weather is good, in marrying escaping Kentucky couples.

—At Shiloh Church in Hopkins county the body of Mrs. Mary Shanks was exhumed in the presence of a hundred witnesses to prove that her husband had not sold her body to the physicians.—[Muhlenburg Echo.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—It cost $70 to raise 334 bushels of rice at a point in South Carolina, which sold for $340 in Charleston. Net proceeds $270.

—It is found at the South that land planted in cotton, after a vegetable crop, produces a bale to the acre, where only one bale to three acres was the rule.

—Near Lake City, Fla., is a dead pine, which is broken off at a distance of sixty feet from the ground. In the top of this tall stump grows a huckleberry bush.

—A discharged stable boy at Corsicana attempted to burn the stables at the race-track. A pile of hay was saturated with kerosene and then fired, but died out before any serious damage was done.

—The shipping of cattle from West Florida to Texas has not proved successful. Maj. Hines, of Marianna, lost one out of every six head shipped, and that before the arrival of the shipment in New Orleans. The cattle do not seem hardy enough to stand any rough usage.

STATE POLITICS.

—It is said that Oscar Turner will be a candidate for United States Senator.

—J. A. Moore wants to represent [illegible] and Livingston counties in the next legislature.

Judge William Weddington is the democratic nominee to represent Elliott and Carter counties in the next legislature.

—Peter Lyles, of Graves county, bolts the convention, and says he will be a candidate for the legislature until the August polls close.

Ex-Gov. McCreary and Ex-Gov. Thos. P. Porter are mentioned as probable candidates to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Judge Buckner.

—The republican state papers "point with pride" to the nomination of an ex-Confederate by the late convention at Lexington. One county, in casting its vote, said: "Here are twelve votes for the prodigal son."

Sixty Thousand
DOLLAR STOCK
TO SELECT YOUR GOODS FROM
At COLTER'S
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH STORE,
Rising Sun, Ind.

GRAND SPECIAL BARGAINS
Just Placed on our counters!

We received a message three days since from our New York buyer that he had just shipped us a case of All Wool Cassimere Clothing at fifty cents on the dollar, from a party that was obliged to raise money at once, and they have arrived, and true enough they are a snap. The first comers are first served. No. 3859 is 13 All Wool Suits, for ages 9 to 12, at $3 55. No. 3728 is 16 Fine Cassimere Suits, medium light, ages 8 to 12, at $4 45. No. 2661 is 18 Medium Light Colored Suits, strictly all wool, ages 13 to 17, at $4 75. No. 3858 is 11 Light Wool Suits, ages 13 to 16, at $4 60. Lot No. 5525 is 8 Dark Snow-Flake Suits, ages 13 to 17 $5 40.

TO-DAY, MAY 17th,

These Suits are made and trimmed equal to any merchant tailor's work, and are actually just one-half of the manufacturers' wholesale price. There will be no deviation in prices. The price for each number will be as above stated—no more, no less. If you will copy the numbers you can see what the goods will cost you as well as we can tell you. We could get double this price for these Suits, but we want to let the people know by experience that when we get a bargain we give our customers the benefit of it.

☞ All other departments are chucked full of goods, and are for sale, and at prices to insure immediate sale. Fresh goods are ordered nearly every business day in the year.

Our Millinery Department

Looms up with all the novelties that can be selected from all the Eastern Markets.

Special Bargains in Parasols,

Black Satin lined with Silk, all colors at $1 90, $2 50, $3 up to $5.
Extra such in Black Satin lined with all Silk lace at $3 25 and up.
Best Serge parasols at 38 cents and up.

Our Stock is truly a Mammoth one, and customers will find almost everything they want right under one roof.

We offer great drives in Dress Goods, Black and Colored Cashmeres, Black and Colored Dress Silks, Summer Silks, &c. Black and Colored Buntings at 12½c to 60 cents Lawns at 5c to 20 cents.

Special Prices on Muslins. Standard Prints and good at 5c, choice 6c.

Boots, Shoes and Hats
a specialty, as well as all other goods. Stock to large to give particulars.

Our Sales in 1882 were over $64,000, and we are giving all Inducements possible to sell $70,000 in 1883.

Ladies' Hoops 25, 40, 50 cents and up.
Fancy Hankerchiefs at 6 1-4c. worth 12c & up
Custom Kid Shoes at $1, lower and higher.
Mens' Fine Boots $2 00 to $4 00.
Over 20,000 Suits to select from at $3 to $22.
10,000 pair hoes at 5 cents to 75 cents.
Corsets at 50c, 65c, 75c, $1 and $1 25.
Men's harvest hats 10 and 15c, reduced from 25c.

Very Truly Yours
Wm. COLTER,
RISING SUN, IND.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

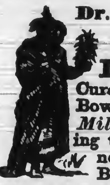
EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.



TRADE MARK,

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
☞ AGENTS WANTED. ☜
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, May 1, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$530,678 11
Overdrafts		137 32
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		41,565 69
Due from other National banks		9,635 61
Due from State banks and bankers		4,961 86
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		3,180 48
Premiums paid		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,208 59
Bills of other Banks		4,510 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		102 73
Specie		5,895 00
Legal tender notes		20,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$687,793 80

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		1,200 00
Undivided profits		20,886 75
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	308,917 44
Due to other National Banks	11,289 38
Due to State Banks and bankers	500 23	320,707 05
Total		$687,793 80

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashire of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 7th day of May, 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY, }
M. C. MOTCH, } Directors.
L. C. STEPHENS, }

Farm for Sale.

75 acres of land on Gunpowder Creek, being part of the Jonathan Utz farm, is now offered for sale On this land there are a

BRICK DWELLING

of 6 rooms—a large cellar, and all necessary out buildings; and a good Orchard. For terms, enquire of Mack Aylor, on the premises; C. O. Utz, Constance, Boone county, Ky., or F. Riddell at Burlington, Ky.

C. O. UTZ,
MACK AYLOR.

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!

Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO., Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

FOR SALE.

Very low, for cash—A quantity of new and second hand honey boxes, glass sides, two and four pounds. Also American and Langstreth bee hives—will sell very cheap, to any one taking the lot.

MRS. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.

FOR RENT.

One half mile above Rising Sun, Ind., a very desirable residence of seven rooms, out buildings, pasture, garden and fruit adjoining. Some farming land—or the farm of 180 acres can be rented with it. Good school in town. Enquire by mail, or at the place, Maple Grove. Mrs. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
83-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

E. E. IGOE,

Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

Rev. Father Wilds'
EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & CO., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

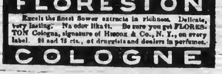
AYER'S
CATHARTIC
PILLS
—Best Purgative Medicine—
cure Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, and all Bilious Disorders.
Sold everywhere. Always reliable.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.



3 to 100 Horse Power.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

$1000 REWARD
For any machine hulling and cleaning as for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR

Double Huller. It has made $100 often in ONE DAY

VICTOR
ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE
NEWARK MACHINE CO.
NEWARK, O.

W. N. STAGE, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles works of character; great variety; low in price, selling fast, needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

No complaint for want of a tobacco season so far this year.

Mrs. Acra, an aged benificiary at the poor-house, died last week.

Our county attorney and county clerk took in the city last Saturday.

Save money and buy your Drugs at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Blackberries will be abundant if the weather is favorable from now on.

Pure Paris Green, only 30 cents per pound, at D. C. Thorn's, Rising Sun, Ind

Rev. Dicken was too unwell, last Sunday, to fill his appointment at this place.

Mrs. Nellie Woolford, aged 83, died last Saturday in the Big Bone neighborhood.

Dr. I. R. McKenzie has bought a residence, No. 2,621 Caroline street, St. Louis.

Capt. Terrill attended the opening of the Globe Tobacco House in the city, last week.

A job lot of french harps, at less than cost, at D. C. Thorn's drug store, Rising Sun, Ind.

DIED—April 15th, 1883, of congestion of the lungs, in the 41st year of his age, Henry Ewalt.

The horse handled by Charles Westby, and which was very lame last week has gotten well.

Several new justices of the peace have been installed lately, and they all hold courts this month.

On the Republican state ticket there are a federal soldier, a confederate soldier and a negro.

Elder Vaughter and family, of Rising Sun, spent the day, Saturday, with F. Riddell and wife.

Rheumatism and catarrh, caused by poor or corrupt blood, are cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The Universalist church at this place has employed Rev. C. C. Conner as its pastor for another year.

Elder E. Stephens will preach, the Lord willing, at Florence X-Roads, Sunday, June 2nd, at 3:30 p. m.

There were basket meetings at Bullittsville Christian church and Bullitsburg Baptist church last Sunday.

J. W. Kennedy, of Normansville, has received 450,000 pounds of tobacco this season, of which he has 250,000 now on hand.

Geo. Hurchart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., deal in handsome tombstones and monuments. John Beall, of Hebron is their agent.

Dame Rumor is whispering it around that one of Burlington's handsome young gents is not to tarry long in this world as a single man.

Charles Hughes has embarked in the lightning-rod business, having purchased Kenton county, where he will handle the Chambers rod. We wish you well, Charles.

The Boone county Pomona Grange will hold its next meeting at Mt. Pleasant grange hall, the 3d Friday, June 15. The master of the State Grange has been invited and is expected.

Wells, Richardson & Co's., celebrated Diamond Dyes for coloring dresses, coats, cloaks, scarfs, hoods, yarn, stockings, carpet-rags, ribbons, feathers, &c., for sale at Dudley Rouse's.

Mr. Tilden R. Selmes, lawyer, and from Dacota, and Miss Martha M. Flandreau, will be married, Thursday, at the residence of the bride's aunt, Miss Julia S. Dinsmore, of Bellevue.

The County Court met, Monday, and took under consideration the building of the Woolper bridge. They decided that public travel was not sufficient to require a bridge at the point desired.

The Warsaw Independent, of last week, says: "Thomas Clore, of Boone county, was here Wednesday for the purpose of purchasing horses. He failed to buy any on account of the high prices asked."

One day last week John B. Winston found, on the W. T. Winston farm, a Spanish silver coin 162 years old. Not long since he found a very old coin in the same field, about 20 feet from where he found the last one.

The Woolper Turnpike Company is making a strong effort to rebuild its bridges and otherwise repair the road. Be it said to the credit of the company that it is making a long pull, a strong pull and a pull altogether.

O. P. Tanner will certainly be admitted to a seat along side of Venner and Tice as a weather prognosticator, since he prophecied that it would rain seven Sundays in succession, and has hit it four Sundays out of the seven.

Some time since the colored folks put in circulation a subscription paper soliciting aid to purchase a bell for their tabernacle, and being successful will, in a few days, receive the much desired and longed-for piece of church furniture.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on busines or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mr. William Walton has returned from the west.

Mr. Lane, a Cincinnati attorney, was in town Friday.

Stephen G. Gaines, of Louisville, was in town Monday.

Uncle Church Clore is somewhat under the weather.

Judge Flandreau, of Minnesota, was in town Monday.

Judge M. L. Roberts, of Covington, attended court Monday.

W. L. Gedge and Owen Ashbrook, of Covington, were in town Monday.

W. M. Rouse and J. O. Griffith, two of Beaver's most distinguished citizens, were in town last Friday.

Mrs. Camby, widow of Gen. Camby, who was killed by the Indians four or five years since, is boarding at the Central Hotel, this place.

Judge N. E. Hawes, Capt. Finch and Mr. Owen Minor, all very aged gentlemen who have been quite sick of late, we are glad to report, much improved.

We saw our estimable young friend, Richard Gordon, of Francesville, in town Sunday. He is the gallant captain of a base-ball nine, and, of course, his negotiations were in that direction. [We don't know which way his "negotiations" were directed, but when last seen by us he was going toward Petersburg.—DEVIL].

Weather is warm enough now.

A couple of communications came in too late for this issue.

F. W. Grant has been at the point of death for several days.

THERE is a very large crop of white clover and the busy little bee improveth every shining hour.

Saturday morning our harness-maker wanted some leather from the city, and he went and got it and returned by 12 o'clock.

THE sheriff is now in possession of his tax-book for 1884, and he does not care how soon you rack up and pay your taxes.

John Stansifer, who killed young Neel, son of Price Neel, some time since, and who has been [illegible] for some time, returned last week, surrendered himself, and was tried in the Grant Circuit Court last Saturday, and his punishment assessed at nine years in the penitentiary.

MASONIC.—The brethren of North Bend Lodge, No. 540, F. & A. M., are notified to attend on next regular meeting, 2d Saturday in June, as business of importance will be before the Lodge. Brethren, you will please take notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

G. M. RILEY, Sect'y.

Those that have been anxious to learn the cause of the May cold spell will be greatly relieved by the following explanation, which we find in an exchange, which says; "It was caused by the simultaneous and generally accelerated disolution of the congellation in the hyperboreal regions, caused by the contiguity of the sollostial period."

At a fishing tournament on Woolper, last Friday, John Berkshire carried of the prize. F. Riddell came in a good second after a series of misfortunes in which he lost several scores. Boone and Doll Rogers withdrew about noon, and Sam and Grant Hensley and Whit Jarrell took up their lines about the same time. The fishing was agin' the wind.

The Burlington base-ball club visited Aurora last Saturday and played a match game with the Aurora club. Up to the 5 inning the score stood 8 to 2 in favor of the Burlington club. In the 5th inning three of the Burlingtons were taken sick very suddenly, and allowed their opponents to score six runs. The seventh inning was played, but rather than to play with their men in that condition, they gave the game to the Aurora club, the score standing as follows:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7—	T
Burlington	2	4	0	2	2	0	0—	10
Aurora	0	0	2	0	6	1	1—	10

The boys say they never met a nicer set of men than the Aurora boys, and that they are perfect gentlemen.

Petersburg, June 2—The Hebron club visited this place Saturday for the purpose of mopping up the Almonts, but when the game was over the mop was 7 to 6 in favor or the Almonts.

Bullittsuille, June 2.—Bullittsville, 6; Taylorport, 9.

County Court.

H C Berkshire vs R O Ryle—a writ ad quad dannum granted.

S C Buchanan granted druggist liquor license.

S W Tolin reported that he had collected of Freiburg & Workum $119 40 tax on whisky for the years 1881 and 1882. He was allowed 25 per cent. commission, and the balance was paid over to the receiver of the poor-house.

L H Dills and T L Swetnam were allowed $6 for coffin for pauper.

H Bannister, E H Baker and Oscar Gaines were appointed a committee to ascertain cost of moving old frame poor house, and the propriety of selling a portion of the poor farm.

The viewers filed their report on R H Brashier's proposition to erect gate across public road.

To the teachers of the county of Boone: As the time is approaching when the programme for the Institute should be arranged, and wishing to give each teacher his preference of subjects, as far as possible, I should be glad to hear from any of you soon.

The May draft for the payment of teachers was filed with the Auditor for payment May 21st., since which time I have heard nothing from it. Address all communications to

D. M. SNYDER, Grant,
Boone Co., Ky.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Constance.

Another new sidewalk in town.

Sam Williams, of Cincinnati, was home on a visit last week.

Since our last Mrs. Bills, a citizen, of Stringtown, passed from among the living

We would like to know what the trouble is between the Hebron and Burlington base-ball club.

The continued rain has kept many farmers about here from planting corn.

The picnic given by Spence Reeves at Parlor Grove, on Friday, June 1st, was immense. Everybody appeared to enjoy themselves.

Verona.

Many of our farmers are done setting tobacco, while others have no plants large enough......Corn came up badly......Not much wheat, but good prospects for plenty of fruit......John Kennedy has purchased a steam mill which will locate near here. James Craven has an abcess on his neck.... Mr. L. Dwyer has been confined to his bed for some time with the rheumatism, but is now able to be up......Charlie Craven is out after a week's illness......Miss Frankie Poland is teaching a three monts school at Owl College......Mr. Davenport has sold over 18,000 sweet potato plants. ....A number of our lads are trying to learn telegraphy. We wish them success.

Hamilton.

Miss Allie Carson's school closed last Friday with an examination, basket dinner, declamations, select readings and compositions. The scholars acquitted themselves with honor and credit to their teacher, and satisfactorily to parents.

For the first of June there is more tobacco set than ever before in this section.

Corn and gardens suffered some from snow and cold weather, and the farmers are not much encouraged with present prospects.

G. B. Johnson has moved into the cottage occupied by B. W. Adams last season, and rejoices in being the parent of a handsome daughter of whom he is very jealous, and will make it very sultry for young gentlemen who pay their special attention for—well, say for 15 years.

An April-fool—J. W. Kennedy attending May court on the last day of April.

Florence X-Roads.

Last Saturday, Mrs. Rhoda Crigler, wife of Aaron F. Crigler, of this place had a stroke of paralysis and survived but a few hours. Her funeral was preached in the Hebron Lutheran church of which she was a member, last Sunday by Elders Wagner, of Springfield, Ohio, and Douglas of this place. The remains were placed in the Hebron vault. The family has the sympathy of the entire community.

An election for school trustees was held here last Saturday, at which time there was but one vote cast for a district taxation.

Last week one of our colored [illegible] a streak of paying business, letting sportsmen shoot at his nickle hat at 58 cents for four shots.

The Plattsburg correspondent of the Commonwealth has riled one of our boys, Uncle James Barlow, by falsly reporting that he was married last Sunday week.

North Bend.

News in this locality scarce.

The farmers are about through planting their corn over.

W. P. Cropper has had his entire crop to plant over.

W. O. Kirtley had about 15 acres of potatoes to furrow out and plant in corn.

Capt. I. S. Balsly has about 20 acres of tobacco set, and will set 15 or 20 acres more.

Potatoes look fine. Wheat will not be over 50 per cent. Barley no better.

The weather permitting farmers will get their work well along this week.

Plenty of water in the river and more coming.

Mrs. Clarrasy Balsly, a former citizen of this neighborhood and for many years a resident of Clay county, Mo., is expected here this week on a visit to her son, Col. J. S. Balsly.

Measles paid this neighborhood a visit, slighting none.

Union.

Miss Lulie Crouch, for some time the guest of Mrs. James Huey, has returned to her home in Gallatin county.

Mrs. J. A. Huey is quite ill.

L. B. Stephens has returned from Fla.

Union now has two Sunday-schools, one held in the Presbyterian church, the other in the Baptist church.

Miss Lillie Rouse's school has closed.

Miss Anna Riley was immersed Sunday, and thus Old Sardis is growing in numbers and extending its usefulness.

A heavy rain fell here on Sunday night, washing some lands considerably.

Corn and crops are recovering rapidly from the injury done by the late snow.

Union will soon add to the list of benedicts, two young men. May this army have many recruits.

Hebron.

The farmers of this locality are busy plowing corn.

The public school taught by Miss Ada Wilhoit, closed last Saturday.

Mrs. Betsy Rouse has been quite sick for several days.

Mr. Steve Gaines, of Louisville, is visiting relatives and friends in this community.

Chas. Clore was at home from Cincinnati, last Saturday and Sunday.

In memory of Mamie K., daughter of J. W. and Isabelle Davis, died April 6, '83.

This earth has no charms,
For one so sweet
As my dear darling was.
She has gone above
Where Angels meet.
In that bright and heavenly home.

She has one sister
That has gone before,
To greet her when she comes.
And in that bright
And heavenly home,
They meet to part no more.

MAMMA.

Bullittsville.

Bullittsville is still flourishing with a prospect of some new improvements in the near future.

The old baptist church, at this place, is now undergoing repair. A protracted meeting of three days duration began there on Friday, June the 1st., conducted by Elder Thompson, of Ohio.

Mr. Samuel Manning, the accommodating stage driver from this place to Covington, contemplates putting a new bus on his line in a short time. On and after the 11th inst., he will change the time. He will then go on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. This will be quite a convenience for this place, thereby giving us daily communication with the city.

Base-ball is the all absorbing topic of the day here and our boys were badly picked up on their soft mop (as some of them termed it) Saturday week. Boys, you have our sympathy, and we hope you wont get any more such mops. Dr. Jonas has not made his appearance since the game Don't be discouraged, doctor, better times are coming. Jeff says he thought so all the time. Jerry makes a good umpire.

The Sunday-school at this place is in a flourishing condition, with J. A. Davis as superintendent.

Charley Basly reports business good, especially in canned goods.

G. W. Gaines thinks he has the best trotting colt of the age.

JUMBO.

Waterloo.

D. M. Snyder is doing a good business selling dry goods and groceries.

Health of the neighborhood generally good.

Some of the farmers have to plant their corn the second time.

The tobacco raisers are preparing their ground.

Tobacco plants are doing well in this neighborhood.

Wheat is coming out beyond expectation.

Oats have been cut a little short by the cool, dry weather.

We are glad to know that the people of this part are awakening up to the cause of education. The vote on the question of tax was taken in districts Nos. 6 & 7, and carried in the former.

L. Clore claims to have the cheapest conductors of the electric fluid, while H. P. Marshall claims superiority, in that he has three ground connections. He is protected against cyclones as well as lightning. Paid for by the foot.

The road leading from here to Bellevue is receiving the work of 42 hands and several teams, under the superintendence of L. I. Snyder.

Some of our supervisors are complaining of having no money. By the way, is it not the business of the County Attorney to look into this matter and know the reasons.

Attorney Tolin will have to come again in the way of curiosities, Joshua Rice having produced two perfect eggs, one within the other.

Florence.

Bob Wilhoit is down with dropsy.

The sportsman's corner is quite a lively place. If you want to hear the latest news in regard to hunting, fishing, prize fighting, base-ball, &c., stop a few minutes at sportsman's corner when in town, sign of the striped pole.

The lady that draws Charles Schramm will beat all of your Louosiana State Lottery draws.

Mr. Editor, that Francesville correspondent of your's is a very sweet talking woman, and we think she would make a very good stepmother.

Young squirrels drowned in butter seem to be a fashionable dish in this locality.

Charley Lodge and Mr. Riggs, the operator at Erlanger, visited Lockland, O., last week.

Earnest Yager will find it more difficult to splice punkins for the Mabley show, than he did parsnips for the Florence fair.

Esq. G. M. Bedinger, our gentlemanly tobacco dealer, seems to be very popular among the farmers of this part of the county. In fact with everybody else who knows him.

If we had a few more postmasters at this place don't think we would get any mail at all. We got three Recorders in a bunch last week, that accounts for the delay.

Tickets to all the sporting circles can be had from John Meeks and Sport O'Hearn, at the sportsman's corner, Florence, Ky.

Measles and pneumonia have prevailed to a considerable extent in this locality. Dr. Ben Duleney battled manfully and very sucessfully with both ravages.

Mrs. Nancy Swetnam has, for several months past, been suffering from a complication of diseases which seems very difficult to conquer.

If madam rumor be authority there will be a wedding or two to report ere long.

The short nights have not taken effect on the dancers as yet. Saturday night week, Frank Shater entertained his young friends with a cotillion party, and to the sweet strains of Prof. B. Hymer's band, the dance led the merry ones far away into the realms of undreamed of joy. There were specimens of all the different styles of dancing, from the graceful quadrille, the fancy schottisch and whirling waltz, to the ground-hog walk, the raccoon pace and wild turkey jump.

Mr. Legrand Hoffman and family, have moved from our midst to Livingston county, where they will make their future home. Charley Seniour could not bear to witness the departure of his fair young lassie, Miss Laura, but summoned all his grit and followed her to her new home, and a few weeks ago they were united in hymen's tender bond. May their journey down life's rugged steeps be one of happiness, and their troubles be but few.

Blue Grass Lake, Kenton County.

Where the bull frog croaketh and the whippoor-will willeth.

Corn to be replanted.

Short fruit crop.

Blackberries promising.

The hail storm came very near ruining that old Bach's bouquet, last Sunday.

Quite a number of Hungarians are working as section hands on the C. S. R. R. They seem to be fund of the finger tussle when full of bug juice.

John Conrad, commonly called Bud, has bought the Lafe Wilkie farm.

Pete Highhouse got a two story mug put on him at the St. John's picnic.

Mr. Moses Rice, the old reliable, of Boone, has been doing some surveying in Kenton this spring.

Any person having stock hogs or cattle for sale would do well to advertise in the RECORDER.

Old Uncle Bill Sawyers says the Commonwealth is the best paper in the State; we guess he has never seen the RECORDER.

We are sorry that Jones did Knott get the nomination at the Louisville convention.

Beans and corn badly damaged by the late frost.

There is much talk of a station being located here, but as the "wind work" has just fairly begun, there is no knowing when the other will commence.

Mrs. Susan Rice is visiting relatives at Jones' station, Ohio.

Albert Rice can boast of the brightest little three-year-old boy in Kenton county.

Jink Blythe is the kingfisherman of the town.

W. T. Smith united with the Mount Pleasant Church Saturday and was baptized Sunday.

Every Man His Own Boss.

How to Promote Personal Power—A New Radical Reformer.

"There is no provision in the Divine economy for political bosses!"

With a bang of his fist, and in the voice of a man who had made up his mind on the subject, Rev. James Chambers, of Calvary Presbyterian Church, Harlem, recently opened his sermon with this announcement. He was right. The only boss authorized by the Book is mentioned in these words: "He who ruleth his own spirit is greater than he who taketh a city."

Commonly, the better side of men is subject to the despotism of the worse side. Bad passions, bad humors, mean jealousies and base revenges are all bosses. One of the worst of bosses is bile. What is most depressing in philosophical or theological thought is due to it. Old General Debility is another tyrannical boss. He lashes men who are naturally good until they become unnaturally bad or miserably weak.

Concerning his deliverance from this bondage, Rev. S. P. Lewis, pastor of the Eighth Street Baptist Church, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was suffering from exhaustion and general debility. As an invigorant I used PARKER'S GINGER TONIC. I never met with anything so effective. It is an elegant family medicine. I take a bottle in my valise when I go on my annual vacation."

PARKER'S GINGER TONIC neither intoxicates nor promotes a desire for strong drinks. The most pronounced temperance people use and praise it for this reason alone. It cures Malarial Fevers, Consumption, Rheumatism, and all diseases of the Blood. Also weaknesses peculiar to women. Its action is prompt and pervasive. Test it once, and you will adopt it as a home remedy. Prices, 50 cents and $1 a bottle. HISCOX & CO., Chemists, New York.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
UMDERTAKERS
—AND—
EMBALMERS,
Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

---

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

---

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

---

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora. Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
ROUSE.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO THE
Petersburg Drug Store,
Where you can find everything in the
Drug line, such as——.
Well call and see and be convinced.
Respectfully, S. C BUCHANAN.

HARNESS & SADDLES,

ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY. (—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,
I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to turnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.
Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO L. SANDFORD, er
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, A. R. Mullen, E. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm, L. C. Stephens.
The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W, Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets,
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

A HYPER-SUPER-SENSITIVE MAN.

He was good, he was brave, still was sadly afraid
That women prized only his rental;
Yet blest devotion he sought in a maid,
For the goose was, you see, sentimental.
But she was so charming, so winning, and sweet,
The daintiest girl in the city!
Such a plain, quiet fellow could never compete
With his rivals both handsome and witty.

His love with his fears cruel warfare long waged,
When one eve, in the course of his wooing,
He forgot to be frightened, proposed, was engaged,
Ere either knew what they were doing.
Two hours swiftly passed, a dream without break,
In soft words that won't bear repeating,
And then as he rose, his departure to take,
Both were struck with the "sense of the meeting."

He turned in pretense of inspecting some toy,
But twinged with a sharp melancholy;
"To imagine my life could be crowned with such joy;
Oh, worse than a fool in my folly!
'Tis my wealth that she nets, while my heart she beguiles;
Such a jewel demands a rich setting,
And her rapturous smiles are but feminine wiles,
As I'll find when too late for regretting."

And meanwhile she stood there adoring his back,
And felt her poor heart beating faster
At thought of her freedom now gone all to rack,
At the touch of her destiny's master.
A quick flash of feeling gave warning of tears,
But to weep would, she thought, be atrocious;
So she doubled her fists to fight down her tears,
Assuming a frown quite ferocious.

Her kittenish caper he plainly beheld,
In the pier glass beside him reflected;
Making faces at him! So his last hopes were foiled.
"Thank Heaven, her deceit I've detected!"
Too hurt for reproaching, he hurriedly left,
And a letter availed to discover,
That an accident, hapless, her life had bereft
Of her super-sensitive lover.

She answered the idiot whose heart she had "wrecked,"
That since he had failed to believe her,
So suspicious a man she could never respect,
Then took to her bed with a fever.
He sailed with a spirit so heavy it near
Had sunk the ship in midocean;
But returned; they were married early last year,
And forgot is their courtship's commotion.

—St. Louis Republican.

A HOUSE-HUNTER'S REPRIEVE.

"Yes," said mamma, "you'd better tell the Doctor, Betty, that we have concluded not to take his house for another year. It is a great blow to me, Betty. My pecuniary arrangements with the Doctor have been very advantageous, and strict economy in domestic matters is highly important with us just now. The little money we had when your papa died is sadly diminished; Fred's education has cost so much, and it is so expensive to dress and educate Blanche suitably to her style and beauty. I had hoped—I was almost certain—"

Here mamma began to cry. I felt very sorry for her. She suffered in her way as much as she made me suffer in mine.

"We'll get another house, mamma," I said, hoping to ward off the topic that I knew mamma was dying to talk about; but nothing would do.

"It's not the house I'm dissatisfied with," said my poor mother; "it's Dr. Steele, the owner of it, of whom I have cause to complain."

"I think you have misunderstood the Doctor's old-fashioned politeness, mamma. It is always, perhaps, too pointed."

"Altogether too pointed, so far as your sister is concerned," said mamma. "He as much as told me he was in love with her down at the beach last summer. Don't you remember the day he invited us all to go, and was so vexed because you would not leave the house with the new servants that he talked about it all the way down in the train, and appeared to be very sorry that your domestic duties were so engrossing? You must acknowledge, Betty, that he has been very kind to you."

"I do acknowledge it, very gratefully, indeed, mamma."

"And then," continued mamma, "he got Fred that situation in the bank. Why, no man could have been more pronounced in his attentions to the family of the young lady he professed to admire, and straws show which way the wind blows; but it would not be so humiliating if he had not come right out and told me that he cared for her. A man has no right—a man in his position—to lead a mother to believe that he is about to propose for her daughter's hand, and then seem to forget all that he has said. I remember his very words, Betty. Your sister had started down to the water's edge, and the Doctor sat upon the seat beside me, following her with his eyes and poking his cane into the sand. 'Madam,' said he, speaking very deliberately, as a man does when he has made up his mind, 'I must tell you that I had a motive in asking you and your daughters to share my holiday at the beach. I am very much interested in your daughter.' And here Blanche came strolling back again, looking so lovely that I thought the best thing I could do would be to leave them together. I made an excuse to go back to the hotel, and supposed that when I returned all would be settled, but from that day to this he has never opened the subject again either to Blanche or to me. Your sister is young and thoughtless, and accepts his attentions as she does those of everybody by whom she is admired; but a parent is bound to look at the matter in a more serious light."

"Blanche don't care a fig for him, mamma," I said.

"She would try to care for him if he offered himself," said mamma. "She has owned to me that she might be brought to view the matter in a favorable light."

"Oh, mamma," I said, jumping off my chair in a heat of mortification and impatience, "do let's get out of his house as soon as we can! I'll tell him we're going to move, and go out house-hunting this very day."

"Yes, do, Betty," said my mother; "and watch him when you tell him—see if he is surprised and vexed. And, Betty, my child, you have such a plain, old-fashioned way, you seem so much older than you really are, and the Doctor and you have always been such good friends, he may confide to you."

"Excuse me, mamma," I said, running to the door. "I'm sure I hear the vegetable man, and I must see about luncheon before I go."

Away I ran down the stairs as fast as I could go, and rapped upon the door of the Doctor's study.

He opened the door, and already had his hat in his hand and his overcoat on his arm. He put both of them aside, and with gentle cordiality bade me come over to the open fire.

"For the air is chill, Miss Betty," he said, "though we are getting on toward April. I believe—"

"Yes," I said, and rushed immediately into the subject in hand. "I will not detain you, Doctor. I must tell you that mamma has concluded to move. I am going out house-hunting to-day."

Mamma ought to have been there, for if ever surprise amounting to consternation was depicted anywhere, it was painted on the Doctor's face at that moment.

"House-hunting!" he cried. "What the—the deuce would you do such an insane thing as that for? Move! What does your mother want now? Papering? painting? kalsoming? a hanging garden on the roof? a calcium-light in the hall? a steam calliope in the parlor? Tell me what she wants, and if it's possible to accomplish it with the aid of Aladdin's lamp it shall be done."

How could I say that she wanted him to marry my sister Blanche? It made me burn from the crown of my head to the soles of my feet to remember the conversation between mamma and me.

"You are very generous, Doctor," I said, "but my mother wants to move. Don't you know that women are changeable sometimes and get tired of the one place?"

"And the one party?" he rejoined—"the one old fossil who began to hope he might settle down to certain surroundings and be happy? Are you one of those women, Miss Betty? Do you want to leave your landlord?"

I knew that it was nothing but a generous pity for my condition of mind and body that made him look upon me with such sweet compassion. He threw his gloves aside, and took both my hands in his own. That was his unfortunate manner, his all too friendly way, so easily misunderstood, as I tried to persuade my mother. If it had been my beautiful sister instead of my plain little self, it might have been thought that the consummation to mamma's ambition was about to be reached.

"You look already so tired!" he said. "Sit down here in this easy-chair, and tell me what I can do to save you from the awful fate of a house-hunter. Did you ever hear of Mynheer Von Ghlan, who ever morning said: 'I am the richest merchant in Rotterdam?' He came to grief, my dear little woman, from too much walking. Haven't you cares enough upon your poor little shoulders? If your mother will move, why don't she go herself upon this hunt that she desires?"

"My mother is never quite well," I said.

"And your sister?" he said.

"That would never do," I replied, quickly; "she is too—" and here I hesitated.

"Too beautiful," he said, with a wry grimace.

"Yes," I exclaimed, resolving to make one little struggle in mamma's behalf. "Don't you think that my sister is beautiful, Dr. Steele?"

"Yes," he said, with all the vehemence that could be required of him: "too beautiful altogether. I wish she was as ugly as a stone fence."

A red flame leaped into his dark cheek. He was certainly agitated by some unwonted emotion. I thought perhaps he loved her, but distrusted his fate because of her beauty and her youth. Who could tell? The moment passed while I hesitated, not knowing just what to say in mamma's behalf. If I only could have gained courage to ask him what was the motive that he spoke of to mamma upon that day at the beach; but how could I? It was impossible. I got upon my feet. He picked up his gloves and followed me out into the hall.

"You must persuade your mother to abandon this idea of moving, he said, gently.

"Oh, please, no!" I exclaimed. "I can not, Doctor. We must go."

"I can not force you to stay," he said, coldly; then turned to his man John, who watched his horse outside. "Go get a bill," he said, "and put it upon the house."

"To let?" said John, with curious surprise.

"Yes," said the Doctor. "No—for sale. I'll sell everything out," he added, "and go to the de—desert of Sahara." Then he leaped into his buggy and drove away, leaving me to ponder over the wretched frustrations of this miserable world.

Dr. Steele had lived twenty years at least in this dear old house, for he had often said that he came there when a boy of fifteen, and he could not be far from forty now. He was the only child of a widowed mother who had idolized him. When she had died, two years before, the doctor had put an advertisement in the paper that, I well remember, seemed very attractive to mamma. Our arrangements with him were, indeed, very satisfactory. He was generous to a fault, simple in his tastes, punctual in his habits. From a boarder he had become a friend, almost a benefactor. Had it not been for the beauty of Blanche, or the ambition of my mother, or the extreme warmth of the Doctor's politeness, or perhaps a tenderer sentiment of his that he scarcely dared nourish for so young and beautiful a creature as Blanche—had it not been for one or all of these, we might have lived happily here for years. Now we must go adrift again, Heaven knew where and how. I went out that very afternoon upon my dreary quest, and grew sick at heart when I saw the signal of misery and disintegration hanging at the doorway: "For sale. Inquire within." I read it, and acknowledged to myself then that the deed was done. We were homeless, homeless wanderers upon the face of the earth. I wished Blanche were not so very beautiful: perhaps it would have been better, as the doctor had said, if she had been as ugly as a stone fence, whatever style of ugliness that might be. For, wherever we went, my mother would begin again plotting, maneuvering, hoping, fearing, despairing. I went to all the agents in the neighborhood. I looked at impossible houses—houses like the Doctor's, but with rents that reached to the thousands. I found to my blushing horror that we had absolutely been living partly upon the Doctor's bounty—the rent we had paid for his house was ridiculously small. A mere farcical sum, which he must have known long ago. He could not have been unconscious of his reckless generosity, and the advantages we were reaping from it. My cheeks tingled with every knew knowledge I gained, but my chief sorrow lay in the fact that we could no longer go on living in the old blissfully ignorant way. The Doctor could afford it, seemed rather to enjoy it, and I had no longer that indomitable spirit that chafes under even a suspected obligation. If that spirit had ever existed, it had long ago oozed out of my weary toes, and every aching joint in my body.

But it was useless to mourn over lost happiness. The only thing to do now was to get a house within our means and live in it. I resolved to spare my people all the misery that I could and let them enjoy their last days at the dear, comfortable, roomy, sunshiny, never-to-be-forgotten house of the Doctor's. It was necessary to prepare them a little for the plunge downward they were to take. Mamma was the only one that suffered in the anticipation. Fred was at that happy period of a male existence when the "malious mischief" of a boy begins to merge in the "rackets" of adolescent youth. He was absorbed in the transition—didn't care what kind of a shelter I secured, so long as it would serve the necessity for sufficient sleep to tide him over from day to day.

Blanche was still less interested. She laughed to scorn all my efforts to prepare her pride and begged of me not to borrow trouble. Once in a while she bade me to remember that she was not an absolute drone in the hive and had her own schemes for our mutual advancement. I shuddered when the conversation took this turn, for she was more beautiful than ever, and consequently there were more matrimonial rocks ahead.

Poor mamma began to look gray and old and took double doses of her nervous medicine. Her constant recurrence to that day at the sea-shore made the bleak winds of March seem to be beating about my ears like pitiless waves against a ship in the trough of the sea, and her haggard and anxious surveillance of every movement of the Doctor's drove me at last to securing a house. It was a coffin-shaped building that savored of sewer gas a little, and of mold and mildew very much more; the paper was hanging from the walls; the ceilings were cracked and dangerously bulgy; cobwebs fantastically festooned it from the draughty garret to the gloomy kitchens down in the bowels of the earth. It was unhandy, dismal to desolation, on the damp and shady side of the street, and had the uncanny reputation of lately being occupied by a clairvoyant who had never come back from one of her trances. But the agent spoke vaguely of repairs, and it was absolutely the only house in the whole metropolis that seemed available to our family.

There was a final humiliation to suffer—security was demanded for the rent. There was nobody to ask it from but the Doctor. I began to think he might be so glad to get rid of us that this would be a trifling favor. For the Doctor, after the first shock, had appeared to be quite resigned to the idea of our separation. His house yet hung upon his hands; it was neither let nor sold; but the Doctor went upon the even tenor of his way, apparently undisturbed by the rise or fall of real estate.

March happened to be going out as a lion on the day that I secured the house. The heavens opened, the rain fell, and beat upon my defenseless head, that had ached and ached for many a day. I had almost lived in the streets for the previous fortnight, and ought to have grown accustomed to my nomadic miseries. But they seemed to culminate in my final success, and when the agent handed me over a document which he said would secure me the house if properly signed, a cold shudder went to the marrow of my bones, and I felt as if it was my death-warrant. I staggered home, resolved to have done with the whole torture that day, and found a moneyed-looking person on the door-step anxious to negotiate with the Doctor about his property. This was the last turn to the thumb-screw, but I hastened to the Doctor's study and asked him his price.

"A hundred thousand dollars, cash down!" shouted the Doctor, without even turning his head.

I thought I had misunderstood him. I was so faint and weary that every voice I heard went humming in my ears like a spent bell.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor," I faltered: "what did you say?"

He turned and looked at me, got upon his feet, and reached me just as it seemed to me I could no longer stand. He carried me to an easy-chair, undid my bonnet strings, dropped some liquid in a little glass, and pushing back my head, poured it down my throat.

The bell rang loudly. The party at the door had waited all this time to know the price of the house.

"Tell him I've changed my mind," said the Doctor. "Take the bill down, John, and tell Miss Betty's mother to step down here at once."

"Your daughter is very ill," he said, as poor mamma came into the study. "She must be put to bed immediately. I will carry her up the stairs."

My poor mother, who could never restrain herself, burst into a passion of tears and reproaches.

"It is all your fault," she cried to the Doctor. "If you had not trifled so with Blanche, and actually told me that day at the beach that you cared for my daughter, and had a motive in inviting us to go there, and then thrown her over in such a humiliating way, things would never have come to this pass."

But the Doctor had already picked me up in his arms and started for the stairway, my poor mother stumbling after him.

"I did care for your daughter, Madam," said the Doctor, in a clear ringing voice that might have been heard upon the house-top, "and will care for her to my dying day, and my motive has always been to make her care for me; but it is your daughter Betty that I love, you blind and foolish woman, and not your beautiful Blanche."

I felt his rough beard graze my chin, his lips touch mine, in the twilight of the upper hall, and then I sank away into paradise. When I came back to the world again I was lying in my mother's bed in the second-story back room of the dear old house of the Doctor's. I must have lingered a long time in that queer and shadowy land to which I had drifted on that last wonderful day of my dreary house-hunting. A soft balmy air floated in at the top of the window that looked over the old-fashioned garden; the thick knobby old lilac-tree must have been bursting into bloom, for the faint sweet fragrance reached me where I lay; the tulip bed must have been one blaze of color. My mother sat in a low chair by my bedside with her prayer-book in her hand. But she looked younger by ten years than when I had seen her last. Poor dear woman! she was reconciled to my struggle with life and death, so long as more important matters had been doubtless comfortably settled. But she was overjoyed to find that I was there again. Poor mamma had always depended so upon me, and loved me well in her own way. Now it seemed that she almost loved me in another way, too, as she did her beautiful Blanche. Amid her tears and smiles she began to twist some wisps of hair upon my forehead into curls, and arrange the blue bows that ecorated my night robe.

"Thank God," she said, "for all His mercies! My dear, dear, child, compose yourself. Betty, before the Doctor comes—he has forbidden any excitement, any confusion—but, my darling, you must know—it is necessary, it is right, that you should know, and perhaps it will do you good; it ought to, I'm sure; it has sustained me through all these weary weeks—Betty, my love, my darling, wonderful as it may seem, it was you that the Doctor admired, it was you that the Doctor spoke about at the beach, and his motive was perfectly honorable and creditable. I'm sure if I'd only known it all this trouble might have been saved. But it's recognized now by everybody. He openly acknowledged it the day that you fell ill, and I must say he has acted up to it ever since."

"Who are you talking to, mamma?" said a voice at the door. "Has Betty come to?"

And in ran my beautiful sister. She hated tears, but they fell from her magnificent eyes upon my sunken cheeks and wasted hands; they fell in torrents; and although she was always so careful of her clothes, she flung herself by my bedside, rumpling all the pretty breadths of her marvelous spring outfit. She looked like a gem in porcelain. She was a hundred times more beautiful than ever. No wonder my mother was so astonished. It seemed a miracle that the Doctor had not a motive about Blanche. And my beautiful sister also loved me in her own way. She had determined to save me from what she considered an immolation.

"You mustn't talk, Betty," she said, "and we mustn't talk to you any more than we can possibly help. You've been very ill, dear, and we've been wild about you. The Doctor has gone about like a ghost, and we've followed him around like phantoms. I must say I think a great deal of the Doctor; he's a very nice; splendid man in a great many ways. But you needn't marry him, Betty, when you get well, unless you want to. I know how queer you are about these things—how you'd hate to marry him if you didn't just worship the ground he walked on; and yet you'd feel badly about the rest of us. And I want to tell you as quick as I can, before he comes in, that you needn't think of anybody but yourself any more. You've worn yourself out for us long enough. I'm engaged to Fitz-Edward Smythe, and only waiting for you to get well to marry him."

"Oh, Blanche!" I gasped; for the young man was little better than a poodle-dog.

"I'm fond of him, Betty; I am indeed!" she exclaimed; and she really looked as if she meant what she said. "I actually love him. He'll do anything in the world I tell him to do, and we shall have a most elegant time together, because his money is all his own, and I can help him take care of it, and show him how to really enjoy it in a proper way. There will be money enough for us all. You and mamma and Fred are to live with me, and it's all arranged between Fitz-Edward and myself that my family is to be held in the greatest consideration. I'd have been buried alive with your Doctor, and any one that marries him will be worse than a door-mat—Oh, goodness gracious me!"

For the Doctor walked softly in with a big bunch of roses in his hand. Blanche slipped out the door, my mother noiselessly followed her, and I was left alone with my benefactor.

The roses fell out of his hand. He scanned me at first with the eye of a physician. He felt my pulse, my forehead, my hands, my feet; he watched me for fully ten minutes, his face softening the while from the Æsculapian rigidity to an ineffable tenderness.

At last he took a long breath, and, seating himself in my mother's chair, he pushed back his hair from his forehead. I could see how gray it had grown. I could see the lines in his face. I held out both my hands to him.

"You would have been very sorry," I whispered, "if I had not come back to you?"

The strong hands trembled that closed about my own. He put his head down upon the pillow beside me. "Betty," he said, "I think I should have gone and got some dynamite and blown the whole property and its owner into fragments."

His eyes still devoured my face. I sighed uneasily and pulled the blue bow off my night robe and began to smooth back the hair that my foolish mother had tried to curl.

"I wish I had ever been the least bit in the world pretty," I said.

The Doctor picked up one of his roses that lay scattered about the counterpane and putting it upon my breast, he said, in his old, tender way:

"'Go, lovely rose,
Tell her that wastes her time and me
That now she knows,
When I resemble her to thee,
How sweet and fair she seems to be.'"

—Mrs. Frank McCarthy, in Harper's Weekly.

An Effectual Punishment.

If practical jokers could suffer a little of the pain they are so fond of giving, it might cure them of their bad habit. Says a gentleman, speaking of the retributive justice which cured him:

I got one punishment when a boy I never forgot. When about ten years old, I fancied I had a grudge against a lad of my own age, but much smaller. Catching him alone one morning, I dragged him to the big watering-trough and gave him a thorough dousing in the icy water. While he was spluttering and trying to escape, my father came upon the scene. A moment's silence—then—

"Go into the house, Dan," was all father said.

I obeyed with a quaking heart. The morning passed, yet I was not called to account. Afternoon and evening dragged by; bedtime came, and still not a word was said.

It wasn't exactly a pleasant day to me. I had ample time to think it over and realize the meanness of my act. I retired with an uneasy mind; it wasn't like father to pass such a thing unnoticed.

Could he have forgotten it? Could it be possible that for some unknown reasons he was, to use a boy's phrase, "winking at it?" I was puzzled!

The next morning the mystery was solved. As I entered the breakfast-room father met me, and taking my hand silently, led me out to the trough, where I underwent exactly such treatment as I'd given Jim.

The following day another "hair of the dog" was administered. On the third morning I tried to starve it out, and by going without breakfast get rid of the ducking.

All in vain! Though, when the bell rang I kept in my room, I soon heard father calling in a tone I dared not disobey:

"Dan, Dan!"

And I went down, only to be marched out to my icy bath.

For one week I was put through that watering-trough every morning!

Father did not weaken the lesson by "words, idle words." And I guess he was right, for I did some thinking during those days.

That experience stuck by me and altered my course many a time in later life.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Rev. Adirondack Murray tells the New York Times that the interviewer is the curse of American newspapers, making them merely a nationalized sewing society.

A City in the Sea.

Cedar Key is a little city in the sea. The town takes its name from a number of diminutive islands, otherwise called keys, and they lie between the mouths of the Suwanee and Homesassa rivers. A large number of those keys are settled; on some, one family, others more, but on Way Key is the incorporated town of Cedar Key. This little island contains about forty acres and is four miles from the mainland, and hence we call it a little city in the sea. It is the terminus of the Transit railroad, which runs from Fernandina to this point.

After leaving the mainland the ride to this city is simply enchanting. Lovers of the beautiful in nature have here a fairy land more beautiful and lovely than fancy can create or language picture. If one look to the west the sheen of the sea is like molten gold, and if to the east, like silver; while as far as the eye can reach are innumerable little islands, like vast emeralds, of every size and shape, presenting a scene of indescribable beauty. Nor is the morning scenery less attractive and charming, for the train leaves the key just at that hour (7:30 o'clock) when Aurora, is robed in the most gorgeous garments, and with her beaming smiles tints the heavens and the waters with the glow of pink, and makes the dew of the grass and the foliage of the shrubbery which clothes the "multitude of isles" glisten like myraids of diamonds.

Cedar Key is a compact little city of about 2,000 inhabitants, and is growing every day in population and business. The rumbling of trains, the rattling of drays, the blowing of whistles of boats and steamships, the racket of hammers and whirl and roar of great saw mills are the daily experiences of this busy little city. But the principal industry is lumber. There are a number of saw mills here and over 1,500 hands and 100 mules are employed in "logging" on the islands while at least ten vessels are constantly chartered to carry the lumber to the United States and Mexico.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union.

The Nails.

The growth of the nails is more rapid in children than in adults and slowest in the aged; goes on faster in summer than in winter, so that the same nail which is renewed in one hundred and thirty-two days in winter, requires only one hundred and sixteen in summer. The increase of the nails of the right hand is more rapid than those of the left; moreover, it differs for the different fingers, and in order corresponds with the length of the finger, consequently it is the fastest in the middle finger, nearly equal in the two on either side of this, slower in the little finger and slowest in the thumb. The growth of all the nails on the left hand requires eighty-two days more than those of the right.—Lohause.

—Mr. Wake Hubbell confesses to the Louisville Courier-Journal the authorship of the following spring poem: "'Tis night! The tired traveler seeks repose, and all over the earth the silent stars keep watch. The birds are in the shady trees and hushed the winds and all the breeze; and watchmen, on their lonely beat, perambulate the quiet street. No sound is heard, save the gentle gnawing of the rat and the shrill murmur of the Thomas cat! Now softly up the window flows, and from it quick a bootjack goes! In front of that bright cottage door that Thomas Cat will sing no more!"

—It is predicted that the summer will be severe on the dude, for without a stiff shirt collar the dude is a failure.—N. Y. Graphic.

—A Cincinnati dry goods man won't advertise because so many other dealers do. He hasn't made a dollar for the last ten years because so many other dealers have.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

An old butcher way out in Missouri,
With neuralgia, he suffered like fury
St. Jacobs Oil banished
The pain which all vanished—
And prevented a coroner's jury.

A cranky old man named Blake,
Says St. Jacobs Oil "takes the cake,"
He gave it one test,
And says its the best,
Cure in the world for backache.

In Belfast, Me., the wife of the Rev. Mr. Libby, bed-ridden for two years, announces herself as suddenly cured by prayer.

THOUSANDS of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" was made known to them. In all those derangements causing backache, dragging-down sensations, nervous and general debility, it is a sovereign remedy. Its soothing and healing properties render it of the utmost value to ladies suffering from "internal fever," congestion, inflammation, or ulceration. By druggists.

WHAT did the paper weight for!—New South. Probably for its ink-come.—Georgia Major.

Wrecks of Humanity,
who have wasted their manly vigor and powers by youthful follies and pernicious practices, inducing nervous debility, impaired memory, mental anxiety, despondency, lack of self-confidence and will power, weak back, and kindred weaknesses should address with three letter postage stamps for large illustrated treatise, giving unfailing means of cure, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, June 1, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 25	@ 3 50
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 50	@ 7 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@ 5 30
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 18	@
No. 2 winter red	1 15	@ 1 16
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54½	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	43	@
Rye—No. 2	62½	@ 63
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 50	@ 12 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 50	@ 19 75
Lard—Steam	11-20	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 18¾	@ 1 20
No. 1 white	1 16	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	65	@ 66
Oats—mixed	45	@ 49
PORK—Mess	20 00	@ 20 25
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 5 50¼
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 15	@
Corn—No. 2	56	@
Oats—No. 2	39¼	@ 39½
Rye	64½	@
PORK—Mess	19 20	@ 19 25
LARD—Steam	11-62½	@ 11-65
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 12	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 22¼	@ 1 22¼
Corn—mixed	65	@ 64½
Oats—mixed	48	@ 50
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 75	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 10	@ 1 12
Corn—mixed	53	@ 54
Oats—mixed	43	@
PORK—Mess	20 25	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 14½	@
CORN	54	@
OATS—mixed	42	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 5 60

NOW THAT Arthur Sullivan is knighted, we shall expect no more musical works from him, for the good book tells us that when the knight cometh, no man can work.—Boston Transcript.

Twenty Years a Sufferer.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—Twenty years ago I was shipwrecked on the Atlantic Ocean, and the cold and exposure caused a large abscess to form on each leg, which kept continually discharging. After spending hundreds of dollars, with no benefit, I tried your "Golden Medical Discovery" and now, in less than three months after taking the first bottle, I am thankful to say I am completely cured, and for the first time in ten years can put my left heel to the ground. I am yours,
WM. RYDER, 87 Jefferson St., Buffalo, N.Y.

BUYING oil is a business that had better be marked with a *. It's a nasty risk.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

A GENTLEMAN from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected a number of cures here. P. F. Hyatt, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

VAULTING ambition—The design of the bank burglar.—Boston Star.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Rev. J. S. White says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility. It restored me to strength and vigor."

THE musician, like the cook, makes his bread out of his do.—Boston Transcript.

NEW BERN, N. C.—Rev. G. W. Offley says: "I have taken Brown's Iron Bitters, and consider it one of the best medicines known."

INCOMPETENCY—Fortunes derived from hotel-keeping.—New York Star.

REMARKABLE for overcoming diseases caused by impure water, decaying vegetation, etc., is Brown's Iron Bitters.

SUN-SHOWERS must always be counted among raining beauties.—New York News.

A Cure of Pneumonia.

Mr. D. H. Barnaby, of Owego, N. Y., says that his daughter was taken with a violent cold which terminated with pneumonia, and all the best physicians gave the case up and said she could not live but a few hours at most. She was in this condition when a friend recommended DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS and advised her to try it. She accepted it as a last resort, and was surprised to find that it produced a marked change for the better, and by persevering in its use a permanent cure was affected.

FRED says that there is in New York a horse so balky that he "won't draw his own breath."

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

COUGHS, COLDS AND SORE THROAT quickly relieved by "Brown's Bronchial Troches."

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin. 15c.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap
Is simply without parallel for wholesomeness, and in its purifying effects.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, irritation. $1.

ONE pair of boots or shoes saved every year by using Lyon's Patent Metallic Heel Stiffeners.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

BON VIVANTS use Gestrine to prevent any disagreeable feeling after eating or drinking. Sold by druggists.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica,
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle.
Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first-class and fast-selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free.
DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati Ohio.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR ... stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO. Sole Agts. Palatine, Ill.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS
MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD
And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

An Open Secret.
The fact is well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh and muscle to the very bone, removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence none other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

WOMAN'S FRIEND.

Having been troubled for many years with kidney disease, with severe pains in my back and limbs—my ankles were at times very badly swollen—I was advised to go to the hospital for treatment, which I did on the advice of a friend, but found no relief, at least only of a temporary nature, and I had given up all hope of a cure until my husband was advised to use Hunt's Remedy by a friend that had used it and been cured of a severe case of dropsy and kidney trouble. I procured a bottle, and had not used one-half of the bottle before I began to be better, no pain in the back, and the swelling of my limbs commenced to go down, and my appetite was much better, for I had become so bad that all I ate distressed me very much. It was really dyspepsia, combined with the other troubles, and I have used four bottles, and am able to do my work and attend to household duties which before had been a burden to me, and I can only thank Hunt's Remedy for the health and happiness which I now enjoy, and esteem it a great privilege and duty to give you this letter in behalf of my many suffering lady friends in Boston and the country, and can only say in conclusion that if you once try it you will be convinced as I was, even against my own will, that Hunt's Remedy is indeed a woman's friend.

You are at liberty to use this for their benefit if you so choose. Respectfully yours, MRS. WM. GRAY,
Hotel Goldsmith, 1416 Tremont Street, Boston.
April 25, 1883.

A BAGGAGE-MASTER'S PRAISE.

MR. H. BAGNY, baggage-master on Eastern Railroad, Boston, says:

"I have used Hunt's Remedy, the great kidney and liver medicine, in my family for months. It was recommended by friends in Portsmouth who have been cured of kidney troubles, and I find it just as represented and worth its weight in gold. My wife is using it for dyspepsia, and has improved so rapidly that I cheerfully indorse it as a family medicine of real merit, and I would not be without it."
April 27, 1883.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.
We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO.,
803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM
ELY'S CREAM BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH COLDS IN THE HEAD HAY-FEVER will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds; completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.
HAY-FEVER
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
There has never been an instance in which this sterling invigorant and antifebrile medicine has failed to ward off the complaint, when taken duly as a protection against malaria. Hundreds of physicians have abandoned all the official specifics, and now prescribe this harmless vegetable tonic for chills and fever, as well as dyspepsia and nervous affections. Hostetter's Bitters is the specific you need.
For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

WORTH SENDING FOR!
Dr. J. H. SCHENCK has just published a book on DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND HOW TO CURE THEM
which is offered FREE, postpaid, to all applicants. It contains valuable information for all who suppose themselves afflicted with, or liable to any disease of the throat or lungs. Mention this paper. Address Dr. J. H. SCHENCK & SON, Philadelphia, Pa.
(State if you wish English or German Book.)

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc. Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 83 Fulton Street, N. Y.

PECK'S COMPENDIUM OF FUN
Has a Joke in every paragraph, and a laugh in every line. Contains the escapades of PECK'S BAD BOY AND HIS PA, and all the master-pieces of the greatest humorist of the day. A Literary Marvel. 100 illustrations. Price, by mail, $2.75. AGENTS WANTED. Terms and Laughable Illustrated Circular free, or to save time, send 50 cents for outfit and secure choice of territory.
FORSHEE & McMAKIN, Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE SUN IS ALWAYS INTERESTING.
From morning to morning and from week to week, THE SUN prints a continued story of the lives of real men and women, and of their deeds, plans, loves, hates and troubles. This story is more interesting than any romance that was ever devised. Subscription: DAILY (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; SUNDAY (8 pages), $1.20 per year; WEEKLY (8 pages), $1.00 per year.
I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me

WANTED---AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO.,
136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
25 100
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N.Y.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G CO., Philadelphia, Pa

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 928

WATCHES THAT WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT.
SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 30c. Circulars free. J. S. BIRCH & CO., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 13, 1883. NUMBER 33.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—George H. Corliss, of Rhode Island, is building the engines for the first cotton mills to be erected in China.

—The blue-stone business of Saugerties, N. Y., including the quarries, furnish employment for from 1,500 to 1,800 men.

—Dr. Fields, of St. Louis, has invented a compound which costs only one-fifth as much as gunpowder and has seven-tenths more explosive power.—St. Louis Globe.

—An Oneonta (N. Y.) firm has shipped $200 worth of hop roots to Kentucky. The industry is a now one in that locality, and the roots are to be used as an experiment.—N. Y. Times.

—Geological examination reveals in the delta of the Mississippi, along a space of 300 miles, ten distinct forests of buried trees. Bald cypresses with a diameter of twenty-five feet have been found.

—Among the notable things in Palatka, Fla., is the first tangarine tree ever budded in Florida. The bud was received by Dr. Morangue before the war, and from this comes all the kid-glove oranges in that State. The tree can be seen in his grove, which is quite celebrated on that account.—Chicago Times.

—Injecting pine railroad ties with chloride of zinc preserves seventy-nine per cent. of them for over twenty-one years; beech ties injected with creosote, fifty-four per cent. for over twenty-two years, and oak ties injected with chloride of zinc preserved twenty-one per cent. for over seventeen years.—N. Y. Tribune.

—A new self-tending strawberry bed is the invention of a Californian. Fill with earth any sort of barrel that has been bored well all round with inch holes. Plant strawberries in every hole and in the open top, root downward and top outward. It is a great success. It is quite ornate, and it will keep for several months in bearing.

—The Southern Silk Industrial Association has sent the New Orleans Times-Democrat a bunch of raw silk raised by the ladies of the association in that city. The silk is of a beautiful golden hue, very soft and fine, and, the Times-Democrat says, proves that as good a quality of silk can be raised in New Orleans and vicinity as anywhere else.

—In Science Mr. W. H. Pickering, carrying out a suggestion made by Professor Brewer, of Yale, constructs the curve of the progress of the trotting horse in America, and finds that it will cross the mile-in-two-minutes line about the year 1901. He also deduces, from statistics prepared by the same authority, the conclusion that at the date mentioned there will be not far from 10,000 horses in this country which can trot a mile in 2:30 or better.

—Mr. John Pearson, a trembling old man, who has been a resident of Fort Smith, Ark., for forty-three years, claims to have been the actual inventor of the revolver patented by Colonel Colt. He says that in 1834, while he was working in Baltimore with a gunsmith named Baxter, Colonel Colt hired him to make experiments, which resulted in the perfected revolver, with six charges in the cylinder and one barrel. Pearson never received any reward for his invention.—N. Y. Post.

PITH AND POINT.

—Mothers who are tired of their little daughters and want more time to gad should send them out to jump the rope.—Detroit Free Press.

—De very man dat tells yer that clothes doan make de man is de one what looks to see how yer's dressed. I'se done dis myself.—Arkansaw Traveler.

—A Reading (Pa.) man died a few days ago, after drinking fifteen quarts of water. The Coroner's Jury rendered the verdict: "Suicide by drowning."—Philadelphia Press.

—A girl in this city has made a wager to wear her fiance's shoes for two weeks, and he wears hers. The fiance says he has the most comfort out of the arrangement.—Chicago Herald.

—When we were ten years old we used to think, while gazing in the window of a candy store, how much we would like to work in such a place. Now we are affected with a similar feeling while gazing in the window of a bank.—N. Y. Post.

—"My boy," said a father to his son, "treat every one with politeness; even those who are rude to you. For remember that you show courtesies to others not because they are gentlemen, but because you are one."

—An unscrupulous person contributes this: "A gentleman went down to Mississippi from Tennessee to prospect, with a view to immigrating. He happened to be in that part of the country which the tornado struck, and was completely carried away with it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—"Settled with a bullet," says one of our exchanges in giving an account of a murder. It does not state the cause of the trouble between them, but it is high time that the present generation should learn to have no dealings whatever with a bullet.—Chicago Times.

—"What would you do if you were I and I were you?" tenderly inquired a young swell of his lady friend as he escorted her home from church. "Well," said she, "if I were you I would throw away that vile cigarette, cut up my cane for firewood, wear my watch-chain under my coat, and stay at home nights and pray for brains."—N. Y. Times.

—Printers are liable to err. So, at least, thought the young man who blushed to the tips of his ears as he stepped up to the society editor's table. "Good morning. What is it, sir?" was the affable greeting. "You made a little mistake in your announcements yesterday, sir." "Very likely. It is almost impossible not to make a mistake sometimes. What was it?" "You said me and Lizzie Pipkins were bothered, when we were not bothered at all. We are betrothed, sir. Quite a difference." "Ah! I presume you se the difference now more than you will in the future. However, I will smooth the matter out. Good morning, sir."—Weaver's Warp.

On the Management of Children.

Of all the disastrous policies which thoughtless parents adopt for the government or training of children, scarcely one is more prolific of evil than that of harping perpetually upon a child's shortcomings or defects. Sometimes it is a physical peculiarity—red hair, a squint eye, a pug nose, some uncommon development of feature or form—that receives comment. This, as it is generally only a jocular, good-natured badgering, is not extremely serious, though evil sometimes results, as a morbid self-consciousness is likely to be developed, both painful and injurious to the child. Frequently the fruit is excessive shyness or awkwardness, difficult to overcome even after the primary cause may have been outgrown.

But when it is some mental trait that is made the never-ending topic of remark, with gloomy or sarcastic prognostications of the future that is to result, most evil results accrue. If it is true, as a noted novelist has told us, that "we are apt to believe what the world believes about us," it is still more a truth as regards children, who are scarcely capable of deciding for themselves any knotty point, whose thoughts are more or less confused at the best, who naturally turn to parents or guardians rather than to the voice of conscience for the right or wrong of anything, and whose most intimate associates stand to them for the world. A policy of this kind can not but prove dulling to the sensibilities and hardening to the heart. Many a parent who has harped upon his child's shortcomings till he has hammered that child's heart to a stone, wonders that his child persists in the even tenor of his way, paying no more attention to remonstrances than to the voice of the wind. It would be a thing to wonder at more if he did otherwise.

That which is berated may be a real fault—indolence, untruthfulness, lack of order and the like; or it may be simply that the fault is in the parent's eye—that the child is not to the parent's mind. The child may exceed in physical energy, when the parent would have more intellectual strength; or he may be studious and dreamy, when the parent desires him to be matter-of-fact. The harping and hammering go on, day after day, in season and out of season, till the child comes to look upon home as a place of torment rather than refuge, and upon the parent as an avenging Nemesis rather than a being to reverence and love. If the victim is a boy, he is quite likely, after a certain age, to keep out of the way as much as he can, if he does not quit the premises altogether, which project is meditated by nine out of every ten boys so situated. Happy for both parent and child if the latter seek not at a "saloon," or some other equally demoralizing resort, that freedom which he misses in the home. There is ofttimes something exceedingly pathetic about these much-berated little ones. Listless and dispirited, too often sullen as well as sad, all childish sparkle and spontaneity lost, they go about with drooping heads and downcast eyes, as if in gloomy meditation on the ever-expected storm.

Doubtless with most parents the practice of excessive chiding is begun with the honest purpose of amending some fault, but continued from force of habit, or often from irritation of mind, induced by the child's failing to heed and be healed. The fact is that children so dealt with seldom do heed. Gentle, steady firmness may, indeed, take more patience, energy and time than a stream of reproofs, but let the parent be assured that if the former does not cure, the latter never will.

Dickens gives us a good illustration of this kind of management in the childhood and early school life of David Copperfield. What a true and pathetic picture is that of the boy's distress of mind as he is about leaving home for school—of his anxiety and trepidation lest the Murdstones have sent his character—as they themselves daily depicted it to the boy—on in advance of him, predisposing his future associates against him, and setting him at once in disgrace before the school! What a barbarous as well as disastrous policy! Yet how many children are made to suffer in like ways and far more keenly, often, than their elders are aware! Poor David, with all his trials and the evils imputed to him by his tormentors, is still a model child. Few children, I think, with his experience, would have turned out so well.

If any parent feels an uncertainty about the ill effects of "living under a cloud," let him try the experiment for himself. Let him offend the prejudices of the community, or let some enemy instill suspicion or dislike into the minds of his associates; let him for a few months meet with shoulder-shruggings where he is accustomed to hand-shakings, with indifferent nods where he expects greeting, and then let him declare whether his experience has served either to sweeten his temper or soften his heart. Even if he be innocent of any evil, he will find the cross none too light. But in any case we elders still have the best of it; we can at least hurl back coldness for coldness and disdain for disdain. Not so with the children. They are expected to keep in mind the divine command, "Honor thy father and thy mother," and never, under any provocation, to "answer back." If they do forget themselves, Solomon's remedy is generally brought into speedy use, to teach these small atoms of humanity their weakness and their dependence, which, poor things, they already know too well!—Country Gentleman.

—All Monday morning the people of Atlanta were astonished at the continuous tolling of the bell of the Second Baptist Church. At last a policeman decided to enter the edifice. He found an eight-year-old boy nearly exhausted by his efforts to toll the bell and arouse attention to his case. He had gone to sleep during the services the night before and had been overlooked and locked in. His parents were searching other parts of the city for him. He ate himself nearly blind that afternoon.—Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution.

—Some concern was aroused by the startling head-line, "Beating Providence." Investigation, however, revealed the fact that it was only base-ball.—N. Y. Graphic.

Taken From Life.

About forty years ago a handsome young Frenchman was at the head of an aristocratice French school on the Staten Island Hights, just back of New Brighton. Among his pupils was the daughter of the haughty Bigelow family, then prominent in New York society. To reduce a two-volume romance to a paragraph, I can only say that the French professor fell in love with Miss Bigelow, and she vowed she would rather die and take her chances in the other world than to live without him. Her parents opposed and threatened, and there were terrible times in the social circles of New York and Staten Island. Finally the lovers settled the difficulty by getting married. Miss Bigelow was disinherited. Two lovely cherubs—brother and sister—were the result of the marriage, and for once love ran smoothly after marriage. Nothing, however, is certain in this illusive life; both father and mother fell ill and died very suddenly. The two little orphans were taken to Boston and educated by wealthy relations of the family.

The girl grew up to independence and struck out for herself. She became a teacher, and for several years was Professor of elocution in Vassar College. Her brother also disliked to be a burden to his relatives, and when the war broke out he enlisted in the artillery service and went away to fight for glory and twenty-dollars a month. Not getting killed he was able to return and participate in the ways of peace. In due time he found himself at the head of a big manufacturing business in the enterprising City of Chicago. He was also engaged to an accomplished young lady, and Cupid sharpened his arrows at her door. Prosperity seemed to have a mortgage on their future, and all was going well until the great fire reduced everything to ashes. The flames were bursting from the roof when the young man reached his house. He saved but one thing; it was a large painting of his mother. He buried it in the garden amid showers of cinders. Then extinguishing his clothes which were on fire, he drove to another house a mile away, reaching it in time to rescue his sweetheart. Their marriage soon followed.

I have long been interested in the career of this young man. First he was an engineer; then a journalist; then a miner in the lofty mountains in the San Juan country; then an expert in Mexico for a Wall street syndicate, and at last he found a responsible position in a wealthy powder company. He was very successful, and he went out to superintend the blasting of some iron mines in Pennsylvania. To show the superiority of his own powder over dynamite he used both compounds. The dynamite exploded prematurely, and when we stood by his coffin in Columbus avenue, Boston, it seemed pitiful that among all the people in this great world a life so young and full of promise should be snuffed out like a candle. This death of William A. Le Row—so sudden, so unnecessary—is another proof of the treacherous, terrible power of dynamite.—Washington Capital.

The Prevision of Thunder Storms.

Considering the immense destructiveness of thunder storms at this season, a recent communication to Nature by Mr. Ley, of London, on the subject of "sheet lightning" is practical and timely. The phenomenon of "sheet lightning" has been long discussed by scientists, but its nature has only within a few years been determined, and a too popular impression exists that it is a harmless exhibition of electrical force in the clouds. It is probably owing to this misconception that so many lives are lost by lightning stroke, people generally not taking the noiseless electrical display as the forewarning of a thunder storm. Mr. Ley very properly rejects the notion that sheet lightning is merely "a distinct form of lightning unaccompanied by sound,' and shows that, on the contrary, as a rule, it is "the illumination produced by a distant thunder storm." "It is certain," he says, "that the illuminations of an ordinary thunder storm at midnight, when there is no moonlight, have an average radius of more than forty miles."

This is a moderate estimate, as other experienced observers give much greater distances at which lightning is visible. Mr. Symons states his belief that it is sometimes visible "as far as one hundred and fifty miles," which may possibly be the case in the tropics, where electrical storms in which the lightning flashes extend over several miles are formed at great altitudes. The distance at which thunder is audible, however, does not often reach fifteen miles, though an extreme case has been reliably reported in which over two minutes elapsed between the flash and the thunder, indicating that the former took place about twenty-five miles from the observer. It is obvious that during the raging of an electrical storm its vivid flashes, especially at night in the absence of moonlight, may be seen at many points where the thunder is inaudible, and also at many points over which the storm itself will not sweep. But to all points lying in the storm's path and at which the silent lightning is visible the flashes will serve as warning signals of the tempest's approach. With a little reflection when such signals are displayed to an observer it is easy to foresee whether the distant storm will pass dangerously near him. While our summer thunder storms may not be translated from point to point in the same way a regular cyclone is, they progress so slowly that there is usually time enough between their first seen flashes and their near approach to discover their line of advance and to guard against the danger. Of course this interval is greater if the storm comes up at night, when its lightning can be seen at greater distances—probably in most cases one or two hours before it arrives. As all great thunder storms occur only where sudden and sharp alterations of temperature are impending, and the daily weather reports show generally over what sections such thermal changes will take place, every man may be weather prophet enough to put the above principles to good use in protecting his family and his property against the disastrous effects of these storms.—N. Y. Herald.

Religious.

TEACH ME TO LIVE.

Teach me to live for self and sin no more,
But use the time remaining to me yet;
Not mine own pleasures seeking as before,
Wasting no precious hours in vain regret.

Teach me to live! No idler let me be,
But in Thy service hand and heart employ,
Prepared to do Thy bidding cheerfully;
Be this my highest and my holiest joy.

Teach me to live! My daily cross to bear,
Nor murmur though I bend beneath its load;
Only be with me. Let me feel Thee near;
Thy smile sheds gladness on the darkest road.

Teach me to live! and find my life in Thee,
Looking from earth and earthly things away;
Let me not falter, but untiringly
Press on and gain new strength and power each day.

Teach me to live! with kindly words for all;
Wearing no cold, repulsive brow of gloom;
Waiting with cheerful patience, till Thy call
Summons my spirit to her Heavenly home.

Sunday-School Lessons.

SECOND QUARTER.

June 10	At Iconium and Lystra	Acts 14: 1-18
June 17	End of the First Missionary Journey	Acts 14:19-28
June 25	Review.

THIRD QUARTER.

July 1	Joshua, Successor to Moses	Josh. 1: 1-9
July 8	Passing over Jordan	Josh. 3: 5-17
July 15	The Plains of Jericho	Josh. 5:10-15 and 6:1-5
July 22	Israel defeated at Ai	Josh. 7:10-26
July 29	The Reading of the Law	Josh. 8:30 35
Aug. 5	The Cities of Refuge	Josh. 20: 1-09
Aug. 12	The Last Days of Joshua	Josh. 24:14-29
Aug. 19	Israel Forsaking God	Judg. 2: 6-16
Aug. 26	Gideon's Army	Judg. 7:1- 8
Sept. 2	The Death of Samson	Judg. 16:21-31
Sept. 9	Ruth and Naomi	Ruth 1:14-22
Sept. 16	A Praying Mother	1 Sam. 1:21-28
Sept. 23	The Child Samuel	1 Sam. 3: 1-19
Sept. 30	Review.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN AND MAY-BE.

Much of men's regret for by-gones is based on an untrustworthy memory and a one-sided view of experiences. It is natural to consider the disadvantages outside of one's self, rather than the lack of a right spirit in one's own heart. It is easy to forget the dangers and troubles incident to a once-prized plan, while remembering all its potencies and promises. It is much easier to complain of "circumstances" than to acknowledge a deficiency in one's own powers of making the best of things. Some men and women, therefore, talk of "fate" and "chance" and "misfortune" in a way which is essentially pagan, and utterly removed from a true Christian view of God's providence. If we have made right use of our privileges and conditions, it is no part of our duty to complain of the result. If we have failed to make the most of ourselves, have wasted time and strength, and have resisted what we ought to have accepted, then surely, it is no part of our privilege to shift the blame upon "luck" or "fortune," by which we virtually mean God himself. The past is the past; its by-gones and might-have-beens are behind and not before; and the right use of their lessons does not lie in unchristian complaining or morbid retrospection.

"It shall be," therefore, is usually a more sensible utterance than "It might have been." To every reader of these words there remain some time and many opportunities. If but a day of life is left, and all the previous days have been fruitless and wicked, that is no reason why the remaining twenty-four hours should be spent over the might-have-been. In the past lie lessons for the present and the future. Retrospection and self-analysis are useless unless they bear fruit. The knowledge of a past error ought to be a guide to a future success.

Then, too, there is no greater pleasure in the world than that of making amends to others for the wrongs we have done. The by-gones of life have not affected the individual alone; they have reached out and influenced others with whom he has had to do. Sad remembrance of old mistakes is only good when it turns the mind to the correction of those mistakes. Much more of the past, in this sense, lies within our power than we realize at first thought. There are still living, within reach, those who can be affected and benefited by a new and helpful purpose, springing up in the place of the old failure. A grudge may be removed, a hate may be softened, a misapprehension corrected, or a long-owed debt repaid, in one way or another. Works meet for repentance prove the sincerity of the changed purpose; and restitution for the past is as essential as right action in the future. There is even an added force, to be applied to present work, in the intensity due to a sense of past neglects. That which has been undone we add, when we can, to that which still remains to be done.

After all our work in the way of amends and restitution, of making up for lost time, there remains the duty of being satisfied with the Divine management of past life. If some things have not come to us for which we once hoped, others have been kept from us which would have been manifestly evil. He must have led an exceptional life who cannot say, at twenty years, or forty, or sixty: "I am glad I didn't have my own way." How often does the familiar line: "Thus far the Lord hath led me on," when sung in church or prayer-meeting, fall upon the ear like a direct message from on high, waking a loyal response in the heart. We are sorry for those men and women who, looking back into their lives, fail to recognize there the shaping hand of One wiser than they. To many there is needed no other proof of the existence of God than that offered by the record of their own personal experience. Gifts received, joys granted, miseries escaped, sorrows turned to blessings—all these are in themselves theistic arguments not to be brushed aside. Who can not see how his own schemes were mistaken ones; how his bitterest disappointments are matter for present rejoicings? Who can honestly say that his own management of life, without any help from outside and from above, would have been more successful than that which has been necessary "under the circumstances?"

Even the fatalists of pagan antiquity did not grumble about what they might have been if they had been given a chance; certainly Christians, believing in a Father in Heaven and a Son bringing life and immortality to light, can not decently be less brave. Looking upon the past, with its records of blessings given and dangers escaped, they may well exclaim:

Of all glad words of tongue or pen,
The gladdest are these: "It might have been."

—S. S. Times.

An Ancient Plague.

A planter from Honolulu came lately to Philadelphia to consult the physicians of that city. He had been for eight years a leper, pronounced incurable by the native doctors. Having sufficient means, he has traveled from one eminent medical authority to another in the vain hope of escaping the merciless disaster which has laid its inexorable hold upon him.

Three years ago the Companion published an account of the existence of the Asiatic leprosy in Tracadie, New Brunswick. We received soon after from Dr. Jones, President of the Louisiana Board of Health, a report of an investigation made in the Lafourche region, where the disease has existed since the peopling of the shores of that bayou by the Arcadians. Fourteen cases were discovered. Since that time this most terrible of all diseases has appeared in some of our Northwestern States, having been brought there by Scandinavian or Chinese immigrants.

Now that skillful modern observation has made us measurably familiar with this malady, the Scripture account of it gains terrible reality and force. It was always used, as our readers will recollect, in the days of the Savior, to typify sin. We can better understand this comparison after having seen a living leper.

The physician in charge of the hospital for lepers states that the first symptom of the disease is a smooth, white spot in the skin, painless and scarcely apparent. It extends very slowly, does not interfere with the daily avocations of the victim, and is not offensive to himself or others. Then comes a loss of the sense of touch: the flesh growing numb. Hearing and sight go next. Then the whole body quickly decays, and the man becomes a walking death-in-life—a visible horror among his fellows.

Could anything better symbolize the progress of evil in a man? The habitual little fault, at which we laugh in our friend; the yielding to an agreeable appetite—how harmless and trivial a thing it is—how slowly it grows. Presently the man's sense of wrong seems slightly blunted. His moral nerves are dulled. Then, with fatal rapidity, he grows blind and deaf to all the good influences about him, to all innocence, purity, truth, to his mother's love, to his God.

After that the descent is swift. The poison taints every part. Strength, manhood yield. The man becomes an active power for evil in the world. He transmits the disease to his children. He imparts it to all who come near him. His touch is corruption; his breath is death!

For the leprosy of the soul, as that of the body, there is no hope of cure but in the mercy of God.

But here the resemblance ends. For the poor leper, hunted by his kind, will some day cast off the corrupted body which has tortured him so long. Its poison and decay he will leave in the grave. But the man who goes out into the darkness beyond death, with evil on his soul, takes it with him—to what end who can tell?—Youth's Companion.

Choice Selections.

—There is a sense in which we ought to love self, but it is not a selfish sense, but in a self-respecting sense.—Golden Rule.

—Trials are medicines which the great Physician prescribes because we need them. Then let us trust His skill, and thank Him for His prescription.—Newton.

—The increasing interest in regard to the teachings of the Bible, pro and con, is the sure harbinger of growing righteousness and godliness throughout the earth.—Rev. N. B. Remick.

—Be cheerful: do not brood over fond hopes unrealized until a chain, link after link, is fastened on each thought and wound around the heart. Nature intended you to be the fountain-spring of cheerfulness and social life, and not the traveling monument of despair and melancholy.—Arthur Helps.

—Don't live a single hour of your life without doing exactly what is to be done in it, and going straight through it from beginning to end. Work, play, whatever it is, take hold at once, and finish it up squarely and clearly: then do the other thing, without letting any moments drop between.—

—In youth and riper years practice temperance, purity, healthful sports and vigorous exercise; avoid every waste of physical force; train for the race and the battle of life, and keep right on with every faculty of mind and body in healthful play and development; avoid excess of rest or labor, and grow with every joint and member fitly compacted together. Blessed is he who understands these things, while the evil days come not nor the years draw nigh when he shall say: "I have no pleasure in them."

—Religion is reproached with not being progressive; it makes amends by not being imperishable. The enduring element in our humanity is not in the doctrines which so unconsciously elaborate, but in the faiths which unconsciously dispose of us, and never slumber but to wake again. What treatise on sin, what philosophy of retribution, is as fresh as the fifty-first Psalm? What scientific theory has lasted like the Lord's Prayer? It is an evidence of movement that in a library no books become sooner obsolete than books of science. It is no less a mark of stability that poetry and religious literature survive, and even ultimate philosophies seldom die but rise again. These, and with them the kindred services of devotion, are the expression of aspirations and faiths which forever cry out for interpreters and guides. And, in proportion as you carry your appeal to those deepest seats of our nature, you not only reach the firmest ground, but touch accordant notes in every heart, so that the response turns out a harmony.—Dr. Martineau.

Our Young Folks.

AN OLD PROVERB.

Pouting, my darling, because it rains,
And flowers droop, and the rain is falling,
And drops are blurring the window panes,
And a moaning wind through the lane is calling!
Crying, and wishing the sky was clear,
And roses again on the lattice twining!
Ah, well, remember, my foolish dear,
"Tis easy to laugh when the sun is shining!"

When the world is bright and fair and gay,
And glad birds sing in the fair June weather,
And summer is gathering, night and day,
Her golden chalice of sweets together,
When blue seas answer the sky above,
And bright stars follow the day's declining,
Why, then, 'tis no merit to smile, my love;
"Tis easy to laugh when the sun is shining!"

But this is the time the heart to test,
When Winter is near, and storms are howling,
And the earth from under her frozen vest
Looks up at the sad sky, mute and scowling;
The brave little spirit should rise to meet
The season's gloom and the day's repining;
And this is the time to be glad; for, sweet,
"Tis easy to laugh when the sun's shining!"

—Wide Awake.

GETTING READY TO BE GREAT.

After the lessons for the next day had been prepared, Olivia said to her five pupils, as they were putting away their books:

"I know a boy who is getting ready to be great."

"A boy who is getting ready to be great!" echoed Harry and Robert.

"Yes," returned Olivia. He probably would be surprised if any one told him; but he is fast preparing himself to be distinguished."

"Who is he?" "What's his name?" and "Where does he live?" questioned the boys.

"Can't you guess?" returned Olivia. "He goes to your school; he lives not far away, and you see him every day."

Robert wondered if he could be the one to whom his sister alluded. He had done so well for the past few weeks; he had proved all his examples without grumbling; he was head in grammar class, and he was cultivating mental and moral power in various ways. Perhaps his sister did mean him.

"What does a fellow have to do when he gets ready to be great?" asked Newell. "Tell us that, Cousin 'Livia, then perhaps we can guess."

"I didn't know boys were ever great," said Harry."

"Greatness does not come suddenly," returned the young girl. "The world does not often see it till it is in blossom; but it is a long while in growing; so long that one who wishes to be noted among men must lay the foundation for greatness when young. This boy's superiority may not be acknowledged in thirty or forty years, but that his name will be distinguished some day I firmly believe."

"So it takes greatness thirty or forty years to grow?" said Harry, in some surprise.

"Yes, all of that—a life-time. Yet it comes like a tree, from very small seeds. What peculiar' quality do we see in all great men—in Washington, in Lincoln, in Garfield, in Humboldt, and in Columbus, Luther, Newton, and hosts of others?"

"Genius," answered Newell.

"Vim," cried Robert, proud of the friendly relations he was forming with this quality.

"Genius," said Olivia, "did not make them famous. Thousands of boys have genius, but they never amount to anything because—"

"Because they haven't vim," exclaimed Robert.

"Yes," smiled his sister, "because they haven't vim. But what is the root of vim—the moral root, I mean, not the Latin one.'

"I should think a good strong will might be," said Newell.

"Yes," said Olivia, "all these men had good strong wills, and, what is more to the purpose, the will of each was well trained. They were what we call self-reliant. Self-reliance means more than dependence upon yourself; it means trust in God first, and faith in yourself next. Do you suppose Columbus asked any one to do his thinking for him?"

"We know he didn't," responded Harry. And Robert said, stoutly: "No, sir-e-e; he did his own thinking."

"And so did George Washington and James Garfield and Newton and Luther," said Newell."

"Then you know a boy who does his own thinking, 'Livia?' spoke up Laura, who all this time had been thinking and listening.

Olivia smiled and nodded her head.

"And I suppose he always knows his lessons," ventured Robert.

His sister nodded again.

"And he goes to our school?" mused Hettie, who before this had not uttered a word. "It must be Tommy Davison!"

"Tommy! Tommy Davison!" they all shouted.

"No-o," said Robert, incredulously; but Olivia nodded her head and said, quietly: "He is the boy."

"But he isn't any smarter than we are," protested Newell.

"Not a bit," returned Olivia.

"But you said—"

"I said he was getting ready to be great."

There was a little silence—a heavy silence. It was broken by Newell, who asked: "Do you suppose he does his own thinking?"

"I know he does," was the young lady's reply.

"Why—how do you know, Olivia?"

"He would not join our preparatory class, though I asked him to, and told him that it should cost him nothing; so it wasn't his poverty that kept him from coming. It was his self-reliance. I saw him to-day and asked him how he was getting on. I had a little talk with him, and am astonished at the sensible books he reads. Just think of a boy of twelve reading Carlyle's 'French Revolution,' and liking it, too! Why, it is a work for a man! And he studies up Carlyle's chapters from other books as he goes along—from histories and biographies; he finds these in the public library or in the pastor's encyclopedia. He is a prodigy," said Olivia, warmly, "and a good boy, too; and that is why I know he is getting ready to be great,"

"But did he tell you he got his lessons out himself?" asked Robert.

"Not exactly; but I asked if a certain problem did not discourage him, and he said: 'I did not stop to think of getting discouraged. I only kept at it. It took me three Saturdays to do it, but I got it.' I told him I should have been happy to help him, but he answered, laughing, that 'he didn't need any help with that problem now,' and thanked me. He says all the others have been easy since, and we know why, don't we, boys?"—Royal Road.

Little Sunshine's Vail.

Don't ask me if little Sunshine was pretty, because I don't know—nobody ever did know; and this was the reason why, she had a very wonderful vail, and whenever anybody spoke to her, or even looked at her, she would draw it over her face, and you could not tell whether her eyes were blue or brown, or whether her skin was fair or dark; you only knew this wonderful vail made you think of sunshine and flowers, and all the pleasant things in the world.

And, strange as it may seem, it always put everybody into a good humor just to look at it. No matter how angry or quarrelsome her companions might be, they would generally break into a merry laugh as soon as it showed itself.

As for her own face, a frown had no chance at all. This pretty vail would chase it away before it had time to pucker up a single wrinkle.

Sometimes when anything happened that she did not like, for a moment she would look downcast, like any other little girl that had been disappointed, but soon the vail would fall, and she would be her own sweet sunny self again, saying in the brightest way:

"Well, it don't matter; something else will do just as well."

She had a doll once, which had been given her by her Aunt May, and she loved it very much. It was a doll with the prettiest baby hands and feet ever seen. Now Sunshine was a right careful little girl, and though she had played with it ever since Christmas, it was almost as good as new.

But one day her little cousin, in their play, insisted upon exchanging dolls, and very soon broke off one of the dear little feet. The tears would come at first, and it was a very sorrowful little girl that carried her lame darling to mother for sympathy; but almost before the mother could say a word of encouragement the sunny vail was in its place, and Sunshine, smiling through her tears, said.

"Oh, well! mamma, it won't matter much, will it? 'cause you know you can stuff the stocking with cotton, and when the shoe is on it won't show a bit. Besides, I can play she's got a 'sick foot' like my little friend Lizzy Lore."

But when, before the day was over, the beloved doll fell on the pavement, and broke the beautiful head all to pieces, it well-nigh broke little Sunshine's heart, and she could but sob her griefs out, for her ruined doll, in her mother's lap.

But, again, the vail conquered; and, ever looking for the bright side, she said, quite cheerily:

"Well, anyhow, I can play with my little old doll, and I won't be so afraid of breaking that; and we can play poor 'Bella' had the croup and died; and we can have a funeral—can't we, mamma?"

Can you, little boys and girls, guess what little Sunshine's vail was, or shall I tell you?

It was the sweet smile that came from her—always looking for a bright side to everything, and keeping in a good humor, no matter what happened.—Annie S. Wilson, in S. S. Times.

Grandma's Story.

"It all happened on Mill Creek when I was a girl," said Grandma, wiping her spectacles.

"Brother James was about six years old then, and all the men folks were off to the war, so mother and I had to tend mill alone.

"Mother was strong and could carry a bag of grain almost as easy as a man; and I didn't mind doin' the housework, so we got along first-rate until one day a little white pig got into the water and floated down into the mill-wheel. And then, mercy on us! such a time as we had gettin' that pig out!

"I do believe it took half a day before we got that mill to runnin' again.

"You see, just above the wheel was a gate which could be shut down and stop the water from flowin' under the wheel when we wanted to stop the mill.

"Well, it wasn't more'n a day or two after the pig got into the wheel when mother rushed out of the mill and shut down the gate with a bang.

"Betsy Ann Dyer had just rode up with a grist, and mother called to her to come and manage the gate while she waded into the water up to her waist in the flume above the gate."

"'Betsey,' said she, when I nod my head you just raise the gate about a foot, and I'll dive for the pig,' for it seemed she had shut down the gate and caught the pig under it.

"Then mother drew a long breath, nodded and plunged with both hands for the pig.

"When she came up she looked awful white, but she had got the pig?—bless you, no—nothin' more nor less than brother Jimmy!

"Betsey she screamed, and I cried. 'Jimmy's dead! Jimmy's dead!' But mother said: 'I trust not,' and just hustled onto the bank as fast as ever she could.

"Then she laid Jimmy across her arm and jounced him up and down two or three times to get the water out of him.

"By the time we got him into the house and took his clothes off, and rubbed him pretty smart, he began to come to.

"After a minute or two he opened his eyes wide open and said: 'Ma, why didn't you git me out?'

"Then we all laughed; we couldn't help it, he was so spunky about it.

"And that was the end of pigs in Mill Creek until one time when the spring rains flooded it so that it broke through the dams and swept away whole villages."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JUNE 13. 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column 1 year $80
½ " 1 " 40
¼ " 1 " 20
⅛ " 1 " 20
" ½ " 10
" ¼ " 6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cent per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor,
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer,
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction,
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette.

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

CRAFT will now pray louder and oftener than before.

A KANSAS speculator has bought a million acres of land in Louisiana.

ON the 8th inst, a heavy snow storm prevailed throughout colorado.

OHIO will hold five political state conventions this year. She is to be pitied.

EDITOR WALDO, of the Rising Sun Recorder, has been excurting in the far West.

AN attempt is being made in the city of Georgetown to build a street railroad.

CHATTANOOGA is going to have a rip-roaring, star-spangled banner 4th of July celebration.

IT takes a great deal of doctoring to give Knott's nomination an appearance of fairness.

FRANKFORT is making an attempt to cut off the front door supply of whisky and beer on Sunday.

THE New York police a few days ago seized six small boxes containing fifteen hundred slungshots.

JOHN SHERMAN had only to say the word and he would have been the nominee of the Ohio republicans for governor.

LOUISVILLE sent a committee to invite the President and his cabinet to attend the Southern exposition to be held at that place.

GOVERNOR BLACKBURN says that not a drop of liquor of any kind has passed his lips since he has been Governor. Glad to hear it Governor.

THE races are in progress at the Latonia course this week, having commenced last Saturday. Some of the best steppers in the country will "go" there this week.

LAST year there were 85 deaths in the Anchorage Asylum—77 white and 8 colored. During the year ending October 31, 1882, one hundred and seventy three patients were received.

WIGGINS is out prophecying again, and he designates the 20th of next month as the hottest day of the season. History does not teach that the said Wiggins is a success as a weather prophet.

WE have before us Hon. L. C. Norman's annual report as Commissioner of the Insurance Bureau. It is a well gotten up book, and contains much information on insurance matters. Mr. Norman takes great pains in compiling his reports.

DEMOCRATS who have fought corruption and trickery all their lives, do not rest easy under the fraud perpetrated at Louisville; and a few more such conventions will reduce the democratic majority in Kentucky to uncomfortably small figures. Let us have no more conventions like that run by Isaac Caldwell & Co.

JUDGE HINES delivered the opinion of the Court of Appeals, last Saturday, affirming the judgment of the lower court fixing Craft's punishment at death. It now only remains for the governor to appoint the day for the execution, unless he concludes to commute the sentence, which is hardly probable. All eastern Kentucky will endorse the action of the higher court and rejoice in the final vindication of the law, as will the remainder of the state.

FLORIDA AS IT IS.

There has been such a wide spread and such a contagious mania for emigration from our grand old Commonwealth to other states, for the past ten years, that it seems that some discussion of the advantages and disadvantages of the state favored by our emigrants is peculiarly apt at this time.

In a long list of exchanges, there is hardly a paper but contains a letter from some other state, showing the advantages of climate and crops in such bright colors, that the farmers of our own state are blinded to the disadvantages. When a man has a farm of moderate productiveness only, and has, in the bargain, fallen short in a crop or two, he very naturally wishes to go to some place where the land is rich, crops certain and the prices low. Such places he hears about from residents of other states, Kansas, Missouri, California, and, of late, Florida. Of Florida, I wish to put before the readers of this paper, both sides—the good and the bad.

Florida recommends itself to those who are in search of health; for parts of the state, along the sea coast, from Jacksonsville to the lower part of Orange county, about 200 miles, are remarkably healthy, and especially to those who have lung or bronchial trouble. Here, in what is called the "Osage belt," are united a moderately low temperature, never ranging below 20 degrees above zero, nor above 95 degrees, with a soft, mild, atmosphere, that is a great contrast to our blustering, rainy, raw days, which carry regular northern blizzards far into what ought to be summer. Florida is unlike our state in respect to climate. Here we may expect, with some certainty, the same rains, the same drought, the same succession of crops, good or bad, all over the state; but, in Florida, while parts of the state are enjoying the weather, and (supposable) plenty of Paradise, there are other portions where all the plagues seem to fall at once. Fevers of all kinds, insects, and destruction follow each other, till the settlers of those portions of the state would be glad to exchange for a few acres of stony land among the hills of Boone county. The greatest attraction of the state is orange culture; and it is certainly allaring to a poor man, to read of orange land at from $5 to $25 per acre, and the average net gain on an acre of orange trees $700, when he may have hard work to clear $700 on a good sized farm.

The statistics of orange culture are astonishing. In this orange belt of which I have spoken, lie large tracts of land, for sale at the low price of $20 or $25 an acre. The trees are planted from 50 to 75 per acre. The average yield of a tree in good bearing order is from 800 to 1.000 oranges. These sell from $1 to $2 50 per 100. An orange farm rarely contains more than ten acres of land, and with even this amount many men make fortunes. It seems almost like magic, to think of such a sum as $1,000 being made off of one acre of oranges, 10 acres of land, yet it is done all the time.

In addition to oranges, most other tropical fruit grows there. Grape culture is being introduced with success, and silk-growing is an established industry. All these sources of wealth are pleasant to think about, but there are the same risks to run in crops of this kind as in a crop of wheat or corn.

The orange tree needs the most laborious care. It needs the incessant use of fertilizers, which you see advertised in every Florida paper. With the same care that orange growers put on their groves, the poorest spot in Boone county could be made yield a paying crop. The crop is as liable to failure as any other crop, from frost or an excessively rainy season, and the oranges, even when ripened and picked, are often a dead loss from careless packing, or a rascally assignee in the North. Still, the old adage: "Figures won't lie," can be applied here. But in opposition to all this, there are many parts of the state that are not desirable at all. Although the St. Johns river is one of the most beautiful in the world, the scenery wild and beautiful beyond description, fevers lurk along its banks, ready to seize upon the system of all who are not hardened to the climate. Out in the sandy desert portion of the state, insects are a perfect curse. It puzzles you to know what they live one, but one is forced to the conclusion that the fleas and mosquitoes exist in a semi comatose state, like bears in winter, during the time that passes between the visits of tourists, or unlucky northerners in search of cheap land.

It is a land of plenty and poverty; a land where free schools and churches are in abundance, but where the most dreadful ignorance prevails among the class of people, who are too poor to take advantage of even free schools.

To a person who has been accustomed to the latitude, Florida is as bad as a spell of sickness, for no one can escape losing his energy in a place where general sleepiness prevails. The people do not seem to enjoy any social advantages except during their short winter; for all the rest of the time they are occupied in an ineffectual attempt to keep awake and keep cool.

I have given a statement of both sides of the question, and when both are weighed, it seems to me as if the balance will be in favor of staying in Kentucky, and adopting some of the new ideas of making a farm productive, instead of going to a new state, to engage in a new business, and run the risk of a failure in a strange land.

Truly Yours, ***.

An Incident of the War.

During the rebellion, Gen. Buckner, late unsuccessful candidate for the democratic nomination of Kentucky, was in command of several thousand rebel soldiers in Texas, and had a large number of Union soldiers as prisoners during his stay there. His own men had not written home for many months, and were anxious to send letters, but it was not an easy matter to have them sent through the Federal lines to New Orleans. One day Gen. Buckner told his men that if any of them wanted to write home to do so at once. About three thousand letters was written and sent to Gen. Buckner's tent. The General then went to one of the prisoners and asked him if he would not undertake the journey in carrying the big batch of letters to New Orleans and mail them. The Federal prisoner replied in the affirmative and thereupon his entire his entire body from his neck to his feet was covered with the letters, and after being handed a roll of greenbacks by Gen. Buckner with which to buy postage stamps, the prisoner started through the country for the Crescent City. He arrived there in ten days afterward, bought the stamps and mailed the letters. While Gen. Buckner was in Frankfort recently, that same prisoner walked up to him on the street and said: "General Buckner, I am delighted to see you. Don't you know me?" Grasping the ex-Union soldier by the hand, he held it for fully two minutes. He expressed his delight at meeting him and thanked him heartily for the favor he had done him and his men. The Union soldier then told him all about the trip to New Orleans, the difficulties he had getting there, and added that he was "licking stamps every day and night for three weeks, but mailed all the letters and had fifty dollars left." As the two men parted Gen. Buckner assured his adversary in arms that if elected governor he would do something for him.--Ex.

TILDEN and Hendricks are having a boom in New York for the presidential ticket in 1884. The extent of Tilden's infirmatives are the topic of discussion again.

IN Grant county, near Eagle Mills, John Wills Green was shot and killed by Newton Jumps, last Saurday. The shooting and killing grew out of an old land controversy.

THE revenue receipts in Collector Finnell's district for the month of amounted to $418,502 50. The total collections since Gen. Finnell took charge of the district foot up $8,038,-682.

LEXINGTON'S city council has struck a streak of liberality, and order a school-house erected for the use of the colored folks. The building is not to exceed, in cost, three thousand dollars.

THE Auditor has refused to pay Governor Blackburn's colonels who escorted him to Nashville week before last. The Auditor does not believe in the Governor's foolish extravagance, when it comes off the taxpayers.

THE Enterprise says that Reuben Fletcher, of Lee conuty, has twenty children, of whom seventeen are boys and three girls, all by one wife, who is yet a stout, vigorous woman. The youngest of this brood is sixteen years old.

ANOTHER big racket is on among the colonels acting as aides to Governor Blackburn in his recent visit to the Nashville prize drills. The colonels did not feel content with the glory which the occasion showered on them but wanted to be paid for their extraordinary services. The Auditor of State refuses to regard the claim for pay, and there is much cussing.—Transcript.

—A "Bodiless Woman" troupe took in Glasgow two nights before it was discovered to be a fraud.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics. Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

STATE NEWS.

—Tobacco-plant stealing is popular in Barren.

—Measles have caused a dozen deaths in Cumberland county.

—A storm swept through Union county, demolishing barns and fences and destroying 250,000 feet of fine timber.

—The Mt. Sterling Sentinel says A. J. Ringo, who was wounded in the assault upon the jail May 24, is rapidly recovering.

—A grand barbecue will be given July 4, by the people of Richmond and Madison county, in honor of the Kentucky railroad extension, which will be completed July 1st.

—Scarcely any attention was paid to the election of School Trustees in Barren county. Excitement over the Legislative race swallowed up the interest in minor elections, and in some school districts the polls were not opened.

—Glasgow Times: There is a prospect that Kentucky waters will soon be teeming with the choisest varieties of piscatorial life. Three hundred thousand shad are this week to be put in Green river at Montordville, and 300,000 more in Barren river at Bowling Green.

—Mrs. Ed Green, who lived near Flippin, Monroe county, was struck by lightning and instantly killed a few days since. She was standing, says the Glasgow Times, in the middle of the floor when a bolt of lightning struck the house, setting it on fire, tearing it up badly, hurling one of the doors fifty yards, and striking the unfortunate lady dead in her tracks. Every bone in her body was broken.

NOTICE.

Know all men by this notice: That Elzy Garrison, H. A. Hicks, B. L. Rice, C. C. Talbott, Wallace Garrison, John S. Mason and T. A. Huey, under the name and style of the Richwood and Big Bone Turnpike Co., have associated themselves together to contract and operate a turnpike road, beginning at its intersection with the Union and Beaver Lick turnpike, just southeast of Dr. H. C. Lassing's residence, in Boone county, Kentucky, and running thence in a general westwardly direction along an established and surveyed route, in a main line to Elzy Garrison's gate, and consisting of said main line and a branch turnpike, beginning at Robert Willis' corner with Richard Howlett, on the old Big Bone and Union dirt road, running in a general northwardly direction until it intersects the general main line at a point S E. of C. T. Rice's old homestead. Said main line and branch road shall be called the Richwood & Big Bone Turnpike.

Big Bone or some point on the road shall be the principal place of business.

The amount of capital stock shall be $10,-000, to be paid in as the work progresses.

Said corporation shall date from June 9, 1883, and continue fifty years.

Its officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer and five directors, all of whom shall be ellected annually on January 1st of each year.

It shall not subject itself, at any time, to a greater liability or indebtedness than $6,000.

Private property shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ELZIE GARRISON, H. A. HICKS, B. L. RICE,
WALLACE GARRISON, JOHN S. MASON,
COURTNEY C. TALBOTT. T. A. HUEY.
June 12, 4t.

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, June. 15, 1883.

G'n Trash and Lugs	$2 50@	$3 00
Common Smokers	3 50	5 00
Colory Smokers	5 00	6 00
Colory Trash	6 50	9 00
Good Br't Trash	10 50	17 00
Fine Br't Trash		none
Fancy Bright Leaf	00
Dark Lugs	4 00	5 00
Common Lugs	5 50	7 00
Colory Lugs	7 50	11 00
Good Stripping Lugs	11 25	14 25
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17	23 00
Common Leaf	6	10 00
Com. Med. Leaf	12 50	21 00
Good Med. Leaf	21	24 25
Good Br't Leaf	24 50	27 00
Fine Br't Leaf	28 00	31 50
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 00
Good Lug Fillers	12 00	14
Fine Lug Fillers	18	23
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 50	21
Good Med. Fil'rs	22	24
Good L'f Fillers	25 00	27 00
Fine Leaf Fillers	27 50	31 00

FOR RENT.

One half mile above Rising Sun, Ind., a very desirable residence of seven rooms, out buildings, pasture, garden and fruit adjoining. Some farming land—or the farm of 130 acres can be rented with it. Good school in town. Enquire by mail, or at the place, Maple Grove. Mrs. D. G. RABB,
Rising Sun, Ind.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
TRADE MARK.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

JNO. S. DORMAN & CO.
—DEALERS IN—
MILLINERY, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS,
Clothing, Carpets, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Trunks, Valises, &c.
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - INDIANA.

A. M. Elliott AND Co,
—DEALERS IN—
Threshers,
Engines,
SAW MILLS, HORSE POWERS, BUCKEYE
Reapers, Mowers and Self-Binders.
South Bend Chilled Plows, Furst & Bradley Steel Plows.
Buggies, Wagons and Farming Implements in General.
Give us a call. Satisfaction guaranteed in every sale. Corner second and Judiciary Streets, Aurora, Indiana. 33-6t

Shoes, Shoes,

Mens' Brogans and Hand-Sewed Stich Downs.
Men's Fine Dress Shoes.
Boys Fine Dress Shoes & Brogans.
Children & Misses Fine Dress Shoes.
Ladies' Fine Dress Shoes a Specialty.
Mens' Lace Plow Shoes at $1,25, $1,50 and $1 75.

The reliable brands of LAWRENCEBURG PATENT and FAMILY FLOUR all ways on hand. W. E. PIPER.

Erlanger Hotel.
JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.
First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK READ!
Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO., Lock Box [illegible] D. C.

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnotte, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Tyle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Como, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beaver—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

AYER'S
Hair Vigor
restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

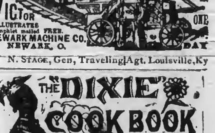
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.
50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.
Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

$1000 REWARD
For any machine hulling and cleaning fit for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR
Double Huller. It has made $100 often in ONE DAY
VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE.
NEWARK MACHINE CO.
NEWARK, O.
W. N. STAGE, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky



THE DIXIE COOK BOOK
Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, THRESHERS SAW-MILLS,
Horse Powers Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles
works of character, great variety, low in price, selling fast, needed everywhere. Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 25 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

Read the new advertisements in this issue.

Vegetation is acquiring the proper color.

Lafe Barlow lost 12 out of 16 hives of bees last winter.

Another inmate of the Poor-house died last Friday.

The Sandford House, has been adorned with a new roof.

Very few of our turfmen have attended the Latonia races so far.

Uncle Church Clore is reported some better, but is yet a very sick man.

O. P. Conner had a fine Alderney cow to choke to death a few days since.

Jonas Delph says he has a turkey hen that has layed five dozen eggs in thirty days. That's business.

E. E. and Richard Utz have sixty odd hives of bees, quite enough to keep one man busy attending them.

Ayer's Hair Vigor restores gray hair to its original color, and makes the hair vigorous and abundant.

John Kirkpatrick & Co., went to Petersburg, last week where they will remodel the Christian church.

Farmers are through replanting corn and the cut worms, it is hoped, are through destroying for the present.

Mr. John H. Smith has [illegible] hauling considerable corn through town the past few days, having paid 50 cents per bushel for it.

The colored folks occupied the Presbyterian church at this place, last Sunday, on which occasion two funeral sermons were preached.

Tobacco plants were thrust into the ground at quite a lively rate after the showers of last week, and at present are looking very nice.

This office is under obligations to the Sons of Temperance, of Petersburg, for tickets to their pic-nic at Parlor Grove on Saturday the 16th inst.

J. O. Huey, who lives in the suburbs of Scattersville, was in town the other day, and reported tobacco planting well advanced in his neighborhood.

Gabriel T Gaines has been particularly unfortunate with his stock the past few weeks, having lost hogs, sheep and cattle to the amount of $75.

Burlington is "styling up" quite extensively this spring, about one-half of the houses have been presented a new coat of paint or whitewash.

Michael Clore, of Bellevue, planted several acres of tobacco, which on account of the ravages of the cut-worms, he had to furrow out and plant over.

William Rue, of Gunpowder, died of typhoid fever, last week. He was a worthy, industrious young gentleman, whose death is deplored by all who knew him.

The sport of fishing seems to posess some particular fascinations for our Circuit Clerk as he generally visits the creek about twice a week, and comes back empty handed.

John Berkshire has added to his fishing outfit an artificial minnow, which it is said will make fish bite as well where they are not as where they are. John will report his success.

C. C. Hughes having become tired of farming, has decided to try and talk lightning to the people of Kenton county. Charlie thinks there is money there if it could only be brought out.

Joe Reed says he is at work getting up an "electric paint", which will do away with the necessity of lightning rods on buildings. Lightning rod men, wear crape for about thirty days.

Mr. F. W. Grant died at 4 p. m., last Sunday, at his residence near Petersburg, after several months intense suffering with cancer. He leaves many friends and relatives to mourn his death.

T. H. Baker, who has charge of a ward in the Central Kentucky Lunatic Asylum at Anchorage, has our thanks for a copy of the Annual Report of that institution for the year ending October 31, 1882.

At the last term of the Boone Circuit Court, Alfred Powell was fined $50 for unlawful shooting, and last Friday the Circuit Clerk received the Governor's remitter of one-half the fine. Powell was entitled to a release from all or none of the fine.

Capt. Billy Batterson, Francesville's fat contributor, passed through town, early Monday morning enroute to Jas. Roger's, where he is building chimneys for Mr. R's new house. Billy has the contract for building a vault in the Big Bone cemetery.

C. A. Fowler, while passing ball, the other day, was quite seriously surprised by the boys telling him there was another lightning rod agent in town. Charlie's horse being in readiness, he tarried not to throw again, but sped off like the wind in the direction of Woolper, whether he went to sell lightning rods or to fish, is only conjecture.

DONER'S DAUGHTER.

A Divorced Mother Unexpectedly Arrives from Illinois, and takes her Child from her Husdand.

Last Thursday, about 4 p. m., Mr. Green, a Covington attorney, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Doner, of Illinois, arrived in town, and calling upon the County Judge requested a writ of habeas corpus for the recovery of a little girl, about eight years old, daughter of Mrs. Doner, and who was with her father, a man employed by Jerry Harris, of Walton. The necessary affidavit was made, the writ granted and placed in the hands of deputy sheriff T. W. Finch who started to Walton about dark, returning Friday morning with the child, a blackeyed and very intelligent looking little girl.

The trial of the case was set for two o'clock, before Judge Dills. When the time came the parties were all promptly on hand, the lady being represented by Judge Phelps, of Covington, and Mr. Green, while the father was his own advocate. On the trial it appeared from documentary evidence that the child's mother was divorced from the father, by an Illinois court, last February, and the custody of the child adjudged the mother, who testified that previous to the judgment and pending the trial of the divorce suit, the child's father, against her wish took her and carried her from place to place, and that she had not seen the child since, although she had tried to recover the custody of her. Letters written to Mrs. Doner by strangers at different places in Ohio, telling her where her child was and the manner of care and treatment it was receiving, and which were very uncomplimentary to the father, were read in evidence. The Judge decided that the mother was the proper custodian of the child, and ordered the officer to deliver her to her mother in Covington; and in a short time Mrs. Doner and her daughter, accompanied by T. W. Finch, left for Covington, at which place he delivered the child into her custody, and they started for Bloomington, Illinois, where the mother is engaged as a seamstress, she being a lady who earns her own livelyhood. Mrs. Doner has the appearance of a very nice, intelligent lady, and sought a divorce from her husband on account of his brutal treatment. Before Doner came to this State, she says that he did not stay at anyone place long enough for her to overtake him, and that she saved money from plying her needle to to make the trip here for her child.

Soon after Doner arrived here Friday morning, he got under the influence of liquor, and at one time was in a very uncomfortable position. He attempted to enter the room at the Boone House, where Mrs. Doner and her counsel, Mr. Green, were in consultation, when the lady became very much frightened and Green requested him not to enter the room; but he paid no attention to the request till the attorney drew a pistol and presented it to his head, telling him that if he came any further he would shoot him. The little girl realized that there was trouble, and took several cries during the day, but manifested more love for her mother than her father, and not until told by Mrs. Doner, would she kiss her father good by. Doner declared that he would be in Bloomington, Illinois, by the time they were. So the end may not be yet.

Doner's conduct here gave Mrs. Doner the sympathy of all who saw him or heard of the affair.

Base-ball.

Burlington's base-ball aggregation met the Aurora team at Bellevue baseball park last Saturday. The game was witnessed by a large number of persons—about 200—who happened to go to Bellevue "on business". The score below shows the result, which would be more credit to our local talent were the figures reversed. For an excuse, we don't know whether to say the boys are not use to river water, or that they got sand in their moccasins, or whether they were severally and collectively affected with rheumatism in their joints. One thing is certain, they did not cope with the Hoosiers, and the boys have been very reticent on the subject of base-ball since.

In'ings.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T
Aurora	1	1	3	2	1	0	3	1	4	16
Burl'gton	3	0	1	0	2	0	0	1	1	8

The Speedwell boys went to Petersburg, last Saturday, to ride Dr. Ed's Almonts, and when they returned, some of them had their noses in slings, some had eyes in mourning, and but one had a score while the Almonts had made 15. The boys took their defeat and mishaps good humoredly, and intend standing on the diamond.

Saturday the Taylorport and Bullittsville clubs played a match game on the grounds of the latter, the score standing 35 to 8 in favor of Bullittsville. Dr. Jonas can smile this time.

The Hebron club visited Cleves, O, last Saturday, to play a game of ball with the club of that place, and were defeated in a five inning contest, the score being 7 to 5.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent.

We made a flying trip to Aurora and Lawrenceburg last week. While there we called on several of the business men and they reported a thriving business. You can see the marks of the late flood on the houses, and a great many families are still living in their second story on account of the walls being damp.

Mr. Given, agent for Kassebaum, the tombstone man of Aurora, was in town Tuesday.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mrs. Hyatt and son, of Newport, are the guests of Dr. Grant and wife.

Capt. W. H. Baker, of New Orleans, is the guest of his daughter in Florence, Mrs. Dr. Slater.

Judge Hawes' many friends will be glad to learn that he is again able to walk out on the streets.

Mr. Hubert Nead, of the firm of Swetnam & Nead of Covington, passed through town last Friday.

Uncle John Beall, one of Hebron's oldest and most enterprising men, gave us a flying visit last week.

Mr. Hurschart, who is in the tomb stone business at Lawrenceburg, Ind., was in the county several days last week.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Scattersville.

We have very little to report this week, as times are very dull.

Corn in this vicinity is growing very nice at last, some of it has had the second plowing, while there is a good deal that has never had the plow in it.

That handsome and ever smiling little Dr. J. G. Furnish, passed quite a compliment on our road overseer, or the hands we don't know which, but, we are going to claim it for the hands. He says our roads are the best worked roads that he travels. Thanks to the kind doctor.

Waterloo.

We had a good rain last Wednesday night and the farmers are busy setting tobacco plants.

Gardens have been injured some by the late cold spell.

John G. Cox, O. P. Conner and Jasper Sullivan were elected school trustees in the Locust Grove district.

Mrs. Robert Jones and daughter, of Rising Sun, Ind., were visiting her mother, Mrs. Emily Green, last week.

Mrs. John Kelly, of Indiana, was visiting her sister, Mrs Lucinda Kelly last week

Mr. Jasper Sullivan is building a residence on his farm near here.

Petersburg.

The Aurora brass-band came up and gave Elihu Alden a very nice serenade.

Mr. J. M. Thomasson and wife, are home on a two months visit.

Charley Schramm says he thinks he will accept the good advice that was given him in last week's paper.

Base-ball is all you can hear now.

Jack Smith and Busby, of Aurora, had a a little set to here Tuesday night. No eyes black.

Miss Ella McWethy will leave for Owensboro next week.

Mr. Tom Stewart, of Switzerland county, was here shaking hands with his many friends last week.

Boone division No. 115 Sons of Temperance will give their second annual picnic at Parlor Grove, Saturday, June 16, 1883. The Str. Minnie No. 2 has been secured for the occasion and will leave Aurora at 7:30 a. m. Good music furnished.

S. C. Buchanan has an awning in front of his drug store. Improvements show that Sam is doing a good business.

Bullittsville.

The farmers ploweth, and the corn groweth. Cherries are ripe, the little boy is glad and the big boy not sad.

As yet nothing has been seen of the colorado bug. The potato crop is a promising one, if as good in potato growing sections generally as here, we predict a low market price.

This community is one noted for its hospitality. Often the dining tables are overburdened with delicate viands, as was instanced a few days since, when a neighborly visit was being made the table on which the princely dinner was being served literally gave away, much to the loss of the hostess, reducing to atoms the costly tableware.

The County Grange meets here next Friday. The State Master and Lecturer are expected. Come out, patrons, and bring your baskets, as an all day meeting will be held.

There will be a basket meeting next Sunday at the Christian church.

The bridge on the Burlington road between the pike and school-house is in a dangerous condition. The proper authorities should see that it has needed repairs.

W. J. Rice was visited by his mother and sister Sunday and Monday.

Wilson Gaines, who went west a few weeks ago, has anchored on a farm for a couple of months, at least, in Edgar Co., Ill.

Jos. D. Graves and John W. Graves, former citizens of this county, but now of Jessamine, have been visiting relatives here. Joe returned home Saturday; John leaves Wednesday for Louisville, where he will attend the State Convention of teachers which meets in that place.

John S. Gaines entertained a few of his friends quite royally Saturday evening.

Miss Florence Graddy is at home...... Charley Baisly is happy. Why shouldn't he be? It is a fine young boy......Thomas Graves and Charley Duncan have taken up their abode in Saline county, Mo.

Francesville.

On last Wednesday morning while Mr. and Mrs. Hall, living near this place, were out in the field at work, their little son aged nine years, got possession of a pistol and accidently shot his little sister, aged nine, the ball passing through the fleshy part of her arm and into her body inflicting an ugly and very dangerous wound.

We feel highly complimented by your very worthy reporter from Florence. We always have felt that we would eventually aspire to something great and good, but never had entertained an idea that we would make a step-mother. We fear that at our advanced age, we will never fill that honored position, but, if your reporter is an old maid and will call us aunt we will be satisfied and think our cup of bliss full to overflowing.

Next Saturday our school trustees meet for the purpose of determining what color they will have our school-house whitewashed.

The colored fraternity to the number of a dozen, of this place engaged the services of Mr. Warner, the Hebron mail carrier, and his bus, and attended the funeral of Spencer Aylor, recently deceased, at Burlington, last Sunday.

Billy Hays has made quite an improvement on his premises in the way of a new yard fence.

Preparations are being made by our citizens, and our hotels are being thoroughly renovated for the accommodation of guests, of the Sunday-school convention to be held here in July. Come one, come all.

Tobacco planting is pretty well through in this neighborhood. A large quantity has been planted.

Mr. John R. Smith is putting up the largest barn in the county it being 98 feet long 52 feet wide and 20 feet to the square. Who can beat this?

The accomplished Miss Anna Henry, of Bullittsville, was the guest of Miss Nellie Graham of this place, a few days last week.

Mrs. Ann Cave was visiting friends in this place last week.

Mrs. Batterson and Mrs. Ann Graham contemplate a trip to Florida in a short time.

Florence.

Strange to say there is not a rat in this region; but it looks like the mice, cut worms and English sparrows will take this country.

Joe Lail got after Geo. Utz, (cold.) the other day with a black snake whip. Geo. got up and got. He don't like black snakes.

A fishing party of ladies and gentlemen from the Florence X-Roads spent the day at Silver Lake recently. What luck, Garnett?

The Sunday beer gardens around the suburbs of Florence are in full blast. Take any of the elevations. The Bald Hornet line will lead you direct.

Charley Lodge put the finishing touch on the Erlanger depot, which gives it a cozy appearance.

For convenience sake we have planted some Mubley pumkin seed close to the C. S. R. R., in the event that they grow so large we can not load them in a wagon, we can ship them by rail.

There was a still born lamb dropped on the farm of Cable Rice, this spring, that had all the appearance of a bull dog. Barnum or Frank Sayre ought to have been notified of the fact.

Uncle Pat's bees swarmed the other day, and through sympathy for Uncle Pat the neighbor women went and hived them.

Something that seemed as though it would be a very disasterous fire, originated in one of the upper chambers of Molencamp's castle, the other day. Through the timely arrival of the slop bucket brigade the then raging flames were subdued.

The school election went off without any blood shed.

The old fogie plan of planting corn with a hoe, and chopping wood of mornings to get breakfast with, is still practiced by some people of this vicinity

What has become of Jake Crigler the peanut eater?

Geo. Bedinger, jr's., life railroad apparatus, is one of the greatest inventions of the age. Geo. is very deserving and we wish him success.

Mr. Able Carpenter and wife have postponed their Missouri visit until later in the season.

We were glad to hear of Major Stott's promotion.

That old bachelor up on the Lexington pike, that got caught out in the hail storm has been heard from. He saved his life but lost his button hole bouquet.

Mose says dem wools ish no goot.

A saw and gristmill is greatly needed on the Turkey Foot road, near the High House Mansion.

Joe Divis, of Erlanger, got it smeared all over him the day. He went down to see Jumbo. He saw him in the shape of a big dutchman.

If our recollection serves us there is a great similarity between the years 83 & 16.

The Rev. Buffington is grazing about 40 head of cattle, and will have a hundred acres of grass to cut.

We are pleased to hear that Dr. Joe, the handsome physician, of Burlington, is building up a fine practice—of calling on the ladies.

Blue Grass Lake, Kenton County.

New steel rails ten pounds to the yard heavier, to stand frost, are being laid on this end of the Southern road. The old ones are moved farther south.

Uncle Jack Cain fell out of a wagon, a few days ago, in Covington and was badly hurt.

A familiar grin and a disposition to set 'em up qualifies a man for the Legislature.

One of Abernatha's latest ancedotes is buying a dwelling house and two acres of land from Bedinger, near Erlanger.

Behimer sold a 5-year old, a few days ago, for $175.

Dr. Kirtley has a fine school at Beach Grove, and seems to give satisfaction.

The Boone County Recorder has a fine circulation here, and is perused with great interest.

The Florence dudes with their la-de-dah hats on, look quite flip.

Tobacco planted with cabbage drives away the butterfly that produces the worm

If some clever stock traders like Alf Gaines, &c., would visit this part of Kenton they could learn of quite a number of lambs and cattle for sale, ready for market.

Would like to learn the address of Snowden & Caldwell, of Ohio, temperance lecturers. Ohio and other papers please copy, send address to Boone Co., Recorder.

Freight train wrecks are a frequent occurrence on the Southern road.

Mr. Jacob Rice has returned from Ohio, where he has been visiting his aged and sick mother-in-law, Mrs. House.

A flag station is greatly needed at Rice's crossing. Why don't somebody petition the company?

There is a man living in the north part of Kenton county, who is so ugly that the dogs are afraid to bark at him. If Tilford Sullivan had him he could make a fortune.

Joe Childers was said to be one of the hospital nurses in Camp Chase. A very redeeming quality, Joe.

Telling it very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can, but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it short this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of letter paper."

"Here you are, sir, then, and there are thousands of people here in Bingham, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Guilfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in this city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines usually given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends and customers forgot me, as though I were under ground.

'With the end of my nose and the tip of my toes
Turned up to the roots of the daises,'

My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except death. That is God's truth, and Mr. Mosher, here, knows it.

"I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago. I'm lively as a cricket now, sir and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipaled inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

LOOK HERE!
when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on
Winegardner
He has a large assortment of
Wall Paper!
And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.
Inks, Pens and Stationary
constantly on hand.
Headquaters in Lotton House.

FOR SALE.
Very low, for cash—A quantity of new and second hand honey boxes, glass sides, two and four pounds. Also American and Langstroth bee hives—will sell very cheap, to any one taking the lot.
MRS. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
UMDERTAKERS
—AND—
EMBALMERS,
Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW'
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
108 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
ROUSE.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO THE
Petersburg Drug Store,
Where you can find everything in the Drug line, such as———.
Well call and see and be convinced.
Respectfully, S. C BUCHANAN.

HARNESS & SADDLES,
ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY.(—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in

Saddles. Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.
I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.
Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green,
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. B. Mullen, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.
The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets,
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

OUR GIRLIE.

(The following lines written on a postal card passed through the mail recently:)

I thought I would tell
You the baby is well,
And just in front of me sitting;
With tiny bronze shoes
And little short clothes,
A-watching her grandmother knitting.

With forehead so fair,
And dark brown hair,
And lips like the roses of morning;
With eyes so bright,
With love-lit light,
And cheeks that hint of the dawning.

Her slender hand
Doth hold like a band
The heart of her gray old daddy;
But by and by
I fear, on the sly,
'Twill fall to some other laddie.

From the tip of her nose
To her wee, small toes,
So shapely, soft and pearly,
She can only seem
Like an angel's dream
Embodied in our little girlie.

Her cooing words,
Like the warble of birds,
Are wondrous soft and winning;
Her beautiful smile
I think would beguile
A demon back from sinning.

Her ears, like shells
From ocean's wells,
Just border the silken tresses;
Such is our baby,
The winsome baby,
The sweetest of all sweet Bessies.

On earth or in Heaven
The hand that has given
Shall cover in sin or in sorrow;
And this angel waif,
As the angels safe,
Shall be ours in the endless to-morrow.

SO NEARLY WON!

The carriage was just turning the corner of the drive where the tall evergreens grow thickest, the final shower of rice and the last old satin slipper were falling far behind it, when James Grafton realized for the first time that Lettie was gone indeed, and had left him there alone and unprotected. For him the bright June day seemed suddenly over-clouded, and his own little domestic world strangely empty in spite of the merry chattering groups of bridal guests on his sunny lawn. In another instant the carriage had disappeared; the bridesmaids and their attendant swains turned laughingly away, and sauntered off mostly in couples; for one wedding is very provocative of another, few things being more infectious than love-making.

James Grafton went toward his house with a very grave face (he had been standing on the path that he might watch the carriage to the very last), and on the doorstep he met his two sisters-in-law, Mrs. Charles and Mrs. Harry, both widows, and arrayed in differing shades of iron-gray silk. It was awful to have to face them alone without that good, kind, brave Lettie who had hitherto looked so well after him and his interests, who had always stood between him and the widows. They seemed to come fearfully near to him all at once. Were they going to crush him completely? Would they eat him up and pick his bones? What would they do to him?

James Grafton was a bachelor of forty of there-about. Lettie, his only sister, whom he had a couple of hours ago most unselfishly given away to Colonel Rathbone at the little white church at the foot of the hill, although many years younger than himself had always fought his domestic battles for him and had been quite equal to the task of defending him from any number of aggressive relatives. And James Grafton needed a protector badly, for he was the only man of his family who had ever made any money; while his brothers, after trying hard to ruin him as well as themselves, had died penniless, leaving him thirteen nephews and nieces to care for as well as two widows, whose only jointures were a couple of very different but, to James Grafton, equally objectionable tempers. A heavy burden truly; but he and Lettie had taken it up bravely and cheerfully, and had done very much more than their duty.

But now James Grafton had given Lettie away; she was gone, and the widows were standing on the doorstep saying all sorts of pretty things about the pretty wedding and charming bride. There was a great blank where Lettie had been. Oh, then, surely the widows and the thirteen children could fill it! Everything his friends said brought this thought to James Grafton's mind; but that only made the blank look blanker. Mrs. Charles and Mrs. Harry did not love each other. How could they, being the mothers of two rival clans of children? "That woman" was the term by which the one indicated the other in a general way; but to-day, as each tried to excel the other in doing the honors of James Grafton's very picturesque little house, no one, except the keenest observer, could have told that open war raged permanently between the two smiling ladies who received so graciously the parting congratulations of the wedding guests. James Grafton, however, knew the state of affairs only too well, and as he watched the groups on the lawn thinning, and carriage after carriage driving off, his heart sank down and down, and the blackness of darkness settled upon him.

At length all had departed except the sisters-in-law and their elder children. Mrs. Charles at once began to explore the house which during Lettie's reign she had never been able to do quite to her heart's content; and Mrs. Harry followed her stealthily about, as a detective might watch a suspected thief. As for James Grafton, he groped his melancholy way into his library.

"Ha! what's this?" he exclaimed with sudden joy, as his eyes fell upon a note lying upon his desk. "From Lettie! Dear girl! How thoughtful!" He eagerly tore open the envelope. It already appeared to him as if she had been gone some centuries. The note had been scribbled in desperate haste and excitement, but it brought hope and courage with it. "My dearest old Jim," it ran, "be firm now, or you are lost forever. I see they don't mean to go. They must go, both of them. Keep to our arrangement. Don't yield an inch. You dear lamb, how I grieve to leave you so defenseless! If you value my peace of mind, speak to Eunice Bell tomorrow and know your fate. She likes you; I am sure of it. I am fond of her; so are you. Perhaps you think you are not; but mind what I tell you—you are. How happy I should be if I could only feel you were in good hands. Believe me, dear, she is a most sweet thing. With fondest love, your own Lettie." James Grafton had always had a fair and rather delicate complexion. It was not much the worse for wear. It turned a vivid scarlet as he read the last part of his sister's note.

"How on earth could she have guessed? What have I said or done to suggest such an idea? 'Believe me dear, she is a most sweet thing.' I knew that well enough without Lettie's telling me. 'I'm fond of her; so are you.'" And in spite of having lost a first love "whom the angels call Lenore," or some other delicious name, James Grafton, this bachelor of forty years, sighed with almost youthful fervor for his second. "'She likes you; I am sure of it.' Aye, there's the rub! 'Likes—likes—likes me,'" he repeated, "but perhaps still loves some one on the other side of the world. Does she? Why shouldn't I know?"

He read Lettie's note through again; it was singularly inspiring; never before had the case been put before him so clearly, never had he dared, even in his inmost thoughts, to put it so clearly to himself. He opened his eyes widely.

"Have I been a fool, I wonder? I must have been or I should have—. But here he was roughly interrupted. Mrs. Charles's girls and Mrs. Harry's boys, who always had the greatest contempt for each other, had come to blows, and now burst into the library crying and sobbing, and making the house resound with their clamorous demands for instant justice. The mothers, who had been harrying each other until frail human nature could stand it no longer, rushed to the rescue. The noise became terrific. Mrs. Charles demanded the immediate expulsion of "that woman and her ill-mannered children." Mrs. Harry returned the compliment with vigor. James Grafton, unused to such scenes, fled in dismay. They followed him to the shrubbery, and when they had driven him thence they tracked him to the poultry-yard, where, rendered desperate by sheer despair, he turned upon them and declared he would not re-enter the house until both had left it. There was something so resolute in the way in which he sat down on some logs by the pump, as if he would stay there forever sooner than yield, that, knowing further resistance was useless, the widows departed. For many hours afterward James Grafton felt that he was the greatest brute in the world. He was, as regarded women and children, a most tender-hearted creature. He hated himself for his harshness; it made him feel degraded and unworthy even to woo so sweet a being as Eunice Bell. It was far in the next day before his self-respect returned.

James Grafton's house was pleasantly situated on the slope of a hill, not many miles from London. Eunice Bell lived with a married sister in Tuliptree-lane, within an easy walk of the bachelor's residence. James Grafton, being on intimate terms with the family, knew, as, indeed, all the neighborhood knew, that about two years ago Miss Bell had been engaged to be married. Then there had been a quarrel, and estrangement. He, the lover, had gone abroad; she—why one day she caught sight of her own face in the looking-glass, and repeated to herself:

> Charlotte, when she saw her lover
> Borne before her on a shutter,
> Like a well-conducted person,
> Went on cutting bread and butter.

Other people said she went on living the same simple, helpful, beautiful life that she always had lived.

There was a difference to her in the aspect of things, doubtless; but if there were she never made others feel it. But now then that broken romance was all over. But there are some events which never recede into the past; they live forever in a perpetual now, although one may agree with one's self to behave as if they had never occurred.

Now, James Grafton had had a broken romance of his own in early life. Gentle Death had taken his "Lenore," leaving a wound in his heart which, although deep, had no bitterness in it. So it had healed very fairly; it was deference to Miss Bell's feelings, not his own, that had kept him silent hitherto, for in truth he was very much in love with her, and had been for some time past. James Grafton had promised to dine in Tulip-tree lane the day after his sister's wedding. He read Lettie's note over three times before he started.

"It's that 'likes' that makes me hesitate," he said to himself, as he began to descend the hillside by a broad highway. "Or perhaps," he ventured to hope presently, "perhaps the 'like' was only Lettie's modest way of putting 'loves.' Lettie was always so modest. Yes, yes, it may be so; but no! it won't do. I'm a fool for thinking so. And yet—why not?" And his thoughts recurred to that other time when he had asked his Lenore what he now wanted to ask Eunice Bell.

That other time—ah! then he had been young, impetuous, madly in love. Then he had had no need to ask himself questions; then he had been only too sure. Now, going down the hill to the house where Eunice Bell lived, he was full of doubts and fears and hesitations. "Yet why not?" he asked himself, as he turned the corner into Tulip-tree lane.

He had grown very fond of that lane. As he turned the well-known corner it was to him as if he were in the presence of a familiar friend and counselor; it was as if he had asked—"Yet why not?" to some one else than himself. And everything in the lane seemed to hush his forebodings, and say with a curious, all-pervading soothingness—"Why doubt?"

Beyond the low hedges there were miles and miles of smiling, undulating English landscape, full of infinite calm and gentleness. How it happened I can not say; but as James Grafton walked soberly through the lane, all hesitation fled away, and his face grew as restful as his heart had suddenly become. And was not that kindly face, with its strange and winning touch of purity, one which a good woman could hardly fail to love? The inevitable young couple who haunt the lane passed him; he did not covet their happiness as he had often done; he was too happy himself. A turn of the road showed him the house where Eunice Bell lived; a large old-fashioned house, dignified but homelike. From the lawn rose a stately cedar. Beside the dark cedar was a great tulip-tree covered with pale blossoms. The voices of children at play reached him from behind the old red wall of the garden. With them came—Ah! what was that? Her voice. James Grafton felt his pulse quicken as he hastened his steps toward the house. In fancy he saw her out there under the tree the guardian of the little group of children. Propitious moment! Now if he could but seize it! And eagerly, as if for the first time in his life, he hurried on to meet his fate—his fate that at that very moment was rushing how surely, how swiftly, to meet him!

While James Grafton had been coming through the lane the object of his thoughts and affections, Eunice Bell, had been sitting, just as he had imagined, and as he had often seen her, within the shadow of the great trees. She was dressed for dinner, in a half-toilet of some soft dove-colored, summer-like fabric. She was ten years younger than James Grafton, although for the last two years she had considered herself distinctly an old maid. Her hair was soft and fair. Her figure tall and slight—a little too slight perhaps. Her face was very placid. At the moment James Grafton had turned into the lane it was grave as well as placid. Presently (it was because she knew by the striking of the church clock that he must be coming nearer?) a thought made her smile. She was thinking of James Grafton then; telling herself she liked him, feeling that somehow or another the idea of being always an old maid was imperceptibly melting. "Is it only friendship just touched with sentiment, or does he really care for me?" The question pleased her but she knew the answer perfectly well; she knew he cared for her. Then she sighed; her lips half curled with scorn, but not scorn for him. No one (except his sister-in-law) could regard James Grafton with anything but profound respect. "Rest, trustfulness and love! Ah! I have sometimes thought them idle words; but to see the smile of this good man is to know"—

She never finished the sentence.

"Auntie! auntie! see, there's Mr. Grafton," a little voice cried gleefully; and Eunice Bell, raising her eyes, which had been fixed on the grass at her feet, saw James Grafton crossing the lawn, and the children all scampering toward him as fast as their chubby legs could carry them. Eunice rose and followed them, laughing gently at the earnestness with which the little things rifled his pockets of those sweets which a many-nephewed-and-nieced man is never without, if he knows his duty and does it.

So they, Eunice and James (after all, forty is not so very great an age)—they were both laughing when they met. It was pleasant, very pleasant—in fact, quite delightful; but, somehow before that gentle domestic laughter, sentiment fled abashed. They were out in the garden one quarter of an hour—one bright, delicious, happy quarter of an hour. They sat side by side under the trees, while the evening sunbeams played upon the softly fluttering leaves. The children prattled about their knees. Their glances met with kind, familiar smiles. Eunice felt a contented restfulness in his presence, and he was conscious that it was so. It was to him a most golden, blissful quarter of an hour. But of course he could not say what he wished before the children, and there was all the beautiful long evening before them, and no need to hurry. Presently, after sunset, he and she would stroll out there, and then—he felt certain now, absolutely sure, that she would answer Yes. As absolutely sure as I am at this minute that had he asked her to be his wife during that happy quarter of an hour she would have accepted him with the frankest smile of perfect trust. The gong sounded for dinner. They sauntered up to the house side by side, the children still playing about their path.

"I always feel whenever I come here that you have all attained to the ideal state of domestic peace and happiness," said James Grafton, thoughtfully. "After the stormy scenes one is sometimes called upon to witness" (he thought of yesterday and the sisters-in-law), "the sweet, calm atmosphere pervading the entire home-life here is most soothing."

"We get on very well together," said Eunice, in her soft, placid voice.

"Your sister and her husband are, I think, the most admirable young couple I ever met. They never wrangle. By the way, I haven't asked how they were. How are they?"

"Oh, as flourishing as usual," returned Eunice, "I wonder they haven't been in the garden. They generally like to be out here during the children's half-hour, as we call the half-hour before dinner."

So saying they entered the house together—that house the bachelor had now for some time held so sacred. They entered by the drawing-room window, which opened on to the lawn. They rather surprised Mrs. Cathcart, the young and lovely wife, diligently reading a novel on the sofa, and her gallant husband apparently absorbed in the evening paper, immediately behind her. They were, in fact, back to back. And this was the more remarkable, as the honeymoon ways of this charming couple had often been a subject of comment among their friends. They were both reading so diligently that Mr. Grafton and Miss Bell had quite time enough to take in the coup d'œil and its meaning before either husband and wife moved. A moment afterward they both started. Cathcart sprang up blithely to meet his guest as if he were intensely relieved by the interruption of a threatening tete-a-tete.

"You are a good fellow to turn up after the awful affair of yesterday. I'm sure I wonder you survived it!" he exclaimed, nearly wrenching the bachelor's hand off.

"I'm sure I wonder how it's been done!" returned Grafton.

"Weddings are such a sell," growled the young married man, as James Grafton turned to the sofa and expressed a fervent hope that his hostess was quite well.

"Dreadful headache; nearly frantic with it!" said Mrs. Cathcart, knitting her pretty brows and rising, pressing one hand to her forehead as she did so.

There had been times, and those distant but a few brief hours ago, when such words and such a movement of pain would have wrung her husband's heart, and his "My darling! what can I do for it?" would have sounded perfectly agonizing; now, the wretched being only turned abruptly to his sister-in-law with, "Come, Eunice; dinner's late enough already," and marched off with her huffily.

"I am sorry you are so unwell. The day has been oppressive. You will be glad to get down to the sea side, won't you?" said James Grafton, as he gave his arm to the too-evidently snubbed wife.

"I shall be glad to get away somewhere. I'm sure I don't care where it is. I want change terribly," said Mrs. Cathcart, with a certain hardness of tone in her voice that her guest had never before observed.

"Do you know, I always admire your dining-room so much," put in the bachelor as they entered the room.

"There's a perfectly hideous glare on it just now," retorted Mrs. Cathcart.

"And your decorations are charming—these trailing bits of briony and wild"—

"Don't agree with you, Grafton. I'm sick of seeing the place littered with weeds," interpolated Cathcart, the young married man, with an angry sniff, as they took their places at table. "John," he exclaimed, turning to the servant, "see that there's something decent out of the conservatory in the centre of the table to-morrow—something at least three feet high, and bushy."

John, as he went about his work with imperturbable gravity, remembered with great inward mirth that only a few days before he had been ordered to remove a tall fern, because, as his master had said, it hid his wife's face. "Rum 'uns, married folks, ain't they?" he remarked to himself. Ah, indeed they are, especially when young, good-looking and very much in love with each other! But their 'rum'-ness, Oh, worthy John, strange as it is, is as nothing to their utter want of consideration for other people's feelings.

What James Grafton and Eunice Bell suffered at that little square dinner I really have not the heart to relate in detail; and, indeed, there is but small need that I should do so, for have not you and I taken a melancholy part in many only too similar scenes? I could, however, forgive the young couple for their conduct during dinner; but what I consider absolutely brutal and unpardonable was that although I feel certain both Captain and Mrs. Cathcart knew that James Grafton would have enjoyed a quiet stroll about the grounds when the sun was setting (for of course he was on a certain subject as easy for them to read as the morning paper), yet these two selfish married creatures, absorbed only in the interesting game of irritating each other, hung on to the two unmarried ones the whole evening with a relentless malice that is perfectly unattainable except by a husband and wife who are, for the time being, not on speaking terms.

After dinner Mrs. Cathcart, by way of pretending she did not care, rattled off her gayest dance-music and sang dozens of her brightest songs; but nothing would please her except to have Eunice sitting quite close to her, turning over the pages. Once, indeed, Miss Bell ventured as far as the window, but she was speedily captured; a sisterly arm being gently but firmly placed round her waist, while a plaintive voice murmured in her ear: "Ah, Eunice! a sister's affection—love—is, after all, the only thing in the world one can really depend upon!"

And while this was going on in the drawing-room Cathcart had effectually button-holed Grafton, and was confiding to him that as his domestic life had suffered an utter collapse he intended—indeed, it was his only chance of saving his life and reason—he intended to exchange with Hutchings, and go to seek glory and, he devoutly hoped, death in South Africa.

But the wretched evening must at last come to an end. About ten o'clock James Grafton again found himself in Tulip-tree lane; but instead of the happy calm of a few hours earlier, he now felt as if he had been assisting at an earthquake. He was quite dazed, and unable to contemplate anything at all except the extraordinary ways of married people, at which he gazed, so to speak, with mingled wonder, terror and anger. Should he ever be able to re-enter that house, that desecrated sanctuary?

It was, however, a sweet, peaceful night; so that by the time he had reached his own door he had so far recovered himself as to see that it was his bounden duty to rescue Eunice Bell from—good Heavens! it was maddening to think what she might be enduring that very minute. He entered his house as soon as he had made up his mind, while taking an extra stroll or two in front of it, that nothing should hinder him from going over to Tulip-tree lane first thing in the morning and taking circumstances firmly in hand.

Now one might perhaps get along fairly if one had merely to deal with the circumstances that properly belong to a case, if it were not for the collateral circumstances that are always lying in ambush on both sides of our path ready to spring out and eat up both us and our case. James Grafton found a letter and a telegram awaiting him. He tore open the telegram; it was from Mrs. Harry. Her youngest child had been suddenly seized with croup. James must come at once and bring a physician with him. James went at once and took a physician with him. On his way down he read the letter which, recognizing Mrs. Charles's only too well-known hand, he had thrust hastily into his pocket. Mrs. Charles wrote to him regularly every day. On one day she called him a good angel, the next a demon; it was the turn for being a demon now. He was so entirely upset by one thing and another that he quite believed what she said, which was not what he did very often. Mrs. Harry's child's croup turned out to be something far less terrible, but duty kept him with her for some days. At length, however, he was again walking down Tulip-tree lane, thinking that this time no domestic complication should prevent his saying his say, when who should he meet but Mr. and Mrs. Cathcart arm in arm, conversing with most lover-like actions on a subject that any one could see was deep, interesting and amusing!

They looked so lover-like that James Grafton almost hesitated to approach them. But Mrs. Cathcart espied him:

"Oh, Mr. Grafton, what do you think has happened?" she asked, laughing in the brightest and most charming way and looking very much excited. "Why—really we're all so delighted about it—why, Eunice's old sweetheart has come back, and it was all a mistake, and he's the finest fellow in the world, and they're going to be married at once, and they're as happy, as happy, as happy"—and she looked at her husband and rapidly nodded her head up and down—"as happy, very nearly, as we are! What do you think of that, Mr. Grafton?"—Whitehall Review.

Beautiful Homes.

Beautiful homes have their influence on our lives. It has been truly stated that "the hope of America is the homes of America." It should be the highest ambition of individuals to contribute what they can toward beautifying the home and elevating the home life of the masses. The pleasanter the surroundings of the children are, the more surely will they grow up to manhood and womanhood with an earnest desire to embody in their lives what is beautiful, good and true. No one can measure the influence of surroundings upon the plastic minds of children. The neatly-kept lawn, with here and there some choice shrubbery; the artistically-arranged groups of flowering plants, with a corresponding amount of in-door attractions in the form of paintings, engravings, etc., each have an influence in rendering home-life more attractive, the rule of force less necessary, for the refining influence exerted upon the minds and hearts of the children makes the earthly home, to some extent, at least, not unlike that to which we are ever hopefully looking forward.—Farm and Fireside.

—It is estimated at the Post-office Department that under the recent change in computing the commissions of fourth-class postmasters, an expenditure of about $600,000 more than that which would have been required under the old law will be necessary to settle the accounts of fourth-class offices up to October 1, when the two-cent postage law goes into operation.

Somebody's Child.

Somebody's child is dying—dying with the flush of hope on his young face, and somebody's mother thinking of the time when that dear face will be hidden where no ray of hope can brighten it—because there was no cure for consumption. Reader, if the child be your neighbor's, take this comforting word to the mother's heart before it is too late. Tell her that consumption is curable; that men are living to-day whom the physicians pronounced incurable, because one lung had been almost destroyed by the disease. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured hundreds; surpasses cod liver oil, hypophosphites, and other medicines in curing this disease. Sold by druggists.

You may print a kiss, but there is no occasion to publish it.

Truth Is Mighty.

When Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., announced that his "Favorite Prescription" would positively cure the many diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women, some doubted, and continued to employ the harsh and caustic local treatment. But the mighty truth gradually became acknowledged. Thousands of ladies employed the "Favorite Prescription" and were speedily cured. By druggists.

The land speculator is always ready to show the sites to his customers.

In the cure of severe coughs, weak lungs, spitting of blood, and the early stages of Consumption, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has astonished the medical faculty. While it cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. By druggists.

The wig is the missing link. It is neither man nor monkey, but a bare boon.—Boston Transcript.

Baltimore, Md.—Rev. W. H. Chapman says: "I deem Brown's Iron Bitters a most valuable tonic for general ill-health."

A Jersey mosquito, like charity, begins to hum.

Should you be a sufferer from dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, or weakness, you can be cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

The office-seeker's flower—Forget-me-not?—N. Y. Advertiser.

Toccoa City, Ga.—Dr. J. P. Newman says: "Brown's Iron Bitters are very popular, and their use always results satisfactorily."

Doctors may be ever so amiable, yet they are constantly guilty of ill treatment.

A Remarkable Cure of Scrofula.

William S. Baker, of Lewis, Vigo County, Ind., writes as follows: My son was taken with scrofula in the hip when only two years old. We tried several physicians but the boy got no relief from their treatment. Noticing your Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Stillingia, or Blood and Liver Syrup, recommended so highly, I bought some of it of you in the year 1862, and continued taking it till the sores finally healed up. He is now twenty-one years of age, and being satisfied that your medicine did him so much good when he used it, we want to try it again in another case, and now write to you to get some more of it.

If a tree were to break a window, what would the window say? Tree-mend-us.

I can safely recommend Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh, cold in the head, etc. Before I have used the first bottle I purchased I find myself cured. At times I could scarcely smell anything and had a headache most of the time. Henry Lilly, Agent for the American Express Co., Grand Haven, Mich. See adv't.

The Italian opera season is at hand. It goes with a crank.—Detroit Free Press.

Have You Cancer!

Or has any relative or friend? If not, be thankful that you can say no; if you have, rejoice that instead of its being an incurable malady, as has been nearly universally held and believed, relief and cure are within reach. The Cancer Hospital at Aurora, Ill., (only forty miles from Chicago), a handsome, commodious structure, beautifully situated, is an institution where the treatment of cancerous and scrofulous diseases is made a specialty. It is presided over by Dr. Pond, who, in addition to being a regular graduate of one of the leading medical colleges of the country, has given years of study to Cancer and kindred affections. That he has been unusually successful is attested by the hundreds of remarkable cures effected since the Institute was established in 1872. His references are the highest, and the testimonials furnished carry absolute conviction. Full particulars, terms, etc., can be had by addressing Dr. F. L. Pond, Aurora, Kane County, Ill.

Inventors' Hand-Book—Free.—Just out. How great fortunes have been made. History of inventions; valuable to all who read and think. Order it by postal card. N. W. Fitzgerald, Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

If you are disturbed by unpleasant dreams, awake unrefreshed and depressed in mind, take half wineglassful of Gastrine before retiring. It never fails to give relief. Sold by druggists.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap

Merits the sanction accorded it by physicians. Hill's Hair Dye, black or brown, 50c.

Bronchitis.—Sudden changes of the weather cause Bronchial troubles. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give relief. Sold only in boxes.

Get Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners for those new boots or shoes before you run them over.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

For sore feet, swollen joints, sprains, corns or bunions, use St. Patrick's Salve.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

If afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Once try Chrollithion Collars and Cuffs and you will wear no other kind. They fit so well and feel so nicely.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, June 8, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 25	@ 3 50
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 70	@ 7 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 60
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 18	@ 1 19
No. 2 winter red	1 15	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	42	@
Rye—No. 2	63½	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 00	@12 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 75	@
Lard—Steam	11¼	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 45	@ 4 25
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 22¼	@ 1 23¼
No. 1 white	1 14	@ 1 16½
Corn—No. 2 mixed	66¼	@ 67½
Oats—mixed	45	@ 47
PORK—Mess	20 00	@20 25
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 12¾	@ 1 13
Corn—No. 2	55¾	@
Oats—No. 2	40⅛	@
Rye	63¾	@
PORK—Mess	18 85	@18 90
LARD—Steam	11-70	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 20¼	@ 1 20¾
Corn—mixed	62⅝	@ 63
Oats—mixed	47	@ 48
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 75	@
Lard—Refined	12½	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9⅝	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 10	@ 1 12
Corn—mixed	54	@
Oats—mixed	43½	@
PORK—Mess	20 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 14	@
CORN	53	@
OATS—mixed	41	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 50
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 6 50

A SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

A New and Most Important Theory on One of the Most Vital Questions of the Day.

If any one had informed Queen Elizabeth in her palmiest days that she could have been seated in her palace in London and conversed with Sir Walter Raleigh in his North Carolina home; receiving a reply from him within an hour's time, she would have declared it to be a miracle. And yet, had they lived in the present day, this apparent miracle would most readily have been witnessed and not seem at all strange or unnatural. The truth is, new principles are coming into existence, and the operation of many laws unknown in the past is being fully understood in the present. In no way does this fact come more forcibly to the mind than in the care and treatment of the human body. Millions of people have died in past ages from some insignificant or easily controlled cause which is thoroughly understood now and readily handled. Consumption during the entire past has been considered an incurable disease. And yet it is demonstrated that it has been and can be cured, even after it has had a long run. Dr. Felix Oswald has just contributed a notable article on this subject to the Popular Science Monthly. He regards consumption as pulmonary scrofula. The impurities of the blood produce a constant irritation in the lungs, thus destroying their delicate tissues and causing death. His theory shows conclusively that consumption is a blood disease. It has its origin primarily in a deranged condition of the kidneys or liver, the only two organs of the body, aside from the lungs, that purify the blood. When the kidneys or liver are diseased they are in a sore or lacerated state which communicates poison to every ounce of blood that passes through them. This poisonous blood circulates through the system and comes to the lungs, where the poison is deposited, causing decomposition in the finely formed cells of the lungs. Any diseased part of the body has contaminating power, and yet the blood, which is the life of the system, is brought into direct contact with these poisoned organs, thus carrying contagion to all parts of the body. Bishop Jesse T. Peck, D. D., LL. D., whose death has been so recently regretted, is reported to have died of pneumonia, which medical authorities affirm indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. It is well known, moreover, that for several years he had been the victim of severe kidney trouble, and the pneumonia which finally terminated his life was only the last result of the previous blood poisoning. The deadly matter which is left in the lungs by the impure blood clogs up and finally chokes the patient. When this is accomplished rapidly it is called pneumonia or quick consumption; when slowly, consumption, but in any event it is the result of impure blood, caused by diseased kidneys and liver.

These are facts of science, and vouched for by all the leading physicians of the day. They show the desirability—nay, the necessity, of keeping these most important organs in perfect condition, not only to insure health, but also to escape death. It has been fully shown, to the satisfaction of nearly every unprejudiced mind, that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is the only known remedy that can cure and keep in health the great blood-purifying organs of the body. It acts directly upon these members, healing all ulcers which may have formed in them and placing them in a condition to purify and not poison the blood. This is no idle statement nor false theory. Mr. W. C. Beach, foreman of the Buffalo, N. Y., Rubber Type Foundry, was given up to die by both physicians and friends. For four years he had a terrible cough, accompanied by night sweats, chills, and all the well known symptoms. He spent a season South and found no relief. He says: "I finally concluded to try Warner's Safe Cure and in three months I gained twenty pounds, recovered my lost energy and my health was fully restored." The list could be prolonged indefinitely but enough has been said to prove to every sufferer from pulmonic troubles, that there is no reason to be discouraged in the least, and that health can be restored.

Redding's Russia Salve has genuine merit, as all who use it will testify. Price 25c. Try it.

Slinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

ARMY OFFICER'S TESTIMONY.

Captain Joseph L. Haydan, residing at No. 924 Fourth Street, South Boston, Mass., formerly Captain in the army, now with the Walworth Manufacturing Company, South Boston, writes, April 28, 1883: "While living in Cambridgeport my wife was afflicted with terrible pains in her back and sides, accompanied with great weakness and loss of appetite. She tried many so-called remedies without avail, growing rapidly worse, when her attention was called to Hunt's Remedy. She purchased a bottle from Lowell's drug store, in Cambridgeport, and after taking the first dose she began to feel easier, she could sleep well, and after continuing its use a short time the severe pains in her back and side entirely disappeared, and she is a well woman. Many of our relatives and friends have used Hunt's Remedy with the most gratifying results. I have recommended it many times, and as many times heard the same story. Hunt's Remedy is all that is claimed for it, and a real blessing to all afflicted with kidney or liver trouble."

MADE A MAN OF HIM.

Mr. C. O. Wheeler, No. 23 Austin Street, Cambridgeport, Mass., makes the following remarkable statement. On April 27, 1883, he writes as follows: "I have been troubled with kidney disease for nearly twenty years. Have suffered at times with terrible pains in my back and limbs. I used many medicines, but found nothing reached my case until I took Hunt's Remedy. I purchased a bottle of A. P. Gilson, 630 Tremont Street, Boston, and before I had used this one bottle I found relief, and continuing its use, my pains and weakness all disappeared, and I feel like a new man, with new life and vigor. Hunt's Remedy did wonders for me, and I have no hesitancy in recommending it to all afflicted with kidney or liver diseases, as I am positive that by its use they will find immediate relief. You may use this letter in any way you choose, so that the people may know of a sure medicine for the care of all diseases of kidneys and liver."

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. Kruse, 2814 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

If and If.

"If you are suffering from poor health 'or languishing on a bed of sickness, 'take cheer, if you are simply ailing, 'or if you feel weak and dispirited, 'without clearly knowing why, Hop 'Bitters will surely cure you."

"If you are a Minister, and have overtaxed 'yourself with your pastoral duties, or a Mother, worn out with care and work, or a man of 'business or laborer weakened by the strain of 'your everyday duties, or a man of letters, 'toiling over your midnight work, Hop Bitters 'will surely strengthen you."

"If you are suffering 'from over eating or 'drinking, any indiscretion or dissipation, or 'are young and growing 'too fast, as is often the 'case."

"Or if you are in the workshop, on the 'farm, at the desk, anywhere, and feel 'that your system needs cleansing, toning, or stimulating, without intoxicating, if you are old, blood thin and impure, pulse feeble, nerves unsteady, 'faculties waning, Hop Bitters is what 'you need to give you new life, health, 'and vigor."

If you are costive or dyspeptic, or suffering from any other of the numerous diseases of the stomach or bowels, it is your own fault if you remain ill.

If you are wasting away with any form of Kidney disease, stop tempting death this moment, and turn for a cure to Hop Bitters.

If you are sick with that terrible sickness Nervousness, you will find a "Balm in Gilead" in Hop Bitters.

If you are a frequenter, or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all countries—malaria, epidemic, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

If you have rough, pimply, or sallow skin, bad breath, Hop Bitters will give you fair skin, rich blood, the sweetest breath, and health. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

That poor, bedridden, invalid wife, sister, mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters costing but a trifle.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters meets the requirements of the rational medical philosophy which at present prevails. It is a perfectly pure vegetable remedy, embracing the three important properties of a preventive, a tonic and an alterative. It fortifies the body against disease, invigorates and revitalizes the torpid stomach and liver, and effects a salutary change in the entire system. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

ELY'S CREAM BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH COLDS IN THE HEAD
HAY FEVER
CATARRHAL DEAFNESS
HEALS SORES IN NASAL PASSAGES
PRICE 50 CTS.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO. OWEGO, N.Y. U.S.A.

will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds; completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.

HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

$1000 REWARD For any machine hulling and cleaning as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR

Double Huller. It has made $100 often in ONE DAY

VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE. NEWARK MACHINE CO. NEWARK, O.

WANTED---AGENTS.

To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 Ontario Street, CLEVELAND, O.

$60 5-TON

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address

JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first-class and fast-selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free. DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati Ohio.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST." ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers (Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

CUT THIS OUT And Return to us, with TEN Cents, and you'll receive by mail, a Golden Box of Goods, that will bring you in more money in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St., New York.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

NEW THING! Sells at sight; no competition. Dealers and Canvassers Wanted. Ask for circular and price-list. PENTZ REIN HOLDER CO., Canton, O.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE Co., 197 Pearl St., New York.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Lay the Axe to the Root

If you would destroy the cankering worm. For any external pain, sore, wound or lameness of man or beast, use only MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. It penetrates all muscle and flesh to the very bone, expelling all inflammation, soreness and pain, and healing the diseased part as no other Liniment ever did or can. So saith the experience of two generations of sufferers, and so will you say when you have tried the "Mustang."

THE SUN EVERYBODY LIKES IT.

THE SUN'S first aim is to be truthful and useful; its second, to write an entertaining history of the times in which we live. It prints, on an average, more than a million copies a week. Its circulation is now larger than ever before. Subscription, Daily (4 pages), by mail, 55c. a month, or $6.50 a year; Sunday (8 pages), $1.20 per year, Weekly (8 pages), $1 per year. I. W. ENGLAND, Publisher, New York City.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 100

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 921

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. Dr. J. Stephens, Lebanon, Ohio.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1883. NUMBER 34.

PITH AND POINT.

—Any young man is made better by a sister's love. It is not necessary to be his own sister.

—Why would a compliment from a rooster be an insult? Because it would be in fowl language.

—Some may write poetry and paint placques, but the world must also have those who will dig and raise potatoes. The potato people are most useful.—N. O. Picayune.

—Twenty-eight years ago the first train passed over the suspension bridge at Niagara. Had it only known enough to run over a hack driver, the anniversary would now be a national holiday. —Burlington Hawkeye.

—A Pittsburgh minister will preach to-morrow on "Why some men do not enjoy their religion." It is probably due to the difficulty always experienced by those who try to enjoy what they haven't got.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

—The farmer who is certain that he can beat an express train at a highway crossing may slip over safely two or three times, but his wife, if a prudent woman, will begin saving up butter and eggs to buy mourning with.—Detroit Free Press.

—An aristocratic papa, on being requested by a rich and vulgar young fellow for permission to marry "one of his girls," gave this rather crushing reply: "Certainly, which one would you prefer, the waitress or the cook?"

—A New Haven woman has given $20,000 for a sanitarian for sick animals. Ah, ha; now Oscar Wilde will have some place to go when he comes back to this country, "play actin'." He will need some place like that after his first night.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—This touching little incident is from the Rochester (N. Y.) Post. One rises from its perusal with mixed feelings: "A beautiful young girl was about to be married to a bachelor seventy years of age, but very rich. On the eve of her marriage she learned that his wealth had been suddenly swept away, leaving him a penniless old man. Did the noble girl desert him in this his hour of trouble? She did indeed, and her parents helped her, too."

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Coal-tar-sugar is the latest discovery. Its chief advantage over the ordinary sugar is its superior sweetness.

—The latest thing claimed in photography is taking pictures on the skin, which are as indelible as the work of the tattoo artist.

—A Baltimore genius has invented a new life-saving apparatus for hotels. It is a valve that closes with a spring, and shuts off the supply of gas as soon as the flame is blown out.

—An idea of the importance that electricity and electric appliances is beginning to assume may be gained from the number of patents granted on these things last year—1,153. Of this number 258 patents were granted on electric lighting, and only two on electric burglar alarms.—Indianapolis Journal.

—The first successful attempt to make steel by the basic process in America, was that at Harrisburg, Pa., recently, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Steel Company. By this process, ores containing a great deal of phosphorus can be used, a great advantage over the Bessemer, as the ore is abundant, cheap, and near the works.—Philadelphia Press.

—M. Pasteur tells the Academy of Sciences at Paris that wonderful results are being obtained in the work of vaccinating live stock as a preventive against disease. During the last year 80,000 sheep, about 4,000 head of cattle and 500 horses have been vaccinated. Before this system was introduced the annual loss from liver-rot in one department was nine per cent., while the loss since then has been reduced over one-half.

—Dr. Clauston, an Edinburgh physician, says: "All acute mental diseases, like most nervous diseases, tend to thinness of body, and therefore all foods and all medicines and all treatments that fatten are good. To my assistants and nurses and patients I preach the gospel of fatness as the great antidote to the exhausting tendencies of the disease we have to treat, and it would be well if all people of nervous constitution would obey this gospel."

—The electricity generated by the machinery in one of the great Harmony Mills at Cohoes, owing to peculiar conditions which are not perfectly understood, has of late so charged the atmosphere as to affect the employes unpleasantly. Various attempts were made without result to remove the nuisance, but at last a network of wires running through the mill has been successfully employed to collect the electricity and conduct it to the ground.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

The Primary School.

The Philadelphia Times very pertinently speaks a good word for the primary school, which nowadays is somewhat to be apt neglected. "There is," it says, "very much talk about the higher education, but it is the lower education that is really important to most of us, and there is no more gratifying evidence of progress than the gradually developed recognition among those who have charge of our public educational system of the essential importance of the primary schools. The work of the primary schools is the foundation and the main structure of all public education. Many children never go beyond this, and in every case it is the first bending of the twig that determines the inclination of the tree." We have been giving attention in Philadelphia to high schools and grammar schools, which are for the few; the primary and secondary schools, which are for the many, have been left too much to chance and to the ignorant blundering of imperfectly educated teachers."

—A Scituate (R. I.) man thought it would be funny to send a bogus marriage notice to the Providence Journal. But since he has found that he is likely to have to pay a good round fine for his joke, his ideas of comic journalism have materially changed.

A Cemetery Without Grass.

The sun was slanting to the west as we turned our steps from the busy city of Pueblo, making our way to the cemetery, which lies a mile to the northward. True, our eyes had grown somewhat accustomed to the dry, sandy waste of country which stretches about this city of Colorado; but we had not thought that the desert could extend within this sacred spot; and the cemetery of the east naturally rose in imagination. Think of that in spring or summer, and a vision of flowers and living green is presented; in autumn, and there is the gorgeous October foliage—even winter seems to lay his hand lightly upon the beauties that surround the quiet sleepers.

The little mounds were in sight at last, but the grass and the flowers did not appear; on the contrary, the earth with the surrounding sand hills presented a scene so dead that all things seemed hopeless of the resurrection morn. The chief object which called us to the quiet spot was a desire to see the grave of a Chinaman. The funeral had taken place some two weeks before. The potter's field contains the grave, which was easily recognizable by the curious array upon it. It was shaped as the others, no stone, but a wooden slab marked the head and foot, the one at the head bore some Chinese characters, while the other told in English the name and date. Over the head was a plate upon which lay a roast chicken, then a bowl of rice, some Joss-sticks stuck in the earth, after these a small cup with a kind of nuts, a bottle half buried in the earth, another small cup, and lastly a plate with the head of a chicken upon it, and another just over the foot containing a kind of meat. Everything bore the marks of fire, and by the side of the grave were the remains of a fire, in which were fragments of Chinese paper and half-burned Jess-sticks. After gazi [illegible] time upon these marks of a very different civilization, we passed to the other portions of "God's acre," and found them scarcely less strange than the one just left.

The desire to, in some way, beautify the last resting place of loved ones seems to be so firmly implanted in the human breast, that if one means fails, another is employed. Though not a tree nor spear of green turf greeted the eyes yet all around were the tokens of loving hands; hands impelled by a motive so sacred, that they will not be gainsayed. Here were the tiny mounds, whose brown earth was strewed with playthings, that the little hands had ceased to grasp. There two graves side by side; the surroundings betokening poverty rather than wealth; the one a glittering mass of blue, the other a gleaming red. Upon nearer approach, the blue and the red proved to be glass in tiny pieces. The hills about Pueblo abound in small stones, which though not valuable are pleasing to the eye. Many of the graves are covered with these stones, nicely fitted together, those of the more wealthy showing that the ornamental stonework had been done by the hands of a skillful workman. The sides only were covered with the bright stones, while upon the flat top was a kind of coarse sand in which the name was often traced with stones. Many were the ways in which the friends of the sleepers had proved their desire to do what they could.

The sun was sinking behind the distant mountains as we turned from the silent, lone place, leaving the sleeping children with their untouched playthings; the wanderer from beyond the sea, with the strange array above him, rich and poor, all resting as peacefully as though beneath the green turf and the leafy shade:

Daily the tides of life go ebbing and flowing beside them,
Thousands of throbbing hearts where theirs are at rest and forever,
Thousands of aching brains where theirs no longer are busy,
Thousands of toiling hands, where theirs have ceased from their labors,
Thousands of weary feet, where theirs have completed their journey!

—Pueblo (Col.) Cor. Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Railway Up Mount Etna.

Mount Etna, which for centuries has been in rivalry with Vesuvius as an active European volcano, is about to put forward an additional ground of competition. The Sicilian mountain is to have its line of railway, but the system adopted will be less simple and probably less dangerous. The traveler who reaches the summit of Vesuvius is dragged up by the easy method of equipoise. He is the lighter balance and so mounts. The projected line along the slope of Mount Etna aims at something which in engineering effort is a little more ambitious. The Italians were so delighted with the simplicity adopted on Vesuvius that their appreciation took the form of an addition to the long list of Neapolitan songs. The refrain "Funiculi, Funicola," is familiar in the streets of Rome and in the canals of Venice. The Sicilian engineers are to construct something more important than a pleasure line. The sides of the highest Italian mountains are cultivated by a large though scattered population. The area includes as many as seventy-five villages, with a population of little less than 400,000 inhabitants. This district, extending up the mountain side to an altitude of over one thousand meters, is planted with oranges, lemons and vines. No soil in Sicily is more rich or productive, and where the vines cease to grow the woods begin stretching up the mountain side to within one hundred meters of the summit. The first object of the new line will be to connect all these neighboring villages which have between them voted the sum necessary for the launching of the venture. Tourists who decide to look into a crater and to arrive at their object by steam-power must still confine themselves to the slope of Vesuvius unless Mount Hecla should have some more practical associations with steam than those geysers which Dr. Johnson begged a traveler who had seen them never again to mention, unless he wishes to make a very poor figure among educated people.—London News.

—In England thin shavings of veneer of different kinds of wood are coming into use as book-covers.

Are Men Growing Older?

From a life table that has just appeared in England, it seems that since 1772 the longevity of the English people has sensibly increased. Whether from the operation of the public health act, or from the general attention to health which produced the act, or from an unobserved change in the ways of the people akin to the development of temperance now going on, or from one of those alterations in the virulence of disease which have repeatedly occurred in history, the mortality from epidemic diseases suddenly declined, till the mean mortality in England, which between 1838-54 had been 22.5 per 1,000, dropped in 1876-80 to 20.8, and is dropping still; the mean death rate of 1881-82 being only 19.3, a total improvement of very nearly one-seventh. This increased longevity is not, it is true, quite equally divided between the sexes. Owing to causes which are still only partially ascertained, but which probably have some relation to the extra liability of women, females benefit most by improved sanitary conditions, and the total progress affected may be broadly stated thus: Men live two years longer than they did thirty years ago, and women three years and four months longer, a difference, we need not say, quite large enough to be perceptible in human life. The very old live longer—that is, of course, they are stronger, less liable to that senile feebleness and degeneracy which struck our ancestors as their natural condition. They decay, of course, and lose powers of all kinds, but they no longer sink into a second childhood, but, except when overworked, die, so to speak, standing, as only heroes used to do. We see men and women, nowadays, over eighty with all their faculties intact, able to converse, to eat well, and to walk, and with a decided and admitted influence on the affairs amidst which they live. This is the more striking, because, the increased longevity of the very aged is not shared by the old. Both in men and women, the chance of survival between fifty-five and seventy has not increased, but has rather, if anything, declined. People of that age do not benefit so much by the reduced power of epidemics; they feel, unless exceptionally strong, the influences, such as sudden falls of temperature, over which science has little power, and they decidedly suffer from the increase of worry and anxiety which, among men and women with grown families, so markedly characterizes modern life. It is, however, in youth and early maturity that the improvement is most marked. The man's chance of life is increased most decidedly between five and thirty-five and the woman's between five and fifty-five.—London Nature.

Carrying a Pistol.

To our mind there is no practice more pernicious in its character than that of carrying concealed weapons upon the person. It is against the laws of the country, a violation of decent society and has no element in it that can be commended. It is to the credit of this city and our citizens that such an outrageous habit is not indulged in now to that extent it was a few years ago, but even now it is too often the case that a man finds it in his heart to buckle a pistol around his waist, or slip it into the hip pocket when he goes out among his fellow men. Civilization is peace; war is a relapse into barbarianism and butchery. The constant carrying of weapons of death in times of peace is not civilization, and the practice bodes no good to any community. It is bad enough to find men mingling with their fellow men with a six shooter in their pockets, ready to be used with deadly effect upon the least occasion for an outburst of temper, but when we find them flourished in crowded cars and indiscriminately shooting among men, women and children, it is high time that the community take steps to abolish the infamous custom. That two of the citizens of Columbus were not buried yesterday is not the fault of the man who held one of these deadly weapons in his hand the previous day. Fortune favored them and the wounds were not fatal, but the principle involved remains the same. We do not know the man who did the shooting, but we do know that any man who carries a pistol habitually upon his person is liable to use it under the least provocation, and the community should see that the law against carrying concealed weapons is enforced to the letter. This young man may regret this, we are told that he does, but regrets would be poor consolation to the friends of those who are the victims of a pistol ball fired in a moment of passion. It should be a lesson that all who engage in this pernicious habit should take to heart and forever abandon it. There is nothing manly, courageous or commendable in it, and to indulge in it is degrading.—Columbus (Ga.) Sun.

Swimming.

While the advantages of a daily bath for the young and vigorous are manifest, it is believed that more harm than good results from the swims of most boys, who indulge in them as an amusement, rather than for cleanliness. Of course they remain in the water as long as it is comfortable for them, coming out, when compelled to do so, cold, the skin shriveled, the teeth chattering, the blood retired from the small vessels of the skin—where about one-half of the body-supply should be found—and sent to the brain and internal organs. It is by no means strange that such suffer from headaches, sickness at the stomach, dizziness—from an over-supply of blood—loss of appetite, general languor, and a host of other ills.

A swimming bath, to be of service, should be taken when the body is in a good state, is not exhausted or fatigued, when not over-heated by such fatigue, not soon after a full meal, and then to be continued not longer than from two to five minutes—according to the circumstances never remaining in long enough to feel permanently chilly, the bath to be succeeded by a glow of warmth. That this may be so, it is best to take along a good crash towel by which the whole surface should be thoroughly rubbed, the body well clad; the whole to be succeeded by a brisk walk.—Dr. Hamsford, in Golden Rule.

Our Young Folks.

SUSIE'S DOLLIES.

"I fink," said little Susie,
"I'll like to go to bed,
For I'm so very s'eepy
I tant hold up my head.

"But first I'll tiss my dollies,
Or else I'm 'fraid they'd say
Their little muvver Susie
Was [illegible] and yunned away."

So tiptoe stepped the darling,
To where, in gentle pride,
Her new French doll was lying—
A doll that laughed and cried.

"Dood-night," she said, "sweet Lucie;
I hope you'll feel at home,
And not be awful sorry
To live with me you've come."

Then Susie passed to Emma,
A child with gypsy face,
And golden ringlets tangled—
A dolly in disgrace.

"You naughty, naughty Emma,
You've broke my heart this day;
I do not like to say it—
You twy for your own way!

"But now I must forgive you,
Or nelse I touldn't s'eep;
Be sure you're dood to-morrow!
Your hair is such a heap."

One more—poor homely Maggie!
A baby made of rags,
With darkly-penciled features,
And fingers stiff as tags.

And Susie in a rapture
Caught up the ugly thing—
"You are the bestest baby,
The sweetest, dearest s'ing."

And in her soft arms cradled,
Held close beside her head,
And snuggled up to Susie,
Poor Maggie went to bed.

—Margaret E. Sangster, in Youth's Companion

"STRAIGHTENING OUT THE FURROWS."

Well, I never saw anything like that Captain Crofts round that old lady in all my life. He's dancing attendance from morning till night, and, sakes alive! if he isn't tying on her sun-bonnet for her. Well, I never! Wonder what 'twould seem like to have my Billy grown up to be as attentive as that? and the voice, half scornful at first, took on a longing, yearning expression, suggestive of tearful eyes, at the mention of "my Billy."

The speaker, Mrs. Bowles, lived in Seaport, usually spoken of as a fishing village, owing to the fact that many fishermen had lived there in years gone by; but the town was an old one, and possessing great natural attractions, and being a suburban town, many fine residences now graced its winding avenues.

About two years before, a weather-beaten, sun-burned man, unmistakably a sailor, had bought a tasteful little cottage near the beach. This he had fitted up, beautified and embellished, until Mrs. Harris declared it to be a "perfect pink of a place."

Over this pretty house Cap'n Sam, as the boys had learned to call the genial man, had installed his white-haired mother as mistress and chief, and a more attentive, loving son, it would appear, had never lived.

In a small barn at the rear of the cottage was kept a fine, steady horse, and a low basket carriage, and every fair day the Captain and his mother "went abroad," as Mrs. Bowles expressed it, on long, pleasant drives.

As we have hinted, Cap'n Sam was a great favorite among the boys of the place. Who else would harness up the sturdy horse into a big wagon, and give them such grand drives upon occasion? Then the great hickory and chestnut trees at the foot of his lot were free for the boys to visit as often as they liked, only they must never damage in any way the fine old branches; but when it came to spinning a yarn, ah, then! who so beguiling, nay, so perfectly bewitching, as the sea-bronzed man.

It had long ago become a subject for harmless bantering among the boys, and rather relished than otherwise by the Captain, that he was gallant and unceasingly attentive to his "sweetheart." "My fair old sweetheart," he had once in their hearing called his mother, and they, of course, lively little wretches that they were, would never forget it.

But one day the boys, quite a little crowd of them, found their old Cap'n Sam on the rocks at the beach. There were breakers that afternoon, and particularly at such times it was a favorite diversion with the seafaring man to sit high on the rocky beach and watch his "second love," the sounding sea.

It was at times like these the boys delighted to find their old friend, and coax him for one of their "heart's delights," which he well knew meant a story of tempestuous seas or foreign lands.

But on this particular afternoon the Captain was brooding somberly, a habit he often had when by himself, and this time he couldn't throw off the mood, even at the approach of the merry boys.

In vain the better reared of them bantered, declaring "he had a jilting, but never mind, they expected to be jilted themselves in time to come;" while the less mannerly Billy Bowles guessed "there'd been a candle lecture at home."

At length, partly emerging from his brown study, the Captain said, soberly: "Boys, do you know what I've been trying to do every day for the last two years?"

Oh, why, for certain they knew all about it, they—the merry youngsters of the town.

"Been a-courtin', chiefly," Jimmy Hollis observed, while Freddie Hollis remarked, "he'd worn himself all out a-pettin' his sweetheart."

That last opinion evidently struck the tender spot, and the boys found that for once Cap'n Sam was in no mood for jokes or banter, and being very quick to see which way the wind blew, the kind sailor a few minutes later addressed to a row of very serious young faces what one boy afterwards termed a "a perfec' brick of a sermon."

"Boys," he said, "I've been trying every day of my life for the last two years to straighten out furrows—and I can't do it!"

One boy turned his head in surprise towards the Captain's neatly-kept place.

"Oh, I don't mean that kind, lad. I don't mean land furrows," continued the Captain, so soberly that the attention of the boys became breathless as he went on:

"When I was a lad about the age of you boys, I was what they called a 'hard case,' not exactly bad or vicious, but wayward and wild. Well, my dear old mother used to coax, pray and punish—my father was dead, making it all the harder for her, but she never got impatient. How in the world she bore with all my stubborn, vexing ways so patiently will always be to me one of the mysteries in life. I knew it was troubling her, knew it was changing her pretty face, making it look anxious and old. After awhile, tiring of all restraint, I ran away, went off to sea; and a rough time I had of it at first. Still, I liked the water, and liked journeying around from place to place. Then I settled down to business in a foreign land, and soon became prosperous, and now began sending her something beside empty letters. And such beautiful letters as she always wrote me during those years of cruel absence. At length I noticed how longing they grew, longing for the presence of the son who used to try her so; and it awoke a corresponding longing in my own heart to go back to the dear waiting soul.

"So when I could stand it no longer, I came back; and such a welcome, and such a surprise! My mother is not a very old lady, boys, but the first thing I noticed was the whiteness of her hair, and the deep furrows on her brow: and I knew how I had helped bleach that hair to its snowy whiteness, and had drawn those lines in that smooth forehead. And those are the furrows I've been trying to straighten out.

"But last night, while mother sat sleeping in her chair, I sat thinking it all over, and looked to see what progress I had made.

"Her face was very peaceful, and the expression content as possible, but the furrows were still there! I hadn't straightened them out—and—I—never—shall! never!

"When they lay my mother—my fair old sweetheart—in the casket, there will be furrows in her brow; and I think it a wholesome lesson to teach you, that the neglect you offer your parents' counsels now, and the trouble you cause them, will abide my lads, it will abide!"

"But," broke in Freddie Hollis, with great troubled eyes, "I should think if you're so kind and good now, it needn't matter so much!"

"Ah, Freddie, my boy," said the quavery voice of the strong man, "you can not undo the past. You may do much to atone for it, do much to make the rough path smooth, but you can't straighten out the old furrows, my laddies; remember that!"—Christian Weekly.

The Little Grumbler.

Some boys are always complaining, no matter whether they have a dozen tops or a hundred marbles, they are still dissatisfied if any one else has one more than they. Just such a boy was Jimmie. His mamma was often made very sorry, after buying him some pretty toy, by having him say: "I don't like that. Why did you not get me a better one? Frank's mamma got him a nicer one than that."

Upon the day which we are going to tell about, which was Easter, Jimmie's mamma colored some eggs for him; there was a red one, a blue one, a brown one and a purple one.

Thinking to surprise him, mamma hid them until he went out and then she laid them in his crib, covering them with the quilt. When he came in she told him to look and see what was there; instead of being pleased and thanking her he said: "There are only four. Willie's father bought him six; I never have things like other boys."

This so disgusted papa that he shut him up in the closet, saying that he could not come out until he asked mamma to forgive him for his rudeness, and promised never to be bad again.

When the door was closed Jimmie could see nothing, and he had almost made up his mind to do as papa said when the door opened and a little old woman in a blue gown and Quaker bonnet put her head in the closet and said: "Dear me! what a bad papa you must have to shut you up in this way; wouldn't you like to come with me? I would never put you in a closet like this, and will give you all the eggs you want." The little old woman spoke so kindly that Jimmie sprang up, took her hand and went with her.

Upon reaching the street she led him through narrow, crooked streets which seemed full of little boys carrying brown bags, who popped out of doorways and from around corners until there were quite a crowd of them.

Suddenly the old woman turned into a little alley which led into a wide yard with tall houses all about it; here the old woman told him to wait until she came back, and she disappeared through one of the doorways.

As soon as the door closed behind her the little boys with brown bags gathered about him in a circle.

Suddenly the little old woman came to one of the upper windows and clapped her hands.

As soon as she did so each of the boys drew an egg from his bag and threw it at Jimmie. The little boy cried and tried to break through the ring, but whichever way he ran he was met by a boy with an egg who drove him back. The new suit which Aunt Lou had bought him was soon spoiled, and the collar which mamma had ironed herself was all yellow from the eggs.

All this time the little old woman clapped her hands and told the boys to throw harder, crying: "That's what you get for being unkind to mamma. Frank has two more than you, has he? Give him two more, boys," and then she laughed so wildly that Jimmie grew cold with fear. At last he could bear it no longer, and shrieked: "Mamma! Mamma! I'm sorry! I'm sorry! I'll never be bad again!" In another moment he was in mamma's arms, being hugged and kissed as though he was the best boy in the world.

Of course he had fallen asleep and dreamt it all, and there was no little old woman nor boys with brown bags. But it made Jimmie altogether a different boy. He was never heard to complain again, and only the other day he told mamma that if he had known how happy it made him to be good he never would have been bad for a minute.—N. Y. Tribune.

Religious.

NOT FOR THE DEAD.

Not for the dead, O Lord, we weep,
Untroubled is their rest and deep;
For them why should we mourn or sigh?
'Neath quiet graves in peace they lie.
"Thou givest Thy beloved sleep."

For tempted souls, for wand'ring sheep,
For those whose path is rough and steep,
It is for these we mourn and sigh,
For these we lift our voice on high,
Not for the dead.

For all who 'neath sore burdens creep,
Who sow the wind, the whirlwind reap,
Who lonely watch the days go by—
For hearts that bleed while eyes are dry,
For such, O Lord, our tears we keep;
Not for the dead.

—Sunday at Home.

FAITH THE ROOT OF COURAGE.

No quality of mind is held in higher esteem amongst men than moral courage, or that fearlessness of spirit which enables a man to stand firmly at the post of duty whatever perils or oppositions may environ him. It is this quality that makes the true hero whether on the larger or the smaller battle-fields of life. When human character attains this excellence, it rises to its loftiest score, and is sure to win the approval of the good, even if it does not command the homage of the unworthy. But while in the discharge of duty it is courage that sustains the man, what is it that sustains the courage? The answer which the Bible gives, and perhaps the truest and simplest answer that can be given, is faith—strong faith in God. For he who fears God has certainly nothing else to fear, and while God is for him, and he believes that God is with him, who can be against him?

We have only to read the catalogue of Old Testament heroes and martyrs enumerated by St. Paul in the eleventh chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews, to see what place faith holds in the formation of Christian character, and in the achievements of the highest moral courage. The distinguished names there mentioned were not more remarkable for their fearless and triumphant courage in the face of opposition, danger and death itself than they were for their strong unquestioning faith in God, and in all the promises of God. Indeed, it is obvious from the whole record that their faith was the very pillar and groundwork of their courage. It was the faith that both produced and sustained the courage steadfast to the end. Not only were they justified by faith, they wrought by faith. "Through faith they subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of liars, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

We need strong faith, not only as an impelling principle of action when we are required to make great sacrifices and do great works in God's service, but also as a sustaining principle of the soul, to cheer and encourage us in the dark hours of trial, tribulation and death. At least half its office is to support and comfort us under the multiplied temptations, disappointments and disasters of life. The true believer in God has, in this respect, a source of consolation, an antidote against evil, and a well spring of unfailing joy, to which the unbelieving soul is a stranger. And this happiness, this tranquil joy, this perfect peace, will be in all cases according to our faith in God. It is of the nature of a strong faith to inspire the good man's soul with a serene satisfaction amid the fiercest storms of adversity, and a heroic courage in the presence of the most appalling dangers that can ever befall him. The Divine promise is: "I will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Me, because he trusteth in Me."

The life of the apostle Paul, from the day of his conversion until his death of martyrdom, is a signal illustration of this strong, courageous faith in God, and of this inspiring, loving, sustaining faith in Christ. Faith was unquestionably the main-spring of his life, the key-note of his character. It was the impelling principle of all his actions, the sustaining principle of all his sufferings and all his heroic sacrifices. True, all other noble, Christ-like graces and virtues had their place in his remarkable career. But faith was his prominent characteristic. It was his faith that made him the great missionary hero of the Apostolic age. He was undaunted, cheerful and happy amid all his self-denying labors, and under all the dangers and disasters that marked his career on land and water, because his faith in God, and in the coming glory of Christ, never failed him, or even for one moment wavered. What a bright example of cheerful, happy, heroic faith in God is set before us in the graphic account of the manner in which he bore himself during the weary days and nights of that long, perilous voyage in the Adriatic, which at last ended in shipwreck on the Island of Melita! When all other hearts in the vessel were failing for fear, and "all hope that any should be saved were taken away," how he stands erect and calm to the last, saying to his fellow passengers: "Sirs, be of good cheer, for I believe God that it shall be even as it was told me!" He who has already faced so many dangers in the past, and was ere long to face the greatest dangers of the imperial city, was ready for death in whatever form it might overtake him. It had no power to disturb the deep tranquillity of a soul at peace with God, whose unshaken faith rested on the sure Word of God, and whose hope was anchored to that within the vail. Such a courage, such a character, could spring from no deeper root than faith in God.

Nor have the days of such courageous faith in God wholly gone by. All Christian history is full of the triumphs of such faith. In despite of the prevailing skepticism and unbelief of the world, the true church has never lost its faith in God, has never relaxed one jot or tittle of its hold upon the sure word of God. Uncounted multitudes of godly men and of saintly women, in our day, and through all our Evangelical churches, do still put their soul's trust in the God of their salvation, and are living in the daily exercise of that same inspiring faith and hope which shone with such luster in the lives of the inspired apostles. Nor will they be disappointed. That courageous faith which has so often sustained and cheered them through life in every path of duty, of self-denial and of danger will not desert them at the last. It has been good to live by; it will be equally good to die by. Millions have tried it and found it so, both in life and in death. The annals of Christian biography, in our own day, are just as full of the triumphs of faith, both in life and death, as they ever were in former ages. Faith has not lost its office, nor any of its blessed results.

In 1846 that noble man of God, Dr. William J. Armstrong, after a public career of great usefulness in the ministry of Christ, went down in the wreck of the steamer Atlantic during a fearful gale off the coast of Long Island. During a day and night of extreme peril and agitation among his fellow-passengers, he maintained great composure and administered consolation to them to the last. Only a few moments before the final scene, as they crowded around the brave man, he remarked: "I hope we may be allowed, if God will, to reach the shore with our lives; but if not, I have perfect confidence in the wisdom and goodness of Him who doeth all things well." This is but one instance of thousands in which the faith of a life-time has continued strong in death, and enabled its possessor not only to face the last enemy without a fear, but to inspire those around him with a similar courage. How often, even in the case of the young, the shrinking and constitutionally timid, has a true faith triumphed over all fears, and made the soul tranquil, serene and happy in the hour of its departure from all the attractions and all the endearments of an earthly home! Whatever scoffers may say, Christianity has not lost its high vocation amongst men, nor one ray of its sublime glory, when it produces a moral courage grounded on faith in God, which can bear the soul up under the calamities of life, and face the last enemy without a fear.—Chicago Interior.

Choice Extracts.

—There is pleasure in contemplating good; but the greatest pleasure of all is doing good, which comprehends the rest.

—Every laboring man in the Republic can best afford to treat every enemy of the Sabbath as his enemy.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

—How narrow our souls become when absorbed in any present good or ill. It is only the thought of the future that makes them great.

—We have over-abundance of discussion. What avails it the repetition, over and over again of old plans, old recommendations of measures, unless they are practically adopted and carried into effect? What we want is more work and less talk.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

—Be useful.—

Be useful where thou livest, that they may
Both want and wish thy pleasing presence still;
Kindness, good parts, great places, are the way
To compass this. Find out men's wants and will,
And meet them there. All worldly joys go less
To the one joy of doing kindnesses.

—George Herbert.

—He who is godly is both a diamond and a loadstone—a diamond, for the sparkling of his grace, and a loadstone, for his attractive virtue in drawing others to the love of God's precepts; a good man benefits others more than himself. You that are parents, discharge your duty; though you can not impart grace to your children, yet you may impart knowledge. Let your children know the commandments of God. Ye shall teach them your children. You are careful to leave your children a portion; leave the oracles of Heaven with them; instruct them in the law of God. If God spake all these words, you may well speak them over again to your children.—T. Watson.

—If thy vessel be but small in the ocean of this world, if meanness of possessions be thy allotment on earth, forget not those virtues which the great disposer of all bids thee to entertain from thy quality and condition; that is, submission, humility, content of mind, and industry. Content may dwell in all stations. To be low, but above contempt, may be high enough to be happy. But many of low degree may be higher than computed, and some cubits above the common commensuration; for in all states virtue gives qualifications and allowances, which make out defects. Rough diamonds are sometimes mistaken for pebbles, and meanness may be rich in accomplishments, which riches in vain desire.—Sir Thomas Browne.

—The name of Oliver Bennett ought to be long and gratefully remembered in the West. He was a St. Louis merchant, who decided, in 1847, to found and help needy Sabbath-schools, by paying six dollars towards a library, if a school could be got together of not less than five teachers and twenty-five scholars, which would contribute an equal sum. And, if the school should have ten teachers and fifty scholars or more, he would give twelve dollars towards a twenty-four-dollar library. The result was that in twenty years, 3,829 schools were organized in Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, etc., with 19,805 teachers and 111,480 scholars. Think of the good done, and the incitements to Christian activity which this wise merchant thus aroused, by thus investing about twenty thousand dollars for Christ. Who will do likewise?—Golden Rule.

—In the World of Science a physician laments the too frequent habit of drinking strong tea and coffee after a hearty breakfast or dinner. For hard-working persons, if they are not too corpulent, he recommends thick-flake cocoa as a healthful and nutritious drink. "For those who do not want fattening drinks, and who can not drink cocoa, I should say drink hot water at breakfast. In cold weather warm water is by far the best drink at dinner, and in hot weather a draught of warm water is more wholesome and cooling than cold or iced water."

—The Journal de Pharmacie says that a mucilage composed as follows will unite wood, porcelain or glass: Eight and a half ounces of gum arabic in strong solution, twenty grains of solution of alumina dissolved in two-thirds of an ounce of water.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JUNE 20. 1883

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	½ "	40
¼ "	½ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	8

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor.
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer,
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction,
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

NEAL and Craft are in hopes that Burnett's theory about the Ashland tragedy will prove correct.

THE management of the Latonia race course had a very flattering meeting. So much so that the stock is considerably above par.

SEVERAL communications came in on Tuesday, this week, and we were compelled to present them in a very condensed form.

NEAL and Craft have been applied to, to ascertain what amount will secure their services when liberated. They replied, in substance, that they are not in a condition to name the figures.

PETER McGEOCH, the Chicago lard bull, collapsed last Saturday. It is estimated that two million dollars are involved in the failure, and many smaller firms are considerably shaken by it.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $6 20@6 30; fair to good packers, at $5 90@6 25; fair to good light, $6 10@6 25; common, $5 35@5 85; culls, $4 35@5 30; stock hogs, $5 35@6 00.

IT is said that one of the candidates for United States Senator in this state is furnishing candidates for the legislature money with which to make the canvass, in consideration of which they are to support him for Senator. If the next general assembly of Kentucky is to be controlled by that class of men, it will be a shame and disgrace.

A TERRIBLE disaster involving the death of about 200 children occurred at Sunderland, England, on the 18th inst. A school entertainment was going on in Victoria Hall, and in one of the gallerys were about 1,200 children, who started down the steps, when one of them fell in attempting to pass through the door which permitted but one to pass at a time. The mass of children continued to press forward with the result above stated.

SENATOR BECK says: "The majority of the people of the United States are tired of what you might call Republican bossism, but don't think yet that we can be trusted. We have a majority of the next congress, and the result will depend upon what we do. If we organize and go honestly to work to legislate for the good of the whole country, put down monopolies without disturbing industry, carry a genuine reform of the civil service into effect and keep clear of the idea that power is to be used only to reward political friends, we will elect the president."

SOON after the Ashland tragedy, Alf Burnett promulgated the theory that the horrible crime was the work of three negroes, and that Neal, Craft and Ellis were innocent. Burnett resides in West Virginia, and he has been at work on his theory ever since the three above named were arrested, and last week he caused the arrest of two out of the three negroes he has charged with the crime. If he has the evidence against them that he claims, it looks very much like he has captured the real criminals. At Ashland the people have no faith, whatever, in Burnett's theory, and they were so indignant when he arrived there with one of his prisoners, that they threatened to mob him. There will be ample time before any further steps are taken in Craft's case, to investigate the charge as against the negroes.

GUILTY.

John Barnett and five of His Confederates found Guilty of Murder in the Space of ten Minutes.

[Special to the Courier-Journal.]

MT. STERLING, June 13.—The most remarkable case in the annals of Kentucky crime is the Barnett case which has just been tried here. It is obscure in its beginning, intricate in its progress, wonderful in its events and awful in its denouncement. The details of the various crimes which make the history of this trial of John L. Barnett so startling and so awful have been given at various times in the Courier-Journal. At eleven o'clock this morning Jim Barnett, by his attorneys, came into court and

WITHDREW HIS PLEA

of not guilty of the murder of Vaughan Hilton. The scene was extraordinary. The court-room was crowded with anxious, expectant people. Men and women who live forty miles away were here to attend the trial of a man who has made Menifee county red with blood and maintained a feud as fierce and as deadly as the historical feuds of the Middle Ages. The interest in this place was intense, because of the mob which came here three weeks ago, attacked the jail and attempted to take out the prisoners and hang them, consequently when Judge Holt, for the defense, arose this morning and announced that the leader of the most desperate bands of banditts that ever disgraced Kentucky withdrew his plea of not guilty, every upturned face became a picture of astonishment, and it went around that such a thing has never occurred in Kentucky before. In order to show the enormity of the crime, the prosecution introduced Mrs. Susan Helton as a witness. Mrs. Helton came in. She is a large, handsome woman, with coal-black eyes, black hair, rosy cheeks and a full habit. She gave a detail account of the killing of her husband, Vaughan Helton, on May 12, in such a manner as to carry conviction with it and cause the cheeks of every man to blanch with

THE HORRIBLE RECITAL OF THE CRIME

of her brother, who led a band of conspirators to kill her husband. She said that Mark Miller, Nelson Wadkins and Elliott Wadkins came to her house, took supper and went to bed to stay all night. She disposed of them as best she could in a small log cabin of two rooms. At midnight others came, and, after being refused admittance, said that if they were not allowed to come in peaceably they would come in in a damned rough manner. Her husband seized his shot-gun, from which the caps had been taken by the traitors inside. Just as he put others on the door burst open and in came three masked men. The plucky woman grabbed the first man and held his right hand, but he soon swung her violently away and the shooting begun. By the time she recovered her feet her husband lay back on the bed dead. He had fallen upon the little two-year-old child that lay upon the bed.

She had not been able to see much of the murderers, in consequence of the scuffle with the man she recognized as Newton Yarber. Hence she did not know who the other two men were.

As she left the stand Laura Riley, an illiterate mountain girl, took her place and told a simple story of the murder and of the actions in it, which deepened the impression of its cold-blooded horror. She had been sleeping in the foot of the bed with Helton and wife and when the door was back, she stood up in bed and leaned over the door so as to command a view within and without. She recognized two of the men of the inside, Newton Yarber and Sol Becroft, who did the shooting, and three on the outside, John Barnett, John Gibbs and John Becroft, who stood with their pistols drawn ready to assist in the bloody tragedy.

The defense was not able to attack any of the testimony given by either of these witnesses and the questions served only to bring the facts out a little fuller. Con. Helton, the ten-year-old son of Helton, next took the stand and stated that he

RECOGNIZED HIS UNCLE

John Barnett, John Gibbs, and John Becroft outside with pistols in their hands.

Here the prosecution rested. and Judge Riddle instructed the jury that as the defendant had entered the plea of guilty to the charge of murder. the jury will return a verdict of guilty, and fix his punishment at imprisonment for life or at death by hanging.

Then the case of the confederates, John Becroft, Sol Becroft, Elliott Wadkins, John Gibbs and Newton Yarber was called and disposed of by the same jury without further evidence or eloquence. The jury was out ten minutes to sentence these men to the penitentiary for life. Thus six men were sentenced to the penitentiary by the same jury within an hour's time. Such a trial as this is unprecedented in almost every respect. It is entirely unlike anything that ever occurred in Kentucky before.

MISSOURI LETTER.

SMITHTON, MO., June 11, 1883.
To the Editors of the Recorder:

According to arrangments we left home Thursday morning, the 7th inst., and took the 8 o'clock train on the O. & M., and checked ourselves for St. Louis. We (my wife and I) enjoyed our trip hugely.

Passing down the Ohio river we viewed with delight the beautifully improved hillsides, both nature and art commingling. We passed through Lawrenceburg, and with almost lightning speed, through Aurora, taking, as best we could, a peep across the river at old Pate.

We arrived in St. Louis on time, rested one hour and a half, and took the west bound train on the Missouri Pacific for Sedalia, where we again found ourselves on time. After taking refreshments and resting awhile, we started to see my two sons, Eli and Everett, who live seven miles east of Sedalia, near Smithton, a railroad town of 300 inhabitants. We arrived at Everett's in time for dinner, and found him and his family well and doing well. We are now at Eli's, and his family are well. My sons have splendid prospects for a good crop, their wheat being the best I have seen, and I think it will make fifteen bushels or over to the acre. They have plowed their corn the third time, and, on an average, it is knee high. Oats look splendid. They also have 8 or 10 acres of potatoes, as fine as I ever saw, and they are good size for eating, (as I have tried them. Yum, yum!) They have 1,500 or 2,000 bushels of old corn on hand, a fine lot of thoroughbred hogs in which they are doing a splendid business, having a ready sale for their pigs at two months old at $10 ahead. They also have a fine lot of merino sheep, which I am told are the most profitable sheep in this section of country. The sheep men here say that the merino shears more pounds of wool per head, and are a healthier sheep than anyother they can handle. A merino ram generally shears from 18 to 36 pounds of wool.

Sedalia is the thriftiest young city I ever saw. It is now about 20 years old and has 18,000 inhabitants; and its manufacturing facilities are rapidly increasing, having at present quite a number of manufactories of different kinds. It is also the center of the great J. Gould system of railroads, and has in its midst enormous round houses with machine shops attached. I am informed that there is constantly employed in these shops from 800 to 1,000 men.

Business of all kinds seems to be exceedingly brisk. This is getting to be a splendid market for both stock and produce, which, of course, will greatly benefit the surrounding country. Corn is now worth from 40 to 45 cents a bushel; oats, 35 cents; wheat, $1 10; hay, $10 per ton; new potatoes, $2 50 per bushel. Vegetables of all kinds are plentiful, and are commanding good prices. In fact the city of Sedalia seems to be booming in every sense of the word. I have neglected to say anything in behalf of Sedalia on account of its accommodations for public travel, and the accommodating hotel proprietors to be found here. The city should be proud of them.

Mr. Editor, I had no thought of writing you a letter from here when I left home, but when I arrived here and found everything so prosperous, and prices ranging so near those in Kentucky, I thought I would write a letter advising all young men to go West. ABEL CARPENTER.

Assessors Book.

The Assessor's book for '83 shows the taxable property in the several districts to be as follows:

Union	$513,830
Hamilton	279,815
Burlington	876,395
Florence	897,276
Taylorport	760,960
Petersburg	491,975
Bellevue	249,365
Carlton	809,506
Beever	243,781
Verona	304,747
Walton	360,105
Total	$5,287,809
Total veluation in 1882	5,243,472

In the matter of territory Burlington is the largest district, having 25,437 acres of land which is valued at $604,495. Bellevue is the smallest district, having 7,149 of land valued at $188,810.

There are 150,103 acres of land in the county, the average value which is $26 per acre.

This year the Assessor returns 2,887 votes while last year he found only 2,800.

There were 29 sheep killed by dogs last year valued at $29, but as nobody in the county has more than one dog there is no funds out of which to pay for them.

In 1882 there were 2,797,798 lbs. of tobacco raised, while in 1881 there were 2,591,286 pounds.

The 1882 crop of wheat made 128,739 bushels, while that of 1881 made 46,797 bushels.

There was a large decrease in the corn crop of 1882 which yielded 55,750 bushels, while the crop of 1881 was 378,938 bushels.

On last year's book Burlington was at the head of the list of districts in the point of wealth, but this year she occupies the second place while the Florence district has a good lead.

Were there an equal divide of the taxable property in the county made among the white males 21 years old and over, each one would have a little over $1,800.

THE later developments are knocking the bottom out of the theory by which the Virginia detective, Alf Burnett, expected to show the innocence of Neal and Craft.

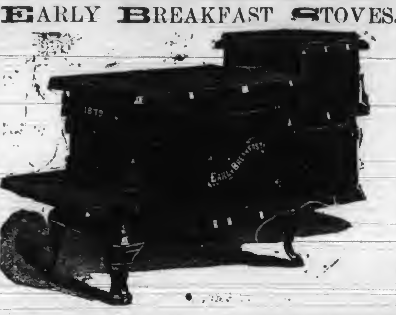
—Richard Henshaw, aged seventy-one, and Miss Lizzie Jane Haggard, aged sixty-five, have wedded in Green county.

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.



Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

Telling it very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can. but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it short this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of letter paper."

"Here you are, sir, then, and there are thousands of people here in Bingham, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Guilfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in this city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines usually given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends and customers forgot me, as though I were under ground,

'With the end of my nose and the tip of my toes
Turned up to the roots of the daises.'

My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except death. That is God's truth, and Mr. Mosher, here, knows it.

"I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago. I'm lively as a cricket now, sir and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipled inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of HISCOX & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court Kentucky.

The Central Ky. Lunatic Asylum, Plff.
vs
Richard Green, &c, Defts
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a Judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April Term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 2nd day of July, 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 12 months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the Judgment to wit:

The defendent Richard Green's ½ interest in the dower of Mr. Ellen Green in the land of E. T. Green—said dower contains 10 acres and bounded by the lands of John E. Walton, John M. Moody and others.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C

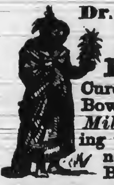
STRAYED or STOLEN

From my stable near Petersburg, last Sunday night, a bay mare mule, 7 years old this spring, about 15½ hands high, has a dark stripe across the shoulders and along the back, striped legs, and has a halter burn on one of her hind feet. The postals sent out do not describe her exactly as above. Information of her whereabouts will be thankfully received by

O. T. PORTER, Petersburg, Ky.

FOR RENT.

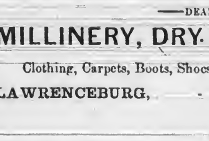
One half mile above Rising Sun, Ind., a very desirable residence of seven rooms, out buildings, pasture, garden and fruit adjoining. Some farming land—or the farm of 180 acres can be rented with it. Good school in town. Enquire by mail, or at the place, Maple Grove. MRS. D. G. RABB, Rising Sun, Ind.



Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
TRADE MARK,
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. R. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '18

JNO. S. DORMAN & CO.
—DEALERS IN—
MILLINERY, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS,
Clothing, Carpets, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Trunks, Valises, &c.
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - - INDIANA.



A. M. Elliott and Co,
—DEALERS IN—
Threshers,
Engines,
SAW MILLS, HORSE POWERS, BUCKEYE
Reapers, Mowers and Self-Binders,
South Bend Chilled Plows, Furst & Bradley Steel Plows,
Buggies, Wagons and Farming Implements in General.
Give us a call. Satisfaction guaranteed in every sale. Corner second and Judiciary Streets, Aurora, Indiana. 33-6t

LOOK HERE!
when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on
Winegardner
He has a large assortment of
Wall Paper!
And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.
Inks, Pens and Stationary
constantly on hand.
Headquaters in Lotton House.

NOTICE.

Know all men by this notice: That Elzy Garrison, H. A. Hicks, B. L. Rice, C. C. Talbott, Wallace Garrison, John S. Mason and T. A. Huey, under the name and style of the Richwood and Big Bone Turnpike Co., have associated themselves together to contract and operate a turnpike road, beginning at its intersection with the Union and Beaver Lick turnpike, just southeast of Dr. H. C. Lassing's residence, in Boone county, Kentucky, and running thence in a general westwardly direction along an established and surveyed route, in a main line to Elzy Garrison's gate, and consisting of said main line and a branch turnpike, beginning at Robert Wills' corner with Richard Howlett, on the old Big Bone and Union dirt road, running in a general northwardly direction until it intersects the general main line at a point S E. of C. T. Rice's old homestead. Said main line and branch road shall be called the Richwood & Big Bone Turnpike.

Big Bone or some point on the road shall be the principal place of business.

The amount of capital stock shall be $10,000, to be paid in as the work progresses.

Said corporation shall date from June 9, 1883, and continue fifty years.

Its officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer and five directors, all of whom shall be ellected annually on January 1st of each year.

It shall not subject itself, at any time, to a greater liability or indebtedness than $6,000.

Private property shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ELZIE GARRISON, H. A. HICKS, B. L. RICE,
WALLACE GARRISON, JOHN S. MASON,
COURTNEY C. TALBOTT. T. A. HUEY.
June 12, 4t.

ESTRAY.

One roan cow white face, about six years old, left the pasture at Taylorport, Boone county, Ky., June 14th. A suitable reward will be paid.

WM. HUMPHREY, Taylorport, Ky.

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

W. J. RICE.
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Erlanger Hotel.
JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.
First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.
Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new anes I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!
Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs, PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO.,
Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Joe. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

SCROFULA
and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:
"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla
stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

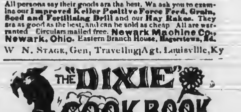
FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 6 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.

All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap All are warranted Circulars mailed free. Newark Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md.
W. N. STAGE, Gen, Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky



THE DIXIE COOK BOOK
Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles works of character; great variety; low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms.
Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

The mercury climbed up to 94° last Saturday.

Last week was pic-nic week at Parlor Grove.

Fires were kindled in sitting rooms again last week.

B. K. Sleet takes a meal in Burlington occasionally.

Saturday was another hotest day of the season. Sunday, do.

A very large crowd attended meeting at the Baptist church Sunday.

J. M. Conner commenced walking cattle toward the city last week.

Not many hogs in this part of the county being fed for early market.

It is difficult to tell of which we will have the most this year, weeds or rain.

The sheriff is collecting taxes in earnest. He has several pieces of property advertised for sale.

The certificates of cures by Ayer's Sarsaparilla are living truths, verified by living witnesses.

T. B. Rouse & Co., have given the Hebron road a good working. T. B. believes in doing good work.

One of E. E. and Richard Utz's 1,600 pound beef cattle got a leg broken the other day and had to be killed.

O. P. Tanner has got but one Sunday now in which to break his score, or go up head as a weather prognosticator.

Mr. Abel Carpenter advises young men to go west. They might go west, but wouldn't go a cyclone very well.

The English sparrows have taken possession of every hole about the houses large enough for them to occupy.

Constable R. H. Sandford summoned his first jury, last Monday. He went at it like an old hand at the "biz".

Attorney Winston is giving his talent for farming exercise this spring. He is reinstating the Collins farm near town.

A warrant was sworn out by a colored man the other day, charging Robinson, a colored divine, with the larceny of a hoe.

John Kahr, the Hebron shoemaker, by doing good honest work, has built up a good trade. He now has a month's work ordered.

The long-eared quadruped with a squeaking voice now rejoices because the biped heretofore bearing his name is called a dude.

O. T. Porter, of Petersburg, has had a fine mule missing since Sunday night —either strayed or stolen. See description in another column.

Those who attended the Sons of Temperance pic-nic at Parlor Grove last Saturday, pronounce it a grand success in every particular.

The protracted wet weather has reduced the supply of honey that otherwise would have been made, but there will be an abundance.

These balloons with brims to them, worn as hats by the boys at the Boone House, are very becoming, they say. Well, we should remark!

Jim Westbay takes in everything, even the bootblacks' excursions to the "Zoo". The bootblacks were rather too fresh and festive for Jim.

The pic-nic season will be inaugurated in William Walton's woods next Saturday afternoon. It will be a good place to go to spend a half day pleasantly.

Sunday was the annual show day of hats and bonnets with the Baptist congregation at this place, and each girl tried to look the sweetest and wear the nicest hat or bonnet.

When C. W. Saxton dons his costume for working among his bees, we imagine he looks like a western train robber. Charles' exploits are confined to the bee-hive.

Ben Kirkpatrick's cheek bears an ugly mark made by a brick dropped by his brother John off the Petersburg Christian church. Ben stepped out at the door and looked up just in time to receive the brick.

Constable Thomas Watts, of Taylorport district, made his official debut here last Wednesday, on which occasion he lodged the first fruits of his official career in the county cooler. Tom will make a No. 1 officer.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent.

Our friend, Gabriel T. Gaines, came over to town one morning last week and notified a doctor of the place to keep himself in readiness for a call, that he was going to have new potatoes for dinner that day. Gabe had the first new potatoes of the season hereabout, and the M. D., is none the better off thereby.

The star-route jury brought in a verdict of not guilty, as was anticipated from the beginning.

BORN—On the 12th inst., to Mr. Tom Clore and wife, of Bellevue, a fine girl. Tom thinks the Burlington club can beat the Aurora club now.

Mr. Benj. Craven, who is in his 92d year, is reported in a dying condition, having been speechless and helpless since Monday. He has enjoyed remarkably good health all this winter.

Our town has a band of female serenaders. The leading instrument is a French harp. We will not mention their names, but will say to Misses Arnie, Nellie, Pinkie and Nettie, that the music made the other night was splendid, and we hope they will be successful in getting their new harps.

The lead-heavers in this office are under many obligations to Dr. Furnish and Joe Reed for the princely manner in which they entertained them last Monday at the Boone House. The event will always occupy a green place in our memories, and we fell that we are derelict in our duities until we reciprocate by giving them a boost in the estimation of the fair sex.

A. G. Winston visited Frankfort and Lexington the latter part of last week. He says that they have had a great deal of rain in the blue-grass section, but the corn is about knee-high. The continued wet weather has interfered greatly with the plowing. Many farmers were ready to commence harvesting their barley of which there is a large crop. A large acreage of tobacco will be cultivated in that part of the State this year.

The following explains itself:

MR. RIDDELL—Dear Sir: I stated to Ben Stephens, John Hoggins and others, in Florence, two weeks ago, that I had Blue grass in my pasture nearly or quite 4 feet in length. They laughed at that statement, and asked me to send some of "That tall Blue grass to the Boone County RECORDER. I send you a small bunch. Will you please measure it and publish the result, and you will greatly oblige me. W. S. KEENE.

WALNUT HILLS P. O., Fayette co., Ky.

We measured the sample of grass referred to above and find it four feet in length. The grass can be seen at this office.

Some time since Temp Graves, who lives near Bullittsville, hired a boy named John Daisey, from the city, to work for him. Last Thursday the boy started to Cincinnati, and Temp knowing that he had no money, after he started, investigated and found that he was minus $16. He started in pursuit, and overtaking the boy, searched him, finding $1. The boy went back home with Graves and assisted in searching for the missing money, which not being found, he left again. Temp then obtained a search warrant from Esq. Gaines and placed it in the hands of constable Tom Watts, who arrested Daisey and searching him, found the remaining $15 in a handkerchief in his coat pocket. An examining trial was held and in default of $200 bail Daisey was committed to jail.

Base-ball.

Last Saturday Dr. Jonas Terrill's base ball aggregation met the Burlington combination on the grounds of the latter, and defeated them by a score of 12 to 5. The Burlington boys were probably off on the water question again. The game was about as well played as any witnessed on that ground. Rip Sickles, Bullittsville's hired man and catcher, Snyder, the pitcher, Moreland, the first baseman and Hoshall, third baseman did the principal work for the visitors, while the men in the same positions for the home nine are entitled to credit. Below is the score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T
Bur'ton	0	0	0	3	1	0	0	1	0	5
Bulitts'ille	3	0	2	0	2	3	0	2		12

Bullittsville and Petersburg play next Saturday at the latter place.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Uncle Church Clore has improved very little, if any, the past week.

Miss Cora Arnold, of Bellevue, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. C. W. Saxton.

Mrs. German, of Pendleton county, is visiting her son, W. T. German, of this place.

M. S. Rice and family, of Covington, spent Sunday with relatives in this neighborhood.

Miss Mollie Tupman and sister, Clara of Kenton Heights, are visiting their aunt at this place.

Miss Lucy Ryle returned, last Friday, from Glendale, Ohio, where she has been attending school.

Miss Stella Camby, of Ohio, has been, for several days, the guest of Mrs. Gen. Camby, at the Central Hotel.

A. C. Porter and wife, of Petersburg, were among their friends in the Burlington neighborhood Sunday.

County Clerk Garnett and C. L. Crisler visited Joe Slosher's ponds Monday, and by his permission angled a while.

David Blythe returned, Friday evening, from Hanover, Indiana, where he has been attending school since last fall.

Miss Laura and Miss Alice Moody, daughters of Col. John M. Moody, of Bellevue, are visiting ex-governor Leslie, of Barren county.

Dr. J. C. Terrill, of Bullittsville, Dr. L. B. Terrill, of Hebron, and Dr. Ed Terrill, of Petersburg, were in town last Saturday. Base-ball hied them hither.

L. H. Voshell, of Sparta, Indiana, was in town Saturday, and looks the Lou of yore. The day before he finished planting corn for the third time this season, the worms having destroyed the first two plantings.

Departed this life, June 4th, 1883, after a protracted illness, Mrs. Nancy Swetnam, aged 36 years. The deceased was the oldest daughter of Jimmie and Harriet Jarrell; was favorably known in this part of the county. She was not a professor of religion, but of a christian character, stood high in the estimation of all who knew her. We hope she is now in the paradise of God, and with her husband who preceded her to the better land some 14 years ago. Her sufferings were long, and very severe at times, but she bore it all with fortitude, without a murmur, and when her last moments came, she camly fell asleep in Jesus, resigning her quiet spirit to its Creator. She neither lacked friends care nor physicians' attention, all was done to restore her to health, that was in mortal power, but all of no avail. But they should be reconciled, being assured their loss is her eternal gain. May the Lord reconcile us all to his providential dealings with us. She leaves an affectionate daughter who showed her whole strength in faithfulness to the very last, two loving sisters, a kind father and mother, with many friends to mourn her loss. Her remains were followed by a large concourse of relatives and friends to their last resting place, in the family grave yard.

My letter is lengthy, and yet too short to do full justice to our departed friend. I knew her well, and can bear testimony to her worth and standing.

Her busy hands are folded,
Her work on earth is done;
Her trials all are ended,
Her heavenly crown is won.

Upon her brow so peaceful
No earthly shadows rest;
For anxious cares reach never
To mansions of the blest.

June 6, '83. JULIA A. RICE.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Waterloo.

Our farmers are hopeful of an abundant harvest, and our mechanics are cheerful with the prospect of abundance of labor.

The crops are looking somewhat better since the recent rain—potatoes especially.

Picking cherries will be in order this week. We have a fine crop in this vicinity.

We have very little to report this week, as times are very dull.

Beaver Lick.

Several of our ladies attended the strawberry festival at Walton last Saturday...... Miss Lillie Nettles, of Moberly, Mo., is spending the week with relatives here...... Our farmers are pleased with present prospects for a good crop...... Lots of tobacco has been set and is doing well......Andrew Ellis was in the city, last week, with some fine tobacco.

Normansville.

Many of our farmers are done setting tobacco, and it looks well—stand good...... Corn was slow to start but is growing nicely...... Prospects for wheat and rye have improved very much...... Mr. Will Carson has a position in J. W. Kennedy's tobacco shop......Our new 'Squire, F. M. Howlett held his first court at the springs the 12th inst. There were two cases on the docket which were satisfactorily disposed of.

Meeting at Big Bone church on the 4th Friday, Saturday and Sunday in June. On Saturday three members selected by the church to serve as deacons will be ordained. A large attendance expected. Basket dinner on Friday and Saturday, and the usual hospitality of the neighborhood extended.

Scattersville.

A fine time to set tobacco last week and most of the farmers made good use of it.

H. P. Parsons has got his mill in running order, and has commenced sawing.

We have a new buckster from town who has made two trips. He keeps a supply of tinware with him.

We will have to ask pardon of our brother at Waterloo, for tresspassing on his quarters, as we did make one report from the Locust Grove school-house. We will do so no more.

Last Tuesday the friends and relatives of Mrs. William Rue, went in and plowed and hoed her corn. Thanks to all for their kindness.

O. B. Utz, of Big Bone neighborhood, took supper in our burg one night last week as he was returning from Bullettsville, where he had been on duty for the Grange.

Plattsburg

Everything is unusually quiet in our burg. The farmers are all busy.

The tobacco crop is pretty much all set out. Corn is looking very well. Harvest will be very light with us this summer.

Prof. Stephenson's school closed last Friday. The examination showed that the scholars had been not only well, but thoroughly drilled in their respective studies.

Uncle Tom Lindsay says he is beaten on the old coin, and be will try something else. He says Mr. John Kinney on Ashby Fork, has a duck that has four distinct feet and legs and goes about with the rest of the gang, and is the largest and best duck of the party.

Mr. Robert Smith is quite low with typhoid fever at this writing.

Mont Balsly, president of the Plattsburg jocky club, says it was so he could not attend the Latonia races, but thinks he will be ready next time.

Petersburg.

The Spedwell club is a swift one.

Mr. Kirkpatrick is making quite an improvement on the Christian church.

Miss Stella Fisher, of Lawrenceburg, was the guest of Miss Georgie Comer last Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. Ed Terrill attended the races at Latonia Springs last Wednesday.

Capt. B. B. Bradley and Miss Bolle McAroy, of Rising Sun, spent last Sunday with Miss Mary Bradley.

Mrs. Newman, of Rising Sun, is visiting S. C. Buchanan, at this place.

S. G. Botts and Capt. Fenton attended the sale last weekat Cincinnati of uncalled-for express packages. The goods were sold by single packages, the purchaser not knowing what he had bought until he had paid for and opened it. They will open a second hand store under the name of Botts & Fenton, dealers in uncalled-for express goods. As they had not opened all of their goods we can not give a full price list. Below you will find prices of some of the leading articles: One trunk full of wind $6; 1 valise full of old papers 70c; 1 box of saw dust 30c; 1 second hand shaving box 30c; 1 second hand brush 25c; 1 cake second hand soap, 20c; 1 package show bills 65c; 1 old shirt with dirt 45c.

Florence X-Roads.

A fine cherry crop.

Apples scarce, except a few early varieties.

Oats look tolerably well.

Wheat is thin on the ground, but the heads are large.

Irish potatoes are fine. The beetles have disappeared.

W. M. Conner did the first harvesting in this neighborhood, having cut his crop of rye.

W. Y. Crigler, of Carlisle, Ky., spent one night, last week, with friends in this neighborhood.

The corn has commenced growing since the cold spell. It is about an equal race between it and the weeds.

Born—On the 18th inst., to Rev. A. J. Douglas and wife, a fine boy. Mr. Douglas is all smiles.

F. H. Russell has bought a large lot of fine walnut logs of Milton Graves, near Florence.

Our late representative Walton, was here the other day getting acquainted with the people.

John Welch had the misfortune of getting his ankle broken or badly bruised, the other day.

Joe Souther and Sam Crutcher took in the last Circuit Court at Williamstown, and had a general good time with the young ladies of the town. Joe's experience with the chandeliers was not a pleasant one. Ask Joe for particulars.

Bullittsville.

A coat or two of paint would not hurt the school-house.

Rev. Jas. S. Kirtley and Jas. Gaines received the degree of B. S., at the recent Georgetown commencement.

It is rumored that one of our threshing machine firms will buy a new thresher with a self-propelling steam power.

We suggest to Commissioner Snyder as a subject to discuss at the next Teachers' Institute, "The salary of teachers." This subject forced my attention a few days ago, when conversing with a teacher of a neighboring county. He spoke of his getting $100 per month and vacation, which the average teacher of Boone never realizes.

R. L. Neal, of Harrodsburg, and O. B. Utz, of Boone, respectively Master and Lecturer of the State Grange, were present at the meeting of the County Grange, last Friday, and each made a good practical speech, which was encouraging and instructive to the listener.

Willis Arnold has bought a farm in Saline county, Missouri.

A large congregation was present, Sunday, at the Christian church. A good sermon was preached on "Doing", after which a bountiful repast was served in the church-yard. It being show day the ladies and some of the gents, too, put on their best. Owing to the confusion caused by the glare of so many fine faces, dresses, &c., we were unable to decide which deserved the premium. Enough to say all was tip-top.

The following persons are now home from school: Miss Fannie Duncan, Owen Watts, James Gaines and Crit Gordon.

Miss Nettie Graves received a fine gold watch and chain, also ear rings, breast pin and necklace. Her brother John was the liberal doner.

Mrs. Mary Gaines attended the commencement at Georgetown.

Florence.

Our ideas and notes, this week, will be very short and scattering, like Jim Henderson's speech.

Roads all worked.

Large lot of tobacco plants left over.

We understand that Black Clarkson has taken unto himself a rib—of contention.

We will wager a jug of buttermilk that Henry Riley has sawed a longer, thicker and wider plank than Adam Clore did.

A few evenings ago, Charley Burnett, colored, undertook to hold a post mortum on Sandy Finnell, colored, when Sandy threw in an objection in the shape of a 4 pound bolder.

I understand that Harvy Hicks is engaged largely in the gooseberry trade this season.

A train of cars ran over Esquire Bedinger's dog, and cut its tail off so short that it can't be measured from either end.

How could you expect a negro to know who the president of the United States is, when he don't "member zactly what day of the month de 4th of July comes on dis yeah?"

The Baptist strawberry festival at this place on the 16th, was a grand success.

Hugh Houston is slowly recovering from the flux.—Dick Grant is low with consumption.—John Hampton is confined to his bed with erysipelas.—Chas. Lodge has been suffering with "renalcull

---

The editor of the Rising Sun Recorder returned from the west several days since, but his paper is still publishing interesting letters from him out west.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

James West, Plft.
vs
James Marshall, Deft. } Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 2nd day of July 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 9 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

A tract of land in Boone county, Ky., near Richwood church, beginning at a corner of Black, Hughes and Cleek; thence running with Cleek's line to a sugar tree; thence back into the farm of the grantor so as to strike a point from which a line run to Hughe's line taking the line first run and Hughes' line for two of the bounding lines and the other two lines so as to make 50 acres. For a more particular description see county surveyor's report on file in Circuit Clerks office.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $983 39 Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Coudt, Ky.

John A Kendall's Adm'r Plff
vs
John A Kendall's heirs, &c, Defts } Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will on Monday, the 2nd day of July 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m, or thereabout (being county court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6, 12 & 18 months equal installments, at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Near Burlington, Boone county, Ky., bounded on the North by the lands of Mrs Lucy Rogers on the West by the road leading from the East Bend road to Gunpowder Creek, on the South by the dower of Mrs Mary E Kendall, and Jonas Delph, on the East by Samuel Pope.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale $2,811 30 Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C C

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 8 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55¼ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good.

MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
BURLINGTON, KY.
UMDERTAKERS
—AND—
EMBALMERS,
Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attea tion given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.
R O U S E.
BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.
QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO THE
Petersburg Drug Store,
Where you can find everything in the Drug line, such as ——.
Well call and see and be convinced.
Respectfully, S. C BUCHANAN.

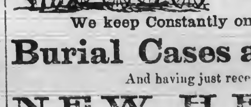
HARNESS & SADDLES,

ALBERT M. ACRA,
—) BURLINGTON, KY. (—
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,
I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.
Reparing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK,
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green,
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.
The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.



We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE
At Farmdale, P. O., Franklin Co., Ky., six miles from Frankfort. Has the most [illegible] Sept. 3. For Catalogues, etc., address as above COL. R. D. ALLEN, Supt.

THE RECORDER

BURLINGTON, - KENTUCKY

WHAT THE TRAVELER SAID AT SUNSET.

The shadows grow and deepen round me;
  I feel the dew-fall in the air;
The muezzin of the darkening thicket
  I hear an night-thrush call to prayer.

The evening wind is sad with farewells,
  And loving hands unclasp from mine!
Alone I go to meet the darkness
  Across the awful boundary-line.

As from the lighted hearths behind me
  I pass with slow, reluctant feet,
What waits me in the land of strangeness?
  What face shall smile, what voice shall greet?

What space shall awe, what brightness blind me?
  What thunder roll of music stun?
What vast possessions sweep before me
  Of shapes unknown beneath the sun?

I shrink from unaccustomed glory,
  I dread the myriad-voiced strain;
Give me the unforgotten faces,
  And let my lost ones speak again.

He will not chide my mortal yearning
  Who is our Brother and our Friend,
In whose full life Divine and human
  The Heavenly and the earthly blend.

Mine be the joy of soul-communion,
  The sense of spiritual strength renewed,
The reverence for the pure and holy,
  The dear delight of doing good.

No fitting ear is mine to listen
  An endless anthem's rise and fall;
No curious eye is mine to measure
  The pearl gate and the jasper wall.

For love must needs be more than knowledge:
  What matter if I never know
Why Aldebaran's star is ruddy
  Or colder Sirius white as snow!

Forgive my human words, O Father!
  I go Thy larger truth to prove;
Thy mercy shall transcend my longing;
  I seek but love, and Thou art Love!

I go to find my lost and mourned for Safe in Thy sheltering goodness still,
And all that hope and faith foreshadow
  Made perfect in Thy holy will!

—J. G. Whittier, in N. Y. Independent.

BOBETTE.

Gillespies Tower is a gloomy old building standing guard, apparently, over the scattered houses of a fishing hamlet which lies below, close in under the shelter of the cliffs. At low tide there is a long flat stretch of sand before it, and the broad ocean beyond. Only the lover of wild bleak pasture lands, straight cliffs and a cold, restless sea could find any attraction in the view; yet there are those who love its very grayness and unbounded breadth.

The house is more like fortress than dwelling, with massive walls and narrow slit-like windows; but there is one grand outlook from the landing of the staircase, and this was evidently appreciated, as the dark polished cherry of the window-seat bore many scratches from long buttoned aprons and small hob-nailed shoes.

At this moment a child was slowly climbing the staircase toward her favorite nook. The window was just broad enough for her to sit with her little feet straight out before her, and to place her doll bolt upright with her back against the wall. They sat there face to face, the large wax doll dressed in baby clothes, and wrapped in a white capuchin, or long cape, and peaked hood, which stood up very erect on her head; the child as motionless as her companion, her hands clasped over her white apron, and only the hem of her short black dress showing below. Her dark hair was drawn back with a round comb and hung down her back in heavy braids. Her eyes, too, were dark and very clear, and were resting thoughtfully on the tossing sea. A stiff gale was blowing from off shore, and as the tide crept in the waves were caught and buffeted about and almost driven back over the sands. There was a great white ship in the offing, its masts and sails in strange foreshortened angles as it beat up against the wind. It seemed more like some phantom than anything earthly and filled with life.

The beach below was deserted; the fishing boats were out in spite of the storm, the babies all safe at home with their mothers, and the children at school—and Bobette sat on alone and idle, and gazed at the white wing-like sails and the sea.

Presently she sighed and turned her head. The hall below, too, looked dark and solitary; there was not a sound in the house. She glanced at the doll sitting opposite her; the blue eyes gazed back at her blankly; there was no sympathy in the waxen face.

Bobette's eyes wandered back to the ocean, and she gave a long, deep sigh. Her eyelashes rose and fell more and more slowly, and even rested for an instant now and then on her cheek; but she roused herself presently, rearranged dolly's curls and peaked cap, then slid down from her seat and slowly descended the stairs. She crept on tiptoe across the silent hall and into the dining-room, and stood doubtful, for an instant, before the great mahogany sideboard. On it was a plate heaped high with square chunks of gingerbread, and a silver basket of fruit; but Bobette passed on through a parlor where the shutters were closed and the curtains drawn. Beyond was a sleeping-room, and into this Bobette looked from the door.

On a sofa lay a woman asleep, her long fair hair hanging off over the cushions to the floor. Her black dress was very long and clung closely to her, and one blue-veined hand was pressed on the wet handkerchief bound round her head.

Bobette did not fancy the heavy aromatic orders which filled the room, and she beat a noiseless retreat. She was never at a loss for resources; but that they were at times somewhat questionable, was evident when, ten minutes later, she cautiously opened the door of a great square room in the second story of the tower, and peeped down through the oak railing of the staircase; a long skirt of brilliant rose-colored silk rustled softly over the waxed floor, an exquisite blue crepe shawl folded round the small shoulders was tied in a hard knot behind and fell gracefully over the train, and above the bright mischievous face was an elaborate widow's cap with long floating end.

The way was still clear. Bobette lost no time in escaping from the house and getting down the stone steps to the beach as fast as her small size and the rose-colored train would allow.

She went directly toward a small wooden house standing quite alone, and climbed upon a ledge of rock beside it, thus reaching the level of an open window.

She looked in for a moment, then leaned her short plump arms upon the sill and put her head inside.

The room was filled with rows of desks and benches, and sturdy-looking boys and girls. The teacher was standing at the blackboard on the small raised platform. A rustle increasing to general confusion made her turn in surprise.

"Why, Bobette!" she cried, her eyes sparkling with amusement, "what in the world are you doing there?"

Bobette was only too glad to get into conversation. She replied politely:

"How do you do? What I'm doing is watching Harvey. He's making the rudder for our ship."

This raised a shout of laughter, and all eyes turned toward a fine-looking boy whose seat was directly in front of Bobette.

"Well, Bobette," the teacher said, kindly, "you see you are disturbing us now; we are not accustomed to such gay little visitors. Get down and run away."

"But I must speak to Harvey! I can't go away till I do that," said Bobette.

"Harvey, you may go to the door for two minutes to see what Bobette wants," said the teacher, discreetly.

When Harvey appeared outside, he gave a low whistle of surprise; but Bobette welcomed him rapturously. "Harvey!" she cried enthusiastically, "when are we going to sail that ship? Now?"

"This is schooltime, Bobette!"

"But let's go now, Harvey—they couldn't catch us, and I'm lonely to-day. I couldn't stay at home, though I thought about what you said. I did try to be good. But I should die if I tried any more, and what would you do then, Harvey? Wouldn't you be sorry you said I must?"

The boy was four years older than Bobette; he smiled a little, then unclasped her hands which were tightly holding his.

"Poor Bobette! We'll go to the pond and sail our boat to-night. Where'll you be? Are you going home now?" asked the boy.

"Oh, no!" the child said, decidedly; "nobody knows where I am! Mamma was asleep, and Betsey up in her room, and Anthony was out."

When Bobette was left alone she wandered on, her head turned to watch her sweeping skirts. She was passing the little weather-beaten stone church when she ran against the rector, and both stopped in bewilderment.

Mr. Abert was a quiet, scholarly little man, with a clear pale face, and kindly, very nearsighted eyes.

He had been reading as he walked and did not at first recognize in this gay apparition his small friend Bobette, but there was no mistaking her merry laugh. After a few explanations, Bobette slipped her hand into his, and they walked gravely away together to the rectory.

Bobette established herself in a deep arm-chair by the table, and looked over the great illustrated Don Quixote for the fiftieth time, while Mr. Abert was writing.

"Come, now, Bobette," said he, when at last his letters were sealed and stamped, "let us go out, for I think the sun is going to shine. How is mamma to-day?"

"Oh, mamma"—the child began doubtfully; "you know this is a very bad day for us. Mamma is not ever well on this day."

"Not well?" Mr. Abert repeated, stopping short at the garden gate. "Perhaps I had better step up and see her?"

"Oh, no!" cried Bobette; "don't you know what day this is?"

The rector looked puzzled: "This is Thursday, I believe."

"Ah," said Bobette, shaking her head impatiently, "it's papa's death's day—the day when he didn't come home. I hate it!" the child cried, passionately; "I wish papa had not gone away! I do!"

"And now it is over three years!" said the rector, absently, after a pause.

"Yes, three years," replied Bobette; "I can not do it any more years. You don't know, so you think me a very naughty girl. But see how it is. This morning, when I was fast asleep in the dark, mamma came into my room and said it was dear papa's day, and I must jump up quick and not wait for Betsey. And my bath was so cold it frightened me awake. Mamma was crying, and that made her pull my hair and tangle it with the comb. Then the chapel was so dark and lonely! While I knelt there beside mamma, I saw a wee fairy, all in white, playing under the curtain at the door, and when mamma prayed that papa would come home again, and not be dead, I screamed, because then the fairy became a ghost. Betsey said it would come if I did the least wrong thing. That frightened mamma, and I had to eat my bread and milk alone, because we must fast all to-day."

"But did you pray, too, Bobette?" asked the rector, looking thoughtfully at the child.

"Yes; I prayed God to please bless papa, and take good care of him if he is alive, and if he is in Heaven to please make us forget about him and not be sad any more. Mamma read prayers in the chapel with Betsey and Anthony, too—then she fainted away, so we stopped."

Bobette wound up her lengthy recital in the most matter-of-fact tone.

They had now seated themselves on a piece of driftwood under the shelter of an old boat.

"But," said Bobette, "it was very nice that she fainted, for Betsy said it was the best thing she could do, and she's asleep now. Look, there comes a man!"

A stranger, an extremely tall, finely built man, with a face almost hidden by thick, closely cut whiskers, was making his way toward them from the promontory which had separated this beach from the large harbor beyond. He gave an amused glance at the small grotesque rose-colored figure in the widow's cap, sitting beside the clergyman as he passed; and on second thought he stopped and turned back.

"You don't often have these hard gales off the land, I fancy?" he said, inquiringly. His voice had a pleasant hearty ring.

"Not often, but this has lasted some time," Mr. Abert replied.

"Indeed? I hope it will blow itself out by sunset. You've found a nice cosey shelter for a seat. Whose child are you, gay little gypsy?"

Bobette surveyed him reflectively. Of this form of address she did not approve. She replied presently, with quiet composure:

"Child of God, and an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven."

The stranger's great black eyes opened wide in astonishment; then he gave an odd little laugh.

"But how is it about the pomps and vanity of this wicked world?" he asked slyly. "Has not that part of your education been a little bit neglected? Eh?"

Bobette looked slightly taken aback.

"Never mind, my dear," the stranger went on, quickly. "You probably follow the edyfying example of King Solomon arrayed in all his glory—I doubt if he was as picturesque in the general effect."

Bobette ventured no reply.

"Would you favor your humble admirer with a kiss?" he asked, bending towards her with an amused smile.

Bobette drew back haughtily toward her friend. "No, I would not," she replied.

The stranger's smile vanished. "Is this your little daughter?" he asked of the rector.

"No; it is the daughter of Godfrey Gillespie who was lost at sea some years ago—before I came to this parish," the rector replied somewhat stiffly.

"Ah, indeed," said the stranger.

He turned away and walked on. Bobette raised her head from Mr. Abert's shoulder where she had hidden it, and looked after him.

"Man," she called, suddenly, "come back!"

At this imperative command, he looked round, smiled slightly, and obeyed. Bobette stood erect, with one little hand stretched out toward him, an expression of resolution in her face, her cap strings flying in the wind.

"I will kiss you," she said, gravely. He bent forward, and she touched her lips to the bit of sunburned cheek above his whiskers. The man caught her in his arms and held her an instant, kissing her rosy mouth, then strode away without a word, and Bobette sat down again behind the boat.

"He ought not to have done that," said the clergyman; "he ought not to have done anything of the sort."

"Yes, he ought," Bobette asserted, though her tone was not disrespectful; "I like that man." Her eyes were closely following him. Now she sprang up again. "Look!" she cried, anxiously. "Could he be going to see my mamma?"

The rector rose.

"Well," he said, you remember you told me your mamma could see no one to-day."

This seemed to relieve Bobette's mind. "Is it four o'clock yet?" she asked. "Then I must go."

Harvey was sitting on the churchyard wall wondering what had become of Bobette, when a voice called breathlessly: "Harvey, where's our ship?"

"It's not finished yet. I didn't get time enough in school to-day. Take off that silk stuff—you can't do anything in that."

But the little rose-colored widow shook her head resolutely, and seized Harvey's hand impatiently.

Back of the beach, separated from the salt sea by high ridges of sand dunes, lay a fresh water lake winding for some distance inland, and boasting of a few gnarled trees along its shores.

Harvey and Bobette were soon rowing over this water to a small island where stood a famous old tree. It must once have been the giant of the moorlands, for the first branches grew out far above the ground, but all the upper part had been carried away by storms. The broad top, with the bare old arms, which had once been branches around it, was the favorite resort of the boys of the fishing hamlet, and to reach this lofty spot, Bobette had always longed unspeakably.

On landing, she was commanded to sit with closed eyes while Harvey's preparations were made; but she listened with suspended breath and rapturous suspicions, while he climbed the tree by the notches cut here and there for steps in the rugged bark.

When she was bidden to open her eyes, behold a rope ladder reached from the ground to the top of the tree!

"Should you like to come up?" asked Harvey, trying to speak in an indifferent tone. "All you've to do is to climb that ladder! Are you sure you dare?"

"Sure," Bobette replied.

"I'll hold it steady—but you'll have to take off that long skirt.

For this, Bobette was willing to relinquish her silken trail. A deft bit of fingering, a funny little squirm and kick and it lay on the sand. Bobette began the ascent bravely. It was by no means easy, as the ladder swayed in the wind, and one round of rope gave way and nearly let her fall; but the sturdy little arms held on tight, and a merry scream of laughter soon proclaimed she had reached the eyrie. Harvey gave himself up to the enjoyment of her childish delight in the fun. He hurried up and down the swaying rounds in true sailor fashion—now for the provisions, in the shape of cookies and nuts, now for a supply of pebbles for missiles in case of sudden attack, and again for a flask of water to use during the siege. But the ladder was unfortunately an old one which had been washed ashore during a storm. There was more than one unheeded warning as a strand gave way here and there; then, suddenly, the ropes parted altogether in mid-air!

Harvey picked himself up quickly. He looked up at Bobette, who laughed merrily, thinking it was an intentional part of the fun. He grew grave as he began to realize the state of the case. Evidently, the ladder had given out once for all, and how was little Bobette to get down?

"What is it?" she asked quickly; "did you hurt you?"

"Not a bit. I'll be up there in a minute. I was thinking how you'd get down!"

"But I don't wish to get down? I've just got up," she cried, cheerfully.

"But the ladder's broke!"

"Never mind; let's stay up here all night."

"Bobette, I'll have to go and get somebody to help us. This rope's as rotten as sand. I'm awfully sorry I took you up there!"

"I'm not! I like it better'n I thought I should. I can see—Harvey, don't go—are you going?" The little face under the widow's cap was very grave and anxious.

Yes, Harvey was going. She was to be left alone on the island.

"You must keep perfectly still till I come back," he said. "I don't dare to wait—it'll be dark before long. I was a thoughtless boy to do this thing. I wanted to give you a treat. But I might have known girls—"

Bobette's eyes flashed. "I won't be called girls!" she cried. "If I wished to, I'd get down in a minute, but I don't."

"How?"

"Climb down, same way all the boys do, I could!"

"Don't you dare to try it, Bobette! Promise?"

The child smiled mischievously.

"Please, Bobette, say you'll sit down and be quiet till I get back?" Harvey asked, pleadingly.

But Bobette would not, and he had to go without the promise. She stood motionless until he was out of sight. She thought then of eating a cookey, but remembered that the reason she felt so hungry was that this was fast day; she thought of mamma and laid it down untasted.

She looked down the side of the tree where Harvey had climbed up. It was a dizzy height, but her little head was a steady one. Should she venture. She would have done exactly as Harvey wished if he hadn't called her "girls!" She let herself down cautiously over the edge and clung to the branches, digging her little shoes into the holes in the bark as Harvey had done.

The sun had just set, and the cloudy sky grew dark rapidly. Clinging fast, Bobette got down out of reach of the branches; but now she was seized with sudden fear. She thought she would give it up. Her short arms could not reach round the trunk, and in her excitement she could find no place to plant her foot to raise herself an inch.

Small as she was, she knew her only chance was in keeping cool. Slowly and cautiously she let herself down again, little by little, but the dear, safe ground seemed hopelessly far away. Again her strong will helped; she knitted her small brow, clung tight to the bark, and reached down her foot. There was a slip! A painful bruising of the skin on the little hands and knees, a fearful rush through the air, and Bobette struck the ground. For a moment she lay stunned, then was conscious of a strange dull pain in one foot, doubled back beneath her. It became intense when she tried to move. Still Bobette kept a brave heart. Her clothes were hanging in tatters around her, her cap was gone altogether, and part of the blue shawl. Poor Bobette! She could just reach the rose-colored skirt; she dragged it over her to hide the rents in her frock.

Hard it was to sit and wait. It was almost dark on the water, and when, at last, there was a sound of oars, and Harvey called anxiously: "Bobette, are you there—safe?" and she tried to speak, her voice was choked with tears, and the answer was just a sob.

But when she saw the boat she suddenly calmed; for the stranger whom she had seen on the beach was rowing with Harvey, and in the stern sat Mrs. Gillespie and Mr. Abert!

Yet could it be mamma who sprang out so lightly? There was no widow's cap hiding golden hair, nothing but a shawl she had caught up in haste, and there was the color of wild roses on her cheeks.

"Bobette, darling, how did you get down? Are you hurt?" a torrent of questions came.

Still, Bobette, huddling under the rosy silk, was speechless. Her mother fell on her knees and put her arms close round her child. "Bobette," she whispered, "Bobette, God had heard our prayers—he has come!"

"Papa?" cried the child; then the strange, dull pain swept over her and her eyelids drooped.

All that night lights burned in Gillespie's Tower. Little Bobette's broken ankle had been set by her papa's own dexterous hand, and she was now, at last, sleeping fitfully.

Mr. Abert had waited until he was sure that his little friend was safe, then he stood a moment longer with old Betsey at the lower gate. She had been all the afternoon longing for a listener to whom she could free her mind.

"Yes, it's all come out right," she admitted, "but, as I was about to say, I never, really thought he was drowned dead—and no more he wasn't. He do say he was shipwrecked on a desert island, and all that. It's mighty queer if it is true, and she's nearly worried her life out, appointing a day to weep and mourn on, for to be his death-day, which she couldn't have certainly known to be right, any way, you know. And that Bobette did need a father over her, if ever a child did!"

But, finding that Mr. Abert was out of hearing, old Betsey closed and bolted the door.—Mary M. Edmunds, in Wide Awake.

Raising Potatoes Under Straw.

Farmer Scott, of Kentucky, writing to an exchange on the subject of raising potatoes under straw, gives certainly some indubitable proofs in favor of this method, not only for potatoes, but for tomatoes, melons, cucumbers, etc. Concerning his own experience, he says:

At one time, after covering a large potato patch, the colored assistant exclaimed: "Boss, heah is a panful taters left. What's I gwine to do wid them?" He was told to drop them where the machine horses had pressed the ground very hard, while threshing grain. The earth there was not plowed; could not be. The potatoes were covered like the rest. When fall arrived, the black man looked for the result, and said to the "boss:" "I s'pose you'll gih me dem taters in de hoss tracks?" "Yes. All right!" The man uncovered the place, and got over six bushels of the best, largest and finest potatoes ever grown in Bracken County, Kentucky.

I once raised a large patch of tomatoes. After they were well worked I took straw and covered the ground completely, six inches deep. The vines dropped over on the straw. No weeds ever came up after that. Tomatoes to sell, trade, give away, was the result, after canning more than we ever had before.

Many years ago I was visiting a friend in Missouri; a farmer. The elder son contemplated a watermelon patch. He prepared one near the stable-yard. After the vines were up, just ready to run, he covered the ground all over and close around the vines with straw. In a few days the vines dropped and ran around in every direction. The longest vines were pinched off to prevent them invading the next neighbor's field. The young man also got some good earth and placed it in a low spot on top of an old stack left over from the previous season. There he made a hill and covered it with straw. From that hill he pulled a melon which received a premium at the fair in the early fall. I sojourned at the residence, and we ate of the luscious melons nearly two months.

I have raised pickled cucumbers the same as tomatoes, with straw.

In turning under old straw, in the fall or ensuing spring, should it choke the plow, send a boy along with a short, two-pronged fork. He can scatter the straw along the furrow, so that when the plow passes all can be covered neatly. Should the lad become fatigued let the plowman relieve him. That will allow the horses to rest at intervals and encourage the boy.

Straw is the best bedding for horses and cattle, and (I contend) for man also. Clean straw is the best bedding, also, for sows when farrowing. Straw, mixed with manure, makes the finest hot-beds. I never fail. I buy old straw stacks and bring them home to use, and thus improve my farm in many ways.—Prairie Farmer.

—New England wagon factories are turning out for next summer an unusual number of two-wheeled carts. Some have an arrangement by which they can be adjusted to horses of different builds, as a tall horse requires that the cart be pitched at a different angle from that used with a short one. The largest style of two-wheeled carts, built for four people and having seats running lengthwise of the body, passes under the name of wagonet. The carriage dealers say that the reason why there are so many novelties this year in the vehicle line is because the trade is dull, and the manufacturers have been ransacking their brains for patterns which will help stimulate it.—Boston Post.

—Jersey lilies, Jersey waists and Jersey cows are all popular just now. The old prejudice against Jersey mosquitoes still exists.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Jilted Japanese Damsels.

The curious hold superstition has on the mind of the Japanese is very well illustrated by the proceedings taken by the Japanese damsel when a lover proves false to his vows. When the world is at rest, at 2 o'clock in the morning, the woman rises. She dons a white robe and high sandles or clogs. Her coif is a metal tripoid, in which are thrust three lighted candles; around her neck she hangs a mirror, which falls upon her bosom; in her left hand she carries a small straw figure—the effigy of her faithless lover—and in her right she grasps a hammer and nails, with which she fastens the figure to one of the sacred trees that surround the shrine. Then she prays for the death of the traitor, vowing that, if her petition be heard, she will herself pull out the nails which now offend the god by wounding the mystic tree. Night after night she comes to the shrine, and each night she strikes in two more nails, believing that every nail will shorten her lover's life, for the god, to save his tree, will surely strike him dead.

—A Cincinnati advertisement: "To Let—A four-room house near the center of the city, opposite a music garden; has a beer saloon on each side and all the other comforts of a home."—Detroit Post.

—Gas is more out of favor than ever in sitting rooms in England. The French moderator lamp, burning colza (rape seed) oil, is the favorite light.

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough—prompt measures for relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs—therefore use the great anti-scrofula, or blood-purifier and strength-restorer,—Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists the world over. For Dr. Pierce's pamphlet on Consumption, send two stamps to WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

A LITTLE Atlanta boy denounced his snoring brother for "sleeping through his nose."

Decline of Man.

Impotency of mind, limb or vital function, nervous weakness, sexual debility, etc., cured by WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y. Address, with two stamps, for pamphlet.

LIMERICK: No; you needn't think that fishes have colds in their throats just because you've occasionally observed a fish hawk.

The Testimony of a Physician.

James Beecher, M. D., of Sigourney, Iowa, says for several years I have been using a Cough Balsam called DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and in almost every case throughout my practice I have had entire success. I have used and prescribed hundreds of bottles ever since the days of my army practice (1863), when I was surgeon of Hospital No. 7, Louisville, Ky.

THE large stone hand of an idol in a Chinese temple recently fell off and severely injured a worshiper beneath. "Satan finds some mischief still for idol hands to do."—Burlington Free Press.

DR. PIERCE'S "Favorite Prescription" is everywhere acknowledged to be the standard remedy for female complaints and weaknesses. It is sold by druggists.

A MAN in Rochester has such a cracked voice that he rarely says anything without breaking his word.—Rochester (N. Y.) Post.

WHY suffer longer from Catarrh and Cold in the Head? A sure cure is Ely's Cream Balm. It is not a liquid or snuff and is easily applied. Price 50 cents.

TO THE "poober" all things are poor—Yonkers Gazette.

I HAVE used Ely's Cream Balm for dry Catarrh (which every Eastern person is subject to who comes to live in a high altitude) and found it the most efficacious of any article ever before used. It has proved a cure in my case. B. F. M. Weeks, Denver, Colo. See advertisement.

A DUMB-BELL can only emit a mute tap peal.—N. Y. Advertiser.

LADIES and all sufferers from neuralgia, hysteria, and all kindred complaints, will find without a rival Brown's Iron Bitters.

OVER the garden wall—Broken glass.—Puck.

FARMINGTON, ILL.—Dr. M. T. Gamble says: "I prescribe Brown's Iron Bitters in my practice and it gives satisfaction."

IS IT any wonder that a man who imbibes corn juice freely should have a "husky" voice?—Boston Star.

FORT STEVENSON, DAKOTA TER.—Rev. James McCarty says: "Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of severe dyspepsia."

THIS will be a year when harvest apples won't contain any colic. The main thing will be to get the apples.—Detroit Free Press.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap

Renders a lady's skin white and soft. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin. 15c.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, Irritation. $1.

WE believe it has never been told who pulled the clapper that "made the welkin ring."—Detroit Free Press.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, June 15, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$3 25	@ 3 50
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 70	@ 7 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 16	@ 1 17
No. 2 winter red	1 15	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	42	@ 42½
Rye—No. 2	61½	@ 62
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@ 10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	19 00	@
Lard—Steam	11¼	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	30	@ 32
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 45	@ 4 10
Good to choice	4 60	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 20¾	@
No. 1 white	1 15	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	65	@ 65¾
Oats—mixed	44	@ 47
PORK—Mess	19 50	@ 19 75
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 13	@
Corn—No. 2	55⅞	@
Oats—No. 2	39⅞	@
Rye	61	@
PORK—Mess	18 85	@ 18 90
LARD—Steam	11 70	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 19¾	@ 1 20
Corn—mixed	63¼	@ 63¾
Oats—mixed	44	@ 45
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 75	@
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
COTTON—Middling	$ 9¾	@
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 25	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 11	@ 1 12
Corn—mixed	54	@ 55½
Oats—mixed	42½	@ 43
PORK—Mess	20 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 13	@
CORN—mixed	51	@
OATS—mixed	40	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 50
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 6 50

A MALARIAL VICTIM.

The Trying Experience of a Prominent Minister in the Tropics and at the North.

TO THE EDITOR:

The following circumstances, drawn from my personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified:

In 1875 I moved from Canton, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., to Florida, which State I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St. John's River and settled down, as I thought, for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be the accompaniment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached. My limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had a thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I became restless and feverish and the physicians informed me I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing steadily worse. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me a change of climate was absolutely necessary—that I could not survive another summer in the South. I determined to return North, but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at Upper Sandusky in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure and I again consulted physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly, only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this, I am happy to state that I am to-day a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarily published by me in the Sandusky, O., Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN: During my recent visit to Upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or course of treatment had brought such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the propriators and to the public to state that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that is not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four weeks' trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks.

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy which can cure the severest case of tropical malaria of five years' standing certainly can not fail to cure those minor malarial troubles which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

ALFRED DAY,
Pastor Universalist Church.
Woodstock, O., May 10, 1883.

25c. buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners and make a boot or shoe last twice as long.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

DROPS OF WATER.

MR. JOSEPH G. BICKNELL, No. 643 Main Street, Cambridgeport, Mass., writes, April 27, 1883: "I have been terribly afflicted for a number of years with gravel and kidney disease. My urine contained brick-dust deposits, and at times I could not pass my water except in drops and with great pain; and have had to get up as many as fifteen times during the night. I tried several physicians; they did me no good, but a friend of mine, who had used Hunt's Remedy, told me to get a bottle and try it. He had been cured of a severe case similar to mine, and that others had used Hunt's Remedy in Cambridge and pronounced it a medicine of real merit. After being repeatedly urged I purchased a bottle, and before I had used all of it I passed a stone as large as a pea, followed by smaller ones. I have used in all ten bottles, and it has completely cured me. My kidneys are in excellent condition, and for one of my age (68) sixty-eight years, I can truly say I feel like a young man with strength and vitality. My family use the Remedy, and would not be without it, and never fail to recommend it to our friends and neighbors in Cambridge and Boston. You are at liberty to use my name in praise of the best kidney and liver medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

"DID WONDERS FOR ME."

The above words are from MR. LEWIS KNAW, No. 9 Highland Avenue, Malden, Mass., April 28, 1883. He says: "I have been troubled for years with kidney and liver complaint, followed by gravel, with severe pains in my back and groins. I had great trouble in passing water, it being scanty, and accompanied by terrible burning, the vessel being coated with brick-dust deposit. I was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy by a friend who had been completely cured of a similar trouble. I purchased a bottle at the druggists, and commenced to improve at once. I have used but two bottles, and it has done wonders for me—no more kidney trouble, no more pain. It has given me new life, and I would not be without Hunt's Remedy at any price. It is all that it is recommended to be, and I cheerfully give this testimony for the benefit of the many sufferers from kidney disease and gravel."

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. It will pay every Book Canvasser to send us his or her address. We have Books and Bibles of every description—first class and fast-selling—and we are now offering extraordinary inducements to the right parties. Full particulars sent free.
DOUGLASS BROS. & PAYNE, Cincinnati Ohio.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! N. W. FITZGERALD Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full Instructions and New Book on Patents sent free.

NEW THING! Sells at sight; no competition. Dealers and Canvassers Wanted. Ask for circular and price-list. PENTZ REIN HOLDER CO., Canton, O.

A KEY THAT WILL WIND ANY WATCH AND NOT WEAR OUT. SOLD by watchmakers. By mail 25c. Circulars free. J. S. BIRCH & Co., 38 Dey St., N. Y.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. E. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

CATARRH HAY-FEVER
ELY'S CREAM BALM will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds; completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM POSITIVELY CURES CATARRH COLDS IN THE HEAD

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
Hostetter's Stomach Bitters meets the requirements of the rational medical philosophy which at present prevails. It is a perfectly pure vegetable remedy, embracing the three important properties of a preventive, a tonic and an alterative. It fortifies the body against disease, invigorates and revitalizes the torpid stomach and liver, and effects a salutary change in the entire system. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

AGITATOR
What Farmers & Threshermen say about the Agitator. Manufactured by J. I. CASE T. M. CO. RACINE, WIS
"Don't Change It." "Perfect as it is."
IN GRAIN, FLAX, TIMOTHY, CLOVER, AND PEAS.

PORTABLE (8, 10, 12 and 16 Horse)
TRACTION (8, 10, and 12 Horse)
STRAW-BURNING (Portable only, 8, 10, 12, 16 Horse)
And 8, 10, 12, 15, 20, 25 and 30 Horse
SKID ENGINES!
We make the most Practical Straw-Burning Engine in the World.
The Popular Double Pinion 4-Wheel Woodbury Horse-Power. Reversible Bull Wheel. Runs either way, Low or High Speed. The BEST Power made. Ours Exclusively.
Do you live near Timber? If so, buy our PORTABLE SAWMILL.
Take it to the timber. SAVE HAULING Logs to the Mill. 3,000 TO 10,000 FEET PER DAY.
ALL MACHINERY WARRANTED.
Write for Catalogue. Costs Nothing.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO." —Martin Chuzzlewit.
TEA CLUB ORDERS.
We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as premiums to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $13. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS
MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD
And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Ladies
Do you want a pure, blooming Complexion! If so, a few applications of Hagan's MAGNOLIA BALM will gratify you to your heart's content. It does away with Sallowness, Redness, Pimples, Blotches, and all diseases and imperfections of the skin. It overcomes the flushed appearance of heat, fatigue and excitement. It makes a lady of THIRTY appear but TWENTY; and so natural, gradual, and perfect are its effects, that it is impossible to detect its application.

WANTED—AGENTS.
To buy and sell the WANLESS DETACHABLE and SELF-LOCKING PILLOW-SHAM HOLDER; the most DURABLE and SIMPLEST in the market. Sample to any address on receipt of $1.50. Over 1,000 sold in Cleveland. Lady Agents find it very saleable. For terms address KENDALL & CO., 136 ONTARIO STREET, CLEVELAND, O.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]

"MAUD S" HALTER cannot be slipped by any horse. Sent to any part of United States free, on receipt of $1. Special discounts to the trade. Send for price-list. J. C. LIGHTHOUSE & BRO., Rochester, N. Y.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1883. NUMBER 35.

PITH AND POINT.

—The slang phrase "a dead sure thing" has been superseded by the elegant expression, "a deceased surety."

—An old philosopher says sententiously: "Don't play with the devil while you are young, if you do not desire to associate with him in years to come."

—Literary Matron—What does Shakspeare mean by his frequent use of the phrase, "Go to?" Matter-of-fact Husband—Well, perhaps he thought it wouldn't be polite or proper to finish the sentence.—London Punch.

—Plantation philosophy: Pleasures decrease as da come near us. De tish is a heap bigger 'fore yer gits it outen de water. De injurious in dis worl' is allers de fanciest. De brandy bottle is fixed up finer dan de bread tray.—Arkansaw Traveller.

—"Well, there is one thing sure," said Mr. Job Shuttle, as he closed a discussion on the wrong-sidedness of everything in general; "there is no justice in this world, and it makes me blue to think of it." "True, Job," said Patience, "but the reflection that there is justice in the next, ought to make you feel a great deal bluer."—Hartford Post.

—Brother Gardner draws the following conclusions: "Dat no man eber gets work sittin' on de fence an' discussin' the needs of de kentry. Dat de less pollyticks a man has de mo' cash he can pay his grocer. Dat argyments on religion won't build churches nor pay de preachers."—Detroit Free Press.

—While more boys are born than girls it is a singular fact that there is a surplus of female population. It is easily accounted for. Fooling with toy pistols, playing base ball, and falling off cherry trees, all boyish pastimes, are six times more hazardous than wearing corsets and jumping the rope 500 times in one inning.—Norristown Herald.

—There is no excuse for the young man who complains that his [illegible] kisses him so much he can't get a chance to engage her in rational conversation. He ought to know that by rubbing a little sodium upon his mustache the abuse can be speedily checked. Sodium is a substance which seems to have been created especially to meet such a case as his. As soon as any moisture touches it it bursts into flame. —Chicago Herald.

—A few nights ago an Austin man was awakened by a burglar opening a shutter. The disturbed proprietor of the house got out his pistol, remarking to his wife, "I am not quite sure this pistol is loaded." The burglar, however, overheard the remark, and being a reader of the newspapers, and remembering how many fatal accidents occur from handling unloaded pistols, fled in wild dismay, leaving his professional instruments behind him.—Texas Siftings.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The paper railroad tie, as cheap as wood and with twenty-five years of life in it, has presented itself for consideration.—Detroit Post.

—Some old-school doctors hereabouts have been trying mesmerism as an anesthetic for surgical operations lately with success. They laughed at this proposition thirty years ago.—Science Monthly.

—It is said that inventors, fearful of being robbed of their ideas, deliberately deceive their attorneys and the Patent-office about their inventions, obscuring the truth so that when they do get a patent it is practically worthless for the reason that it does not cover the real points.—N. Y. Sun.

—Charles V., of Spain, after persistent experiment, decided that two pendulums could not be made to beat in unison, and the attempt, often made by clockmakers, has always failed until, lately, a London watchmaker has sot six of them in his window, where they swing exactly alike.

—A Philadelphia Company has purchased a farm in Accomac County, Va., which is to be devoted to the raising of geese, so as to secure a supply of feathers for making pillows and down quilts. It is proposed to commence with two thousand geese, and to increase the number to ten thousand as soon as the necessary arrangements can be perfected.—Philadelphia Record.

—There is but one nickel mine in the United States now in operation. It is situated in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. It is two hundred feet deep, and has been worked seventeen years. The demand for this metal is rapidly increasing. Croppings of nickel are found also in Madison (Iowa) and Wayne counties Missouri. The refined metal is worth $3 a pound.—Chicago Times.

—At a recent meeting of the New York Sugar Association, at Genoa, President Williams said of the sorgum sugar industry in the North: "We are going to make sirup that is superior to that of New Orleans. Men are experimenting all the time to perfect the process of manufacture. I expect in my day to see glucose driven from our homes by a better and purer article."—Utica Herald.

—A novel device for stopping runaway horses has been patented by Mr. Carl E. von Schwarz, of Vienna, Austria. The invention consists in so arranging a curtain or blinder to the bridle that it may be dropped over the horse's eyes should be become unmanageable, thus cutting off the light and reducing him to submission. When the animal is once more under control, the curtain may be raised again without subjecting the driver to alight from his vehicle.

—Mr. George Hall, of Newark, an old pressman, has devised a simple process for preserving and renovating ink rollers and adding greatly to their longevity. A steam jacket is added to the roller closet, and numerous fine jets are so arranged as to play gently upon the roller within. These jets thoroughly cleanse the surface of the roller, the skin on its face disappears, the body of the roller absorbs a portion of the heated vapor, and the whole is kept in a fresh, elastic condition ready for work without further preparation.—Newark (N. J.) Register.

How Cures Are Sometimes Effected.

Faith is a rare wonder-worker. Strong in the belief that every Frank is a doctor, an old Arab, who had been partially blind from birth, pestered an English traveler into giving him a seidlitz powder and some pomatum. Next day the chief declared that he could see better than he had done for twenty years.

A sea Captain, when one of his crew craved something for his stomach's sake, on consulting his book, found "Number fifteen" was the thing for the occasion. Unfortunately there had been a run on that number, and the bottle was empty. Not caring to send the man away uncomforted, the skipper, remembering that eight and seven made fifteen, made up a dose from the bottles so numbered, which the seaman took with startling effects, never contemplated by himself or the cribbage-looking Captain. That worthy jumped too hastily at conclusions, like the Turkish physician of whom Mr. Oscanyan tells the following story: Called in to a case of typhus, the doctor in question examined the patient (an upholsterer), prescribed, and departed. Passing the house the next day he inquired of a servant at the door if his master was dead, and to his astonishment heard he was much better. Indoors he went, to learn from the convalescent that being consumed with thirst he had drank a pailful of the juice of pickled cabbage. Soon afterward, a dealer in embroidered handkerchiefs, seized with the same malady, sent for the physician, who forthwith ordered him to take a pailful of pickled cabbage juice. The man died next day; and the doctor set down this memorandum in his book for future guidance: "Although in cases of typhus pickled cabbage juice is an efficient remedy, it is not, however, to be used unless the patient be by profession an upholsterer."

Lady Barker's New Zealand shepherd found a somewhat similar potion of infinite use. When his mistress expressed her surprise at his possession of a bottle of Worcestershire sauce, Salter said: "You see mum, although we gets our health uncommon well in these salubrious mountings, still a drop of physic is often handy-like, and in a general way I always purchase myself a box of Holloway's Pills—of which you do get such a lot for your money—and also a bottle of Painkiller. But last shearing they was out o' Painkiller, so they put me up a bottle o' cain pepper, and likewise that 'ere condiment, which was very efficacious, 'specially toward the end o' the bottle. It always took my mind off the loneliness, and cheered me up wonderful, especial if I added a little red pepper to it."

Sir Walter Scott's piper, John Bruce, spent a whole Sunday selecting twelve stones from twelve south running streams, with the purpose that his sick master might sleep upon them and become whole. Scott was not the man to hurt the honest fellow's feelings by ridiculing the notion of such a remedy proving of avail; so he caused Bruce to be told that the recipe was infallible; but that it was absolutely necessary to success that the stones should be wrapped in the petticoat of a widow who had never wished to marry again; upon learning which the Highlander renounced all hope of completing the charm.

Lady Duff Gordon once gave an old Egyptian woman a powder in a fragment of the Saturday Review. She came again to assure her benefactress the charm was a wonderfully powerful one; for, although she had not been able to wash off all the fine writing from the paper, even that little had done her a great deal of good. She would have made an excellent subject for a Llama doctor, who, if he does not happen to have any medicine handy, writes the name of the remedy he would administer on a scrap of paper, moistens it with his mouth, rolls it up in the form of a pill, which the patient tosses down his throat. In default of paper, the name of the drug is chalked on a board, and washed off again with water, which serves as a healing draught. These easy-going practitioners might probably cite plenty of instances of the efficacy of their method.

Dr. John Brown, of Edinburg, once gave a laborer a prescription, saying: "Take that and come back in a fortnight, when you will be well." Obedient to the injunction, the patient presented himself at the fortnight's end, with a clean tongue and a happy face. Proud of the fulfillment of his promise, Dr. Brown said: "Let me see what I gave you." "Oh," answered the man, "I took it doctor." "Yes, I know you did; but where is the prescription?"

"I swallowed it," was the reply. The patient had made a pill of the paper, and faith in the physicians skill had done the rest.

In some Lancashire districts the country people believe that to cure warts the same number of pebbles as warts should be placed in a bag, which is to be dropped where three or four roads converge, and that the person who picks it up will obtain the warts in addition. Warts are also said to disappear soon after they are rubbed with a black snail, but that it is essential that it must afterward be impaled on a spike of the hawthorn or no effect will be produced. Persons afflicted with tumors of any kind are advised to rub them with a dead man's hand. Whooping-cough is supposed to be cured by passing the patient nine times round the body of an ass.

Those who suffer from rheumatic pains are advised to carry small potatoes in their pockets, which are believed not only to cure, but to prevent a return of the disease.—Exchange.

Educate the Hand.

The head of the American youth, male and female, has been too long educated at the expense of the hand. It is about time this sort of thing should stop, if the claim of the Yankee that he is nothing if not "practical" is to be in future anything more than an idle boast.

Let it not be understood that what is vulgarly known as "book learning" is to be despised or neglected; it ought not to be and must not be; the more of it the better. But in these days of concentration of wealth and capital, of production by great corporations, the proportion of those who work for wages is constantly growing larger. Agricultural independence is being encroached upon by industrial dependence, and how to use his hands in the coming battle of life is now, more than ever before, becoming the serious question for every American boy.

Industrial or manual education, then, is destined to become a feature of the education afforded by our public schools. Geometry and a jack-plane are no more incompatible than that delightful study and a blackboard. Arithmetic would cease to be stupid if mechanical education enough were sandwiched in between recitations to enable the boys to manufacture—that is, make with their hands, aided by proper tools—the conditions of their problems. Even text books would be doubly interesting if some of the scholars would spend time enough in a printing office to learn how it was made, and be able to describe the process intelligently.

There is not a blacksmith shop in the country but should have two or three boys in it a part of the summer vacation, if for nothing more than to consider whether they should like the business; not a carpenter shop but should tolerate a few school boys in it now and then, that they may learn how to drive a nail correctly; and so on throughout the trades. Division of labor, which has come with the introduction of machinery, while a good and necessary thing, is derelict in that it has nothing in the place of the apprentice system which it has destroyed.

Let the school and the workshop cooperate in every community in the country, and the union of text books and tools will be consummated in a surprisingly short time with beneficial results. It is not proposed nor is it desirable to turn all schools into workshops; that would be as unfortunate as the present state of affairs, which is all books and no tools.

Thoughtful men interested in educational matters are not neglecting these phases of instruction for youth. In this city the institute of technology is not an experiment, it is an institution. Its methods duly modified are applicable to a country high school. It does not in the least interfere or obstruct the classical education which distinguishes the neighboring university at Cambridge. Its school of mechanic arts admits boys as young as fifteen. Several schools for manual education are already started in New York. St. Louis boasts of one of the best in the country. One of the most significant signs of the times is a recent circular of the Carriage Builders' National Association which has established in New York a school for the advancement of technical knowledge among apprentices and mechanics of the carriage trade. Why should not every trade have a like association for a like purpose?—Mining Gazette.

Much Learning Made Him Mad.

There was a wild scene of excitement last evening in Paston- Lawson's little Baptist Church at Quincy Point. While the congregation was at prayer in rushed a man dust-stained and maniac-looking, whooping like a Comanche, and gesticulating in a wild and delirious manner. Down one of the aisles he sped, and on reaching the vicinity of the pulpit mounted a chair and commenced to belabor the air with a piece of lead pipe, evidently warding off his imaginary enemies. There was danger that he would break somebody's head if they came near him, and everybody took good care to keep at a respectable distance. In his endeavors to keep off his supposed foes he kept continually calling on the Deity to save him. The women, after their first scare, rushed out of the building to breathe a little freer. After they were once safely outside the maniac was entreated to leave the place, and said he would go with a Catholic Clergyman. The good pastor said he was a minister, but the fellow didn't take kindly to his appearance and wouldn't budge an inch. Finally somebody had the good sense to suggest that an officer be sent for. Officer Hayden soon arrived. He proceeded down the aisle and told the fellow, who was still perched upon the stool, that he must go with him. He had not stopped his gymnastic exercises, and the officer, coming within range of his weapon, received a severe blow on his head. The officer seized hold of the madman, and with the assistance of some five or six of the congregation succeeded in overpowering and handcuffing him. He was then taken to the lock-up in the depot carriage. Before going, however, he managed to bite two men in the hands badly. Previous to his escapade in the church the man had raced madly all around the Point and had come, indeed, from Boston a round-about journey, certainly eighteen miles. It was ascertained to-day that the man's name is William Scully, that he became crazed by much reading in the Public Library, and under some freak took this journey.—Quincy (Mass.) Special to Chicago Herald.

—The following is the text of the revised umbrella flirtation: To leave your umbrella in the hall means "I don't want it any more." To purchase an umbrella means "I am not smart, but honest." To trail your umbrella on the sidewalk means that the man behind you thirsts for your blood. To lend an umbrella indicates "I am a fool." To put a cotton umbrella by the side of a silk one means "Exchange is no robbery." To urge a friend to take an umbrella, saying, "Oh, do take it; I'd much rather you would than not," signifies that you are lying. To return an umbrella means—never mind what it means. No one ever does that.—Chicago Herald.

—The Oil City Derrick is noted for dropping into sentences with a whole volume of meaning. It says: "The best thing in print, a pretty girl in a calico dress." There are hosts of young men who are roosting from three to six stories high and eating hash in basements, to whom the Inter-Ocean commends the sentiment. Why not begin to live, young man? The man who waits to get rich before marrying is a fool for the want of sense. Chicago Inter-Ocean

Our Young Folks.

BY THE BABY'S BED.

Swing the cradle to and fro,
Rocking softly, rocking slow;
As the child it pillows seems
Almost in the land of dreams.
Then behold, wide open flies
All at once the baby's eyes!
What shall mother do to keep
Sleepy little eyes asleep?

Droop the rose-leaf eyelids, but
Kisses will not keep them shut;
Into mine laugh baby's eyes,
O, so roguish and so wise!
So a flower at break of day
Shakes the spell of sleep away.
What shall mother do to make
Slumber come, my wide-awake?

Sleep, my baby, sleep and rest!
Little birds in the warm nest
Sleep beneath their mother's wing.
Do they dream of anything?
Of the rose or of the rain,
Of the moons that wax and wane,
Summer's sun's or winter's snows?
Ah, my baby, no one knows.

Sleep, my baby, dream and rest,
Cuddled in your cradle nest,
While I drop warm kisses in
Dimples deep on cheek and chin.
Just for kisses, baby dear,
Nothing else are dimples here.
Mother'll be a bee to sip
Honey from her baby's lip;
With life's riddle all unguessed,
Sleep, my little one, and rest,
Sleep and rest.

—Illustrated World.

A MISUNDERSTANDING.

They had come to Aunt Helen's to live, Cora and her little sister Milly. Aunt Helen was mamma's own dear sister, and next to being with mamma herself, the children could think of nothing nicer than to be with auntie. Mamma had gone to Heaven.

One morning there was a great deal of work to be done. Aunt Helen had a new girl who did not know how to make bread or dress a turkey, or, in fact, do much of anything but break dishes, and what should Uncle Dick do but send up a note that he would bring three business friends home with him to dinner. Aunt Helen wished that she had two pairs of hands. She wished several other things besides. One was about Cora's hair, the long fine hair that looked in the sunshine like spun gold, and tangled easier than gold would have thought of doing.

"Oh, dear!" said Aunt Helen, twitching at the comb as it tangled in the yellow threads. "What a perfect nuisance this hair is. I wish it were no longer than Milly's; it would look a great deal neater, and not be such a trial to take care of."

Poor Cora. If Aunt Helen had not been so busy, she would have seen the great tears in the little girl's eyes. She did not care so very much about the yellow hair herself, and it was a trial to have it combed, especially when people were in a hurry, and pulled; but dear mamma had seemed to love each separate hair, and it made Cora cry to think of losing it. Still she thought about it a great deal; all the morning indeed, while she ran of errands for the busy auntie. It was not until nearly twelve o'clock that she found Milly alone in the nursery, and came to her with the great shears.

"Now, Milly," she said, "if I should sit real still, do you suppose you could cut my hair off even and nice, so I could comb it like yours, before we go down to dinner?"

"Why, Cora Parker!" Milly said, in dismay. "You mustn't cut off your hair. Aunt Helen wouldn't like it."

Then did Cora turn on her astonished eyes. "Didn't you hear her say that she wished it was cut off short like yours? And you know she has trouble combing it, and of course she wants it off, or she wouldn't say so. You don't think Aunt Helen would tell what wasn't true?"

"Why doesn't she cut it off, then?" asked wise little Milly.

"Why, I guess may be she thinks I would cry and feel badly, and she is sorry for me. And I have cried two times this morning, and I feel pretty badly; but for all that I've made up my mind. Didn't papa say we must try to give her just the leastest speck of trouble, and that it was very good in her to take us, when she had three boys to see to! Oh, I know it is right, and I've made up my mind; so Milly, you just hurry and cut."

And Milly, little barber as she was, stood on tiptoe and went about her task. Snip, snip, snip, went the dreadful shears! Only a minute or two, and the spun gold lay in great waves on the carpet, and Cora's head looked as neat and smooth as Milly's; only, I am obliged to say, the hair was not very evenly cut.

Cora could not see that, however, and smoothed her hair with great care, and was ready for dinner, just as the bell pealed through the house. Poor child, she had no idea of the uproar she was going to create! Aunt Helen having seated her guests, was just looking around for the children when they slipped in. Instead of seating them, she stepped back in great dismay "Why, Cora Parker!" she exclaimed. "What have you been doing? O, Lewis, what a fright the child has made of herself!"

And then, actually, Aunt Helen burst into tears! What a time they had! Uncle Dick tried to explain to the guests, and comfort his wife, and question the children, all at once. Finally poor Cora cried so loud that he sent her away, and Aunt Helen, much ashamed, sat down at last.

"The child gave me such a start," she said. "She doesn't look in the least like herself; and to think that she has spoiled her beautiful hair!"

"What possessed her?" asked Uncle Dick.

"I'm sure I don't know; I suppose he naughty little thing was spunky, because I said this morning that her hair was more trouble than Milly's. I remember, now, that she has been rather gloomy all the morning. I didn't think she was such a naughty little creature."

Now it was Milly's turn; she had been very quiet and sober through all the uproar, but just here she burst into a storm of tears, and kicked her mad little feet against the table. "You're naughty," she shouted; "I don't love you a bit, I don't. Cora is good; she did it to please you; she cried dreadful, and she said her hair gave you trouble and you said you wished it was short like mine, and it must be short to please you; and she is good." All this, before she could be hushed or carried from the room.

Well, don't you think, that evening, when the storm was all over, two people asked to be forgiven; one was Milly, for speaking such naughty words to her auntie, and one was auntie, for saying in her haste what she did not mean. But that did not make Cora's hair long again.

"Never mind," Aunt Helen said, "it will grow long some day; it shows you were an unselfish little girl, if not a very wise one, and were used to being with people who meant what they said. It has taught me a lesson."—Pansy.

We's House.

Annie was "most five old years," as she would tell you, and could not remember ever having been from home over night.

Since Rosie Cary's visit in New York, Annie's greatest desire had been to go away, like Rosie, for a whole week.

It was no comfort when mamma told her that three years before she had spent several weeks at grandmamma's, for, as Annie said, she "was 'most a baby then, and babies hasn't no meremeber."

But now, this very morning Papa Karl was to take mamma and Annie out to Uncle Frank's farm for the longed-for week.

Almost before Annie realized that this could be true the dainty new dress was on, breakfast was eaten and the cars were bearing them swiftly to Groton Station, where black Thomas met them with carriage and horses.

And when they came to the great farm-house there was Uncle Frank and Auntie May on the piazza, with Nell, who was just twice Annie's age, and the six-year-old twins, Laura and Lena.

Such a long, happy day as it was! There were the dear little baby chickens, the mother hens and funny roosters to feed, the waddling, quacking ducks, the horses, cows and the pigs that rather frightened Annie, with their grunting and squealing.

In the afternoon the twins took her down to their pretty bough-house by the brook-side.

Here they kept house with their dolls.

And instead of a common-place city doll-carriage, there was the cunningest little boat just large enough for Rosamund, Rosalie and Claribel. In this the three dolls, carefully seated, floated far down the stream and were then drawn back by a string fastened to the bow of the boat.

But the beautiful day came to an end, as all things do, and after supper all sat on the broad piazza in the gathering twilight, Annie sitting on a low hassock at her mamma's side, quiet and still.

"My little girlie is tired," thought mamma, "and shall go to rest soon."

Then the older folks began telling stories of by-gone days, and no one noticed when Annie crept back to the deserted sitting-room, nor missed her till a stifled sobbing was heard issuing from the darkness. Half-frightened, they ran in to find in the big rocking-chair a little round heap battling with a great storm of sobs.

"Annie, darling, what is the matter?" cried Mrs. Karl, alarmed.

"I want to go to we's house! I want to go to we's house!" came from mamma's infolding arms.

"Why, Annie!" laughed papa, "is this the little girl who coaxed and coaxed to go away for a long week, and was even willing to go without papa and mamma?"

"But I want my we's house now! Oh, I want to go to we's house!" sobbed Annie.

Wise mamma did not attempt to reason, but cuddling the tearful face against her own, in old baby-fashion, crooned a low lullaby, till far away in slumberland little Annie found forgetfulness, and perhaps "we's house."

The next morning, in the bright sunshine, Annie was her happy, merry little self again. And the week passed quickly and pleasantly.

When the final good-byes were said, Annie could scarcely keep the tears back.

But that afternoon, from Annie's little play-room at home, mamma overheard the following conversation.

"I had the most splenderest time, Wosie Cawy, an' my Unkel Fank's got evy thing I guess—ducks an' hens an' shickens—little baby shickens, wiv fur an' not any fevvers—an' big horses an' little horses on tall legs."

"Oh my!" said wondering Rosie.

"But," resumed Annie, in a low tone, as if imparting a deep secret, "I know sumtin else, Woslana Cawy—sumfin betterer than shickens an' bwooks, an' dollies' boats an' horses an', an', an', anytin! There aint ever noffin so beautifuller as we's house!"—Youth's Companion.

A Woman, a Purse and a Baby.

Last Wednesday a lady came up from San Francisco having with her a small but aggressive baby. She also had with her a purse containing a considerable sum of money. The kid made a determined effort to gain possession of this plaything, and finally, to quiet it and relieve the passengers on the train, the youngster's wish was gratified. Thereupon, with exquisite good taste so often noticed in babies, the little miscreant threw it out of the car window. The anxious mother managed to have the car stopped and got off to look for her property, leaving the child behind. While she was walking back in the direction of the place where the purse fell, she was horrified to see the train move away with her offspring in it and disappear in the distance. She made a hasty search for the purse, but did not find it, for the very good reason that a gentleman who had been walking along the track had picked it up. She then proceeded to San Rafael, where she made things lively on account of her double loss. The affair, however, terminated happily. The kid had a pleasant ride as far as the Junction, from which it was sent back to the arms of its frantic parent. The purse was picked up by a Lake County, and consequently honest, man, who brought it to San Rafael and found the owner.—San Rafael (Cal.) Tocsin.

—Pope Leo XIII. has an annual income of $1,800,000, but it is said that his expenses for food are but fifty cents per day.

Religious.

SAVED.

Crouching in the twilight gray,
Like a hunted thing at bay,

In his brain one thought is rife:
Why not end the bootless strife?

Who in God's wide world would weep,
Should he brave death's dreamless sleep?

Hark! a child's voice, soft and clear,
Pulsing through the gloaming drear;

And the word the singer brings
Like a new evangel rings:

"Jesus loves me! this I know."
Swift his thoughts to childhood go.

Memories of a mother's face
Bending to her boy's embrace,

And the boy at eventide,
Kneeling by the mother's side,

Like "sweet visions of the night,"
Fill the lonesome place with light,

While the singer's tender trill—
"Jesus loves me! loves me still"—

Hovers in the dreamlit air
Like an answer to the prayer

Offered in those happy days
When he walked in sinless ways.

"Jesus loves me!" Can it be
His, this benedicite?

Is there One who knows and cares?
One who all his sorrows shares?

"Jesus loves me!" While the song
Guileless lips with joy prolong,

Lo! a soul has ceased its strife,
Reconciled to God and life.

—Mary B. Sleight, in Chicago Advance.

International Sunday-School Lessons.

THIRD QUARTER.

July 1	Joshua, Successor to Moses	Josh. 1: 1-9
July 8	Passing over Jordan	Josh. 3: 5-17
July 15	The Plains of Jericho and 6:1-5	Josh. 5:10-15
July 22	Israel defeated at Ai	Josh. 7:10-26
July 29	The Reading of the Law	Josh. 8:30 35
Aug. 5	The Cities of Refuge	Josh. 20: 1-09
Aug. 12	The Last Days of Joshua	Josh. 24:14-29
Aug. 19	Israel Forsaking God	Judg. 2: 6-16
Aug. 26	Gideon's Army	Judg. 7: 1- 8
Sept. 2	The Death of Samson	Judg. 16:21-31
Sept. 9	Ruth and Naomi	Ruth 1:14-22
Sept. 16	A Praying Mother	1 Sam. 1:21-28
Sept. 23	The Child Samuel	1 Sam. 3: 1-19
Sept. 30	Review.

"LOVE YE ONE ANOTHER."

"Little children," said One who was Himself Love, "Love one another; as I have loved you, love ye one another."

He was about to leave His disciples. With the foreknowledge of His impending suffering by crucifixion, His heart was yearning over those from whom He was soon to be separated, and as this last charge, the voice, which must have held more affection and tenderness than any other voice, said: "Little children, love one another; by this shall all men know that ye are My disciples, if ye have love one to another."

He had given them commands to preach the truth; to baptize. He had instituted the Holy Supper, had taught the doctrine of and insisted on the adherence to the Divine Truth; but His final test of discipleship was the having "love one to another."

"As I have loved you." What did that "as" hold? How had He loved them? He had gone to them when they were at work; He had been with them when they suffered; He had upheld them when they were weak; He had waited on them; given them in their need; healed the sick; cured the lame, made the blind to see; bound up the bruises of the wounded; comforted the afflicted; from no forms of sin and suffering had He ever turned away—thus had He loved them.

His first impulse, when He saw one commit a sin, was, not to rebuke or to condemn, but of great overwhelming compassion and mercy. Then, from the depths of His love and pity, He went down to the loved one where he stood, took him tenderly by the hand, and led him to a higher plane, away from the evil toward the good; and He went beside him all the way. The broken reeds He tried to straighten, to strengthen, to establish and encourage them to grow again in forms of use and beauty. The flax, of which He saw the smoke, was not condemned because of the smoke, but He said: "Lo, there is fire; there is life in the coals;" and He straightway went to work to fan the embers into a blaze of light and heat that should kill the smoke.

"Little children," the tender words are yet echoing, although, alas, so many of our ears are deaf, "love one another." Love one another with a love that is strong enough to endure, deep enough to forgive. Have compassion on each other's weakness; have pity on each other's blindness; have sympathy for each other's sorrow. Let not hearts that we might feed, go hungry; let not lives that we might help to fill, go empty. Pity, love, strengthen, with patient tenderness, others, even as we need the pitiful, tender, charitable, strengthening love ourselves.

Because others can not do just as we do, can not see just as we see, can not feel as we feel, it is no reason why we should harden our hearts against them. If they are wrong, they may learn better: if we are wrong we may learn to become aware of it; but, right or wrong, we are not here to judge each other, but to "love one another," to minister to one another; if we can aid each other to see the faults we possess—in love—we should do so, but never in any other spirit.

In every human being is the germ of Divine Life. Let us seek for that germ, believe in it; cling to it; let us love each other, not so much for what we are, as for what we are capable of becoming; bearing with patience in others—as they must do with us—that of which we disapprove; thus helping to make more possible the realization of an ideal of good which the Divine Love has placed in every heart.

Our hearts should ever be open to each other's word; love and sympathy should always be in them ready for acceptance. If we, as we too often do, even with one nearest and dearest, fail to see, to "hold fast" to, and encourage the highest life of which those we love are capable, we are robbing, not only those others, but ourselves, of advancement towards a more perfect rounding of character and life.

"It is our privilege to aspire to the love of God; but, little children, it is your duty to love one another. Ye are all alike weak, sinful, sorrowing. O pity one another, my children! Pity, I implore you, each other's weakness, pity each other's sorrow, but, most of all pity each other's sin. For, could ye but see aright, the sin, the sorrow and the weakness are but one."

If we have received a stone when we should have received bread, let us forget it, forgive it, and be sure that our own hands are filled with bread. Let not our speech, nay, nor our silence, bear aught but the "bread of life." Words, looks, actions, should all be so filled with our "love one to another," that they can not fail to bear its messages. We know not in what ground seed may fall, nor when renewed fountains of life spring forth. We know not what barren spot may become fruitful, nor what dark place shall be filled with light because of the fulfilling of this "law of life." We have been told that evil shall be turned to good, that dark ways shall be made easy, and crooked paths straight, but, side by side with these promises, stands the charge: "Little children, love one another."—Golden Rule.

Sunday Railway Trains.

The Railway Age, whose editor is a religious man and a member of the Presbyterian Church, has recently issued a circular to railroad managers inquiring how far it is necessary to dispatch trains on Sunday. The investigation was suggested by an order from the President of the Louisville, New Albany & Chicago Railway, forbidding the running of any trains on Sunday, except those carrying the United States mails. The questions asked by the Railway Age were as follows: "Do you consider it practicable to abandon the running of railway trains on Sunday? If not, is it practicable to diminish the number of trains now run? If practicable, is it desirable to prohibit all Sunday work on railways? Has your company taken any action toward diminution of Sunday labor? What is the present practice on your road in respect to Sunday labor? What, approximately, would be the net annual loss to your company from stopping all work on that day? Would the public as a whole be benefited or injured by a strict observance of the Sabbath by railways as a day of rest? An early reply in regard to this subject will, we are sure, be of much general interest and profit." Answers were received from the managers of three railway lines, and published. The President of the Wisconsin Central says a large part of Sunday railroad work is done under the pressure of what is considered a necessity. There are cases when to abandon the running of trains on that day would cause suffering to man and beast which would not be justifiable. The Wisconsin Central runs no excursion trains on Sunday, and no labor is done on that day that can be done on another. The President of the Illinois Central Road declares that "a rest of one day in seven is necessary to the physical and moral welfare of the employes, aside from any religious question." He thinks that trains leaving Chicago Saturday afternoon and evening, and which are kept in motion all day Sunday, might be abandoned. The General Manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Road says that company aims to have as little work done on Sunday as practicable. For convenience to trans-continental passengers, to avoid delay to through mails, and to guard against loss of perishable property, a few trains are run on Sunday. The President of the Michigan Central Road also takes strong ground against Sunday labor. The editor of the Railway Age says: "Probably there is no man, officer or employe, who does not often wish that on the general day of the world's rest it might be possible for every one connected with the railways to rest also; that the iron steeds might for one day in a week stand quiet in their stalls; that the weary wheels of cars might stop their noisy revolutions, and that the rails might cease to vibrate with the clangor of worldly traffic and grow cool under the breezes of the Sabbath morning. But the railway has become a disturber of old ways, and its management has introduced new habits and created new necessities. How far shall this tremendous innovator be allowed to go in subverting Christian customs and beliefs? how far shall it be allowed to destroy peace and invade the happiness of the home?" The public is responsible for Sunday railway travel. There is no doubt that perhaps one train each Sunday should be run; but that the amount of traffic done on that day is much greater than is necessary, we have no doubt.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

Wise Sayings.

—The way to preserve the peace of the church is preserve the purity of it.

—The truly illustrious are they who do not court the praise of the world, but perform the actions which deserve it.

—God is pleased with no music below so much as the thanksgiving songs of relieved widows and supported orphans; of rejoicing, comforted and thankful persons.—Jeremy Taylor.

—What is a good life worth if it be not crowned by a good death? Yet a good life is the nearest approach in our power to a good death. There have been comparatively few good deaths which have not come at the end of good lives.—Faber.

—I was once in a large company where very severe things were spoken of an absent gentleman, when a person seasonably observed that though the Lord was pleased to effect conversion and edification by a variety of means, he had never known anybody convinced of error by what was said behind his back.—John Newton.

—The hope of immortality pervades our entire human life. Next to the idea of God it is the greatest, the most elevating, the most inspiring idea of which we are capable. Only think of the conscious darkness, and loss, and degradation that would befall human life were the great hope of immortality lost to it! Is it any wonder that instinctively, as we recoil from a traitor, an assassin, a desecrator of a mother's grave, we shrink from the man who not only gratuitously, but eagerly, vauntingly, scoffingly, thrusts at you his shocking demonstration that man is no more than the brute that perishes?—Exchange.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JUNE 27, 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	½ "	40
¼ "	¼ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 24 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor.
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor.
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General.
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer,
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction.
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

The Democrats of Ohio nominated Judge George Hoadly for governor.

THE citizens of Bardstown were flying from the small-pox, last week, it having become an epidemic.

EDITORIALLY, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the day after the Ohio Democratic State Convention, was remarkably quiet on that subject.

HOGS.—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $6 30@6 50; fair to good packers, at $5 90@6 25; fair to good light, $6 15@6 30; common, $5 20@5 80; culls, $4 00@5 20: stock hogs, $5 25@6 00.

THE soldiers sent to Menifee Co., to capture Profit and Morrison, two of the Barnett gang of desperadoes, returned without them. They were all the time kept informed by their friends as to the whereabouts of the soldiers.

THE trial of Frank James for murder in connection with the Gallatin, Missouri, bank robbery, fourteen years ago, and the Winston train robbery in 1881, have been continued in the Gallatin, Missouri, Circuit Court until August the 7th.

THE Southern Exposition at Louisville will be a magnificent exhibition, and Kentucky products should be well represented there. We would like to know of arrangements being made for Boone county to occupy a place in that grand collection of the fruits of industry.

A PERSON who edits a country newspaper has to do a great deal of thinking—he can not possibly avoid it. Sometimes he thinks of one thing and then he thinks of another, and sometimes when he thinks of one thing it makes him think of some other.—[Newark Courier.

Miss Lizzie Charles and H. L. Brinkley registered, at a New York hotel, as man and wife. A court in New York decided that in common law they were married, and granted her a divorce and alimony. Miss Lizzie has compromised with Brinkley and gets a cool $10,000 in cash.

There was a large decrease in the corn crop of 1882 which yielded 55,750 bushels, while the crop of 1881 was 378,938 bushels.

The above paragraph appeared in our last issue in the statistics taken from the assessor's book, and is incorrect, in as much as the corn crop in 1882 was 755.750 bushels, which makes it larger than the '81 crop.

AARON FRAZIER, the negro who was sent to the penitentiary in Indiana, for the murder of John M. Walton, has had published, in one of the Greensburg papers, a letter in which he denies that Mrs. Walton had anything to do with the murder of her husband. He says that he implicated her because he was told to do so and was afraid to testify other than to her complicity.

WE have before us a copy of the Vedette, containing a longthy, laudatory obituary of Maj. William W. McCoy, who was born in this county in 1811, graduated as a doctor at the Transylvania University in Lexington, served with distinction in the Mexican war, and in 1852 emigrated to California, where he died one of its wealthiest and most honored citizens, having served his state, honorably, in many positions of trust.

EDUCATION.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

One of the hardest things to do in this world, is to present disagreeable facts to the public in an agreeable manner. There are a good many obnoxious things that are most easily done, through the convenient medium of newspapers, such as the announcement of candidates' names, the dunning of people who never pay, the first intimation of a divorce case, the yearly lecture on the stock laws, and game laws, and gentle hints about schools and school teachers.

To plunge boldly into the subject, our schools are not what they should be. The people are waking up to a knowledge of this fact, and beginning to inquire why we have so little school money, and why the money we have, makes so little show.

A discussion of our educational problem was suggested by the receipt of the common school report, gotten out by our State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Jos. Desha Pickett, who, in this book, gives a careful statement of the money Kentucky expends on education, and the returns made to the people in the way of common schools.

No true Kentuckian likes to stand by, defenceless, and hear our system of education laughed at by persons from almost any other state in the union. Yet what can we do? We know that we are taxed for school purposes; we know that this money is paid into the hands of men chosen to look after the public schools, but we see that our general school system is far below the standard that the wealth and intelligence of the people set for the schools at which their children must be educated. What we can do to be able to compare our schools favorably with the public schools of other states is a problem that can only be solved by experiment. I can offer no suggessions as to this. but will endeavor to put before the people of this county some of the facts in the case, and leave the remedy in their own hands.

We must, in the first place, realize the importance of public schools. Kentucky has as many good private schools and colleges as any state, but the class of people who can afford to educate their children at such institutions besides paying a tolerably heavy tax for public schools, is exceedingly limited.

The public school system is for the benefit of those who cannot afford to spend a fortune on the education of each child. Now-a-days, when presidents are chosen from the class that, in the South, would be called "poor white trash," every boy, no matter how situated, may aspire to any position which lies within the power of the people to give. It is the work of the public schools to fit all the children of the state for any position that they may be called upon to occupy.

The day of placing upon a jury twelve uneducated men, because they may be supposed to render an unbiased decision, to pronounce a verdict on a case requiring keen discrimination, has gone by, and twelve men who have fair educations, active minds and principles of honesty, are sought to fill their places. How soon our juries will be composed of men above bribery by the friends of a criminal, or an unprincipled jury lawyer—men capable of filling so responsible a place, depends mainly on how much of a success we make of our schools for the education of the people. The statistics of crime all over the states, shows that the larger proportion of brutal murders, malicious arson and theft are committed among the totally ignorant classes. The great remedy for crime then, would seem to be in compulsory education.

When we see that the school system is such a benefit to the state in these ways, it behooves all of us who have the welfare of the state at heart, to make some effort to bring our schools up to the right standard.

In Mr. Pickett's report, the number of districts in which no school was taught, the districts in which the number of school children enrolled is far greater than the number in attendance, the number of log school houses, unfit for use, vary somewhat in each county, but in nearly every county of the state, the report is discouraging.

Our neighboring states, Ohio and Indiana, are continually before our eyes as models in respect to neat school buildings, patent desks, and well paid teachers. In both of these states the public schools are considered as of first importance, and not as a secondary matter, as is too often the case with us.

I was talking to a gentleman from Nebraska, not long ago, who said, "Our schools are something to be proud of. Comfortable houses, holding from 50 to 75 pupils, and teachers with salaries twice as large as those you give in Kentucky, show how prosperous and enlightened we are." To think of the advancement of the far West, in this respect, and then to think of our "log school houses, unfit for use," is enough to make us hang our heads.

Coming down from generalizing about the whole school system, let us take a view of our own county.

Boone county is taxed to the amount of $10,000 for school purposes. Mr. Pickett's report shows that we receive exactly $4,786 56 in return. It may be all right to let more than half of our school money go for the support of the pauper counties, but it is hard to view it in that light when we need it so much at home.

Burlington posseses one of the two brick buildings of the county, that Mr. Picket enumerates, but school is rarely held for more than five months of the year in it, and even then, it is a subscription school, to which the poorer class, and the class most in need of education, has no access.

With our $10,000 of taxation, we certainly ought to afford a better school house for public use, than the little frame building that disgraces a muddy hillside, and narrowly escapes being "unfit for use."

Among other questions that come up in regard to school matters, the point of teachers' wages, is a vexed one. Mr. Picket says that the average per month in this county, is about $30 for both male and female teachers. The way it actually stands is, counting in subscriptions:

Male teachers per month from $40 to $75
Female " " " " $20 to $30

This is little too great a difference, considering all points of ability, in tact, education, energy and muscle.

Your truly, G. I. M.

MT. STERLING LETTER.

MT. STERLING, KY. June 18, 1883.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

This is county court day here and the city is crowded with people. Stock of all kinds are sold on the streets and it keeps from 3 to 5 auctioneers busy selling them. About 100 head of mountain cattle on the market to-day and are selling from 4½ to 6c, according to quality.

There has been a large crowd in town every day this week to hear the trial of the notorious Barnett gang for the murder of one Vaughn Helton, on the 12th of May last. Seven of the gang plead guilty to the charge and were sentenced to the penitentiary for life at hard labor. When Judge Riddell passed sentence on them Barnett gave completely away and wept like a child.

Barnett the leader of the gang is a tall, slim man, about 45 years old, high cheek bones, and in his walk, carries himself in a very uneasy manner, looking like a man that would be guilty of just such a crime as he was sent up for. At the time of the murder Barnett was Justice of the Peace, in his county, Menifee, and as Judge Riddell expressed it, the county has got rid of seven good democrats.

This is the home of Gen. John S. Williams, our U. S. Senator, and he is seen on the streets nearly every day. He is a candidate for re-election.

Crops of all kinds look well in this county, (Montgomery). Wheat is heavy and nearly ready to be harvested, and the farmers say will make an average yield of 25 bushels to the acre. This is surely the garden spot of Old Kentucky, as every one seems prosperous and enjoying life. We will leave this city for Stanton, Powell county, to-morrow. J. B. T.

The following shows the number of pounds of tobacco raised in this county commencing in 1864. The figures were taken from the Assessor's books

1864	1,402,700
1865	491,650
1868	189,300
1874	828,806
1875	276,530
1876	624,020
1877	895.621
1879	978,445
1880	1,846,660
1881	2,071,193
1882	2,591,386
1883	2,797,798

Two or three years are not given because the books for those years do not give the aggregate number of pounds.

It must be born in mind that a book for any particular year shows the crop grown the previous year.

During the past ten years the crop has been doubled.

IT is said that a tribe of Indians having tails have been discovered in South America. It is hard to believe that tail.

EIGHTEEN unseaworthy vessels belonging to the navy are to be sold. We mention this to notify any of our readers who want to buy a second hand ship.

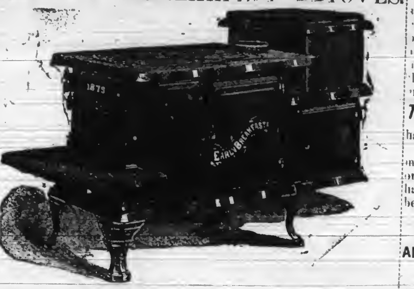
Communications without the signature of the writer are never published. Please remember this:

AT H. F. BLASE,
540 Madison St., - - Covington, Ky.

You can find the best assortment of SUITINGS in the three cities. Thousands of elegant designs of all the leading European and American fabrics. Good, honest dealing and a perfect fit guaranteed.

540 Madison street, - Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.



Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years.. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

STATE NEWS.

—A Grant county man has a razor made in 1750.

—The sheriff of McLean county committed suicide because of financial embarrassment.

--A clap of thunder denuded a Frankfort negress, and stunned many others. The sky was cloudless at the time.

—Carlisle Mercury; The wheat crop in this county is not promising well; that harvest will be good, but the thin stand will make the yield light.

—A young man's funeral took place from a Frankfort church on the same day and at the same hour his sister was to have been married in same church.

—Mt. Sterling, June 20.—A train containing the 150 Shorthorn cattle of the Hamiltons, Senator Williams and Corwin Anderson, valued at $100,000, left here for Chicago today. The train will be in Louisville to-morrow and will go over the L., N. A. and C. to Chicago. This is the largest and most valuable shipment of cattle ever made and is an evidence of the importance of the cattle interest at this place, which is the highbred cattle center of the world.

Telling it very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can, but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it short this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of letter paper."

"Here you are, sir, then, and there are thousands of people here in Bingham, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Guilfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in this city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines usually given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends and customers forgot me, as though I were under ground,

'With the end of my nose and the tip of my toes
Turned up to the roots of the daises.'

My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except death. That is God's truth, and Mr. Mosher, here, knows it.

"I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago. I'm lively as a cricket now, sir and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipaled inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

NOTICE TO Contractors and Builders.

Sealed proposals will be received at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind., until seven o'clock p. m.,

Thursday, July 12th, 1883,

for the building of the Christian Chapel above the foundation, according to the plans and specifications.

Proposals for each part of the work separate will also be received.

Plans and specifications on file at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

The building committee reserve the right to reject any or all bids, and a sufficient bond must be furnished with the bids for the entire building, as a guarantee that the building will be completed according to the plans and specifications.

JOHN SORTWELL, Sr, J. H. RUSSE,
JOHN H. LOVE, A. G. TEBBS,
J. W. TEBBS, W. M. TERRILL
Building Committee.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., June 20, 1883.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court Kentucky.

The Central Ky. Lunatic Asylum, Plff. vs Richard Green, &c, Defts	}	Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a Judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April Term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 2nd day of July, 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 12 months, at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the Judgment to wit:

The defendent Richard Green's ⅓ interest in the dower of Mr. Ellen Green in the land of E. T. Green—said dower contains 10 acres and bounded by the lands of John E. Walton, John M. Moody and others.

The purchaser will be required to give bond with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W. L. RIDDELL, M C B C

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup

TRADE MARK.

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St, New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:—This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83.

JNO. S. DORMAN & CO.
—DEALERS IN—
MILLINERY, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS,
Clothing, Carpets, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Trunks, Valises, &c.
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - INDIANA.

A. M. Elliott AND Co,
—DEALERS IN—
Threshers,
Engines,
SAW MILLS, HORSE POWERS, BUCKEYE
Reapers, Mowers and Self-Binders.
South Bend Chilled Plows, Furst & Bradley Steel Plows,
Buggies, Wagons and Farming Implements in General.

Give us a call. Satisfaction guaranteed in every sale. Corner second and Judiciary Streets, Aurora, Indiana. 33-6t

LOOK HERE!
when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on
Winegardner
He has a large assortment of
Wall Paper!
And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.
Inks, Pens and Stationary
constantly on hand.
Headquaters in Lotton House.

NOTICE.

Know all men by this notice: That Elzy Garrison, H. A. Hicks, B. L. Rice, C. C. Talbott, Wallace Garrison, John S. Mason and T. A. Huey, under the name and style of the Richwood and Big Bone Turnpike Co., have associated themselves together to contract and operate a turnpike road, beginning at its intersection with the Union and Beaver Lick turnpike, just southeast of Dr. H. C. Lassing's residence, in Boone county, Kentucky, and running thence in a general westwardly direction along an established and surveyed route, in a main line to Elzy Garrison's gate, and consisting of said main line and a branch turnpike, beginning at Robert Willis' corner with Richard Howlett, on the old Big Bone and Union dirt road, running in a general northwardly direction until it intersects the general main line at a point S. E. of C. T. Rice's old homestead. Said main line and branch road shall be called the Richwood & Big Bone Turnpike.

Big Bone or some point on the road shall be the principal place of business.

The amount of capital stock shall be $10,000, to be paid in as the work progresses,

Said corporation shall date from June 9, 1883, and continue fifty years.

Its officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer and five directors, all of whom shall be ellected annually on January 1st of each year.

It shall not subject itself, at any time, to a greater liability or indebtedness than $6,000.

Private property shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ELZIE GARRISON, H. A. HICKS, B. L. RICE,
WALLACE GARRISON, JOHN S. MASON,
COURTNEY C. TALBOTT. T. A. HUEY.
June 12, 4t.

STATE COLLEGE OF KENTUCKY.
UNSECTARIAN. Fall session begins Sept. 12, 1883. Fifteen Professors and Instructors. Scientific, Classical, Agricultural, Normal School and Commercial Courses of Study. Tuition and Matriculation fees, $20 per annum. Board in dormitory, $2.25 per week; in private families, $4.50. 320 students last year. Buildings, apparatus & machinery entirely new. Capacity for 600 students. Range of study wider and expenses less than any college in Kentucky. For catalogues apply to Judge W. B. KINKEAD, or to JAMES K. PATTERSON, Ph. D., President of the College, Lexington, Ky.

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Erlanger Hotel.
JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.
First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!
Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs, PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & CO., Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER
was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE
FOR THE
WHISKERS
Will change the beard to a natural brown, or black, as desired. It produces a permanent color that will not wash away. Consisting of a single preparation, it is applied without trouble.
PREPARED BY
R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N.H.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

FOR ALL THE FORMS OF Scrofulous, Mercurial, and Blood Disorders, the best remedy, because the most searching and thorough blood-purifier, is
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles, $5.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

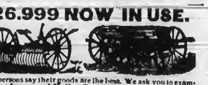
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Exceeds the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

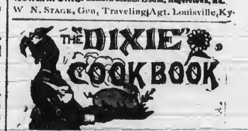
Paynes' Automatic Farm Engines
OF ALL KINDS.—Established 1840.

Our 10-Horse Spark Arresting Threshing Engine has cut 10,000 feet Pine Lumber in 10 hours. Will burn wood 8 feet long, coal, Straw and corn stalks. Send for Price List and Catalogue G.
B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

26.999 NOW IN USE.



All persons say their goods are the best. We ask you to examine our Improved Keller Positive Force Feed, Grain, Seed and Fertilizing Drill and our Hay Rakes. They are as good as the best, and can be sold as cheap. All are warranted. Circulars mailed free. Newark Machine Co., Newark, Ohio. Eastern Branch House, Hagerstown, Md.
W. N. STAGE, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky.



THE "DIXIE" COOK BOOK

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO., ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles
works of character; great variety; low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co. 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

Monday is County Court.

Next Wednesday is the glorious fourth.

Burlington vs. Newport, at Burlington, July 4th.

A. W. Gaines is city attorney for Lawrenceburg.

The northern part of the county has the base-ball fever bad.

B. S. Kirkpatrick has applied for a patent on a screw-driver.

The Petersburg pike is in the best condition we ever saw it.

A. S. Gaines will drived about 1,500 lambs to the city this week.

O. P. Tanner can go up head. It rained on seven successive Sundays.

O. T. Porter found his mule at "Tick" Terrill's, about 2 miles from home.

In a few days the country will be scoured in search of harvest hands.

J. M. Conner started a drove of 500 lambs toward Covington, last Friday.

The corn, wheat and meadows on the Burlington and Petersburg pike look well.

Attorney Tolin's commissions on fines assessed last week amounted to 9 mills.

Wheat harvest has commenced. Half a crop will be made. Neither rust nor smut in the fields.

Last week it took a postal card mailed at Erlanger four days to reach Burlington, its destination.

Legrand Gaines is remodelling his dwelling, and when done it will have quite a palatial appearance.

The pic-nic at Walton's woods Saturday was a very pleasant affair as are all they have at that place.

A walking plasterparis toy shop was in town one day last week, and for a while did a good business.

The reputation of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood medicine is maintained by cures made and daily making.

There will be a basket meeting at the Middle Creek Universalist church the first Sunday in July, next Sunday.

S. G. Botts, of Petersburg, has taken over two barrels of honey from his bees this season, and his harvest is not over yet.

Another offset in the temperature was reached Monday night, and Tuesday morning fires had that old time pleasantness about them.

We understand that a post mortem was held on Robert Smith, and a peach seed was taken from his intestines. It was worn perfectly smooth.

"The Infirmities of Men of Genius," was orated upon by J. W. Gaines at the Georgetown College commencement, while J. S. Kirtley handled the subject, "Responsibilities of Progressive Thinkers."

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent.

We hear some talk of building a big pond near town and stocking it with fish, for the benefit of those that enjoy that kind of sport. And as a suggestion we would think a row of shade trees would be very beneficial to the—.

We are sorry to chronicle the death of Robert Smith, of Plattsburg. The sad event occurred last Thursday. Mr. Smith was an honest, industrious going man, who will be greatly missed in the neighborhood where he lived all his life.

Wm. O'Brien was brought here and lodged in jail to remain one month for stealing a pocket knife from Ira Percival, of Walton. He went into Percival's store to buy a knife, and slipped one into his pocket. W. E. Vest brought him down.

About two weeks ago, Mrs. Anna Kirkpatrick broke a sewing machine needle off in the palm of her hand. It could not be removed and after remaining in the flesh eight days was taken out at the back of her hand. The piece was about an inch long and caused her much pain.

There were a series of trials at this place last week in which the colored population figured. The first was for assault and battery committed by a negro woman on a 12 year-old negro girl. This was tried before Esq. Gaines and a jury, the jury fixing the fine at one cent. Two days elapsed and the colored devine was brought before Esq. Baker, charged with stealing a hoe. In this case the 'Squire found a verdict of "not guilty". Previous to the trial, Henry Fry and Hade White met the aforesaid devine on the road and gave him a flogging. Immediately upon being acquitted the said moral instructor had a warrant issued for his assailants and Thursday they were arraigned before Esquire Baker and jury which fined each one cent and cost.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mrs. S. P. Tilley is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. F. Blythe.

Mrs. T. W. Finch and children are visiting her father in Williamstown.

Miss Kate Bradford, of Florence, was the guest of Mrs. Lillie Hall, Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Dora Rich, of Kenton county, is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. F. McKim of this place.

Mrs. Fonlke, Mrs. Augusta and son, of Paris, Ill., were the guests of Miss Mary Thompson Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Light and daughter, Miss Mary, of Covington, were the guests of Mrs. F. Riddell last Thursday.

N. S. Walton and wife passed through town Thursday. Mr. W. was out looking after his political interest.

Francis Kreylich, wife and daughter, Miss Kate, of Kenton county, were the guests of Mrs. Dempsey, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Kate Creager, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Hall, of this place, returned to her home, Loveland, Ohio, Wednesday.

Base-ball.

The hottest contested game of base-ball, and one that created more interest than any ever played in the county, was played on the base-ball park at Petersburg last Saturday between the Almonts and the Bullittsvilles in the presence of 300 or 400 people, who at times were wild with enthusiasm. The two clubs are pretty equally matched with a strong rivalry existing between them, and the Bullittsville neighborhood sent down nearly all its able bodied citizens to cheer her favorite ball tossers to victory, while Petersburg turned out en masse to applaud the Almonts. Old Sol played upon the crowd with all his power, but the excitement destroyed his heating qualities, and he hid his face behind a cloud in despair when the game was about half out.

The Almonts' out-field was cared for by Cox in the right, Yerkes in center and Smith in the left. They covered all the ground and made several beautiful and difficult fly catches, many of which occurred at critical points in the game. The infield was well manned and especially the four corners of the diamond. Joe Ferris was lively as a cricket and did effective work for a disabled man. The Almont's pitcher was hard to get on to, while the catcher played a strong game. The short stop was a good one and made several good stops.

For the Bullittsville out-field there were Willie Gaines in the right, Stephens in the center and Kinney in left. These boys clamped every thing coming within their reach, Gaines covering himself all over with glory by a beautiful fly catch out of which a difficult double play was made. Botts played first base for all there was in it, while Duncan's playing at second and behind the bat was nearly perfect. Clore's pitching was very effective, while Sickels, with but one exception, a bad throw to first, got all out of the game there was in it. Moreland on third and Snyder at short did good telling work. Below is the score by innings:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	T
Petersb'g	2	5	0	0	0	1	0	5	1	—14
Bullits.	2	0	1	0	0	2	3	0	4	—12

NOTES.

Charlie Schramm is Dr. Ed's first lieutenant.

When the game closed the Almonts' friends made the welking ring with their shouts, hats flew high in the air, old men hugged and the young ones wept for joy.

A coincident—William Clore's supply of flour gave out the day the Almonts and Bullittsville crossed bats.

J. D. Norris did not shout, he could not do the subject justice.

The crowd had more enthusiasm to the square inch than any crowd we ever saw.

Sore throats will be an epidemic in the Petersburg and Bullittsville neighborhoods.

It looks like base-ball is becoming popular when as many of the best business men in the county attend a game as were present last Saturday.

The Hebron club visited Cleves, O., last Saturday, and were defeated by the club at that place by a score of 10 to 7.

Hebron and Petersburg will cross bats at Hebron next Saturday.

Died.

CRAVEN—On the 20th inst., of paralysis, at the residence of his son-in-law Ephraim Aylor, near this place, Benjamin Craven.

In the death of Mr. Craven another pioneer citizen of this county and state has passed away. Mr. Craven was born in Nelson county, Kentucky, February 4th, 1792, and consequently at the time of his death was in the 92d year of his age. When quite young his parents moved to Ohio, near Hamilton, where they remained but a short time, moving to North Bend, this county, and seventy-eight years ago Mr. Craven's father settled where Wash Craven now resides, it being a portion of the farm on which the subject of this notice resided, except a very short period he lived in Ohio, until his death.

Benjamin Craven was drafted during the war 1812, and after going into camp took the measles, and his health continuing bad, hired a substitue to take his place. He was in Capt. Sebree's company.

He was the father of eleven children, four sons and five daughters, nine of whom survive him, and all are honorable and worthy citizens.

Mr. Craven lived a long and honorable life, was a kind and loving father, and a good neighbor, as will be testified to by all who knew him, and his neighbors mourn his loss, though spared to them as long as he was.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Farmers are as busy as bees.

Mrs. Geo. O. Hafer is quite sick at this writing.

Mrs. Lucinda Clore is visiting relatives in Cynthiana.

Jeff Cloud has returned from Springfield, Ohio, where he has been attending school.

Lonnie Gaines has returned from Montgomery county, Indiana.

Ed Clayton, of Constance, was on our streets, Sunday.

T. A. Rouse says he did not attend the game of ball at Cleves, Saturday.

C. C. Davis, telegrapher, was at home Sunday.

Farmers are about done setting out tobacco.

Mrs. Hester Anderson's funeral will be preached on the 3d Sunday in July, by Rev. G. M. Grau.

Rabbit Hash.

Farmers in East Bend have commenced harvesting their wheat.

James Conner, of your town was in our neighborhood a few days ago collecting lambs that had previously been bought.

Miss Melson, of Aurora, is the guest of Miss Zou Holmes.

Clarence Gleason has been feeling indisposed for several days, and is taking a rest from his business.

Rev. Briscoe, of Louisville, preached at the Baptist church Saturday and Sunday.

Born—The 14th inst., to Murray Ryle and wife, a daughter.

It is the intention of a number of our young folks to attend the marriage of Miss Delie Allen and Mr. Will Botts, at the Bellevue church next Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Mary Calvert, an old ex-resident of these parts is visiting friends in our neighborhood. She is accompanied by her neice, Miss Jessie Bachelor, of Lockland, Ohio, and Master John Friend.

Florence X-Roads.

Daniel Burlow is the sweetest man near here, having taken upwards of 100 gallons of extracted honey.

F. H. Russell gave the young folks a dance Saturday night. Geo. Knapp, jr., entertained them with his banjo and comic songs so long that several of them got dreached before they got home.

Saturday night the colored folks had a moonlight hop near Ephraim Tanner's, and a trouble arose in which pistols took an active part. During the melee one horse was shot.

Some of the voters around here want to know Dr. Scott's and N. S. Walton's positions on the road law, stock law, dog law and school law.

Prof. Taylor gave our town an interesting and instructive show and lecture Tuesday evening. At the close of the performance presents were given those receiving the most votes as follows: To Stanton Crisler, the ugliest man in the house, jews harp; Miss Martha Hood, as the handsomest lady, an album. No votes were cast for the laziest man, but the proprietor presented John P. Utz with the cane.

Beaver Lick.

Well, after returning from the big Latonia races, it would be unkind in us not to say something about them to those who were fortunate enough to avoid them. If there is any one thing on earth more especially adapted to the total demoralization of the people than any other one thing, it is horse-racing, beyond a doubt. Just to see the excitement racing creates; the disposition to bet on a favorite and general evil tendency, blunts the imagination to conceive its worst influence and accompanying depraving results. The wealth of Kenton has bestowed on the of society of Covington a cancer that will never stop its ravages while there remains a vital principle of morality ensconsced in the bosom of Covington and her sister cities.

There is some cosiderable feeling here, now, like this: If the turnpike is completed to Big Bone Springs this fall, which our friends assure us, then our people will run a little road to Beaver, connecting with the Richwood road. Now, that's just the thing.

There is some complaint about the tiny grasshoppers devouring the late set tobacco

The Hamilton club beat the Patriot club, at Patriot, Saturday 43 to 2.

Leander Setters, of Riddell's Run, gave several of his respected friends quite an elegant fish dinner, one day last week.

Some of our best citizens are now preparing to have a big barbecue at the springs the 4th of July, and to invite the candidates for the legislature to address our voters on that day.

All kinds of stock are selling higher in this locality than they have for many years

Scattersville.

Yum, yum, yum! our bill of fare shows up new potatoes, peas and beans.

The cherry harvest is about over. It did not amount to much in this locality.

This has been a fine week for work, and the farmers are catching up. Some corn is laid by and is looking nice.

Potatoes are looking fine this season. No one need be without them next winter, as we think there will be plenty for all.

Wheat harvest is coming in a few days, and then we will sweat.

Some clover has been cut in our locality, and there will be a fine crop of timothy to cut after awhile.

Raspberries are getting ripe. Then cream and sugar will be in demand.

We give Howard & Kirtley a cordial invitation to come down and kill as many of our———crows as they wish.

Prayer meeting was held at F. Rue's last Wednesday night. There were some members from Big Bone present. They say they had a good meeting.

O. B. Utz and family were visiting here last Sunday. W. M. Conner and family and Lewis Conner and wife were visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Conner.

As we sit and scrible we can hear the music of that famous cow bell as it is shaken by some expert at settling bees.

Some of our young men turned out last Saturday at noon for the purpose of taking in the picnic at Walton's Grove, while some turned out for dinner, and then hoed tobacco all the evening.

Wm. Rue's funeral was preached at Big Bone last Sunday by Rev. J. S. Kirtley.

John Mitchell delivered his lambs at this place, one day last week. He had 16 very fat lambs. Lewis Conner was the purchaser.

Petersburg.

Miss Pauline Berkshire, of Lawrenceburg, is home for a few days.

Mr. Charlie Snyder, of Louisville, Ky., dispatched for Dr. Ed Terrill last Sunday to come and see his father, who was very sick with low form of fever. Mr. Snyder being an old friend of Ed's, he lost no time in getting there.

Miss Lou Kastner, a charming young girl of Aurora, Ind., was the guest of Misses Mary and Kate Weindell, last week.

E. V. Newman, of Rising Sun, was here on business, last Wednesday. As he was here but a short time we failed to find out what his business was.

Wind and saw-dust by the yard or gallon, at Botts & Fenton's second hand express store.

M. S. Rice surveyed the town, last Wednesday, for the town authorities, and found it partly fenced in. We think the trustees are going to fence in the rest of the town and then white wash it. Good chance for you, Billy.

J. Frank Grant and wife were visiting friends at Carrollton, Ky., last week.

Mrs. Alice Walker, of Bellevue, is visiting her many friends at this place.

The second annual picnic given by the Sons of Temperance, of this place, at Parlor Grove, Saturday, June 16th, was a grand success in every particular. It was well attended and every body seemed to enjoy themselves, especially those that took part in the merry dance. Professor Steele, of Aurora, furnished the music for the occasion. The boys spared no pains in trying to make it the boss picnic of the season, and deserve much credit for the way and manner in which it was conducted.

Florence.

The blackberry crop promises to be very large, more especially the variety known as the Early Thompson, extensively cultivated in the celebrated Union nursery.

Talking about gardens! Why, Mr. Ed, if you were to step into our flower garden, you would think you were in company with Miss Neilson or Joe Reed, with a bottle of cologne water sprinkled on him.

Milton Souther has opened a bed-spring factory here.

Two big medicine men fell out, the other day, and punched more holes in the air than is generally seen in a sorghum strainer

An example explains best, thought Eph Weaver when he put the old, rusty mule bit in Jim Smith's mouth to show him how the Dutchman bridled the mule.

I hardly know what us women will do with ourselves, unless we go to the mountains of "Hepsedam," or someother milldam and go in fishing.

Some people don't like to be talked about in the papers, but they like to read about others. They remind us of railroad slings printed in large letters, KEEP OFF OF THIS BRIDGE OR GET KILLED.

George Aydlott did not know that the drotted thing was loaded. He was cleaning out a pistol and it shot him through the hand.

Joe Laile was overcome by heat the other day.

There are very conflicting reports in regard to Mr. Harrison's child that fell in the cistern. The child is still in a very critical condition.

Geo. M. Bedinger, of Erlanger, aged 26, died Monday.

Miss Carrie Smith has returned home after a three weeks visit to North Bend.

John M. Palmer, of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, was visiting his brother at this place, Tuesday.

The Gallatin county Teachers' Institute is in session this week, commencing to-day.

If you want one of W. M. Conner's hay conveyor's, call on Geo. Baker and Sam Crutcher, Florence X-Roads. See ad in another column.

The Warsaw Independent says that William Carpenter, who has been ill for over a year from the effects of poisoning by ivy, is slowly improving.

NOTICE—I have heard very often within the last month, that I am to be married shortly, and now I hear some kind friend has set the day. I will be under many obligations to said friend if he or she will notify me in time, as I am not aware of it. If the shoe does not fit do not wear it.

CHAS. FOWLER.

The rites of matrimony will be solemnized, by Rev. Dicken, in the Bellevue Baptist church this evening after prayer meeting, uniting by its holy bonds Mr. William Botts and Miss Delie Allen. They take upon themselves the solemn duties of husband and wife early in life, and start in their new relations with the best wishes of a host of friends.

Geen apples and cholera morbus.

Hay Conveyors.

We take this method of informing the public that we are MANUFACTURING and SELLING W. M. CONNER'S

HAY CONVEYORS.

Just the thing to use in large barns

BAKER & CRUTCHER,
Florence X-Roads.

35-4t

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

James West, Plff.
vs
James Marshall, Deft.
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 2nd day of july 1883, at 1 o'clock p.m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 9 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

A tract of land in Boone county, Ky., near Richwood church, beginning at a corner of Black, Hughes and Cleek; thence running with Cleek's line to a sugar tree; thence back into the farm of the grantor so as to strike a point from which a line run to Hughe's line taking the line first run and Hughes' line for two of the bounding lines and the other two lines so as to make 50 acres. For a more particular description see county surveyor's report on file in Circuit Clerks office.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $083 39

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

John A Kendall's Adm'r, Plff
vs
John A Kendall's heirs, &c, Defts
| Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the April term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will on Monday, the 2nd day of July 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being county court day), proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6, 12 & 18 months equal installments, at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Near Burlington, Boone county, Ky., bounded on the North by the lands of Mrs Lucy Rogers on the West by the road leading from the East Bend road to Gunpowder Creek, on the South by the dower of Mrs Mary E Kendall, and Jonas Delph, on the East by Samuel Pope.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale $2,011 30

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 3 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55½ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good.

MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
UMDERTAKERS
—AND—
EMBALMERS,

Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞ Office over Dudley Rouse's Store. ☜

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington. - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

---

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

---

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

☞ Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

---

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

---

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON,
President,
Petersburg, Ky.

J. H. WALTON,
Secretary,
Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, J. C. RILEY,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.
R O U S E.
FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.

QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE.
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES.)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO THE
Petersburg Drug Store,
Where you can find everything in the
Drug line, such as——
Well call and see and be convinced.
Respectfully, S. C BUCHANAN.

HARNESS & SADDLES,
ALBERT M. ACRA,
BURLINGTON, KY.
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,

I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Repairing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, A. R. Mullen, L. C. Stephens, E. J. Hickey, L. H. Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

---

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23
J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.
We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS. HEBRON, KY.

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE
At Farmdale, P. O., Franklin Co., Ky., six miles from Frankfort. [illegible] Sept. 3. For Catalogues, etc., address COL. R. D. ALLEN, Supt.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

THE FIRST HOME-NEST.

Sweet was that morn of love's content,
When Kate and I, just wedded,
On grave housekeeping business bent,
The village byways threaded;
For at nest-building round about
Were all the birds, new-mated,
And no more thought of boarding out,
Dear Kate said, than if fated
To singleness, with all its woes;
And were our views more narrow
And poor, she naively asked, than those
Of robin, finch and sparrow?

And glad was I to have agreed
With her; for, ere was ended
Our search, just such a nest at need
We found as both commended.
A humble, humble cot, well nigh
By twenty paces bounded,
But well within our means, and by
A garden wall surrounded.
And thence, with love and thrift so fair
A domicile we made it,
No fear remained that carping care
Or want would ere invade it.

There found we the repose, begun
In marriage rites; there mustered
Our higher powers; there one by one
Our brood about us clustered.
And when at last all, all our own
We called our home thus builded,
Less proud, I think, was King on throne,
Or Queen in palace gilded.
Long, long we clung there, even at last
With deep reluctance quitting
That roof for one of higher cast,
Our altered state befitting.

Ah, richer homes since then we've had,
Homes of palatial splendor,
But ne'er a one so sweet and glad
As that first home-nest tender,
Where Kate and I at our own hearth
Our joys domestic kindled,
And slowly gained the solid worth
That ne'er hath paled or dwindled.
Oh, not a home on earth is known,
With what you please compare it,
Like that which first you call your own,
With a true wife to share it!

—N. Y. Ledger.

A LUCKY MISTAKE.

"Tom," said my father to me, one cold November afternoon, as we stood in the flag-paved hall of our old-fashioned farm-house, "you'd better put the little bay mare in the dog-cart and go into Worthington for that saddle. I clean forgot to call for it yesterday, and if you want to go out with the hounds on Saturday, you won't have another chance of getting it."

Thus said my stalwart, weather-reddened, gray-haired old sire, as he put on his rough hat and took his thick walking-stick from the stand, preparatory to going about the farm. It was about three o'clock, and dinner was just over; for the time of which I speak was twenty years ago, and the farmers had not then learn[illegible]—according to the laws of a fashion unsuited to his income and his occupation, or to ape the style and expenditure of his landlord. My father was an old-fashioned yeoman, who tilled the land which his great-grandfather had tilled before him; and even had he lived in these days, when men of his type are rare, he would have kept to the old-fashioned ways.

I was nothing loth to act upon the parental suggestion, although it meant a long drive in the biting cold, and although the return journey would have to be done in the dark or with very indifferent moonlight. We were utterly isolated at the Mistletoe Farm; for we were seven miles from Worthington, our nearest town, and ten miles, in the opposite direction, from the nearest railway station. My father farmed nearly five hundred acres, some of the land—especially that lying toward Worthington—being very poor stuff, and only fit for sheep. There was not even a village near; the laborers lived in cottages scattered over the estate; and in the depth of winter, when there was snow, or when the floods were out, we were often a week at a time and never saw a soul besides ourselves and our employes.

But we always had a good bit of horse-flesh in the stable; as, indeed, was absolutely necessary, when our only means of communication with the outer world was by road, and when the distances were so great and the roads so bad. The little bay mare that I was going to drive—Fly-by-night was the name we afterwards gave her—was a young one of our own breeding, clever as a cat and docile as a dog. From her infancy she was my play-fellow; would come to me when I whistled to her; eat out of my hand or my pocket; and when the time came for backing her and breaking her, there was nothing to be done. She had perfect confidence and trust in us all, and especially in me; the cat by the fireside could not be more gentle or more easy to control. If only people would learn that a horse can, by kind treatment and constant association, be made as tame and affectionate as a household pet, there would be fewer broken bones from back jumpers and runaways.

She was a world two good for harness, I thought to myself, as I led her out of the stable and proceeded to put her to the old-fashioned, square dog-cart, which turned up behind and looked like a mail cart—barring the color, which was a dingy gray. The little mare was my hunter when the hounds were in reach and my father would let me go; and she carried me as gamely, even after twenty miles of harness the day before, as if she was one of the squire's cracks and went out only once a week.

As we trotted quietly down the drive, my father put his head over the hedge and called to me:

"May be the saddle won't be finished," he said, his red face glowing with cold, his eyes glancing critically at the mare. "If so you can put up at the Angel and have your tea; but don't be later than you can help. Have you got your watch on you?"

"Yes," I said, wondering at the question.

"You'd better give it to me," said my father, stretching his arm over the hedge. "I heard yesterday, at the ordinary, there was a gentleman stopped on Monday night on the road. You haven't got too much money on you, I suppose?"

"No danger," said I, with a laugh, as I put my watch and chain into my father's big, brown hand. "They won't get much out of me if they try it on."

And off we went, turned into the high road and sped at a quick trot through the gathering twilight in the direction of Worthington.

It was dark when we reached the out skirts of the little town, and the lights, not very brilliant if tried by modern standards, sparkled cheerfully enough in the windows. Past the blacksmith's forge, with the great bellows roaring and the sparks flying from the glowing cinders; past the butcher's, with a goodly display of some of our best beef; past the grocer's, where the half dozen children who were flattening their noses against the panes turned to look at us; and so, clattering over the uneven cobbles of the pavement, to the saddler's shop. The proprietor himself, a staid and portly person, conscious of the importance which attaches to his position in a country town, came out and nodded a greeting.

"A cold night, Mr. Tom," says he, with a shiver, as the wind took his apron. "I'm not quite ready for you. Your father didn't come in yesterday, so I thought you wouldn't want the saddle till next week."

"I wan't it for Saturday," said I, leaning sideways out of the trap. "The hounds are at the coppice, and the little mare and I are going. Can you do it for me if I put up?"

The saddler thought for a moment.

"Ay, I can do that," he said, at length. "Will you call in between eight and nine and it shall be ready for you."

I agreed, shook up the mare, and, a few yards further down, turned in through the narrow gateway of the Angel into the dim, deserted innyard. From a single half-open doorway came a stream of light. A figure issued forth in answer to my summons.

"Good evening, Mr. Tom," said this person, approaching and patting the mare's neck.

"Hallo, Jack! is that you?" said I, as I drew the reins through my fingers and alighted, recognizing, as I did so, Mr. Jack Plover, to whom was intrusted the important duty of conveying the Queen's mail-bags from Worthington to the railway town. "You'll have to wrap up warm to-night."

"Ay! bitter cold, that it is," answered Jack, undoing the traces. "But, law bless me! I'm used to it. If only I'd got as good a thing between my shafts as you have here, I'd think nothing of a seventeen-mile drive, I do assure you, sir."

"Your old pony isn't to be despised, either," said I, holding up the shaft while Jack drew the mare out. "A new pair of forelegs and sound bellows would improve him, but except for that —"

"Well, he isn't quite Newmarket or Doncaster, I do confess," said Jack, leading the mare in through the open doorway and putting her in a vacant stall. "But he's good enough for his work. I start early and we take it easy. You won't have the collar off, sir?"

"No," I said. "I am off again in an hour or so. Will you have a drink, Jack?"

We crossed the yard, passed through a swing door, and found ourselves in the warm, cheerful bar, where the bright light made us wink after the darkness outside, and the huge fire sent a leaping, ruddy glare on the red curtains, and a reflection that danced merrily on the trim rows of bottles and glasses. The barmaid, buxom and fresh-colored, smiled a welcome, and rewarded my compliments on her pink ribbons and the roses in her cheeks by a "Go along wit[illegible]" and a couple of glasses of steaming whisky-and-water.

There was only one other occupant of the bar, a stranger to me. He was a man apparently verging on forty, buttoned up in a shabby great-coat, and with his hat so slouched over his eyes that his features were hard to be discerned. To the salutation which I gave him on entering, he made no reply, but with arms folded, gazed fixedly on the floor.

"My service, sir," says Jack, raising the tumbler to his lips and taking off the contents at a draught. "That's the stuff to keep the cold out. Although this is a bit too early. I ought to have waited until eight o'clock, just before I started."

"You can have another then, if you like," said I, with a laugh.

"Nay, sir," remonstrated Jack. "I didn't mean that. Is the clock right, miss?" he inquired of the barmaid. "Then I must be going about my work," he added, receiving an answer in the affirmative. "Good night, sir, and thank you kindly."

And Jack Plover, who was a sporting-looking figure with his Queen's livery and clean-shaven face, touched his hat politely and passed through the swing door.

The man with the slouched hat looked up as he left, and, addressing nobody in particular, inquired in a harsh, rough voice, with a queer burr in it:

"What time does the post go out here?"

"At eight o'clock," replied the barmaid, looking at her interrogator with no particular favor. "That is the driver of the mail-cart who has just left."

"So I judged," replied the man, rising and putting some money on the table. "Is that right? Good-night to you."

And with a heavy, slouching gait, he strode to the door and was gone.

After tea in the half-lit coffee-room and a pipe in the bar, with the barmaid to tell me the gossip, I started at about half-past eight, called at the saddler's, put my saddle under the seat, and set out for home. As we passed the blacksmith's forge at the end of the street there was a pony being shod, and Mr. Jack Plover, in a big great-coat, was looking on at the process.

"Cast a shoe, Mr. Tom, and had to turn back," he called out as I passed by.

Out into the country, looking doubly black and dismal by contrast with the cheerful light and warmth that we were leaving behind; with the slanting rain driving full in one's face, so that it dazzled the sight; with gray piles of cloud hurrying overhead; with a veil of mist and darkness blending hurdle and hedge-row, field and tree, into a vague, indistinct, gray mass. The road is muddy, and, albeit the high-road, in bad condition; but the little mare has got her head homeward, and pulls her hardest toward warm stable and well-stocked rack, and the society of heavy Dobbin and his brethren. Not that my little hunter is to be permitted to pull herself to pieces through ruts and over ill-laid stones, for there is Saturday in prospect, and with the country in this state, we shall want the very last ounce. Now we are climbing a hill, and, anon, we are on top, and the rain and the wind beat savagely upon us and the prospect on either side is dreary enough. Now, steadily down the shelding ground with a tight rein and a careful lookout for loose stones; for this is a deep descent, and one false step may take twenty pounds off the little mare's value. The banks are high, at all events, so there is some shelter, and down at the bottom there are trees on either hand.

It was pitch dark in this hollow, but I let the mare out at the bottom of the hill and gave her her head. Suddenly, with a loud snort, she swerved violently, ran the wheel of the trap on to a heap of wayside stones, put there to mend the road; and in a second we were over.

I went out, of course, and the driving-box, the saddle and a debris of miscellaneous articles after me. I landed partly on my shoulder, partly on my head, and was up again in a moment, although a bit dazed. The moment I gained my feet I was seized by the collar, and a harsh voice exclaimed—not to me, but to some one else:

"Hold his head down—hold his head down!"

A dusky form sprang to the mare's head and kept her from attempting to rise. A third form knelt on the trap.

"By jove!" exclaimed this last fellow, in an agry tone, "we've got the wrong man!"

"What?" said he who had hold of my collar. "Do you mean to say it isn't the —?"

With a volley of oaths the other replied in the negative. The man who had hold of me released me and joined the other. They whispered together for a few seconds. Then the first one came back to me and said, with a fine pretense of indifference:

"Nasty accident, sir! But it might have been worse. It's lucky we were at hand to help you."

"I don't know about that," I replied, with no small acrimony, "for my horse shied at one of you. She never did it in her life before. You'll oblige me by helping to get her out."

In a twinkling we had the harness undone, and the mare, with a flounder and a stagger, was on her feet, and shook herself in a disgusted fashion. The men said nothing but obeyed my directions. Luckily, nothing was broken. The mare had rubbed a little hair off her, as well as I could tell, but her knees were all right. In seven or eight minutes from the time we went over, so quickly did it all happen, I was in my seat again, ready to start.

My assailants, or assistants, whichever they were, made no opposition, and seemed only anxious to get rid of me; they dispatched me without a word, and I went a mile on my road before I fully realized what had happened. As is always the case in an accident, I could only recall what took place immediately before and immediately after, and for that very reason the words uttered by the men were more vividly impressed on my memory. What did they mean?

It flashed into my mind like a revelation. They had been misled by the shape of my trap; which, as I have said, was square behind, and looked like a mail-cart, while the darkness was too great in their place of ambuscade for them to see the color. The time of my arrival was about that of the mail, had not Jack Plover been obliged to turn back; and the careful pace at which I had come down the hill accorded very well with the steady movement of Jack's nag.

And the voice? I had heard it somewhere lately—the man in the Angel bar, who asked, too, the time when the mail left. There was no doubt of the men's purpose.

How to prevent it? How to warn Jack in time? There was no road back but the one by which I had come, unless I made a detour of several miles. Neither was there a house near whence to get assistance. I pulled up and thought it out. A bruise on my right arm suggested something. I had fallen on my left side, and this bruise was caused by the saddle tumbling after me. I made up my mind at once.

Turning in through the first gate I came to, I drove over the turf to a corner of the field where was a group of trees. Here I took the mare out; put the trap under the elms and turned the cushions; took off all the harness but the bridle, and saddled her. Luckily the bridle had no blinkers. I wound the long reins round and round my arm, mounted, and, thanking Providence for my knowledge of the country, rode at the nearest fence. There was a faint moonlight to help us, but it was terribly dark. My heart was in my mouth as we went at the fence, which was a big upstanding one, but I knew there was no ditch on the taking-off side, and I gave the little mare the word at the right moment. She jumped clean from under me, and landed me on the crupper. I never shall forget that leap! If there had been any one to see it I could have sold her almost for her weight in gold.

We were half way across the next field before I had regained my seat properly, and then the mad exhilaration of the thing took possession of both of us. There was a flight of hurdles next which we took in our stride. Then a bank and a close-cropped hedge that stood up, black as Erebus, against the gray of the night; which we jumped as though it were twice its height. Then a flock of frightened sheep went scurrying away into the darkness.

It was all turf, and, for the first time, I blessed the poverty of the land, that made it worthless to plow. A dozen fences negotiated in the same mad fashion brought us into a field that skirted the high road; and here we were pounded. There was a big bull-finch into the road, with a deep drop. To go on, parallel with the road, was impossible, for there was a made-up bank with a cropped hedge, full of stakes, and a deep drain, as I knew, ran on either side. I rode up and down by the bull-finch in despair. Was all my trouble to be in vain?

At last I made up my mind, and rode, not too fast, at the great, towering, straggling hedge. I put my arm across my face, shut my eyes, into it we went, and out of it, with a scramble and a flounder, we came—separately. The bull-finch nearly brushed me out of the saddle, and the mare and I dropped side by side into the road, but both of us on our legs. Before I had time to remount I heard the sound of approaching wheels, and a man whistling merrily.

"Pull up, Jack!" I called out.

Jack's whistle ceased, and a more astonished countenance I never beheld than the one which looked down from the mail cart.

"What the dickens—" he began.

Then I explained.

"Well," he said, at the end of it, without a word of commendation to me. "That is a good pony of yours. What shall we do?"

"I'll tell you," I said, for my blood was up with the excitement of the night. "Drive back to Worthington, get Rogers, the constable, and a pistol apiece, and let them try again."

"Done with you," said Jack, turning round. "You ride on ahead and find Rogers, and I'll wait for you by the old toll-bar."

In half an hour the constable and I were seated very uncomfortably on the back of the mail-cart, and driving along as fast as Jack's pony could be induced to go. Our only fear was lest the fellows should have got tired of waiting, for it was quite an hour and a half later than the time when the mail should have passed them. Down the hill we went, our hearts thumping away with excitement, not to mention the difficulty of holding on, and Jack performing "My Pretty Jane" with exquisite variations.

Well, to cut the story short, we got one of them. The constable, in his eagerness, jumped down directly the first man had seized the horse's head, and the two other fellows made off. We got the right gentleman, though—the identical fellow who had been in the Angel bar, and whose voice I had recognized. He was tried at the Assizes, and, two other convictions being proved against him, was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

I went out with the hounds on Saturday, and my little mare was the heroine of the hour. The Squire himself came up to me, and, after complimenting us both on our achievement, said:

"What do you call her?"

"Well, Squire," I replied, "we haven't given her a name yet."

"Call her Little Fly-by-night," said he.

And that's how she got her name.—Argosy.

Bonanza Farms.

A few months ago a sensation was created in California by the murder of a great ranch-owner who had long been famous as a representative of the new school of farmers. Dr. Glenn's wheat-f[illegible], the circuit of which was a lively day's ride, was celebrated in books of travel, and every stranger wished to see it as a specimen of the "bonanza farms" which were to revolutionize the agricultural systems of the fertile West. He owned enormous productive estates in various parts of the Pacific slope, and gave employment to armies of laborers. When his affairs came to be settled after his death there was another sensation. It was doubtful for a time whether he died a millionaire or a bankrupt. There were debts to the amount of a million dollars on the principal farm. It was a dry season and the crop was light. At last it is announced that there will be a considerable surplus to divide among the heirs; although the vast fortune which report very naturally assigned to this great wholesale operator in farm labor has shrunk to modest dimensions.

The collapse of the Glenn enterprise is not to be regretted. It was carried on, as we now know, with difficulty and danger. Drought and other accidents of husbandry, which brought disappointment and perhaps embarrassment to the small farmer, might sweep away from the bonanza wheat-grower the last penny of his fortune and the last shred of his credit. It is well for ambitious men to see something of the risk attending the absorption of immense tracts of land in a single estate. Because most kinds of manufacturing are economically and efficiently conducted in large establishments, we are apt to assume that the tillage of the earth can best be managed on the same wholesale plan. The tendency toward this experiment has been strongly marked at the West, where large tracts of fertile land await occupation. But nobody seems to succeed in keeping such overgrown estates together. If they are not broken up after awhile for business reasons, they are sure to be divided by the interference of death. There are land-owners now in California wh[illegible] aware of the dangers of undue concentration, and are cutting up their estates as a matter of policy, believing that one of the greatest injuries they could do their children would be to leave them too much land. The farm laborer in this country has universally the ambition to become a farm-owner. He is not content to work permanently for wages; he will not look on patiently while a few rich men absorb all the available land and ask him to do for them the work which can not be done by machinery; and if the bonanza system should ever be carried so far as to make a real division between the laborer and the land-owner—one class holding the property while the other had the numbers and the votes—we should see some startling social disturbances and some wild legislation.

The small farmer has been the great safeguard of our civilization. If we have never had any serious and prolonged conflicts between labor and capital; if the people have always been order-loving, just, and in the best sense of the word conservative; if we have been able to receive millions of the poor and the discontented from foreign countries and convert them without the least friction into thrifty and useful citizens, it is because we have made it our national policy to give every man who wants it a stake in the country. The typical American farmer is laborer and capitalist at once; and wherever the two great forces of society are thus united there must be prosperity and peace.—N. Y. Tribune.

An Unusual Engineering Feat.

At one time it was obvious that the Washington Monument foundation needed to be strengthened, and Colonel Casey addressed himself to a task which a good many engineers would have preferred not to undertake. Going down below the foundation already built, he dug from under it all around a core of earth forty-four feet square, directly under the center of the foundation and monument; and the 71,500,000 pounds of weight stood on this pillar of earth. The new excavation was of a depth of thirteen feet, and made a cellar under the foundation 126 feet square. This was filled with solid masonry, except where the core of earth stood, which was not removed. Then the sides of the old foundation above were torn down for a considerable distance under the walls of the shaft, rebuilt of better materials, and spread out further over the new base below, thus distributing the pressure over a much larger area. So, instead of a foundation only 80 feet square, that is, extending only 12½ feet beyond each of the four faces, there is now a foundation 126 feet square, extending 25 feet beyond each face and running 13 feet deeper. A good many engineers have come at different times to visit the monument and inspect this interesting work. One of them looked at it a long time without saying anything. Then he remarked quietly: "Well, that's easy enough to do, but I don't know one engineer in a thousand who would want to try it." The result proves how well the work has been done. Since the laying of stone was renewed 29,255 tons of stone have been added to the pile, and the settlement of the shaft due to this load has been just one and a quarter inches. The settlement is so even that the greatest variation in the sinking of the four corners is a difference of four-one-hundreths of an inch between the southwest and northeast corners. The other two have settled exactly alike, even to the hundreth part of an inch. The total pressure now borne by the bed of foundation is 74,871 tons or ninety-two per cent. of the whole pressure that will be placed upon it.—Washington Letter.

—The oil lamp, as a source of joy to the news reporter, has lost caste, being seldom heard from of late; but its place is being filled by the festive and explosive oil-stove. A number of exchange are enlivened by accounts of the fata burning of servant girls who have handled there "home comforts" without knowing that they were loaded.—Indianapolis Journal.

—The Russian Jews who came over last year and settled in Oregon are said to have proved themselves very industrious, and are in a good way to prosper. Several hundred are settled near the Northern Pacific Railroad, and more will soon go there.—Chicago Journal.

In a Moorish Shop.

The old spelling (grossery) would certainly fit a modern Oriental provision store, if the following is a fair specimen. Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, describing a Moorish merchant and his stock in trade, as she saw them in Tangiers, says that "In the morning the Moor unlocks his box in the wall—for such is his shop—and jumps in among his merchandise. There he sits crossed legged in the midst of his wares, offers them for sale and endeavors to attract customers. His stock cannot be described in honest truth as very tempting in its nature. It consist of heaps of musty raisins, coarse sugar plentifully mingled with flies, stale leathery figs, snuff and several other odds and ends mixed up together without any attempt at regularity or order. There are also several large jars of rancid butter, the presence of which is announced by the odor even before one comes in sight of the shop. The article is popular, notwithstanding (or, perhaps, because of) its staleness, and bears many visible signs of the demand which it has excited in the marks of the merchant's fingers in all directions upon the jars. It is an old saying that travelers see strange things, and those that only open their eyes may witness not only many novelties, but also the novel uses to which familiar things may be put. A carroty cat, for example, sits at the merchant's side, and appears to be in the enjoyment of that state of perfectly satisfied repose which individuals of the feline tribe appear to appreciate so much. The cat answers the purpose of soap, water and towel to the Moor, who carefully wipes his hands on her back between each dispensation of butter to his waiting customers!"

—Among the interesting relics at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y., is the line-of-battle ship New Orleans, built during the war of 1812 as a counter-match to the British St. Lawrence, a three-deck man-of-war. The New Orleans was never launched, owing to peace being declared, but was inclosed in a building for protection from the elements "until needed." That time never came, and for sixty-eight years the "old ship-house" and its "ship" have been renowned relics of the past. About two years ago the old ship-house fell in a severe gale, leaving the old ship exposed to the weather. It will soon receive its death blow from the auctioneer's hammer.

—The American Astronomical Society, of Brooklyn, discussed recently the question: "What makes the sun hot?" and adjourned till October without reaching a definite answer. During the recess a good many minds will be directed to the same subject.—N. Y. Graphic.

Youthful Follies

and pernicious practices are fruitful causes of nervous debility, impaired memory, despondency, lack of self-confidence and will-power and kindred evidences of weakness and lost manly powers. Send three letter postage stamps for large illustrated treatise suggesting unfailing means of complete cure. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

MR. HENRY CAKE was arrested the other night for hammering his wife with a club. Sort of batter-cake, as it were.—San Francisco Post.

"In a Decline."

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Last fall my daughter was in a decline and every body thought she was going into the consumption. I got her a bottle of your "Favorite Prescription," and it cured her. Of all druggists. MRS. MARY HINSON,
Montrose, Kan

PEOPLE should inform themselves about the tariff. It is every man's duty.—N. O. Picayune.

WEAK lungs, spitting of blood, consumption and kindred affections, cured without physician. Address for treatise, with two stamps, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE individual who stood ready to pay his one cent at midnight on the Brooklyn bridge was the first man tolled to go across.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Henry's Carbolic Salve.

It is the Best Salve for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns and all kinds of Skin Eruptions, Freckles and Pimples.

CARMINE-TINTED foreheads and chins are the latest craze among the New York belles. To this complexion have we come at last.—San Francisco Post.

CATARRH and Hay Fever. For twenty years I was a sufferer from Catarrh of the head and throat in a very aggravated form, and during the summer months with Hay Fever. I procured a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm and after a few applications received decided benefit—was cured before the bottle was used. Have had no return of the complaint. Charlotte Parker, Waverly, N. Y. See advertisement. Price 50 cents.

AN exchange remarks that Mrs. Canoe, of Cherrytown, is the mother of nineteen children. What a time she must have paddling her own canoe.—Grit.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO.—Dr. J. C. Riddler says: "Persons who use Brown's Iron Bitters always speak well of it. It is a good medicine."

THERE is so much sand in the strawberries that are brought to market now that they seem quite fit for the desert.—Boston Commerical Bulletin.

OTTUMWA, IA.—Dr. J. N. Armstrong says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters in my family and recommend its use to others."

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, June 22, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 25	@ 3 50
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 70	@ 7 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 13	@
No. 2 winter red	1 12	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	53	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	40	@
Rye—No. 2	58	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	17 50	@18 00
Lard—Steam	11¼	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	20	@ 22
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 40	@ 4 10
Good to choice	4 50	@ 6 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 19	@ 1 19¾
No. 1 white	1 12	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	62	@ 65
Oats—mixed	42½	@ 45
PORK—Mess	18 62½	@18 75
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@ 1 08½
Corn—No. 2	53¼	@
Oats—No. 2	37¼	@
Rye	58	@
PORK—Mess	16 80	@16 85
LARD—Steam	9 60	@ 9 62½
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 winter red	1 17¼	@ 1 17½
Corn—mixed	62¼	@ 62¾
Oats—mixed	43¼	@ 45
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@20 25
Lard—Refined	12¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 09	@
Corn—mixed	52	@
Oats—mixed	39	@ 39½
PORK—Mess	18 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 10	@
CORN	49	@
OATS—mixed	37	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 4 50
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 6 50

THERE seems to be no call for an exhibition of grief at a circus. Yet the audience is always in tiers.

For tremulousness, wakefulness, dizziness, and lack of energy, a most valuable remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters.

THE best time to eat a green apple is after it has become ripe. We give this information on good authority.—Lowell Citizen.

Sale of a Famous Trotting Stallion.

The telegraphic announcement made a few days ago that the famous trotting stallion, Black Cloud, whose brilliant performance upon the turf last season won the astonishment and admiration of horsemen, had been sold by the estate of the late Andrew Cutter, of Parma, Mich., to M. V. Wagner, Esq., Mayor of Marshall, Mich., has proven to be correct. Black Cloud is a marvel of beauty, and is perhaps one of the handsomest horses in a race that ever trotted upon the American turf, having a record of 2:17¼. He is large, finely proportioned, and "as black as black can be." His hair is as fine as silk, and as soft as velvet, his mane and tail are long and heavy, the latter almost touching the ground. The noble animal passes into excellent hands. The purchaser, Mayor M. V. Wagner, is not only an admirer and lover of good horses, but is also a first-class business man, of energy and enterprise. He is a large manufacturer, and is the business manager of the Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., whose appliances have been so persistently and skillfully advertised. Black Cloud has been placed in the hands of a noted Chicago driver, who will campaign him this season.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and as its name indicates is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

ONE pair of boots or shoes saved every year by using Lyon's Patent Metallic Heel Stiffeners.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

USE Redding's Russia Salve in the house and use Redding's Russia Salve in the stable. Try it.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap

Removes pimples from the face of humanity. Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, 50c.

INVENTORS' HAND-BOOK—FREE.—Just out. How great fortunes have been made. History of inventions; valuable to all who read and think. Order it by postal card. N. W. Fitzgerald, Solicitor, Washington, D. C.

Stinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

AS WARM weather comes on wear Chrollithion Collars and Cuffs. Perspiration has no effect on them.

USE St. Patrick's Salve, and learn its great value. One trial convinces.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

A VETERAN SOLDIER.

MR. G. F. BOWLES, of No. 24 Common Street, Lynn, Mass., says:

"While in the army, at the battle of Spottsylvania, I fell while getting over a rail-fence and was badly injured and left for dead, but after a time I was picked up by comrades; and upon examination it was found that my back was badly hurt and my kidneys seriously injured, and I have suffered the most excruciating pain since, and could obtain no relief although treated by several physicians, and I had given up all hope of getting help when I was recommended to use Hunt's Remedy. I purchased several bottles at one of our drug stores in Lynn, and began to use it as directed, and can now attend to business and am free from the pains I formerly had; and I wish to say to my friends and comrades that Hunt's Remedy will do all that is claimed for it, and is worthy of all praise. You can use my testimony when you have occasion to, as I most heartily recommend it to all that have kidney or liver troubles."

April 26, 1883.

"YOU MAY USE MY NAME."

I desire to inform you what your valuable medicine has done for me. I was induced to try it by a member of our family, "who had been benefited by its use." I have suffered terribly from kidney difficulties. At times I have been very bad, having severe pains in my back, with general loss of strength and vitality.

My urine was very bad, with a heavy sediment of brick-dust, which was fast leading to gravel. I commenced using Hunt's Remedy, with a marked improvement from the start; the pains left, the urine became more natural, and I can truly say one bottle effected a permanent cure.

I have recommended it to many persons both here and in Boston, all of whom speak of it with the highest praise.

You are at liberty to use this letter or my name in any manner you may think best, that other sufferers may learn the value of the greatest of all remedies. Most truly yours, JOHN F. COX.
62 Pleasant Street.

MALDEN, Mass., April 23, 1883.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters meets the requirements of the rational medical philosophy which at present prevails. It is a perfectly pure vegetable remedy, embracing the three important properties of a preventive, a tonic and an alterative. It fortifies the body against disease, invigorates and re-vitalizes the torpid stomach and liver, and effects a salutary change in the entire system. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.
"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, '81. R. FITZPATRICK.

CHAPTER II.
"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—
I suffered with attacks of sick headache."

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle

Nearly cured me;"

The second made me as well and strong as when a child.

"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious

"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint,

"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—

"Incurable!"

Seven bottles of your bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons"

In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters.

And many more are using them with great benefit.

"They almost

Do miracles?" —Mrs. E. D. Slack.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD CATARRH ROSE-COLD HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE PRICE 50 CENTS ELY'S CREAM BALM CO. OWEGO N.Y. U.S.A.

HAY-FEVER

will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds; completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!

DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE Lungs.

Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

$1000 REWARD For any machine hulling and cleaning $1 for market as much Clover seed in one DAY as the VICTOR Double Huller. It has made $100 often in ONE DAY

VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE. NEWARK MACHINE CO. NEWARK, O.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers

(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

CUT THIS OUT And Return to us, with TEN Cents, and you'll receive by mail, a Golden Box of Goods, that will bring you in more money in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St., New York.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

NEW THING! Sells at sight; no competition. Dealers and Canvassers Wanted. Ask for circular and price-list. PENTZ REIN HOLDER CO., Canton, O.

80 Sheets fine writing paper in Blotter Tablet, with calendar, 25 cts., by mail. Agents wanted. Economy Printing Co., Newburyport, Mass.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book, $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

WHY I stopped buying tickets in the Louisiana State Lottery. Send five clean three cent stamps to F. J., Box 359, Lowell, Mass.

PENSIONS for all SOLDIERS and their HEIRS. New Laws. Apply to Jos. H. HUNTER, U. S. Att'y, 931 F St., Washington, D. C.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE Co., 197 Pearl St., New York.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

Sure Cure Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2314 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

SOMETHING EVERY LADY OUGHT TO KNOW.

There exists a means of securing a soft and brilliant Complexion, no matter how poor it may naturally be. Hagan's Magnolia Balm is a delicate and harmless article, which instantly removes Freckles, Tan, Redness, Roughness, Eruptions, Vulgar Flushings, etc., etc. So delicate and natural are its effects that its use is not suspected by anybody.

No lady has the right to present a disfigured face in society when the Magnolia Balm is sold by all druggists for 75 cents.

$60 5-TON JONES

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warrants 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address

JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25c

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JULY 4, 1883. NUMBER 36.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—All quarters of Arkansas report highly successful ventures in growing vegetables and fruits for northern markets.

—The artesian well system is proving a success in Florida. The wells bring copious supplies of excellent water in nearly every instance.

—J. A. Dodge, in the Journal of Agriculture, says he cures hog cholera by giving half a teaspoonful of carbolic acid in a gill of milk. Administer from a long-necked bottle.

—At the recent meeting of the New York Academy of Science cases were related of trance anæsthesia (or abolition of sensation of pain under mesmerism) in which important surgical operations were performed, and President Newberry said he had seen such things twenty-five years ago. — Science Monthly.

—We are apt to think an inch of rain a small matter, but the thirsty ground will show another story. Let us calculate a little. An acre is equal to 6,272,640 square inches; an inch deep of water of this area will be as many cubic inches of water, which, at 277,274 to the gallon, 22,622.5. This quantity weighs over 113 tons.—Scientific American.

—Olives are successfully cultivated on St. Simon's Island, Ga., and oil made from them has been pronounced by competent judges not inferior to the best productions of France or Spain. The experiment in olive trees has been successfully made, and trees have yielded regular crops since 1835. The oil crop from these islands is annually sold at from six dollars to eight dollars per gallon.

—William B. Taylor, of Utica, N. Y., ex-State Engineer and Surveyor, is making experiments in silk-raising. He has set out three hundred mulberry trees, and proposes to make a thorough trial. The expense of silk-raising is very light, and is said to pay better, with light labor, than cotton, rice, sugar, tobacco, or hops, with heavy labor. It is estimated that one acre of land, with trees of sufficient age and bearing well, will net $2,000 per year.

—To remove the unpleasant taste which is frequently observable from new wooden vessels is a thing difficult of accomplishment. The Brewing World says that the simplest plan, and one that will succeed in most cases, is to scald them thoroughly several times in boiling water, then dissolve some pearl-ash or soda in lukewarm water, adding a little lime to it, and wash the inside of the vessels well in the solution. Afterward scald them several times thoroughly as before.

—The foreign grain trade has developed a peculiar business in New York City. Great quantities of grain are shipped in bags, and as a result a large company has been formed to loan bags for this purpose. After these bags are emptied at Liverpool, London or Havre, they are made into bales and reshipped to New York, being admitted duty free. The company then has them ready for the next customer. Millions of dollars are invested in the manufacture of various kinds of course bags for shipping purposes.—N. Y. Sun.

PITH AND POINT.

—That human symphony in black was quite right when he said that in our intercourse with the world "we ought to have our pockets stuffed full of charity."—N. Y. Herald.

—"Under Green Apple Boughs" is Helen Campbell's last novel. This seems to imply a small boy and a good deal of trouble and ginger and things.

—Directions to conductors of street cars: The woman with a rubber waterproof should invariably be shaken before being taken.—Lowell Citizen.

—Color Blind.—

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien
That to be hated needs but to be seen;"
But those who seem to vice the most inclined
In this respect, perhaps, are color blind.
— Somerville Journal.

—A "pocket-guide" for instruction in the art of swimming has been published in New York. When you fall overboard and don't know how to swim, all you have to do is to tread water and read your guide.—Detroit Free Press.

—Mr. Beecher thinks truth-telling is an acquired habit, like learning to shoot a rifle. Some men go through life with no more skill in marksmanship than would enable them to hit a barn at ten paces.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—"The billowy apple blossoms break around my brow," sings a poet most beautifully; but we trust he will get away from under the tree before the fuzzy caterpillar makes a break down his neck.—Hartford (Conn.) Post.

—A Berlin merchant lately submitted to a diva, to whom he was paying court, two splendid dresses for her choice, and said he would call to learn her decision. She soon wrote: "I like both so well that you need not trouble to call."

—A self-acting sofa, just large enough for two, has been invented. If properly wound up it will begin to ring a warning-bell just before ten o'clock. At one minute after ten it splits apart, while one-half carries the daughter of the house up stairs, the other half kicks her young man out of doors. They will come high, but people must have them.—Chicago Journal.

—A Texas paper tells this cheerful tale of the Experimental School of Medicine: "A woman came to a prominent physician and asked for a remedy for her husband's rheumatism. The doctor gave her a prescription and said: 'Get that prepared at the drug-store and rub it well over your husband's back. If it does any good, come and let me know. I've got a touch of rheumatism myself.'"

—"Did you see anything that particularly struck your fancy when you were looking around the furniture stores to-day?" asked a young Somerville husband of his lately made wife on her return from a tour of furniture inspection. "Yes," she replied, "I saw something exceedingly pretty in looking glasses." "I have no doubt you did," he observed, "if you looked into them." The halo of a calm, sweet peace rests upon that home.—Somerville Journal.

The Old "Comp." Who Hoarded $10,000.

John Russell, the aged compositor who died yesterday morning in Bellevue Hospital from Bright's disease of the kidneys, was one of the most eccentric men in the composing-room of the daily press. He was especially noted for his parsimony, and would regard with horror any attempt to make him increase his expense by eating warm food instead of his customary bread and cheese, or in any way. Russell was regarded by his fellow-compositors as the meanest man in the craft, and many are the stories of the ingenuity which he used when anxious to avoid spending money. He was an Englishman, and came to this country when he was nineteen years of age. He had been a compositor in England, and when he arrived in this city he obtained employment in a jobbing office. He never renounced his allegiance to his native country, and when his associates joked with him about his heirs he would declare that the State was his only heir, and that if when he died he was worth any money he would leave it to New York. Russell was employed on the Morning Express from 1845 to 1852, and while there was especially noted for his quietness of disposition and his evident dislike for society. When he left the Express he went to the Sun, where he remained for several years. He was afterward employed on the Times and the Independent. In 1879 he became one of the compositors of the Evening Mail, and as at that time all his peculiarities had become marked, he was the observed among his fellow-craftsmen. In summer his costume was rather remarkable in being an overcoat and straw hat, the former, as he explained, "to keep his body warm and the hat to cool his head." He was never known to bring his luncheon to work or to eat his meals in an eating-house. After the other compositors had finished their meals he would gather up the crusts of bread and crumbs of cheese, and after eating them seemed puffed up with the satisfaction of a square meal. A compositor who remembered Russell when he worked at the same stand with him recalled an incident which happened one Christmas eve which was characteristic of the man. Turkeys had been provided by the newspaper, and every married man in its employ was presented with one. Russell was not married, but kept a bachelor's hall in a tumbled-down attic in Centre street. When he saw the turkeys spread so temptingly along a table, he recollected that he was not a Benedick. He nevertheless determined to have one at all odds. He pulled one of the fowls from the heap and hid it in a closet, and then went to his case. The foreman, when he was informed, told Russell that he would have to give the turkey up, but Russell clung to the door, and when the turkey was found he had clutched its neck, and held on until the man who was pulling the legs captured the body and left Russell in possession of the head. His failure to keep the fowl seemed to grieve him greatly.

He said at one time he was certain that he should not die before he was ninety-two, because his father lived to that age. He was never known to go into a barber-shop, but he invariably cut his own hair, which was very black, and after he had performed that very difficult operation his head looked as though it had been shingled. He asked his companions sometimes to cut his hair for him, and they always shingled it with strange effect. When Russell was forty-eight years old he surprised his office one day by observing that some beneficent power had given him a new tooth. His companions pied several forms while speculating what use Russell had for teeth, as his gums were quite as effective on bread and cheese. He was never seen to leave his case unnecessarily during working hours. He was afraid to lose time.

After Russell died, twelve bank books were found about him, in which were entries representing $10,000. In his pockets were $60 in cash. Yet he applied to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction to be admitted to Bellevue. This fortune was accumulated by privations of all kinds. When he could not induce his fellow-compositors to leave him the crumbs of their meals he found his food in the ash barrels along the streets. His fortune began, however, in a singular manner. While walking along a street near Park Row he found a United States coupon bond for $1,000. He immediately appropriated it, and, after drawing the interest for several years, bought a tenement-house. He afterward sold his house at a profit, and placed the proceeds in bank. In appearance he was far from being prepossessing. Of medium height and thin features, he dressed very poorly, and seemed always at the last stage of starvation. It is said that Russell had a brother who is employed as a compositor, but at the rooms of the Typographical Union, to which he belonged at one time, it was not believed. His name was dropped from the roll of the union because he owed thirty dollars in dues and declared that he was unable to pay them.—N. Y. Evening Mail and Express.

A Lecturer's Reminiscence.

The weather was warm. The hard-backed bugs and the big blundering beetles that fly by night were abundant and offensive. The open windows of the hall gave the boys on the street, as they patroled their noisy beats, abundant opportunity to chaff the lecturer, whose gigantic form they could plainly see, but whose eloquent remarks they could but dimly hear, and illy comprehend.

As a general thing, I have observed that when the lecturer on the platform and the boys in the street are addressing one audience at the same time, the audience appears to be most profoundly interested in the remarks of the boys. I thought, and I still think, it is very foolish for an audience to pay fifty cents a head to hear me, and then sit and listen to the boys whom they might have heard for nothing. But that is the way an audience has, anyhow. So, that night, I did not care for the boys. I would not permit the tithing man to go out and entreat the boys roughly and compel them to "shut up their heads," as he wished to do, not even when they mocked me, and in shrill falsetto entreated me to "give them a rest," assuring me they "heard enough of that," and besought me, with illy dissembled concern, not to "bite off more than I could chaw." I only smiled pleasantly and said, "Nay, hinder them not. Let them shout. I was once a boy myself." And I smiled again and the tears stood in my eyes.

But inwardly I was a ravening wolf, with a brass collar and two rows of spikes.

On my way to the hotel I overtook a boy who was still yelling and howling at me, for he wot not that the lecture was over.

And my anger got fierce and I got hold upon him, and smote him sore, and encompassed him round with a piece of barrel hoop, and necked him, insomuch that he wept bitterly, and was sore astonished, and swore that he would make full report of these things unto the mother that bore him, yea even unto his big brother, and to the father also.

But I heeded him not, neither was I moved with compassion nor yet stricken with fear, for I wist that his mother lived away on the other side of the river, and his big brother was not and never had been, and his father was a night watchman, and therefore at that time of night sound asleep in some secluded doorway. Moreover, I was going away on the four a. m. train. Wherefore, I smote him once again, and said:

"If it be that another lecturer cometh this way, will it seem fittin' unto thee to sit on the curbstone and make merry with thy friends, even while he speaketh words unto the multitude?"

And he lifted up his voice, and wept bitterly, and swore unto me, saying: "As my sole liveth, hope I may die ef I do."

And I let up on him. And it was so that when he was gone away as it might be a bow shot, that he called aloud, and wagged his tongue against me and called "Smarty," and cast stones after me and followed me even unto the inn, and dared me half way, and reviled me because I would not, saying: "Ho! Fraid cat! Fraid cat!"

And I sought to slay him but could not, for he was marvelous swift of foot, and he was like unto the children of Benjamin, and "could sling stones at a hair breadth, and not miss."—Burdette, in Burlington Hawkeye.

A Battle of Snakes.

On a bare spot of this western wilderness, says the Seymour Cresset, of Baylor County, Texas, lay coiled a great rattlesnake warming. Little dreamed he that a mortal enemy was on his trail. But the eye-witness we quote saw the king of coilers and of shadows, in his bright black garb, slowly approach. The assailant was small, not thicker than a thumb nor longer than a short yard-stick. He glided along, now raising his glittering head and darting fire from his eyes. Stealthily he moved on the trail toward the great rattlesnake. Between them was a small log, an old fallen tree; just beyond it lay the rattler. When the little warrior came to this log he raised nearly half his body from the ground, standing on his tail, as a fiery stallion rears before he strikes a powerful blow with his forehoofs. When it beheld the spotted enemy it emitted a terrific hiss, and as a flash of lightning it sped to the side of the rattlesnake. Now came a contest between science and skill on one side and strength and deadly venom on the other. The little snake, with a skill and knowledge of its foe, did not strike home at the first bound. The startled rattler coiled and sounded the alarm. The assailant spun round and round, with his fatal little eyes darting baleful fire into the eyes of its opponent, and as it completed each circle sought a chance for a sure and deadly blow. But the other made the inner and shorter whirl with its head and neck to evade the same, and to strike a crushing blow itself, with its great fangs glittering, and all the while the terrific rattles played deadly music. Finally the rattler raised and struck, but its fangs were dodged by the expert assailant, and they bit the earth, while the scienced little reptile as quickly closed and struck its teeth into the back of the rattler's neck. And now the scene became terrific beyond description. The great snake turned and twisted with widely-distended mouth, emitting a horrid noise as the tumult of the rattling and the death struggle increased. For a time, the rattler kept his coils as closely together as possible to prevent the next crushing move of its antagonist, and in a vain effort to twist and shake off the little black enemy, amid short blows. But with a skill that surpasses human comprehension the assailant kept its little body clear of its poisonous fangs and kept its hold firmly. In despair the rattler raised his head as if summoning all his energies for a final effort, and in the twinkling of an eye, as a whip-lash twines around a trace, the king of snakes had coiled himself around the rattler and, tightening the grasp with a startling power, crushed the monster in a second. When the breathless head of the rattler had fallen to the earth the little victor slowly uncoiled himself, and, making sure that the victim was dead, loosened its hold, and, having snuffed the air of victory, darted off to other fields of conquest.

—In Central and Southern Kansas rye is sown almost altogether for pasture, while in Northern Kansas it is grown for both pasture and grain. The State area increased, as compared with last year, about fifteen per cent., the increase being very evenly divided over the State. The constantly increasing demand for good pasture has stimulated the growing of this cereal. The reports as to its condition are very encouraging. It being a much hardier plant than wheat, the dry fall and the severe winter did not injure it materially.—Chicago Times.

The donkeyism of the professional athlete was fairly shown at Bellows Falls recently when "Professor" Poplin walked fifty miles in ten hours with six pound clogs on his hoofs, a twenty-five pound package of iron on his back for the last ten miles, and a brickbat in his mouth for the last five miles.—Rutland (Vt.) Herald.

Our Young Folks.

MOTHER'S MAN.

Buttoned boots with doubtful toes,
Knee pants, short and striped hose;
Hat with somewhat battered brim,
Blouse with pockets for each whim;
Curly locks, and laughing eyes—
In their blue depths mischief lies—
Freckled nose, and cheek of tan,
Freddie, boy—his mother's man.

Common lad enough to see,
Quite like other boys is he!
This remark I made aside,
Freddie is his mother's pride;
And a "none such" to her eyes.
Thus she dreams: "Great, good and wise."
An honored chieftain is her plan
For sun-burned Freddy—mother's man.

May the blessings, little Fred,
That she craves fall on thy head.
Her heart will be kept proud and glad,
If thou art wise and shun the bad.
The truly great men are the good,
Then be thou kind, as all boys should,
And be an honored chief; you can
By doing good, mother's wee man.
—Mrs. M. C. Dickerson, in Golden Days.

KITTY AND I.

It happened many years ago, when we were both little girls, nearly the same age; but I am sure that we never forgot it.

We were spending the day at Farmer Brown's, a place we dearly loved to visit. We liked the walk, a mile and a half, through the cool, shady woods, leading from the little town in the valley to the farm on the hill. We liked the big, old apple orchard, just to the right of the house, where we often played all day. Then the old-fashioned rooms, having great windows, with their broad sills, and the long kitchen, where we took our meals at a table laden with bounties, were added charms. And oh! the days, when they knew that we were coming, that Miss Jane made us ice-cream—more of a rarity to children then than it is now.

This morning, in particular, bade fair to give us special delight. The sun shone brilliantly. We each had on pretty, new calico dresses. Best of all, Farmer Brown had promised us a ride home in the evening—for the woods grew very dark, and when we walked we had to start earlier than we liked. So we sauntered along, as light-hearted as the birds and the chipmunks, stopping to gather ferns—happy when we found a stray tuft of maiden-hair.

I had in my arms Kitty's doll. Mine was dressed exactly like hers, except that Kitty's, being a black-eyed beauty, wore a pink sash over her white dress, while my fair Seraphina had a blue ribbon. But ah! luckless me! We were seating ourselves on a great stone by the road-side, when my clumsy fingers let fall the doll. Oh! her beautiful china head split through the nose, from crown to chin.

At first, I was thoroughly contrite, and with a quick sense of justice was about to say: "O Kitty! I'm so sorry! you shall have Seraphina;" and, had that not been enough, would have added: "Yes, and my little gray pussy, too." Surely I could do no more. But I was too slow. Before I could speak, quick, impulsive Kitty jumped up, gave me a push, and called out angrily:

"O you horrid, careless girl! You're always breaking something. I'll never play with you again, and I'll never, never speak to you. So there!"

Leaving Seraphina, and snatching the wounded doll, she ran off without me.

I sat awhile, sobbing bitterly, for a sense of injustice rankled in my mind. I resolved, firmly, that, if Kitty did want to make up with me, as often happened, after our quarrels, I would not answer her, and would punish her by making friends with another cousin, as Kitty was always afraid I would. Drying my tears I went on, too angry to think of any shame in meeting Miss Jane and Miss Susan.

As soon as I got there, Kitty having told all the story, and been easily convinced that she had been too hasty, rushed out the gate, and threw her arms about me with "Oh, I'm so sorry! I oughtn't to have been so cross, for you didn't mean to do it."

But I was too stubborn to yield, and stiffly withdrew myself, and walked past her into the house. Kitty followed, her blue eyes full of tears at the repulse. I bade good morning to Miss Jane and Miss Susan. They, wise ladies, treated us as usual, concluding that it was best to leave us to ourselves.

We went to the apple orchard, but somehow the flavor had gone out of the day. Seraphina required a more than usual amount of punishment, and even the wounded came in for her share. After a while, Kitty wandered away, and I was left alone.

Suddenly it grew very dark, and, looking up, I saw that the sky was black with clouds. I ran quickly to the house. There, busy about the noon dinner, the darkness had obliged Miss Jane to light the lamps. Seeing me come, she thought, of course, that Kitty was following, but I had not seen her for some time. The heat grew stifling, the air was filled with electricity. The clouds hung low, and each moment grew more threatening. To increase my terror, no rain fell, and, childishly, I feared the world might take fire and burn up—and where was Kitty?

Blacker and blacker grew the clouds, and darker and more lurid grew the day. I looked anxiously out of the window in the direction where Kitty had gone; but nowhere did I see any traces of her. Every moment I expected to see her hurrying along to the house; but the moments passed without bringing her. At last I withdrew from the window, and seated myself hopelessly on my favorite chair. Where could Kitty be? Would I never see her again? The thought brought consternation to my childish breast. I cast aside my doll, and burying my face in my hands, I gave myself up to a stupor of despair.

A great peal of thunder, another and another, with vivid strokes of lightning, completely roused and terrified me. Oh! where, where was Kitty? Why had I not gone to hunt her?

A blinding flash, a heavy clap—and Kitty and I were in the middle of the room in each other's arms.

"O Kitty, Kitty! I was afraid—" and my words ended in convulsive sobs.

"Why, I was sound asleep the other side of the orchard fence, and the thunder woke me up." And we both cried and clung to each other.

Now the rain fell in torrents, and soon the storm had spent itself. When we felt that we could breathe freely once more, I begged Kitty to take Seraphina, and with her the gray pussy. And Kitty was sorry that she had been so hasty, and said I might play with Cousin Lill as much as I pleased.

While we were talking so pleasantly again, Farmer Brown came in and told us that Brindle, his finest cow, had been killed in the storm. They had found her where she had been browsing in the meadow, just the "other side of the orchard fence."

Kitty and I looked at each other with awe-struck faces. Suppose that we had been parted, each with anger in her heart towards the other. I can tell you that we never forgot it. And whenever we were tempted to be angry, a word or thought about the thunder-storm on the hill was enough.—S. S. Times.

Thoroughness.

A young New Englander, whose knowledge was more showy than deep, went many years ago to teach a district school in Virginia.

Among his pupils was a small, rather dull and insignificant looking boy, who annoyed him by his questions. No matter what the subject under discussion, this lad apparently never could get near enough to the bottom of it to be content.

One warm August morning, the teacher, with no little vanity in a knowledge universal in those days, began to lecture to the boys on the habits and characteristics of a fish which one of them had caught during recess. He finished, and was about to dismiss the school, when his inquisitive pupil asked about their gills and their use.

The question answered, others followed, concerning the scales, skin, flesh. The poor teacher struggled to reply with all the information at his command. But that was small, and the day grew warmer, and the Saturday afternoon's holiday was rapidly slipping away. "The school will now be dismissed," he said, at last.

"But the bones! You have told us nothing about the bones!" said the anxious boy.

Mr. Dash smothered his annoyance, and gave all the information he could command on the shape, structure and use of the bones.

"And now the school"—he began.

"What is inside of the bones?" stolidly came from the corner where the quiet boy was sitting.

Mr. Dash never remembered what answer he gave, but the question and his despair fixed themselves in his memory. Thirty-five years afterward he visited Washington and entered the room where the Justices of the Supreme Court were sitting.

The Chief-Justice, the most learne and venerated man of his day, was a man like St. Paul, whose bodily presence was contemptible.

The stranger regarded him at first with awe, then with amazement.

"It is the boy who went inside of the fish's bones!" he exclaimed.

If he had not tried to go inside of every "fish's bones" he would never have reached the lofty position which he held.

It is the boy who penetrates to the heart of the matter who is the successful scholar and afterwards lawyer, physician, philosopher or statesman.

It is the man whose ax is laid to the root, not the outer branches, whose religion is a solid foundation for his life here and beyond.—Baptist Weekly.

Under a Rock.

"I'm going to try 'em," said Grandpa Gray; and his eyes twinkled. Grandpa Gray's eyes were always twinkling.

He meant his three small grandsons, Hal and Herbie and Had.

So, at dinner grandpa said to grandma:

"I wish I had time to take that rock out of the yard there. It's a real eye-sore to me."

"Can't we, grandpa?" asked the boys.

"Well—yes, if you want to," said he; "and I'll be much obliged to you."

So directly after dinner they set to work. It didn't look like a very large rock. But it was a good deal larger than it looked, really.

"Pooh!" said Herbie; "I'll take it out in no time!" and he got a stout stick and tried to pry up the rock. But the stick broke and Herbie got a fall, from which he jumped up red and angry.

"Mean old thing!" said he; and he put his hands in his pockets and watched Hal and Had tug at it until their faces were red, too.

Then the three of them lifted together; but it wasn't a mite of use.

"Let's get the hoe!" said Had.

"And the littlest crowbar!" said Hal.

"And the shovel!" said Herbie.

So Had hoed around it and Herbie shoveled and Hal pushed the crowbar under the rock, and bore down on it with all his might. The afternoon was very warm, and the three little scarlet faces needed a great deal of mopping. But the boys wouldn't give it up.

"Poor little fellows!" said grandma, looking out through the vines.

But just then a great shout announced that the work was done; and there—there where the rock had lain were four silver dimes; one apiece and one for luck.

"Hurrah for grandpa!" cheered the boys; and at that very minute grandpa walked out of the house.

"Pretty well done!" said he, giving each little head a pat as he came to it. "Pretty—well—done!"

And now the boys are anxious to dig out another rock; but grandpa thinks may be silver dimes won't grow under the next one.—Youth's Companion.

—Carriage horses are becoming very scarce in and around Kingston, Canada, and a number of gentlemen there have combined together to procure two hundred mustang ponies from Texas for carriage use.

—The church which Eugenie intends building at Flamborough, Eng., in memory of her son, will cost $350,000. The coffins of Napoleon III. and the Prince Imperial will be placed in this church.

Religious.

THE LILIES OF THE FIELD

The Savior's flowers! How pure and fair
Those simple "Lilies of the Field;"
How sweet an incense to the air
Their fragrant snow-white blossoms yield!

Not Solomon in glory bright,
In gorgeous and in gold array,
Was such a fair and wondrous sight,
As in their modest beauty, they!

They weave not, the white robes they wear;
They toil not, neither do they spin;
No burdens like frail man they bear,
For—unlike him—they know not sin.

O emblems fair, O emblems sweet,
Of Christian humbleness of heart!
May we, as pure, at Heaven's feet
Sit low, and "choose the better part"

That to the "meek in heart" alone
Is by the Great Redeemer given;
That brings us kneeling to His Throne,
Throws wide the Golden Gates of Heaven.
—Chambers' Journal.

THINKERS AND ACTORS.

The following extracts are from a recent sermon by Prof. David Swing, of Chicago:

"If any one be a hearer of the word and not a doer, he is like unto a man beholding his natural face in a glass; for he beholdeth himself and goeth his way and straightway forgetteth what manner of man he was.—James, 1: 23, 24.

* * * * *

The future of our land lies in the hope that its words will turn into deeds, that the doers of good will become as numerous as the hearers and sayers of good. Of course the theory must precede the practice. The orations and poems upon human liberty came in advance of the actual freedom, and before a steamship or a steam-car came many public men began to speak of modes of rapid travel, and in the mind of Johann Faust there must have lain half asleep for years an idea of recording thought by movable types! Thus the pure intellect comes first in the order of progress; but woe to the age where nothing follows the theory. Suppose there had been nothing but a dream of printers' types, nothing but a theory of the locomotive, nothing but oratory and poetry about liberty! All can be summed up at once by supposing that the Creator had been satisfied with His intellectual conception of the universe, and had found blessedness in only such a gigantic plan! The sublime moment came when the Creator said: "I have for ages thought, now for ages I shall act." What a change came with that Divine resolve! Thus in a humble manner the noblest crises in humanity are those hours when theories turn into deeds. When Faust began actually to print many copies of some great book, then the wondering eyes of the world began to open. So when the first railway engine began to drag cars and to carry freight and people the triumph of mind over matter began to unfold its greatness and beauty. Awkward and frail was the first engine, but it surpassed the hope of its builder, and is to-day all covered with honor because it carried the human race from theory to action. It stands a small machine compared with its lineal descendants, but it pulled more than all of its children can draw. They drag great trains, but that first locomotive pulled the whole nineteenth century out of its theories. It dragged the human race from dream to reality. It whirled Europe and America from the little town of theory to the great city of work.

Thus all pure intellectual action makes a prelude to some external form of deed. If a spiritual God could in a sense transform Himself into a material universe, and add to His glory instead of detracting from its luster, man may well suspect that his earthly duty will be done only when his dreams of benevolence and wisdom shall have become works of benevolence and wisdom. * * * The man who does noble things equals the genius who can say them. We would declare the doer of good to outshine the dreamer of good did we not know that the perception of a moral end must run along in advance of the duty done. The man or being who uttered first the Golden Rule would have done the world immeasureable service had he lain down and died with the utterance of the words without having lived to do one deed of kindness. To evolve such a law from the old chaos of selfishness and cruelty would have been task enough for a god. We dare pluck no honor from any one of that long line of gifted ones who have in all ages said wise and sweet and beautiful things to mankind. Let them all stand in the temple of fame, for there is no marble too white or brass too enduring for the varied merits of these names; but not daring to touch these immortal wreaths, we may behold a company as illustrious, as immortal, those who perhaps in silence have done the things wise and sweet and beautiful. These make up a large company. Read the roll of earth's great from the present back, and it is not made up of only those who wrote and spoke with elegance and genius and logic, but every alternate name is of some one who led the legions in the field of action. Poet must divide space with inventor, orator must find room for discoverer, dramatist must share marble with the philanthropist, artist with patriot, philosopher with missionary, until at last poetry is equaled by love, and admiration is divided between the genius and the hero. * * * *

Let us recall the remark that two changes must come before our city or our land can make a rapid spiritual progress—a breaking-up of selfishness and a new estimate of the glory of deeds. The multitude is ready to receive all the wise attention your souls can venture to bestow. Not having the office of thinker, or poet, or artist, or astronomer, or inventor, you have within reach a duty and an honor which no intellectual gifts can surpass; your good sown wisely in the great field of society will blossom in perfect beauty and will hurry along toward a harvest richer than those of the new Dakota or the old Nile. The welfare of mankind is no longer waiting for words, but for noble actions. The song of charity has been well sung by all grades of voices, and the self-denying religion of Jesus has been well preached to this generation. The presses are busy with the literature of kindness, and each drama and each novel finds its climax in the triumph of the poor. All has come except the triumph. The quantity of humane philosophy on the one hand is equaled by nothing so perfectly as by the quantity on the other hand of ignorance and helplessness and sorrow.

As St. James saw the early Christianity impeded and injured by the refusal of the Church to pass from doctrine to action, so now we see the entire welfare of mankind injured by the sad divorce between thinking and doing. Thousands are sitting in the schools, other thousands are hidden away in silent rooms that they may acquire the art of uttering well good thoughts in prose or poetry, in oration or essay. Never before was our earth so covered over with the rich drapery of learning, and wisdom, and romance. Even the sleeping literature of the old East has been translated into our language, and thus Asia, and China, and Persia speak over again the words that fell like manna many centuries ago. This June month can not weave for the prairies a vestment of grass and flowers richer than that robe of high thought which the past has woven for the nineteenth century.

All that remains is for this truth, sown so widely and in soil so rich, to pass upward into action and become the life of humanity. Otherwise our age is as James expresses it—a profound person who admires his or her face in a glass, who must look again each day and each hour because the vision will not rest in the memory. It is a strange chimera the fingers of the mind can not grasp nor hold. The memory can retain history, or wisdom, or poetry, or the scenes of childhood, but it will not cherish the details of the race which admires itself in the glass. Hence the lover of self must exhaust years in returning to the mirror to look once again. Our relations to truth may be similar, and crowding into libraries or withdrawing into solitude, we may wish to see her face once again, and then again, till the grave shall call us and we all shall sink into it, saying: "The face of truth is beautiful." And so it is, but there is something as grand and divine—the external applicatian of truth. Truth applied to the ignorant, to the poor, to the unfortunate, to the unhappy, is like the theory of God turning into a world. Christ was a wonderful union of thought and deed. He was a complete system of progress in Himself. It will take all the multitude to equal Him. The two hemispheres of man—truth and works—met there and made a globe. His doctrines did not tower above His practice. His lips were no more eloquent than His hands. His mind was no deeper than His heart. His saying was no grander than His dying. When our nation and age shall thus combine thought and action it will spring forward as though borne by the arms of the Almighty; and hearts now empty of duty will find new joys in each day of being, and will find in the increased happiness of society an explanation of individual life.

Unused Ability.

The man who hid his Lord's talent, instead of using it, is no phenomenal character. Such people unhappily abound in our churches. The do-nothings are in excess everywhere. That large numbers can at the best accomplish but little may be conceded, but that little is not attempted is lamentably apparent. In large churches the enigma constantly presents itself of what would come to pass were some half dozen people to be withdrawn from active effort.

There is a disposition undoubtedly to speak slightly of small abilities, but "one talent" if wisely used may help to render important service. It is to combined efforts that we owe the grandest works in the world. One man may make comparatively few bricks, but they can not be dispensed with in the mighty edifice. The duty of every man is to find out what he has abilities for and use them to that end. With an earnest purpose to glorify God there is a niche for every one. There may be work as a teacher, or the consecration of social influence or the simple manifestation of the graces of Christian character. It is declared by Christ that His disciples are witnesses for Him, light, salt. Now, a witness is to testify, salt is to commingle with and permeate the mass in which it is placed, light is to banish darkness. The ancient curse on Merzo for doing nothing may rest on men now. Still the Bible reads: "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion."

It is to be feared that the great reason why more is not attempted for Christ is our want of faith. We are doubtful of our own power to work, and, worse than this, doubtful of our Lord's willingness to bless our efforts. If we could attain to Paul's standing: "I can do all things through Christ which strengthened me," we should not allow our power to be untried or rust. With the gracious promises which our Lord has made of blessing and success there is no excuse for inactivity.—Baptist Weekly.

Gems of Thought.

—It is impossible for that man to despair who remembers that his Helper is omnipotent.

—It is the busy people who are looking around for more to do. When men are lazy they do nothing, and they neither seek duties nor wish any one to point them out to them.

—As the hot sun, which scorches and destroys the shallow-rooted plant, only helps to ripen and perfect the strong and deep-rooted, so temptation, which causes the shallow, unstable man to fall, only strengthens the faith and perfects the character of the Christian.—Trench.

—We all can set our daily deeds to the music of a grateful heart, and seek to round our lives into a hymn, the melody of which will be recognized by all who come in contact with us, and the power of which shall not be evanescent, like the voice of the singer, but perennial, like the music of the spheres.

—There is but one true, real and right life for rational beings, only one life worth living, and worth living in this world, or in any other life, past, present, or to come. And that is the eternal life which was before all worlds, and will be after all are passed away and that is neither more nor less than a good life; a life of good thoughts, good words, good deeds—the life of Christ and of God. Kingsley.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JULY 4. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
[illegible]	[illegible] "	40
[illegible]	[illegible] "	20
[illegible] "	1 "	20
"	[illegible] "	10
"	[illegible] "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 2 lines free—over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

Democratic Ticket.

For Governor,
J. PROCTOR KNOTT, of Marion.

For Lieutenant Governor,
J. R. HINDMAN, of Adair.

For Attorney General,
P. W. HARDIN, of Mercer.

For Treasurer,
JAMES W. TATE, of Franklin.

For Auditor,
FAYETT HEWITT, of Hardin,

Superintendent of Public Instruction,
J. DESHA PICKETT, of Fayette

For Register of the Land Office.
J. C. CECIL, of Pike.

A FAIR crop of tobacco has been planted in the North Carolina white belt.

DURING the month of June powder and ball found three victims in Grant county.

THE Masonic fraternity will lay the corner-stone, to-day, for the new Court-house at Lexington.

CHOLERA has appeared in Egyt, and the inhabitants are very much alarmed. it being of a very malignant type.

THE political pot was boiling at a lively rate Monday. Dr. Scott, one of the candidates, was not able to be in town.

SINCE Burnett's theory flashed in the pan, there is no other alternative but for Craft to participate in a hemp stretching.

HON. JOHN G. CARLISLE has announced himself as a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Gen. Williams.

THE candidate for sheriff in Carter county has a fine prospect for being master of ceremonies at a hanging shortly after his election.

ON the 24th, 25th and 26th inst., there will be a reunion of the survivors of Gen. John H. Morgan's command, at Lexington, this state.

THE Transcript says that Craft has given up all hope of escaping the gallows, and will spend the remainder of his days preparing to meet his God.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $6 30@6 50; fair to good packers, at $5 90@6 25; fair to good light, $6 25@6 40; common, $5 25@5 85; culls, $4 25@5 20; stock hogs, $5 25@6 15.

THE Washington political prophets have the race for Speaker now between Randall and Blackburn, with the latter cofident of being successful. The tariff question will figure in the race exceedingly.

WAS President Arthur afraid to trust the Garfield and Arthur supporters in Virginia, or was he buying popularity when he gave the Hancock and English supporters appointments in the Old Dominion.

MANY a poor fellow mortal went forth this morning, brim full of patriotism, whose allegiance to this country will be dissolved by a fourth of July accident, when the Great Ruler of that undiscovered country will receive him.

WALTER EVANS has made things lively in the Revenue Department since he became Commissioner. He seems to have taken the bit in his teeth, and let several subordinates know that their official shoes must be surrendered to some he consider better calculated to do their work. He threatens to oust every man employed in the department about whom hangs any suspicion. Go in, Walter.

THE Scott law, providing for the assessment of a tax upon the business of trafficing in intoxicating liquors, and allowing the councils of municipal corporations to regulate and control the sale of beer and native wines on Sunday, was declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of Ohio, last week, three judges assenting, one dissenting and one not acting.

HARVEST is pressing the farmers, and their corn and tobacco are needing their attention.

"THAT's a lie,' said Dr. J. N. Cook to lawyer Hake Smith in a court-room at Atlanta, Georgia. Smith stopped long enough to knock him down, and then went on with his argument.

A CUCUMBER five feet long and large in proportion is on exhibition at New Orleans as a trophy of the producing qualities of Grand Isle, La.

We give the above as a trophy of some man's lying.

THE Paducah News has been presented with a red bat. The P. N. ought to send it to the Southern Exposition.—Courier-Journal.

If the C. J. will pay the express charges, we will send it two or three dozen red bats for the exposition.

THE consolidation of revenue districts wiped out sixty districts and as many collectors and an army of clerks, the effect of which is a big kick by the ousted. Gen. John W. Finnell, of Covington, is in the crowd that had to walk the plank the first of this month. It is said that the consolidation will save the government $200,000 annually.

Since the above was put in type the order wiping out the sixth district has been rescinded, and Gen. Finnell will still hold the fort, greatly to the delight of his friends.

LAST County Court day, in Owenton, Col. Thomas L. Jones made a speech there. Some pretend to say that they expected him to declare himself a candidate for governor, but the noble old Roman disappointed those who were silly enough to expect anything of the kind. He gave the crowd to understand; however, that he considered that he was nominated at Louisville, but that he is not willing to encourage disorganization in the party. Colonel Jones is truly a man who has the good of his party at heart.

A GOOD many republicans in this county declare their intention to "renig when it comes to voting for Register of the Land Office." "Why, what is your objection to Bro. Asberry?" we asked one of the growlers. "He is a d—d nigger!" was the curt and almost profane reply. "But isn't he a good Republican?" we persisted. "Don,t care," he responded, "I won't vote for a nigger." And we meandered, no longer marveling that Amos Dean, the colored Republican candidate for jailer, only received three votes in the county at the August election.—Breckinridge News.

IN another column will be found the report of the condition of the Farmers and Traders National Bank of Covington, at the close of business, June 22, 1883, by which it will be seen that the bank is in a flourishing condition. The stock is selling, when there is any to be sold, at a premium that many older banks have not been able to reach. The plan of distributing the stock through the country made the institution immensely popular from the beginning and will continue to add to its patronage. It has a bright future before it in the commercial world.

THE law requiring a vote taken on the proposition to call a constitutional convention, at the August election, provides for the appointment of two tellers for each voting precinct in a county, the appointment to be made by the county Judge. The section of the act embracing the duties the tellers is as follows:

SEC. 2 That for the purpose of ascertaining the number of persons so entitled to vote, the said tellers shall take from the poll-books of said election, within sixty days thereafter, the names of such persons as lawfully voted for representatives thereat, and shall, on the next day after making said list, add to it the names of such other citizens entitled to vote within their respective precincts, which additional names may be ascertained from the personal knowledge of said tellers.

FROM Mason, Owen, Pendleton, Barren, Bath, Carroll, Bracken, Bourbon, Scott, Fayette, Grant, Gallatin, Robertson, Nicholas, Clark, Montgomery, Jessamine Trimble and others, all of Kentucky, reports are uniformly reassuring as to the crop. Also in Brown, Adams, Clinton and other Ohio counties. As these embrace the principal White Burley sections, it will be seen that unless the growing season proves inimical to the growing plant, a bounteous crop of White Burley will be gathered. By the tobacco trade at large the weather will be watched with more anxiety than usual at other times of the year, for if it proves propitious, it will more than likely affect the price of tobacco, and for that reason the planter will hope for seasons that will raise doubt as to the extent of the crop, and the buyers and manufacturers will wish for seasons that will prove beyond a doubt a good crop can be raised.—Western Tobacco Journal.

THE glorious fourth is now interpreted by many to mean a glorious, big drunk.

THE acreage of tobacco is not so large this season, but at present it is looking very well.

THE county committee met last Monday, and decided not to call a primary election, letting the longest poll knock the persimmon at the August election.

THE district in which Col. Casey, of the Covington Commonwealth, resides, should send him to the legislature, if it wants the best representative it ever had.

PROPERTY in Lawrenceburg is selling at an advance in price not-withstanding her late flood experience, all of which is done to the great enterprise of the citizens.

THE consolidation of revenue districts has put Lexington in mourning. The collector's office in this district will be in Covington, which is a fatal stroke to Lexington's anticipated government building.

A DISPATCH to the Enquirer from Washington reports Mr. Carlisle as saying that he has ever reason to be satisfied with his position in the Speakership race. He thinks Randall has no more than 65 votes.

No more revenue stamps required on bank checks. The law discarding them went into effect last Monday. Bank checks gave the editorial fraternity but very little trouble, with or without stamps.

FROM some cause the package of RECORDERS for Petersbuag failed to arrive there last week. They left this office in Wednesday's mail and should have made the trip by Friday at the latest. We don't know where the fault lies.

IF Gen. Williams is correctly reported, he does not consider that opposition to re-election will amount to much. It will be no disgrace to Kentucky, if it amounts to enough to succeed him with some one of the gentlemen now mentioned in connection with the office of United States Senator.

ACCORDING to the correspondent of the Spirit of the Times. White made $12,000 out of the pooling privileges at the Latonia meeting. Of those who entered horses, Chinn & Morgan were the highest winners, receiving $8,425. O. A. Gilman, got $1,745. McIntire & Swiney, $950. T. J. Megibben. $800. T. J. Nichols, $250.

A COAL train with a passenger car attached, on the Rochester and Pittsburg Railroad, broke in two while going up a steep grade near Rasselas, a few miles south of the Kinzua viaduct July 1st. The severed section, consisting of seven heavily-loaded coal cars and a passenger coach, immediately started down the steep grade, and while going at the frightful speed of eighty miles an hour collided with the engine of an approaching coal train. The passenger car was well filled and the destruction of life and limb was appalling, seven having died from injuries, and others fatally hurt.

THE time is near at hand when the trustees in the various school districts in the county, will begin negotiations for fall and winter teachers The selection of teachers is a duty of much more gravity than most of the teachers consider it, they thinking the principal and most important part of their office is the employment of teachers at figures that will not more than absorb the public money, when in fact there is not money enough drawn by a district in the county to hire for five months, a first class teacher. Applicants for schools are always abundant, but a poor teacher is dear at any price, and the instructions they generally give pupils do more harm than good. Boone has plenty of good teachers for her schools, and let them be employed and paid good wages.

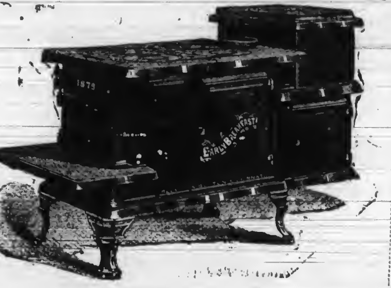
NOT long since, while the waters of Buck Run creek were swolen, Miss Nannie Lee and sister, aged twelve, attempted to cross the creek, both on one horse. When they got near the middle of the stream, the horse got entangled in some brush and threw them into the foaming stream and went to the bank and shook the saddle off. Miss Nannie had sunk twice when her sister caught her by the hair, and the horse went to them, turned around, and the younger sister caught him by the tail with one hand, and holding Nannie with the other, reached the shore in safety. The horse started home in a gallop, and neighed as if in great trouble; but getting no one to notice him, he started back in full speed to the girls. Finding them both alive and on their way home, he ran up to them and rubbed his head on their shoulders, and neighed as if he was very glad to see them.—Somerset Reporter.

It is said that there is no harm in telling a story if so large that nobody will believe it.

LOOK! LOOK!! LOOK!!!

From JULY 1st, to AUG., 1st, Custom Made suits will be on the average $5 less. Ready Made suits have been reduced 25 per cent.

The stock is large and must be disposed of to make room for my Fall Goods, let every one take advantage of the great reduction. H. F. BLASE, 540 Madison St., Covington, Ky.



EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

COL. SWOPE, revenue collect or in the Lexington district created a sensation in both political and social circles about Lexington, on the 1st inst., tendering his resignation of the collectorship. Since the late Republican State Convention some of his jealous partisans have been trying to have him removed, but the President's action in the consolidation of revenue districts showed that he heeded not the complaints against Swope, which makes his resignation more of a mystery. The only reason given for resigning is that he is tired of the confinement, labors and responsibilities of the office.

Telling it very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can, but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it short this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of letter paper."

"Here you are, sir, then, and there are thousands of people here in Bingham, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Guilfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in this city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines usually given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends and customers forgot me, as though I were under ground,

'With the end of my nose and the tip of my toes
Turned up to the roots of the daises,'

My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except death. That is God's truth, and mr. Mosher, here, knows it.

"I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago, I'm lively as a cricket now, sir and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipaled inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of HISCOX & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
TRADE MARK.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMY, Seville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83.

JNO. S. DORMAN & CO.

—DEALERS IN—

MILLINERY, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS,

Clothing, Carpets, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Trunks, Valises, &c.

LAWRENCEBURG, . . . INDIANA.

A. M. Elliott and Co,

—DEALERS IN—

Threshers, Engines,

SAW MILLS, HORSE POWERS, BUCKEYE
Reapers, Mowers and Self-Binders,
South Bend Chilled Plows, Furst & Bradley Steel Plows.
Buggies, Wagons and Farming Implements in General.

Give us a call. Satisfaction guaranteed in every sale. Corner second and Judiciary Streets, Aurora, Indiana. 33-6t

LUMBER.

A. Corbin & Son.

—) BELLEVUE, KY., (—

Will sell the best Hemlock Stock Boards at $13 00.

Best Hemlock fencing at	$13 00
Standard Shingles at	$1 50
Weather boarding, white pine,	$18
Flooring, yellow pine, at	$35

Doors, Window Sash and blinds always on hands.

Prices subject to a chance without notice. Persons who contemplate building will do well to call and see us before purchasing.

A. Corbin & Son.,
Bellevue, Ky.

NOTICE TO
Contractors and Builders.

Sealed proposals will be received at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind., until seven o'clock p. m.,

Thursday, July 12th, 1883,

for the building of the Christian Chapel above the foundation, according to the plans and specifications.

Proposals for each part of the work separate will also be received.

Plans and specifications on file at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

The building committee reserve the right to reject any or all bids, and a sufficient bond must be furnished with the bids for the entire building, as a guarantee that the building will be completed according to the plans and specifications.

JOHN SOUTWELL, SR, J. H. BUSSE,
JOHN H. LOVE, A. G. TEBBS,
J. W. TEBBS, W. M. TERRILL
Building Committee.
Lawrenceburg, Ind., June 20, 1883.

Farm for Sale.

A small farm of 11¼ acres, on the Covington and Lexington pike, at the top of Willow Run Hill. On it are a commodious house, necessary out buildings and a good orchard. Title good. Call on W. C. Tupman, Sheriff's Office, Covington, Thomas Tupman, Kenton Heights or W. L. Riddell, Burlington.

LOOK HERE!
when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on
Winegardner
He has a large assortment of
Wall Paper!
And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.
Inks, Pens and Stationary
constantly on hand.
Headquarters in Lotton House.

NOTICE.

Know all men by this notice: That Elzy Garrison, H. A. Hicks, B. L. Rice, C. C. Talbott, Wallace Garrison, John S. Mason and T. A. Huey, under the name and style of the Richwood and Big Bone Turnpike Co., have associated themselves together to contract and operate a turnpike road, beginning at its intersection with the Union and Beaver Lick turnpike, just southeast of Dr. H. C. Lassing's residence, in Boone county, Kentucky, and running thence in a general westwardly direction along an established and surveyed route, in a main line to Elzy Garrison's gate, and consisting of said main line and a branch turnpike, beginning at Robert Willis' corner with Richard Howlett, on the old Big Bone and Union dirt road, running in a general northwardly direction until it intersects the general main line at a point S. E. of C. T. Rice's old homestead. Said main line and branch road shall be called the Richwood & Big Bone Turnpike.

Big Bone or some point on the road shall be the principal place of business,

The amount of capital stock shall be $10,000, to be paid in as the work progresses,

Said corporation shall date from June 9, 1883, and continue fifty years.

Its officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer and five directors, all of whom shall be ellected annually on January 1st of each year.

It shall not subject itself, at any time, to a greater liability or indebtedness than $6,000.

Private property shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ELZIE GARRISON, H. A. HICKS, B. L. RICE,
WALLACE GARRISON, JOHN S. MASON,
COURTNEY C. TALBOTT. T. A. HUEY.
June 12, 4t.

STATE COLLEGE OF KENTUCKY.

UNSECTARIAN. Fall session begins Sept. 12, 1883. Fifteen Professors and Instructors. Scientific, Classical, Agricultural, Normal School and Commercial Courses of Study. Tuition and Matriculation fees, $20 per annum. Board in dormitory, $2.25 per week; in private families $4.50. 320 students last year. Buildings, apparatus & machinery entirely new. Capacity for 600 students. Range of study wider and expenses less than any college in Kentucky. For catalogues apply to Judge W. B. KINKEAD, or to JAMES K. PATTERSON, Ph. D., President of the College, Lexington, Ky.

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,

Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk,

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

SOLDIERS HO! LOOK
READ!

Send for our new circulars containing matter of utmost importance to all ex-soldiers or their heirs. PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, PATENTS, LAND CLAIMS, HORSE CLAIMS, and all others against the Government promptly and faithfully attended to. Address with stamp W. H. WILLS & Co.,
Lock Box 488 Washington, D. C.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund,

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. D. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable,

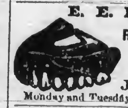
Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday.
Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comor, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beaver—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and



E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

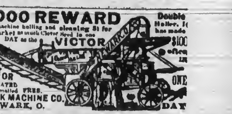
No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

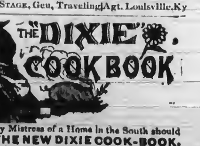
PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N. Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines.
2 to 100 Horse Power.
Established 1840
Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will furnish a horse power with ⅓ less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1200, Corning, N. Y.



$1000 REWARD
For any machine hulling and cleaning $1 for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR
Double Huller, It has made $100 often in ONE DAY
VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE.
NEWARK MACHINE CO.
NEWARK, O.
W. N. STAGE, Gen. Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky



THE "DIXIE" COOK BOOK.

Every Mistress of a Home in the South should have THE NEW DIXIE COOK-BOOK. It contains the cream of all the other books on COOKERY AND HOUSE-KEEPING. Over 5,000 receipts, true and tried, from old family receipt books, and 10,000 new hints and helps and facts of value. Sold by subscription. AGENTS WANTED. Send for specimen pages and terms.
S. A. CLARKSON & CO.,
ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 130 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard Books & Bibles
works of character; great variety; low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

W-h-e-w.

Celebrate to-day.

'Rah for the fourth.

Hot's no name for it.

Harvest is now in full blast.

Take the toy-pistol from your boy.

Too much rain last week for harvesting.

Tobacco plants were in demand last week.

Read H. F. Blase's new advertisement in this issue,

The declaration of Independence is 107 years old to-day.

R. S. Cowen's new house is rapidly approaching completion.

Some wheat was attacked by rust in the last stage of ripening.

A large crowd is expected to witness the game of ball this evening.

Some of the early setting of tobacco is large enough to top at ten leaves.

The school commissioner was in town Monday, disbursing the May draft.

The Petersburg boys quaffed bad water at Bullittsville, last Saturday.

A Covington crank has threatened the life of Prof. Geo. Yates of that city.

Mercury kissed 94 Monday and Tuesday, which were the hottest days of the season.

The people in this neck o' woods would like to hear Knott and Morrow in joint debate.

Read the notice of the Lawrenceburg Christian church to contractors and builders.

We are filling orders for star tobacco at whole sale prices, Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

The smaller boys with a target gun are waging a war of extermination on the English sparrow.

R. Randall, of Petersburg, harvested six acres of wheat that will make twenty-five bushels per acre.

A big crowd is expected to witness the game this afternoon between Burlington and Newport.

Trade dollars are now passing for on; 1 85 cents each. Another big swindle has been inaugurated,

F. P. Walton has some tobacco for which he wants $40 per hundred. It is a lot which is extra select.

Humors of the stomach, salt rheum, and all blood disorders, are radically cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

J. F. Blythe now occupies the house in which Green & Riddell and the RECORDER office were ensconced last year.

We suppose our seniour's garden is clear of weeds now, as he was at work in it the other day with a mowing scythe,

Mrs. F. Riddell found, one day last week, a mushroom which, at a short distance, has a very striking resemblance of a bird.

E. H. Baker sold tobacco last week at $24 per hundred. That sale will cause several more acres of the weed to be planted about here,

Both the candidates for the legislature were in this locality, last week, shaking hands with the people, They are very industrious now.

A man gave as an excuse for not serving on the late Barnett jury, at Mt. Sterling, that "something was going to happen at his house and he ought to be there." He was told to stand aside.

Posters for a daylight and moonlight pic-nic at Viola Park, on the 14th inst., have been printed at this office. From the array of managers we feel no hesitancy in saying it will be a boss affair, Be sure and come,

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected, Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent,

The Petersburg distillery will not be in operation during the months of July and August, being shut down for repairs, and giving the employes an opportunity of rusticating in the harvest field. The cattle were moved from the pens last week,

One of those smart-Alex that can do anything that anyone else can do, came into the office the other day and picked up the composing stick and after musing over the case for about two hours and a half accomplished the following: tHis Is mY fIRst a'TtemPt at tIpe seT ING

Jim McCune, a very talented rascal, hailing from Boone county, Kentucky, convinced Alex Moody that a $10 confederate bill was a silver certificate, and Alex gave him $9 90 in good money and a shave for the piece of paper. When Alex discovered the fraud he caused the arrest of McCune who is now in jail.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Harvest hands are commanding $1 50 per day.

The crowd in town Monday was very small, and the buggy men's harvest was small.

Elder. John M. Thompson will hold religious services at Mt. Pleasant next Saturday and Sunday.

Read A. Corbin & Son's advertisement in this issue. They have slaughtered prices on lumber.

Dr. Furnish, and Dr. Laury, of Walton, are playing a game of chess by mail. The game progresses slowly.

A little girl of J. Frank Grant, of Peterbur, fell out of a barn loft, the other day, and hurt herself quite badly.

John M. Moody will commence his stock sales in Lawrenceburg and continue every Saturday through the summer.

We talked with farmers from all the different parts of the county, Monday, and they all report crops looking well. Wheat will average about ten bushels per acre.

The prospects for building the pond, mention of which was made last week, are flattering, Mr. G. T. Gaines will donate the right of way as it were, and render other material and substantial aid.

Geo. Blythe came tearing into town, Tuesday morning at such a high rate that it was nearly impossible to keep from being run over by his buggy, and all because of the advent of a fine daughter.

The Commissioner sold, Monday, to C. O. Utz, 100 acres of the John A Kendall farm for $2,211 30, and Richard Green's undivided ½ interest in Ellen Green's dower of 10 acres in Edward Green's land, to F. Riddell for $25.

W. R. Terrill, the mail carrier between Erlanger and this place, threw up his contract on this end of the route, Monday, carrying the mail from Erlanger to Florence, only. Guess Uncle Sam will find another man to manipulate the mail sack on this route.

On the 21st ult., James Walden, Marshal of Williamstown shot and killed James Bannon. Bannon pursued Walden through the back room and up a flight of stairs in a saloon building before Walden opened fire on him. On the 23d ult., Hayden Northcutt shot and killed Billy Childers who attacked him with stones on the public highway. Childers had ruined Northcutt's sister two years before.

The late Senator Hill of Georgia, thus argued about immortality: "If a grain of corn will die and then rise again in so much beauty, why may not I die and then rise again in infinite beauty and life? How is the last a greater mystery than the first? And if inasmuch as I exceed the grain of corn in this life, why may I not exceed it in the new life? How can we imagine the power of Him who made the grain of corn to live in such newness of life?"

The boy, O'Brien, who was brought from Walton and lodged in jail for stealing a pocket knife, was taken out, one day last week, under a writ of habeas corpus and taken before 'Squire Baker, but upon further considering the case he was returned to jail, because he had but a short time to remain. The writ was sued out on the grounds that the justice had not sufficient jurisdiction of the case, his authority only allowing commitment, after which the quarterly court has jurisdiction.

County Court.

Very little business was transacted in the county court Monday.

Mildred J, Shephard's will was probated.

The finding of the jury in the case of H. C. Berkshire against James T. Ryle, and others was confirmed.

W. P. Sparks was appointed guardian for Joseph Sparks.

W. N. Crigler was released from paying one poll-tax, being assessed twice.

Benjamin Craven's will probated with John and Noah Craven executors.

Base-ball.

A game was played, last Saturday, on the Bullittsville grounds between the Petersburg club, composed of players from Lawrenceburg, Aurora and Petersburg, and the Hebron club, composed of players from Cincinnati, Riverside, Burlington and Hebron, resulting in a victory of 7 to 17 in favor of the latter. This cannot be called a contest between home clubs as both were composed largely of players out of the state, which will evidently destroy the interest in the game, A large crowd was present and immense excitement prevailed at times. Fowler and Hughes played with Hebron,

---

It becomes our painful duty, this week to chronicle the death of our old friend. Churchwell Clore. The sad event occurred Monday morning about three o'clock, after several week's severe suffering with cancer of the stomach. The deceased lived for many years on the farm where he died, and was considered a good and obliging neighbor by all with whom his daily duties as a farmer brought him in contact, and he will be greatly missed by his neighbors and the people of Burlington who saw him every day previous to his last illness. Had he lived till next Wednesday he would have seen his three score and ten years. The funeral services were conducted by Elders Benjamin Lampton and Edward Stephens, at the house at 10 a. m. yesterday, after which the remains were followed to their last resting place, the family burying ground, by a large concourse of friends who lament his death. The family has the sympathy of the entire community.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Geo. G. Hughes is now incog. He shaved the other day.

Prof. Geo. H. Yates, of Covington, was in town Monday.

Attorney Williams, of Rising Sun, attended court Monday.

J. Frank Grant, the Petersburg Merchant-prince, was in town last Friday.

W. H. Baker was in town Monday. He will return to New Orleans early in August,

Miss Lucy Swetnam, of Florence, was the guest of Mrs, L. H. Dills several days last week,

Dr. Bennett, of Louisville, and Earnest Grant, were in town Sunday. The Dr. looks quite natural.

Misses Hattie Smith, of Sugartit, and Mary Horlott, were the guests of Miss Addie Crisler, last week.

James Akin and Michael Clore, two of Bellevue's distinguished citizens, were here last Wednesday.

Rev. C. C, Conner, and wife, of Aurora, spent several days, last week, with relatives in this neighborhood.

S. Baker, of Big Bone, was in town, Monday. He is 73 years old, and one day last week he rode, on horseback, 70 miles.

James Tolin, of Plattsburg, who was up in the mountains the later part of last month, has returned home much improved in health.

Prof. Stephenson's season for rusticating has arrived, and he and his little daughter, Birdie, spent several days here last week. The Professor had a fine school all fall, winter and spring, nea Petersburg.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Jacob Tanner is having good success with his choir.

Charley Davis has the chills.

Joel Clore has returned home from college.

Mrs, Alice Hafor, who has been sick for some time is improving.

Mr, Albert Popham is much better,....

Dr, Luther Terrill has the flux.

Constance.

News and nuggets gleaned from Constance, and sent to the RECORDER office to be scattered over the county of Boone.

William Souther, who had his hand badly cut a few weeks ago, is almost well.

Mrs. Geo. Brown has moved her piano to this place, and now the town is regaled with sweet music.

We think if we were the Hebron baseballists we would take our name off the list.

Potatoe bugs are scarce, but flies plentiful.

J. A. Riddell sold two fox hounds to a Missouri man for $15 each, so Marco says.

Geo. Brown is improving the appearance of his dwelling, almost daily. A new kitchen this time.

Bullittsville.

This will be a good game year.

Corn and oats look well.

E. K. and E. R. Stephens have the finest wheat crop in this section. They have about 80 acres which has been estimated at something near 1600 bushels. These enterprising farmers are saving their grain with a self binder.

The jovial R. M. Howard, formerly a teacher of this county, but now a farmer near Loveland, O., paid his many friends a visit last week.

Charley Duncan is now in business at Kansas City, Mo.

The facinating Misses Sallie Watts and Lizzie Stephens accompanied by the ever genteel E. K. Stephens, visited sweet Pete, last Sunday.

Fred Youmans will eat yellow-legged chickens with his Boone friends during the summer months, Fred is a good entertainer and a "head-light" to any society.

Waterloo.

Health of the neighborhood is exceedingly good,

We have had much rain here of late, Nearly all the tobacco growers are done setting tobbaco, and are now busy with their corn in order to be ready for wheat harvesting, the wheat will be rather light in this vicinity. Hay harvest will soon be on hand.

The raspberry crop is very large, and the prospects for blackberries is as fine as ever seen.

An appointment was made for Rev. Corwin to preach at the Universalist church near here, last Sunday. The congregation was very much disappointed, as he did not come,

Quite a number of young folks met at the residence of Mr, Joshua Rices, last Sunday evening and had a very pleasant time.

Mr. Cyrus Kelley and family, of Bellevue were visiting his mother last Sunday.

Scattersville.

Harvesting has commenced in earnest.

Tobacco is growing nicely at present. There has been some trouble in getting a stand on account of the cutworm.

W. E. Piper & Co., rodded Mr. O. P. Conner's house and barn, one day last week. We did not learn the price paid, but think they did not charge him very much, as he gave the boys their dinner. O. P. didn't fear the lightning so much as he did those slick tongued agents.

Rev. C. C. Conner and wife and Miss Gracie Stedman, of Aurora, were visiting O. P. Conner last week. We were glad to see them,

E. H, Baker and family, and Ras Huey and family, were visiting Mr, and Mrs. J. O. Huey one day last week,

J. H, Sebree, of Gunpowder, has the boss piece of tobacco of this neighborhood, as far as we have seen, while John Mitchell, of the same country has the best crop of corn. He claims that his corn is higher than his shoulders. [We have corn that is higher than our head, (when we sit down,) —EDS.]

The thermometer stands high in the shade,

Florence.

There is a fine opening in Florence for a doctor—to pass through, having the length and width of the Lexington pike.

The principal staff of our town still wags and waxes his mustach.

Bro, W. never fails to wear his side boards on festival occasions in order to take a back load.

E. q. Bedinger bought a wagon load (the entire crop) of tobacco for 25 cents. Almost as cheap as Joe Williams' sheep.

The wind work of the new jail in Florence has been completed. All it needs now is to be weather-boarded.

Color-blind people should be very cautious how they cast their vote for Register of the Land office.

Wanted—50 cats at the sportsman's corner. A liberal price will be paid if pedigree accompanies.

You should always turn a crank from you, but some cranks are hard to turn.

We generally do our scribbling off hand, but contemplate going down to Erlanger and buying an individual right for a dead rest. They keep them down there.

Over-fed city people on coming to the country to board should be fed for a while on cut straw and molasses.

Wood ashes mixed with chicken food is a good remedy for gapes.

PROGRAMME
—OF THE—
SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION
—OF—
North Bend Association
TO BE HELD
AT SAND RUN CHURCH,
BOONE COUNTY, KY.

JULY 20th and 21st, 1883.

FRIDAY MORNING AT 10:30 A. M.

Introductory sermon........W. H. Felix
Subject—Early Conversions.
Organization.
Adjourn for dinner.

AFTERNOON 1:30 P. M.

Essay......................C. M. Roudebush
Subject—Would Christ have approved of [illegible] Schools?
Discussion by E. N. Dicken and J. A, Kinney.
Essay..........................James Walker.
Subject—The Difficulties of a Sunday-School Superintendent.
Discussion by Jno. S, Huey and John Sebree.
Essay..............................J, H, Averill
Subject—The relation of the Sunday-School to the Church.
Discussion by J. V, Riley and W. H. Felix.

SATURDAY MORNING 9 A. M.

Essay..................................E. E. Utz.
Subject—Man's Religious Necessities only met by the Teachings of the Scriptures.
Essay...........................John Cropper
Discussion by A. L. Vickers and W. H. Felix,
Essay...................................Lee Utz.
Subject—Sunday-School music.
Discussion by N. S. Walton and E. N. Dicken,
Practical report from field by Superintendents.

By the trimming of the maple trees in front of his house, W. E. Piper is destroying a very popular summer resort, and great will be the lamentations because thereof. It may prompt the calling of an indignation meeting.

S. A. Palmer and family will celebrate the fourth in Lawrenceburg,

Charles Westbay is spending the 4th and his money in Hoosier.

REPORT OF HE CONDITIO N
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, June 22 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$596,257 88
Overdrafts............		137 20
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents........,		56,025 45
Due from other National banks...........	5,410 88
Due from State banks and bankers............	1,607 76—	7,018 64
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid..............		3,846 08
Premiums paid..............		9,000 00
Checks and other cash items...............		92 85
Bills of other Banks..		940 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies....................		47 81
Specie		2 965 00
Legal tender notes...		20,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)......		2,250 00
Total		$753,279 32

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund..........	1,200 00
Undivided profits...	26,730 65—	27,930 65
National bank notes outstanding............,		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check.....	342,731 38
Due to other National Banks............	23,809 31
Due to State Banks and bankers	13,807 98—	380,348 67
Total		$753,279 32

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 22d day of June, 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
M. C. MOTCH,
J. H. MERSMAN,
} Directors.

Hay Conveyors.

We take this method of informing the public that we are MANUFACTURING and SELLING W. M. CONNER'S

HAY CONVEYORS.

Just the thing to use in large barns

BAKER & CRUTCHER,
35-4t Florence X-Roads.

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 3 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55½ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good, MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

Wanted.

A bitch that has young pups to "foster mother" 4 or 5 pups. She must be fresh and healthy—would rather have her without the pups, but if there is not too many will care for them—will buy or return her in two or three weeks and pay for trouble. Call between this and Monday next, on E. H. Howard, Bullittsville, or A. W. Smith, Burlington.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—
UMDERTAKERS
—AND—
EMBALMERS,

Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW!
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store,

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY,

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,
—TEACHER OF—
PIANO & ORGAN.
Lessons given at my residence,
Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. S. I. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,
Aurora. Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once,

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS.

R

FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES,
SALT BY THE BARREL.

R O U S E.

BOOTS, SHOES, HATS, CAPS.
The Best of Flour
PATENT & HIGH GRADE
Always on Hand, and cheaper than the cheapest.

S
E

QUEENSWARE, GLASSWARE AND TINWARE
A fresh Stock of Garden Seed at
DUDLEY ROUSE'S.

M. L. SWETNAM, HUBERT NEAD.

SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month,
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping,

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO THE
Petersburg Drug Store,
Where you can find everything in the Drug line, such as——.
Well call and see and be convinced.
Respectfully, S. C BUCHANAN.

HARNESS & SADDLES,

ALBERT M. ACRA,
BURLINGTON, KY.
HARNESS MAKER
And Dealer in
Saddles, Fly Nets, Trotting Balls, Ankle Boots, Whips, &c.,

I have moved into my new building and am now prepared to furnish everything in the harness line at the lowest prices. Best material used in all work done, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Repairing Promptly Done. Give me a Call.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green,
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, A. R. Mullen, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.

The general operation of Banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired,
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE
At Farmdale, P. O., Franklin Co., Ky. [illegible] COL. R. D. ALLEN, Supt.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

THE BICYCLE.

Whisking through the woodlands,
  Flashing over bridges;
Darting past the orchards,
  Coasting down the ridges;
Whirling o'er the meadows,
  Glint of polished steel,
Bless me, this is pleasant,
  Riding on a wheel!

With a rubber tire,
  Tireless I ride;
Passing men and horses,
  Silently I glide;
Pretty, pretty maidens
  Watch me as I pass,
Wave their kerchiefs to me,
  Sitting on the grass.

Rustics in the furrow
  Stop the plow to stare
  At the flying figure
  Silent as the air;
Timid village ladies
  Anxiously observe
That there must be danger
  Going round the curve.

Every one is looking
  At my silent flight;
Hardly do they see me,
  Ere I'm out of sight;
Down the hilly roadway
  With a bugle peal,
Bless me, this is pleasant
  Riding on a wheel!

—B. T. Sienna, in The Continent.

THE WRONG CHARLEY.

"That reminds me," said the Quarter-master, "of the way I was taken up once for pocket-picking."

I don't remember what it was that reminded him—we were telling stories in camp—but as he was one of the finest fellows in our set, the idea of his ever having been arrested for picking a pocket struck us all as very funny.

"It's a fact," he declared, when some of us expressed our incredulity. "Larceny from the person, they called it, but it's the same thing."

"What a charge against a man like you, Colonel!"

"Well, it does seem a little absurd, now. But it wasn't so very absurd then. The truth is," the Colonel added, with a smile, "the charge was not only made, but it was proved."

"That you picked a pocket?"

"That's the simple fact, gentlemen."

"But you didn't!"

"Well, but I did!"

And as this assertion piqued still more our curiosity, he proceeded to gratify it by telling the following story:

"It was the spring when I was eighteen years old. I was out of school, out of work, out of money; and I went to Boston to see if I could find something to do.

"I found a boarding-place in Charlestown, and tramped the streets of both cities looking for a place. I had been at that discouraging business about a week, meeting with no success; my board-bill was due, and I was thinking I should have to pawn my watch to pay it, when, one evening, on Boston Common, just at dusk, I met with my little adventure.

"As I was passing one of the benches on Charles-Street mall, I saw a man leaning over it who was evidently tipsy. What attracted my attention was a watch that had fallen out of his pocket, and was dangling by the chain. I saw that he was a country fellow, and there was something about him which looked very familiar.

"'Hello, Charley!' said I, walking up to him, in great surprise at finding him there in that condition. 'Is that you?'

Charley Dibbin was a young farmer of Framingham, who sometimes drove a market-wagon to town, and had been known to ride home once or twice in a jolly frame of mind, hardly consistent with perfect sobriety. But I had never heard of his forgetting himself so far as he seemed to have done that afternoon; and though I wasn't much acquainted with him, I thought it my duty to take him in charge.

"'Hello yourself!' he said, trying to look up, but lurching heavily and raising his tipsy eyes not much higher than my knees.

He seemed to recognize me, and stuck out his hand. "'I'm all right!' said he. 'All ri-ight!' with another lurch. 'And don't you go home and tell folks you ever saw me when I wasn't all right."

"'But, Charley,' said I, 'you are losing your watch! Don't you see?'

"'So I am,' said he. 'Bother the watch!' trying to get it back into his pocket.

I asked him where he was stopping, and he told me on Elm street.

"'Take me there,' said he, 'and I'll give ye five dollars.'

"'I'll take you there for nothing,' I said, 'if you have money to pay for a hack.'

"'Money!' said he. 'I've piles of money!'

He tried to get at his wallet, but merely left it, sticking out of his pocket.

"'Don't say that so loud,' said I, in alarm. 'You'll lose your money and your watch, too, I'm afraid, while I'm going for a hack.'

"'Take 'em with ye! take 'em with ye!' said he, lurching over into my arms. 'Fact is, I'm too how-come-ye-so for anything.'

"As the watch was dangling again, I thought it best to transfer it to my own pocket. And seeing a suspicious-looking fellow watching us from the passage-way leading out on the street, I concluded to take the pocket-book also.

"I then told Charley to sit up steadily as he could, so as not to attract the attention of any passing policeman, and wait patiently where he was five minutes, when I would return for him with a hack. But before starting I looked all around again, to make sure there was no policeman in sight.

"There was one in sight, though, coming directly along the mall. I told Charley to keep still, and stood before him to prevent his condition from being observed.

"All would have passed off as I desired, but just then the suspicious-looking fellow at the passage-way stepped out, advanced to meet the officer, and said something to him in a low voice. The officer thereupon walked straight up to me and said, in an arbitrary tone:

"'What's the matter with this man?'

"My only thought was to screen Charley and keep him out of the lock-up, and I replied, rather carelessly:

"'Nothing much; a little sick. I am taking care of him.'

"'You're taking care of him with a vengeance!' said the officer, in the rudest manner; and without waiting for a word of explanation, he thrust his hand into my pocket and dragged out Charley's watch.

"'Is this yours?' he demanded, as he would have spoken to a misbehaving cur, at the same time giving a jerk at my own watch, which was in its place.

"'No,' said I, frightened and angry. 'That's this man's. I was taking care of it for him.'

"'You're taking care of his pocket-book too!' And in the same rude, exasperating way, he thrust his hand into my other pocket and pulled out Charley's well-filled wallet.

"'Is that his or yours.'

"'That's his,' I tried to explain. 'I was afraid he would lose both his watch and his money while I went for a hack; he's an old friend of mine, you see.'

"The officer shook Charley roughly by the shoulder.

"'Look up here! What's your name?'

"'A gentleman, which you are not!' said Charley, tipsily.

"'Do you know this man? Is he your friend?' cried the officer with another shake to stir up his muddled wits.

"'Fore Heaven,' said Charley, 'I never saw either of you gentlemen before!' And giving another lurch, he went off the bench altogether.

"'Just as I expected!' said the officer. And grasping me with one hand, holding his billy with the other, he said sharply: 'you come with me!'

"'But sir!' I exclaimed, more and more frightened and confused, 'it's just as I tell you!'

"'Of course! it always is!' said the officer with brutal sarcasm, dragging me away. 'I believe I know you, you've been up for tricks of this kind before.'

"'I assure you!' I said, 'I—won't you let me explain?'

"'You'll have a chance to explain to-morrow morning in the Police Court,' he replied; and in spite of anything I could say, he hurried me off to the nearest station. The man who had had me arrested followed us, and another officer we met on the way was sent back to take Charley into custody.

"I was in an indescribable state of wrath and trepidation and dismay when I was shoved roughly into the police station, and confronted there by my captor as if I had been one of the most degraded criminals.

"When I tried again to make my evidence clear, I was quietly informed that drunken men were the common prey of pick-pockets like me, who invariably claimed to be their friends and protectors when caught taken charge of watches and wallets, as I had been seen to do!

"I hoped that Charley would be sober enough to exonerate me when he was brought in. But he seemed tipsier than ever; and angry at his arrest; he refused to answer any questions, merely claiming that he was a gentleman, while the police were all scoundrels.

"He was tumbled into one cell, I was locked up in another, and there we remained until the Black Maria took us up in its evening round and conveyed us to the City Tombs.

"Can you imagine a boy of eighteen, of good habits and a respectable family, in such a terrible situation? There's no use in my trying to describe to you the agonies of mind I endured that awful night! I had a mother, a married sister and numerous friends in Framingham; but I knew nobody in Charlestown or Boston who could vouch for my character.

"The next morning I was put into the dock along with a crowd of other prisoners. You know what the dock of a Municipal Court is like?

"Imagine a sort of pit in one corner of the room containing benches that will seat some fifty or sixty persons, with a partition that completely screens you from the view of spectators until you are called upon to mount the steps to the bar fronting the end of the Judge's bench.

"I shall never forget the appearance of the dock that morning. To a well-brought-up, fastidious young fellow like me, the company of depraved men and women and boys in which I found myself—their rags, their haggard faces, their black eyes got in drunken quarrels—well, I won't attempt to picture the revolting scene and the effect it produced on me. To this day I can not think of it without a shudder.

"I looked in vain among the figures on the crowded benches for that of Charley Dibbin, who, I firmly believed, would acquit me of all evil intentions in his case if I could be brought face to face with him when sober. There was no Charley Dibbin there.

"For an hour I endured the tortures of anxiety, watching the other cases before the Court, and waiting for my own to be called up. An awful thrill shot through me when my turn came at last.

"'John Patterson!'

"I mounted the steps and stood at the bar, in full view of the Court and spectators. The officer who had arrested me, and the stranger to whom I was indebted for that mischance, gave their evidence against me, and the fatal watch and pocket-book were produced.

"The Judge then asked me if I had anything to say; upon which, forgetting my dread of court and spectators, I poured out my story.

"The Judge listened with a kindly interest which gave me encouragement and hope. When I had finished he said:

"'It was your friend, Charles Dibbin—a person well-known to you—whose watch and wallet you took for safe keeping?'

"'Yes, sir,' I replied. 'That is, he is not an intimate friend of mine; but he belongs to the same town, and I know him pretty well.'

"The Judge asked: 'Is he among the prisoners in the dock?'

"I turned and looked down into the pit, and once more cast my eye around upon the strange faces there.

"'No, sir,' I replied; 'he is not.'

"Then a terrible thing happened. I can't tell you just how it was, for it took my senses away at the time, and I was near swooning with the shock.

"A young fellow I had already noticed, because he was one of the few respectable-looking men in the dock, mounted the steps, and stood by my side at the bar. He was charged with drunkenness; but I thought little of that. He pleaded guilty. Then he was asked if he had had his pockets picked, and he said he had.

"I didn't think very much of that, either. But when he was asked to identify Charley Dibbins' watch and pocket-book, and he quietly swore that both belonged to him, things began to whirl with me.

"Then he was told to look carefully at the prisoner. I was the prisoner meant, and he looked at me accordingly.

"The Judge asked: 'Did you ever see that young man before?'

"'I can't say that I ever did.'

"'Do you know John Patterson or Charles Dibbin?' said the Judge.

"'I never heard of either of them before,' was the reply.

"I was utterly bewildered by all this, and hardly knew what to make of it except that it meant danger to me. I was in turn called upon to look carefully at the prisoner.

"The prisoner this time meant the other fellow and I looked at him confusedly.

"'Is that your friend Charles Dibbin?' the Judge inquired.

"'He is not Charles Dibbin,' I replied, with fear and trembling.

"'Did you ever see him before?'

"After some hesitation, I said:

"'I see now that he may be the man that I took for Charles Dibbin last night.'

"'How is this?' said the Judge.

"My wits began to rally, consciousness of innocence supported me, and I replied, with less embarrassment:

"'His head is not at all like Dibbin's, but the lower part of his face, his form, the kind of coat he wears—in all that, he does resemble Dibbin a great deal. With his hat on, in the twilight last evening, he looked so much like him that, after he had seemed to recognize me, I hadn't a doubt of his being Charley. What there was strange about him I attributed to his being drunk.'

"I thought I went through with this explanation very well, and anxiously hoped that it would suffice to get me off.

"Not at all! The Court had heard too many plausible and glib excuses from criminals to be very much impressed by the story of an honest man.

"The circumstances against me were, indeed, overwhelming. I was proved to have taken the watch and wallet of a man who was an utter stranger to me; and I could not wonder that my Charles Dibbin theory was regarded as a mere sham. Even my frank avowal that I had no friends in town, no employment and no money, made my guilt seem all the more certain.

"However, the Judge told me that I should have a chance to prove my good character and establish my innocence; and with that not very comforting assurance I was sent back to prison.

"I was thinking over my situation, in extremely low spirits; wondering how long before I could get bail, and whether I should ever be able to prove my innocence of the crime I was charged with, when, to my great surprise, I was told that a visitor wished to speak with me.

"It was the man whose pocket I had picked. His name was Charles Merritt, and he was a farmer in West Newton. Yet when he looked through my grated door with his hat on, I was startled, he really, at the first glance, resembled so much the other Charley who was the unconscious cause of my misfortune.

"He had been discharged on the payment of a small fine, but could not leave the city, he said, without seeing me.

"'The more I think of it,' said he, 'the more I am inclined to believe that you got into your scrape by trying to help me out of mine. Of course, I don't know but what you are lying about it.' he added, with manly frankness; 'but you don't look like a pick-pocket, and if you are telling the truth, I'm not the fellow to let you suffer for doing me a kind action.'

"'I don't know what you can do,' I replied, 'since you are not the right Charley, and can't swear that my intentions toward you were friendly.'

"'Well, you'll see,' he said, cheerily. And, having taken the address of my friends, he left me.

"This visit cheered me up a little. But as the hours dragged by and I did not hear from him or any of my friends, I began to grow once more despondent.

"It was well along in the afternoon, and the court had already adjourned, when an officer came to tell me that I was wanted, and to my great joy, I was taken in to a private hearing before the Judge.

"My joy was increased when I saw my brother-in-law in the room, and two other men I knew—the two Charleses, in short: Charles Merritt and Charles Dibbin standing side by side.

"They did not look very much alike when seen thus together; but when the Judge told them to put their hats on, and they did so—brown crush-hats, with a wonderfully similar slouch—the resemblance they suddenly bore to each other was surprising.

"To the Judge, who knew neither of them well, it was more striking even than it was to me. 'Near enough alike for the two Dromios!' he exclaimed, good-humoredly. Then turning to me, he said:

"'I congratulate you, Mr. Patterson, not only on being an honest man, but what is quite as important in our imperfect human courts, that you are able to prove it.'

"I thanked him joyfully, and my friends, too, for coming to my rescue. It seemed that Charles Merritt had lost no time in visiting Framingham, hunting up my relatives, and then going with my brother-in-law to find the other Charley, the right Charley, and bring him to Boston."—J. T. Trowbridge, in Youth's Companion.

A Painter Who Holds His Brush in His Mouth.

Percy W. Hastings, of Leominster, Mass., was fond of athletic feats, and on the evening of June 3, 1880, after supper, while attempting a new feat on a flying trapeze, fell to the ground, striking upon his head. He was picked up insensible, and from that time to the present has had no use whatever of any portion of his body below the neck, the result of a fracture of the third or fourth vertebra. From the time of his misfortune to the present, H. A. Willis has taken great interest in the young man. About a year ago Mr. Willis told his young friend of the case of a man named Carter, in England, who, while attempting robbery, had a fall which met with results similar to his, and who was enabled to perform some remarkable feats by utilizing his mouth for duties which belonged properly to his hands. He suggested that young Hastings make a similar trial. The suggestion was at once adopted, the first effort being made to write, and after comparatively little practice the young man could, by holding the pen-holder in his teeth, write a very good hand. At the present time his writing is far above the average, with no indication that other than a steady hand penned it. Greatly encouraged in this direction, Percy next took up sketching, and has an easel attached to his reclining chair, situated but a few inches from his face, that it could easily be reached with the pencil held within his teeth, and commenced upon a line of work for which he had previously shown no special aptitude or inclination. It was readily apparent that he was endowed with inherent artistic ability, and his advance in proficiency was so rapid as to be almost phenomenal. After pursuing this vocation for some time with such remarkable success, the idea of attempting to paint in water colors was next considered and quickly made practical, and in this department the success attained has been even greater than that attained at sketching. The general size of his water-color productions has been about 6x6 inches, that being the extent of the area that he can cover by his brush with the motion and action of the head. The attendant mixes the paints under the direction of his charge, and, when ready, places his brush in his mouth, and the work proceeds. The principal line of work is the painting of flowers from nature. One note-worthy incident is the fact that from the time of the commencement of pencil sketching up to the present, not a single card has been rendered useless through any mistake or false movement.—Boston Globe.

The Lord and the Shilling.

The following episode, which happened lately at one of our fashionable hotels, proves that virtue is sometimes more substantially rewarded than the old adage would seem to indicate: One evening, rather late, a gentleman, a great admirer of man's best friend, saw some magnificent dogs in the care of the hall porter. Having entered into conversation with the temporary keeper of the Cerberi, he learned that the owner had left no instructions as to their being fed; he therefore took upon himself to order a repast for them. They were still enjoying it when the owner returned, and the good Samaritan, going up, told him that he had been admiring his dogs, and had ordered them to be fed. "Oh, thank you! Here, take this," and the owner's gratitude took the tangible shape of the coin recruiting sergeants dispense in the Queen's name. The gentleman smilingly took the proffered reward and said: "I am Lord ——, and I most heartily thank you for the first shilling I have ever earned. I shall have a hole drilled in it and wear it as a charm. It may bring me luck." "Oh, my Lord! I cannot tell you how sorry I am at my blunder. Pray give me back the shilling and accept my most heartfelt apology!" "I beg you not to apologize. You have made me feel quite a proud man, and as to the shilling, you must allow me to keep it, that it may become an heirloom in my family, where we have never had an opportunity of earning money—London Truth."

Commence—Begin.

The same persons who habitually discard the word many, when they have a chance of glorying in numerous, have concurred in giving the cold shoulder to begin. I do not know a more flagrant dandyism of speech than commence to. "Directly I commence to speak every one commences to look at me," said a mincing Miss at a suburban "At Home." There are mincing Misses of the male sex in authorship who are always commencing to. Female authors are seldom caught at this feminine weakness of phrase. The verb commence, if not followed by some other verb in the infinitive mood, may be tolerated for a change. Though it is not to be found anywhere in the Bible, (imagine "In the commencement!") it occurs a few times in Shakespeare; as many as thirteen times in all, reckoning the inflections commenced, commencing, and commencement. Set this account against the number of times Shakespeare uses the word begin. I am not going to count, but I find a double row of them in Mrs. Cowden Clark's Concordiance, nearly as long as the line of Smith John, in the Postoffice, London Directory, or of area railings along Wimpole street.—Good Words.

Bavarian Salt Mines.

The salt mines of Berchtesgaden, which are the property of the King of Bavaria, are perhaps the most ancient in Europe. It is certain that they were known to the Celts, and that they were known to the Romans, who conquered the tribe living in their vicinity. For 600 years they have been constantly worked. During twenty years previous to 1881 more than 200 miners were employed, but during the past and present year the force has been decreased to about two thirds of that number. The exact number in last week's pay-roll was 117, and the amount of work salt for cattle quarried in 1882, 1,800 tons. In addition to the rock salt the extraction of pure salt is carried on, from 20,000 to 25,000 tons per annum of table salt being produced. Previous to 1882 it amounted in some cases to as much as 30,000 tons, but recently the demand for both kinds has decreased. The method of making the fine salt is by letting in fresh water from the hills, where, after becoming impregnated for some five or six weeks, it is drawn off into a lower reservoir, whence it is forced up to a place several hundred feet high. From there it flows through iron pipes to Ilsang, several miles distant, and is a second time raised to a still greater height, and from this point it flows on a descending scale to Reichenhall, eighteen miles distant, when it is evaporated, and the crystallized salt ground for family use.—Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

A Splendid Remedy for Lung Diseases.

Dr. Robert Newton, late President of the Eclectic College of the city of New York, and formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, used Dr. WM. HALL'S BALSAM very extensively in his practice, as many of his patients, now living, and restored to health by the use of this invaluable medicine, can amply testify. He always said that so good a remedy ought not to be considered merely as a patent medicine, but that it ought to be prescribed freely by every physician as a sovereign remedy in all cases of Lung diseases. It is a sure cure for Consumption, and has no equal for all pectoral complaints.

WHAT may be said to be a favorite piece of sculpture with every man? The fellow that he cut out.—Harper's Bazar.

YOUNG, middle-aged, or old men, suffering from nervous debility or kindred affections, should address, with two stamps, for large treatise, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

WHEN a rich old man dies the gloom is soon dispelled by the son's raise.—Norristown Herald.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, June 29, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 25	@ 3 50
Choice butchers	5 00	@ 6 00
HOGS—Common	6 00	@ 6 70
Good packers	6 70	@ 7 00
SHEEP	4 75	@ 5 50
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 5 55
GRAIN—Wheat—Mediterranean	1 10	@
No. 2 winter red	1 07	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	57¾	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	37	@
Rye—No. 2	55½	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@ 10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8	@ 9
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	18 25	@ 18 50
Lard—Steam	11¼	@
BUTTER—Western Reserve	20	@ 22
Prime Creamery	25	@ 28
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	2 15	@ 2 50
Apples, prime, per barrel	4 00	@ 4 50
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 40	@ 4 00
Good to choice	4 60	@ 6 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 14½	@
No. 1 white	1 11	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	61	@ 61½
Oats—mixed	31	@ 42
PORK—Mess	18 62½	@ 18 75
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 01	@
Corn—No. 2	53¼	@
Oats—No. 2	32½	@
Rye	57	@
PORK—Mess	16 95	@ 18 00
LARD—Steam	9 20	@ 9 25
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 25	@ 6 25
GRAIN—Wheat No. 2 winter red	1 15½	@ 1 17¾
Corn—mixed	62½	@ 62¾
Oats—mixed	43½	@ 45
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	20 00	@ 20 25
Lard—Refined	[illegible]
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No. 1	4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 03	@ 1 04
Corn—mixed	53	@
Oats—mixed	36	@
PORK—Mess	18 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red	$1 01	@
CORN	48½	@
OATS—mixed	30	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	3 75	@ 4 50
Shipping cattle	5 25	@ 6 50

A VETERAN BENEFACTOR.

His Past Life, Present Plans, and What He Has to Say Upon a Subject That Astonished Him.

(New York Times.)

Nearly forty years ago a young man, of unusual endowments, began to mold public opinion upon a subject of vital importance. Like all pioneers, his early efforts were unsuccessful, but his ability and the value of his work soon won public confidence, and to-day there is not a village or hamlet in the country that has not been influenced by Dr. Dio Lewis. When, therefore, it was learned yesterday that he contemplated the establishment of a large magazine in this city, the fact was deemed so important that a representative of this paper was commissioned to see him and ascertain the truth of the rumor.

Dr. Dio Lewis is a gentleman of sixty years and two hundred pounds, with snow-white hair and beard, but probably the most perfect picture of health and vigor in the metropolis. He is a living exponent of his teachings, and notwithstanding the amount of work he has already done, promises still greater activity for years to come. He received the interviewer most courteously, and in reply to a question said:

"It is true I have come to New York to establish a monthly magazine. I have come here for the same reason that I went to Boston twenty-five years ago. Then Boston was the best platform in the country from which to speak of education. New York has now become most hospitable to progressive thoughts, and especially so to movements on behalf of physical training.

"I have reason to know the great and abiding interest of the American people in this subject. They have come to realize that the future of our country pivots upon our physical vitality, and especially upon the vigor of our women. My new magazine will bear the title 'Dio Lewis's Monthly,' and be devoted to Sanitary and Social Science. I hope through its pages to inaugurate a new departure in hygiene."

"Have you not written several books on the subject?"

"Yes, nine volumes; and some of them like 'Our Girls,' published by the Harpers, have had an enormous circulation; but the best work of my life I shall give the world in the new magazine. Forty years of skirmishing ought to conclude with ten years of organized warfare."

"Doctor, what is the occasion of this new interest in health questions?"

"It has come through suffering, which seems the only road to self knowledge. The stomach, heart, kidneys or liver fall into trouble, happiness is gone, and then people give attention to their health."

"Which of these organs is most frequently the victim of our errors?" asked the Reporter.

"Within the last few years diseases of the kidneys have greatly multiplied. When I was engaged in practice, thirty-five and forty years ago, serious disease of the kidneys was rare; but now distressingly frequent and fatal."

"To what do you attribute this great increase of kidney troubles?"

"To the use of stimulating drinks, adulterated food and irregular habits of life."

"Doctor, have you any confidence in the remedy of which we hear so much now-a-days, 'Warner's Safe Cure?'"

"I believe in the ounce of prevention, rather than in a ton of cure."

"But have you noticed the remarkable testimonials of Warner's remedy?"

"I have, and confess that they have puzzled and astonished me. The commendations of proprietary medicines usually come from unknown persons residing in back counties. But I see in our most reputable newspapers the warmest praise of Warner's Safe Cure from College Professors, respectable physicians, and other persons of high intelligence and character. To thrust such testimony aside may be professional, but it is unmanly. No physician can forget that valuable additions to our Materia Medica have sprung from just such sources. I was so impressed with this cloud of witnesses that I purchased some bottles of Warner's Safe Cure at a neighboring drug store and analyzed one of them to see if it contained anything poisonous. Then I took three of the prescribed doses at once, and found there was nothing injurious in it. I do not hesitate to say that if I found my kidneys in serious trouble, I should use this remedy, because of the hopelessness of all ordinary treatment, and because when a hundred intelligent and reputable persons unite in the statement that a certain remedy has cured them of a grave malady, I choose to believe that they speak the truth.

"But as you may know, my great interest in life lies in prevention. For forty years I have labored in this field. One of the phases of my work in New England was the establishment of the Ladies' Seminary at Lexington, Mass. My aim was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical training of girls during their school life. This institution became, before I left it, the largest and most successful Seminary for young women, owned and managed by one person, in our country. I sat down to dinner every day with a family of two hundred persons. The remarkable results of this muscle training among girls were given in my paper published in the North American Review of December, 1882.

"Besides, I established the Normal Institute for Physical Training in Boston, and for ten years was its President and Manager. Dr. Walter Channing, Dr. Thomas Hoskins, Prof. Leonard and others were among its teachers, and more than four hundred persons took its diploma and went out into all parts of the land to teach the new school of gymnastics. And now the years left to me I propose to devote to the magazine which I have come here to establish. It will be the largest periodical ever devoted to this field of literature, and will present the hundred and one questions of hygiene with the simplicity of a child's talk. To this end all so-called learning will be subordinated. The magazine will be more or less illustrated, and will strive to reach a high place in the confidence and hearts of the people. In a few weeks our first number will appear, and we shall fondly hope for it a hearty welcome."

The facts above narrated are indeed most important. It is gratifying to know that the life long experiences of a gentleman who stands without a peer in successfully demonstrating the principles of hygiene; whose heart has always been in sympathy with the afflicted, and whose brain has ever been active in planning for their relief, are to be given to the public through the pages of a magazine. And it is specially significant and proof positive of rare merit that a proprietary medicine, even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have, should be indorsed and recommended by a man so able, so reputable and of such national renown as Dr. Dio Lewis.

THE Czar is not musical. At all events he does not care to hear Jews harping about their wrongs.—Texas Siftings.

Bed-Ridden and Cured.

W. F. HUESTIS, of Emporia, Kansas, says that his wife had been sick nearly seven years, and for the last four months bed-ridden. She has been treated by a number of physicians and only grew worse. Her attention was called to Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription," which she commenced using. In one week she could sit up, and in three weeks could walk about. By druggists.

NEVER intrust a secret to a philanthropist; he is always giving things away.—Somerville Journal.

Hay Fever.

For twenty-five years I have been severely afflicted with Hay Fever. While suffering intensely I was induced, through Mr. Tichenor's testimonial, to try Ely's Cream Balm. The immediate effect was marvelous. I have been enabled to perform my pastoral duties without the slightest inconvenience. Have been exposed to heat, draughts and dust, and have escaped a return attack. I pronounce Ely's Cream Balm a cure for Hay Fever. WILLIAM T. CARR, Presbyterian Pastor, Elizabeth, N. J. See adv't.

WHEN a school-girl becomes toned down, isn't she an ex-pert.—Chicago Tribune.

General Debility and Liver Complaint.

R. V. PIERCE, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—My wife has been taking your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pellets" for her liver and general debility, and has found them to be good medicines, and would recommend them to all sufferers from liver complaint, sour stomach and general debility. Yours fraternally,

N. E. HARMON,
Pastor M. E. Church, Elsah, Ill.

WHY are seven days like a spell of sickness? Because they make one week.—The Drummer.

CODORUS, PA.—Rev. J. D. Zehring says: "I was paralyzed in my right side. The use of Brown's Iron Bitters enabled me to walk."

THE safest way to eke out existence is by practicing eke-conomy.

PERSONS recovering from wasting diseases, such as malaria, fevers, etc., will be greatly benefited by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters, a true tonic.

LOOK out for the hatch-weigh if a hen makes her nest on the hay-scale.—N. Y. Sun.

OWENTON, KY.—Rev. J. N. Beck says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters and consider it one of the best tonics sold."

A BOSTON stock speculator has discovered that when money is tight, brokers are sober.—Boston Herald.

GET Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners for those new boots or shoes before you run them over.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap
Remedies all complexional blemishes sore-pulsive to charming features.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, irritation. $1.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin. 15c.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

A WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

MRS. WILLIAM DOWNES, of Uxbridge, Mass., writes on March 15, 1883, as follows:

"During the past three years I have been a great sufferer from a complication of diseases which baffled the skill of the most experienced doctors, as I could not obtain permanent relief by their treatment and prescriptions; and I have also tried many so-called cures in the medicine line, but could get no relief. The pains, aches and weakness increased so rapidly and constantly that I was so reduced, in strength as to be unable to leave the bed, and the doctors informed me that there was no hope of a recovery. In this exhausted and discouraged condition a dear friend persuaded me to use Hunt's Remedy, and after taking it only three days I commenced to get better, and to my great joy and delight I have continued to improve constantly by its use, until now, after having taken the remedy only a few weeks, I am able to be about my house again, and am now doing my housework. My lame back is cured, the severe pains have disappeared, and I am now in better health than for many years, and beg this privilege of gladly recommending Hunt's Remedy to all who are affected with any disease of the kidneys or liver; and I also highly recommend it for the attacks of sick headache. My husband also has experienced a very great benefit to his health by the use of this most valuable medicine, Hunt's Remedy."

"OUR FLAG IS STILL THERE."

MR. S. B. LONGFELLOW, Augusta, Me., east side river, writes us under date of April 15, 1883:

"To whom it may concern: This may certify that two years ago I was very badly afflicted with kidney and urinary difficulties, which extended through the system and laid me up for weeks, so that I could do no work. I had the most skillful physician in town, who gave me no assistance. Hearing of Hunt's Remedy, I got a bottle, and half of it cured me entirely, so that I have been well ever since. The other half I gave to a neighbor who was afflicted much as I was, and it restored him to health. I can truly say Hunt's Remedy has been of great and inexpressible worth to us."

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

NEW THING! Sells at sight; no compelition. Dealers and Canvassers Wanted. Ask for circular and price-list. PENTZ REIN HOLDER CO., Canton, O.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

CATARRH — ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM will, when applied by the finger into the nostrils, be absorbed, effectually cleansing the nasal passages of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membranal linings of the head from additional colds: completely heals the sores and restores the sense of taste and smell. Beneficial results are realized by a few applications. A thorough treatment will cure. Unequaled for cold in the head. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. 50 cents a package, by mail or at druggists.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CO., Owego, N. Y.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

Hostetter's Stomach Bitters meets the requirements of the rational medical philosophy which at present prevails. It is a perfectly pure vegetable remedy, embracing the three important properties of a preventive, a tonic and an alterative. It fortifies the body against disease, invigorates and revitalizes the torpid stomach and liver, and effects a salutary change in the entire system. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.

We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 800 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE

TRY IT — USE IT

It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 82 Fulton Street, N. Y.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR ... etc., stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO., Sole Ag'ts, Palatine, Ills.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! N. W. FITZGERALD, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and New Book on Patents sent free.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE Co., 197 Pearl St., New York.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

$40,000 IN PRESENTS! GIVEN AWAY.

THIS OFFER GOOD TILL SEPTEMBER, 1883, ONLY.

The proprietors of the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE, being desirous of having their already well-known and popular Agricultural and Family paper more widely circulated and introduced into houses where it is not already known, have determined to throw off all profit this year, and in addition use a portion of their capital for the sole purpose of increasing their circulation to 100,000 copies. After deciding to more extensively advertise than ever before, the following plan has been adopted by us.

FOR 50 CENTS

We will enter your name on our subscription book and mail the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE regularly to you for Six Months and immediately send a printed numbered Receipt, which will entitle the holder to one of the following Presents to be given away at our SEPTEMBER FESTIVAL.

Partial List of Presents to Be Given Away.

5 U. S. Government Bonds of $1000	$5000 00	1000 Pocket Silver Fruit Knives	1000 00
10 U. S. Greenbacks of $500	5000 00	1000 Gents' Pocket Knives	1000 00
10 U. S. Greenbacks of $100	1000 00	1000 U. S. Greenbacks of $1 each	1000 00
1 Matched pair of Trotting Horses	1000 00	10 Gents' Gold Watches, English Movement	800 00
1 Grand Square Piano	500 00	10 Ladies' Gold Watches, English movem't	600 00
1 Grand Cabinet Organ	200 00	20 Boys' Silver Watches, American move't	300 00
1 Three-seat Rockaway	200 00	8 Solitaire Diamond Finger Rings	400 00
1 Silver Dinner Service	100 00	2 Patent Harvesters	1000 00
5 Top Buggies	1000 00	1 Normandy Work Horse	500 00
20 U. S. Greenbacks of $50 each	1000 00	2500 Elegant Oleograph Pictures	2500 00
1000 Photograph Albums $2 each	2000 00	5 Raw Silk Parlor Suit Furniture	1000 00
2 Village Carts	200 00	1400 Gold Finger Rings, Ladies' Breast Pins, Gents' Scarf Pins, Lockets, Fans and Chains.
1 Pony Phaeton	100 00

And 92,935 other presents valued from 25 cents to $1.00, which makes a grand aggregation of 100,000 presents, thus guaranteeing a present to each and every new subscriber who sends us 50 Cts. as directed. All of the above presents will be awarded in a fair and impartial manner by committee chosen at the Festival by the Subscribers, (this festival will take place Sept. 9th. It will not be necessary for Subscribers to attend the Festival as presents will be sent to any part of the United States or Canada. Yet it is to be hoped as many will be present as possible. THE 50 CENTS which you send us is the regular price for Six Months' Subscription, and therefore we charge nothing for the presents. OUR PROFIT will be in your future patronage, as we believe you will like our paper so well that you will always remain a subscriber. YOUR SUBSCRIPTION FREE. Get five of your friends to join you by cutting this out and showing it to them. Send us $2.50 and we will send you the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE for six months, and a numbered receipt for each of your subscribers and one extra for your trouble. SEND TEN SUBSCRIBERS with $5 and we will send 12 subscriptions and twelve numbered receipts. This offer will hold good until Sept. 1st only, as we shall limit the number of new subscriptions to 100,000, so we would advise all our friends to forward subscriptions early, as in no case will they be received later than September 1st.

THE FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE

is one of the oldest and ablest edited Family and Agricultural papers. It contains twenty large pages, Eighty Columns, including elegant cover, bound, stitched and cut. And now has a circulation of 43,000 COPIES. It contains Stories, Sketches, Poetry, Farm, Garden, Household and Agricultural Departments by the best Contributors of the day, as well as an Illustrated Fashion Department, Needle and Embroidery Work, Illustrations of different parts of the UNITED STATES and Biographical Sketches of Eminent Men and Women. In short, it contains that which will interest, instruct and amuse the whole family.

THE PROPRIETORS are men of means, who always have done as they agree, and our paper is long established and reliable, with sufficient capital to carry out and fulfill to the letter any offer we may make.

TO THOSE WHO DO NOT ATTEND THE FESTIVAL we will send a printed List of the Awards, and all Presents will be forwarded to Holders of Receipts as they may direct. Sample Copies Free.

ONLY 50 CENTS secures the FARM, FIELD & FIRESIDE Six Months, and a numbered receipt. The paper is worth double the subscription price. As to our reliability we refer those who do not know us to any reputable Publisher in Chicago. Money in sums of $1.00 or less may be sent in ordinary letter at our risk; larger sums should be sent by Registered Letter, P. O. money order or Express, and addressed to the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE, 89 Randolph St., Chicago.

REMEMBER these are Presents to our Subscribers given to them absolutely Free. Cut this out and show to friends, acquaintances and neighbors, as it will not appear again. (Postage Stamps taken in sums less than $1.00.)

READ THESE LETTERS:

"I like to work for your paper, can do it with a good grace for I think it worthy. I say success to you." MRS. G. M. SMITH, Battle Ground, Ind.

"I think the paper worth ten times the price for a six months' subscription." JAMES DUPONT, Matanzas, Fla.

"I received your paper and am so well pleased with it that I inclose $2 more for the same. I shall try and get more subscribers for your excellent paper." FRANK GEYER, Custer, Idaho.

"Thanks for being so prompt. Every one considers the paper the best of the kind ever offered." HENRY W. VANDEGRIFT, Marion, Ind.

"One article in your paper is worth the whole price of a year's subscription. I am glad to add my name to your list." G. D. MILLINGTON, North Bennington, Vt.

WE COULD GIVE AN UNLIMITED NUMBER SIMILAR TO THE ABOVE.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

For You,
Madam,

Whose complexion betrays some humiliating imperfection, whose mirror tells you that you are Tanned, Sallow and disfigured in countenance, or have Eruptions, Redness, Roughness or unwholesome tints of complexion, we say use Hagan's Magnolia Balm.

It is a delicate, harmless and delightful article, producing the most natural and entrancing tints, the artificiality of which no observer can detect, and which soon becomes permanent if the Magnolia Balm is judiciously used.

AGENTS WANTED FOR OUR NEW BOOK Famous Frontiersmen, Pioneers and Scouts.

A Thrilling Narrative of the Lives and Exploits of Renowned INDIAN FIGHTERS, TRAPPERS, HUNTERS and GUIDES. Complete accounts from Dan'l Boone, 1735, to Gen'l Crook's Apache Campaign 1883, including Kenton, Brady, Davy Crockett, Kit Carson, Wild Bill, Texas Jack, Capt. Jack, Buffalo Bill, Gen. Custer's Last Fight with Sitting Bull. MAGNIFICENTLY ILLUSTRATED. Now is the time to make money. Write quickly for our liberal terms. Send 50c. in stamps for outfit. The Coburn & Newman Publishing Co., Chicago, Ill.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."

ENGINES, THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Horse Powers, Clover Hullers (Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 c.

PENSIONS for all SOLDIERS and their HEIRS. New Laws. Apply to Jos. H. HUNTER, U. S. Att'y, 134 F St., Washington, D. C.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and Fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISH'G Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

OPIUM Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. No pay till Cured. DR. J. STEPHENS, Lebanon, Ohio.

A N. K.—E. 932

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, 1883. NUMBER 37.

WHAT WAS WANTED.

She tied the new cravat
Which she so kindly made me;
Then smoothed with care my hat,
And with her arms delayed me.
She brushed my "glossy hair,"
And said it was "so curly;"
While going down the stair
She cried: "Come home, dear, early!"

How happy then was I
With all I e'er desired!
I Fortune could defy
While thus I was admired.
We parted at the door—
Her smile deserved a sonnet:
"Dear love! but one thing more:
I want—a summer bonnet!"

A DUEL WITH PILLS.

I.

Yesterday, intently gazing into a show-window on Canal street, a feeble, white-haired old gentleman recalled memories of a tragedy which, in the burly-burly of life, seems to have passed into oblivion.

In 1841, outside of the city proper, there was, perhaps, no more delightful place of resort than at the Bayou Bridge. It was par excellence the great suburban attraction at that time, and between boating parties on the waters of the bayou and card reunions over the tables of old Barleduc's gambling saloon out there, the jeunesse dorce of New Orleans of that day managed, quite comfortably to while away many a leisure moment. Possibly no two young gentlemen enjoyed the quiet hospitality of Barleduc more than Alphouse Riviere and Henri Delagrave; in fact, most of their afternoons were spent in the dimly lighted saloon of the old gamester, at whose shrine all the card-loving element of the city paid homage.

There was a quiet air about the place that seemed almost religious, and even the parchment faced old man, who mechanically handled the little ivory ball in roulette, called out the numbers in a repressed voice, as if he feared to disturb the quiet. The faint "click" of the "chips" as eager players dallied with them, was perhaps the loudest sound to be heard there, and even that came to the ear in a subdued way. On the floor a bright covering of matting hushed the footsteps, while at the windows dark yellow curtains let in only just enough light for the illumination of the gaming tables.

Riviere was a dashing fellow of twenty-two, with a large estate in the Parish of St. James and a round account in the old Union Bank. He had passed successfully through the Ecole Polytechnique in France, had taken a bout in Algeria, and returned to Louisiana as accomplished and companionable a gentleman as one could wish to chat with. He was fond of his horses, his wine and a quiet game of cards. Refined in his manner and dignified in his deportment, he was a warm favorite wherever he went, and his entry into old Barleduc's establishment was always the signal for a cordial greeting from all who might be present.

On this particular June afternoon Riviere, with the activity of a gymnast, leaped from his buggy in front of the saloon, and throwing the reins to his negro servant, told him to drive the horse into the shade of the pecan trees in the yard. Switching a delicate, ivory-headed cane with a nervous, jerky motion, he crossed the broad gallery and, unannounced, entered the gambling-room. Most of the players were wrapped in attention to their game, but one there was who turned his head at the entrance of the last comer. This was Delagrave. He felt that a crisis was at hand, but even with this knowledge he did not strive to elude its coming. That morning he had been accepted as the betrothed lover of Mme. Celestin, one of the most beautiful and wealthy widows of the lower coast, and Riviere, who had been for the past year her most devoted admirer, was left to nurse his disappointment as an unsuccessful suitor. Riviere had had no hesitancy in letting the world know that he wanted to marry the coquettish little widow, and, further, he, in a very plain way, gave people the information that he did not want interlopers paying their devoirs at the same shrine. These matters are hard to arrange exactly as one would wish. One finds much difficulty in closing all avenues of approach, for love is not unlike the light which the photographer in his dark room finds so much difficulty in keeping out. It steals in under doors, through nail-holes and even down the chimney. At least sort had been the case at Mme. Celestine, for jealous and watchful of rivals as Riviere was, Delagrave had made the conquest under the very eyes of the enemy, and the widow had that day so informed the unsuccessful suitor.

Riviere was very pale as he approached the group of men around the table. What with the yellow light shining through the curtains and his bloodless appearance, he seemed rather a ghastly corpse than a living body, but there was motion and voice in him, which soon dispelled such an illusion.

As he neared Delagrave, the latter turned to confront him, when Riviere, with a voice that seemed to come from behind the door of a tomb, said: "Delagrave, we can not live on this globe together; it is not large enough."

Delagrave, quietly puffing his cigarette, in a cold and impressive tone replied: "Yes; you annoy me. It would be better if you were dead."

Riviere's face flushed, and reaching forward he laid the back of his hand gently against Delagrave's cheek. The game was at once interrupted. The slap, which [illegible] so light it did not even crimson [illegible] young man's cheek, was enough [illegible] call for blood, and leaving the [illegible] he sought an intimate friend; to him he opened his heart. It must be a battle a l'outrance. Such was the enmity between himself and Riviere, only a life could wipe it out. The old Doctor, who had grown up, it might be said, on the field, shrugged his shoulders and remonstrated, but at last acquiesced and said: "Very well, then; it shall be to the death."

II.

Few people knew what sort of a party it was driving down the shell-road bordering Bayou St. John. Two carriages stopped just on the bridge leading to the island formed there by bifurcation of the bayou, and four gentlemen alighted. Savalle, a well-known character here forty years ago, accompanied Riviere, and old Dr. Rocquet was with Delagrave. The seconds had met previously and arranged everything. Delagrave, as he stepped from the carriage, looked furtively around for the cases of pistols, but, seeing none, he was a little disconcerted. After walking about a hundred yards from the carriages, the party stopped and the doctor motioned them to approach closer. When they had done so, he called them by name and said: "Gentlemen, we have discussed this matter nearly all of last night, and both M. Savalle and myself feel satisfied that there is no solution to the differences between you but the death of one. The world is so formed that both can not live in it at the same time." The two men nodded. "Therefore," the Doctor went on, "we have agreed to make the arbitrament as fair as it is possible, and let Fate decide." He took out a black morocco case, and from it produced a pill-box containg four pellets. "One of these, said he, "contains a positively fatal dose of prussic acid, the other three are harmless. We have agreed that each shall swallow two of the pills, and let Destiny decide." Savalle inclined his head, and said, as the representative of Riviere, he agreed.

The two men were pale, almost bloodless, but not a nerve trembled or muscle contracted.

"Gentlemen," said the Doctor, "we will toss for the first pill." Savalle called out "tails," as the glittering gold piece revolved in the air. It fell in a bunch of grass, the blades of which, being separated, showed the coin with the revered head of the Goddess of Liberty uppermost. "M. Delagrave, you have the first choice," said the Doctor.

Reposing in the little box the four little globes seemed the counterpart of each other. The closest scrutiny would not develop the slightest difference. Nature alone through the physiological alembic of the human stomach can tell of their properties. In one there rests the pall of eternity, the struggle for breath, the failing of sight, the panorama of years rushing in an instant through the mind, the silence and peace of sleep for evermore, the ceremony, the burial case, the solemn cortege and the close, noisome atmosphere of the grave. All these were contained in one of these little pellets. Delagrave having won the first choice, stepped forward and took a pill. With a calmness which was frigid he placed it on his tongue and with a cup of claret, handed him by the Doctor, washed it down.

"And now, M. Riviere," said the Doctor. Riviere extended his hand and took a pill. Like his opponent he swallowed it.

The two men stood looking one another in the face. There was not a quiver to the eyelid, not a twitch to a muscle. Each was thinking of himself as well as watching his adversary. One minute passed. Two minutes passed. Three. Four. Five. "Now, gentlemen," said the Doctor, in solemn tones, it is time to make the final drawing."

This was the fatal choice. Both men were ready for the cast of the die. Savelle tossed the gold piece aloft, and the Doctor cried out: "Heads." "Heads" it was, and Delagrave took a pill from the box, leaving only one. "Now," said the Doctor, "the remaining one is for you. "You will please swallow them together."

The two men raised their hands at the same time and deposited the pills on their tongues and took a draught of claret.

One second passed, and there was no movement. Two seconds, and neither stirred. Then—"Good God!" exclaimed Riviere, his eyes starting from their sockets. He turned half round to the left, raised his hands above his head and shrieked a long wild shriek that belated travelers even to this day say they heard on the shell road, near the island. He fell prone on the earth, and, save a nervous contraction of the muscles of the face, there was no movement.

Delagrave took him by the hand as he lay on the dampgrass, and said, in a tender voice: "I regret it, but it was to be."

The funeral was one of the largest ever seen in New Orleans, and for weeks the cafes were agog with the story of the duel. The beautiful widow, horrified at the affair, would never see Delagrave afterward, and is now a happy grandmere on Bayou Lafourche, having married a wealthy planter two years after the fatal event.

Delagrave, weighed down with the trials of an unhappy life, wrinkled and tottering, strolls along Canal street of warm afternoons, assisted by a negro servant. Having a bare competency, he has never actually suffered from want; but he shows evidence of great mental anguish. The sight of a pill-box makes him shudder, and the taste of claret will give him convulsions. —N. O. Times-Democrat.

—A number of men were carousing in Candelaria, Nev., lately, when a doctor named Martin interrupted the half-drunken revelry by telling his audience how he might become somebody if he could conquer his mania for drink, but how he had tried in vain. "Ah," he said, "I'll leave the world; but boys, let me do so to the sound of music." His friends summoned some Italian musicians, and while they played the doctor took morphine. His friends, who did not believe Martin was in earnest, gradually left the saloon, and the saloon-keeper seeing him so sound asleep, locked up the house and retired. In the morning the doctor was found dead.—Chicago Tribune.

—The year 1713 was a great era in American naval annals, says the Century. In that year Captain Andrew Robinson built the first schooner ever seen. This was at Gloucester. As she glided into the water a bystander cried: "Look how she scoons!" Catching at the word, Captain Robinson replied: "A schooner let her be!" The new rig came at once into wide acceptance.

—Keely has a last disclosed the secret of his motor. He says: "Molecular disintegration is the primary generator of vibratory phenomena. Propulsory forces emanating from analytical action upon compound fluid and vapor foundation evolve ethereal matter distinctive from oxydized, hydrogenated and nitrogenated components." Catch on?—Chicago Herald.

PITH AND POINT.

—Tight pants and tight dresses have both gone out of style, but it seems as if tight men never will.—Chicago Tribune.

—A crabbed old bachelor says: "When rain falls, if she gets the bigger half of the umbrella they are lovers; if he takes the bigger half they are married."

—The latest freak of fashion in New York is to have the feet photographed. It was tried in Chicago but given up because it was impossible to get a whole foot into focus.—Philadelphia News.

—A French lady at Nice went to her room, put on a white satin dress and blew out her brains. It ruined her dressmaker, as ladies considered she was driven to the deed by the badness of the fit.—Boston Post.

—Two white tramps have been sent to the chain-gang for throwing kisses at the young ladies of a Georgia seminary. The privileges of the American citizen seem to be getting very limited indeed. —N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

—The average age of different men is put down thus: Merchants, 55; physicians and lawyers, 58; farmers, 61; clergymen, 64; and great geniuses, 75. It will be observed from the above that the journalistic profession tends to longevity.

—Edith—The fact that you do not know what "rock salt" is shows that you have never kept house. Rock salt comes in little bags labeled "best family table salt." It has to be pounded with a flat-iron before you can get any out.—Philadelphia News.

—There is one good thing about this two-cent postage. The swarm of spring poets won't be compelled to face the dreadful fact that the stamp on the envelope is worth three times as much as the poem inside. It will only be worth twice as much.—Chicago Times.

—Little George, age four, saw and heard a violin for the first time. He thought it very funny, and this is the way he described it: "Why, mamma, I couldn't help laughing. The man had the funniest little piano you ever saw, and he held it up to his neck and pulled the music out with a stick."—N. Y. Tribune.

—A correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution, after giving an account of the attempted suicide of a woman who choked herself with one of her stockings, adds: "I am informed that the stocking was a red and blue striped." Accuracy in detail is an important article in the stock in trade of a newspaper man.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—A bashful young man went three times to ask a beautiful young lady if he might be the partner of her joys and sorrows and other household furniture, but each time his heart failed him and he took the question away unpopped. She saw the anguish of his soul and had compassion on him. So the next time he came she asked him if he thought to bring a screw-driver with him. He blushed and wanted to know what for. And she, in the fullness of her heart, said she didn't know but he'd want to screw up his courage before he left. He took the hint and the girl.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The latest discovery is coal-tar sugar. Its advantage is said to lie in its superior sweetness.

—An electric light about the size of a small bean has been constructed and used successfully in illuminating interior portions of the human body.—Cleveland Herald.

—A citizen of Laurens County, South Carolina, has sixty specimens of wood grown on his plantation at that place. The blocks are round and show the girth of the trees with the bark on them.

—What one single industry is capable of doing by way of consuming what may be called raw-material may be learned from the following: It is only, comparatively speaking, a few years ago that photographers began to use what they call albumen paper. Now in the United States alone three factories consume about 2,000,000 eggs a year in making that kind of paper.—Exchange.

—There has been an unusual awakening in scientific circles in Cincinnati during the past few months; a Polytechnic School has been organized; a State Forest Association formed, with its headquarters in Cincinnati; and courses of popular lectures on chemistry, zoology, botany and history have been given at the afternoon school in popular science and history.—Scientific American.

—Bromide of ethyl is the new substitute for chloroform. It is a powerful agent, and a teaspoonful, when inhaled, will put any one to sleep in thirty seconds, and keep him utterly oblivious to what is being done. The unconsciousness lasts only from three to four minutes, when the patient awakes as from a natural sleep without headache or other disturbances of any kind.—Chicago Times.

—The average distance at which thunder can be distinguished is declared to be seven miles, while the lightning of an ordinary thunderstorm, at midnight, may be seen forty miles. Perhaps lightning sometimes occurs at too great an elevation for the thunder to reach the earth's surface, particularly in the tropics, where the thunderstorms are at great heights. In rare instances, in Europe, lightning is observed in the zenith, followed at an interval of twenty seconds by faint rolling thunder immediately overhead. A slight increase of altitude would doubtless render the thunder inaudible.—N. Y. Sun.

—The bee has long been a type of the industrious worker, but there are few people who know how much labor the sweet hoard of the hive represents. Each head of clover contains about sixty distinct flower tubes, each of which contains a portion of sugar not exceeding the five-hundredth part of a grain. Some patient apiarian enthusiast, who has watched their movements, concludes that the proboscis of the bee must, therefore, be inserted into 500 clover tubes before one grain of sugar can be obtained. There are 7,000 grains in a pound, and as honey contains three-fourths of its weight of dry sugar, each pound of honey represents 2,500,000 clover tubes sucked by bees.

West Point Hardships.

"The boys who pass the examinations are only furnished with cap and jacket at first, and have to go about in their civilian trousers. On the first day I was about dead. Going through the severe physical examination is hard enough work itself. I reported in the old hospital building, and was ordered into a back room to prepare for examination. There were fourteen or fifteen other young fellows there, all with the same amount of clothing on that I had, which is just about as much as you wear in a Turkish bath, barring the towel. There we sat, like so many beautiful young cupids. We talked a little, and sympathized with each other. Each of us was given a number, and when our number was called out we went out into the surgeon's hands. He fired me around pretty lively, made me run around the room three or four times to see whether my heart was all right, and then made be blow in a respirator to test my lungs. I was so confused I couldn't make the thing stir. He said I was nervous, and should try it again, and in a few minutes I made the old thing hum. After examining every muscle in my body, I guess, and looking for more, he said I was a very good specimen, and passed me. I felt as if I might have been sewed to a card like a horn button and sold at six for a quarter.

"Then I was marched to the quartermaster's, or some place, and furnished with a mattress, a wash-stand, two pails, and a whole lot of bachelor housekeeping truck. A cadet officer took me in charge and took me to barracks. He put on more airs than a hand-organ, and I couldn't do anything to suit him. He made me open what little baggage I had and show him everything I brought along. He was particularly anxious about tobacco and cigars, I guess because he wanted some, for they used to let the cadets smoke in those days. He was hardly gone before another cadet officer slammed open the door, bounced in and made me go all through my baggage again. The room was a fair size, with two little alcoves and an iron bedstead in each, for each room is occupied by two cadets, each with a bed to himself. I had to put my bed in shape and fix up the room. Then they brought me some red stuff, and I had to make a curtain for the window. All this time cadet officers were coming in, ordering me to do this and that till I was about wild and nearly dead. I had to say 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir,' to them all, and it was impossible to do anything to please them.

"The second day I was here," the ex-cadet continued, "one of the first-class fellows walked into my room without knocking and began to talk to me. I had a little onyx pin in my scarf, for I had not yet put on the cadet clothes, and I saw that he had a wicked eye on it. After a while he said: 'That pin of yours makes me feel very bad, Mr. Smith. I had one exactly like it when I came here. It was given me by my grandmother, and had been in the family over a hundred years. I was so unfortunate as to lose it, and when I get home the first thing they will ask me about will be that pin. I suppose you wouldn't care to part with yours, Mr. Smith?'

"I was not quite so fresh as some of the boys coming from New York, and of course I saw the dodge. So I told him I could not part with the onyx pin, but that I had a small cameo pin in my trunk, that I would be happy to give him, when it was unpacked. He said he supposed that would do nearly as well, and he would call in the next morning to get it.

"'What is your name?' I asked him; and his face immediately stretched out about a yard long. Of course, he had no notion of telling me his name, and he was so taken back by my effrontery in asking it that I had to laugh, and this made him as mad as a hornet.

"'Don't you know, you beastly, ill-mannered young plebe,' said he, 'that the greatest affront you can give a cadet after asking his name is to laugh in his face!' I told him I didn't know it, and that I was very sorry to have offended him. So he went off, and I never saw anything more of him. I still have the pin. A few days afterward I was in need of a postage stamp, and a cadet I had got acquainted with said he would find me one if I would go with him to his room. I went, and when he handed me the stamp I offered him three cents. He looked at me as if I had asked him to black my boots. 'Young man,' said he, 'as long as you're in this academy never offer money to a cadet. A cadet never takes pay for anything!' One evening during visiting hours four or five fellows had come into my room, and we had been smoking pipes till the smoke was so thick you could cut it. We were all fresh enough about the rules, and were singing a song. Suddenly the door flew open and a cadet officer looked in. He was fairly paralyzed at first to see what was going on, but as soon as he recovered his breath he gave us a good rating and told us if we wanted to be reported we should just open our heads again that night. Nobody dared say a word for you don't know the dignity of a cadet officer, I tell you. They are very strict about having the rooms kept in order and having everybody in. At 'taps,' which is at ten o'clock, all lights have to be out and everybody in bed. Sometimes there are three cadets in a room, and one of them is appointed orderly and held responsible for the others being in bed and everything in order. The minute the taps cease a cadet officer comes flying around, bangs open the door and asks:

"'All in?'

"'All in, sir,' replies the orderly and the door slams and the officer skips on to the next room. If anybody is out, or not in bed, the orderly has to report it. There are no locks on the doors, and a cadet officer is likely to bounce in at any minute, day or night, to see that everything is all right. When he comes in the night without a lantern he challenges the orderly, and the orderly has to answer him. But if he comes with a lantern he goes right up to the beds and flashes the light in your face to see that you are there. Sometimes at taps the boys have not taken time to undress and pile into bed with their clothes on. If the cadet officer suspects anything he comes in to see that everybody is undressed, and if he finds a man in bed in his clothes there is music. Every morning a cadet officer and a regular officer go around inspecting the rooms. The cadet throws open the door and the officer marches in as stiff and dignified as a statue. If he finds as much as a scrap of paper on the floor he points to it, the cadet makes a minute of it in a book, and you get so many demerits for it. The officer swings around on his heel, the cadet slams the door, and they go on to the next room. Oh, it's a lovely time of it the boys have. And I'm so sorry I studied too hard and got bounced out."—Ex-Cadet, in N. Y. Times.

How Pacific Coast Codfish were First Discovered.

To Captain Jim Townsend, of the Reno Gazette, belongs the credit of the first discovery of codfish on the Pacific Coast. In 1858 he and Captain Tom Smith, an adventurous old salt, were knocking about up and about Alaska, hunting seals, trading in furs, and prospecting the northern waters for whatever might turn up.

In calms they did a good deal of fishing, and while loafing about near Chounmagin Island, to the surprise of all aboard the schooner they began to pull up codfish from the "briny deep." They soon satisfied themselves that codfish were very abundant in the waters about the island. It was agreed to keep the matter quiet until they could return to the grounds prepared to take and preserve a full cargo of the fish, but it does not appear that any of the original discoverers ever returned to the spot.

In 1862 Captain Townsend was foreman of the Territorial Enterprise (the office then being on North C Street). Townsend frequently said that he knew of a better thing than any silver mine; he knew of a place up on the north coast where could be caught any quantity of codfish. He had the place down to a dot, as he said, both latitude and longitude.

The Captain tried to enlist J. T. Goodman, then one of the owners of the Enterprise, in the matter; he also was after D. E. McCarthy, another Enterprise owner, hot and heavy, to go into the codfishing speculation. The discovery of codfish in Pacific waters was looked upon as one of Captain Jim's yarns, though he swore that this was "no funny business"—that he was in dead earnest.

Captain Jim's codfish discovery was for a time a standing joke in the office, even the "devil" having his grin about it. Presently Captain Jim slipped off down to San Francisco, determined to go for the codfish. At the bay he arranged with Dewar & Gherick, a prominent shipping firm, to fit out the schooner Metis for the trip.

They had worked several days at overhauling the rigging and mending the sails of the Metis had their stores on the wharf and were about ready to put out to sea when Sam Brannan, one unlucky morning, came poking about among the shipping. He soon found out what was up, and told the owners of the Metis that there was nothing in it. He said that he came from a codfish State, and was confident that there was not a codfish on the Pacific Coast. In short, he so frightened the owners of the schooner that they withdrew from the whole business, saying it would prove a mere wild-goose chase.

Much disappointed, Captain Jim came back to the Comstock. He was still occasionally "joked" about his "codfish mine," as some of the boys called it, but one day in 1863 Jim had his triumph. In glancing over the San Francisco Bulletin he found an item to the effect that a vessel called the Timandra had just reached port from the north coast with a cargo of 80,000 codfish. The vessel had found Captain Jim's fishing ground. The codfish brought down by the Timandra sold for twelve and one-half cents pickled, which was about equal to thirty-seven and one-half cents for the dried article.

After this, when Captain Jim told about the white elephant he used to ride in India when fighting on the side of the natives, not a man dare dispute a word he said.—Virginia City (Nev.) Enterprise.

"Pink Balls" in Paris.

White muslin balls have been found insipid. They can only interest mammas and professional match-makers. A young and well brought up French demoiselle is not a person with whom to while away an hour agreeably in a ball-room. She is only out to be married, and in a business-like way, just as a lamb is taken to fair or market to be sold. As she can have no voice in the matrimonial negotiations of which she may be the object, it would be worse than useless for a cavalier to attempt to impress her favorably. When not dancing she sits still and tries to look vacant. "A rose," in the ball-room slang of the day, means a very young matron. It not being allowable to peer into birth certificates, "roses" are classed according to the number of years they have been married. In the first year of wedded life there is the blush rose (la France). When eight or nine years of matrimonial bliss have been run, and beauty is boldly imposing, there is the "Paul Neron" and the "Reine d'Angleterre." Next is the "Gloire de Dijon," a tea rose, very lovely in its way, but yellowish, and therefore not admissable to a pink rose-party. Pink, it is found, is not becoming after thirty. Ladies, therefore, of a "certain age," are excluded from rose balls. Fetes of this kind are too often given by charming beings who look best in a roseate hue. Invitations are generally limited, and those favored with them are selected because they will look frightful in the pink livery that is de rigeur. A sallow face will be at a dreadful disadvantage, so will be a pensive countenance, or one that grief has touched without spoiling. There are insignificant blondes who are utterly effaced in the fresh brightness of a pink party.—London Truth.

It should always be carefully borne in mind that in bare wires, out of doors, erected for the purpose of conveying electricity, there is always more or less danger to person or property.—Cincinnati Times.

Our Young Folks.

STEALING DIMPLES.

I was going to kiss the dimples from out the little cheeks,
Where they ripple and they dance every time she laughs or speaks.
She said I shouldn't do it; but I held her fast and tight,
And kissed and kissed the rosy little face with all my might.

And then a pair of eyes twinkled very gravely out,
And a pair of little lips gathered up a doleful pout,
With little drooping corners—[illegible], you will say,
To see such bonny, bonny dimples stolen all away.

I thought I should have kept them for just a little while;
But little teeth were soon peeping through a little smile,
And then a laugh like sunshine was over all her face,
And every dimple I had stolen was back again in place.

—Sidney Dayre, in N. Y. Independent.

A CUNNING LITTLE MOTHER.

Two little birds sat in a tree-top talking very earnestly about the nest they were going to build, for they had been married several days, and, having taken a bridal trip through the neighboring woods, and having spent a whole day down by the beautiful little brook that danced so gayly along under the trees, they began to think it was time for them to begin housekeeping and settle down to sober family cares as well as pleasures. They were very pretty little birds—blondes we might call them—for their bills and eyelids were blue, and their heads of a beautiful golden yellow, so that they looked as if they had blue eyes and golden hair. Their breasts, too, being of the same bright color, they looked like living sunbeams as they flew back and forth. Well, there is one good thing about the birdies—when they make up their minds that a thing ought to be done, they go to work and do it without any putting off till to-morrow. So now our little blondes flew from one tree or bush to another till they found a spot just to their minds, low down in a thick bush, where there were plenty of briers to prick the fingers of bird-nesting boys. Having decided that this was just the spot for them, they at once flew off for materials, and a busier, happier couple than they it would be hard to find, as they flew back and forth bringing bits of flax and tow and horse-hair. The little wife did most of the architectural work, but that was not because her husband was lazy or "shirking." No, indeed! she would have pecked your eyes out had you suggested such an idea; but she was more skillful in such work than he, and he did his share by bringing materials for her to use.

When the outside or frame-work of the nest was finished, both birdies flew off to a field or pasture where there were always cows to be found; it was not the cows that they wanted, however. They flew straight to the trees against which their sharp eyes had often seen the cows rub themselves, and there on the rough bark they found plenty of loose hairs that the cows had rubbed off. These hairs were just what they wanted now, so they carried off as many as they could take in their bills, and the little wife wove them in with downy hairs from fern stems, and thus made a soft, warm lining for a new home. You must not suppose, however, that our birdies worked right along without a pause or a rest. No, indeed! they were too wise for that; they would stop every now and then to chase each other through the wood, or to pick up the flies and bugs that were crawling around them, or perhaps they would fly down to the little brook and drink or bathe in its clear, cold water. Such happy little birds they were! Well, at last the nest was finished, and I believe they were almost sorry, for they had had such grand fun building it; soon there were four tiny eggs nestled together on the soft lining, and then the little bird-wife chased no more bugs or caterpillars, but sat on the nest all day, and her husband caught bugs or caterpillars for her, and brought them to her squirming like eels, and while she ate them he would stand beside her and sing aloud the joy and love of his happy little heart.

But one day, as the little wife sat thinking of the wee birdies in the eggs under her wings, a party of boys came through the fields, beating bushes and climbing trees in search of bird's nests and eggs. Oh, how the little creature's heart throbbed with fear and anxiety! not for herself—oh, no! she did not once think of herself, but only how she could save her home and her babies; for her mate was away just then. Suddenly a bright idea popped into her bright little head. Slipping softly from the nest, she crept silently and rapidly through the bushes till she was several yards from the nest, and then, flying up into a tall tree, she began to chirp and twitter, so as to attract the attention of the boys. They soon saw her, and with whoops and yells started for the tree, while she drooped her tail, stretched out her neck and trailed her wings along the branches, as if she were very lame and feeble. That was enough for the boys, who one and all began to climb the tree after her. No sooner were they all in the tree than the cunning little hypocrite dropped to the ground, and repeated her manœuvres, taking care, however, always to go away from the bush where the nest was. Down came the boys like overgrown squirrels from the tree, where she sat, pretending all the time to be just ready to tumble from weakness. So she kept on leading them farther and farther away, till she thought there was no danger of their finding her treasures, when she spread her wings and flew home by a roundabout way, leaving the boys half amused at her cunning, and more than half vexed at having been so cleverly "sold." This wise and cunning little mother is one of our American birds, and her name is Sylvia citrinella, or the blue-eyed yellow warbler.—The Advance.

A Pleasant Incident.

A very pleasant incident occurred in one of our public schools not long since. It seems that the boys attending the school, most of whom are at the age of from seven to eight, had, in their play of bat and ball, broken one of the window panes in a neighboring house. No clue could be obtained to the boy who had broken it, as he would not confess his act, nor would any of his associates expose him.

The case troubled the teacher. The next day a gentleman called to see the school, an acquaintance of the teacher, who knew how to talk to children. After telling him of the breaking of the glass and her inability to ascertain who of the boys had broken it, she asked him to make some remarks to the school and to speak of the wrong the boys were doing in not acknowledging the act.

The address to the school, therefore, was upon the conduct of boys in the streets and at their sports. He told them in simple words that honesty, truthfulness and kindness should govern their conduct everywhere, even when they were alone and no one but themselves and God knew what they were doing. The scholars seemed interested and somewhat impressed by the remarks of the speaker.

A short time after he had left the school, a little boy arose in his seat and said:

"Miss Lane, I batted the ball that broke Mr. Dash's window. Another boy threw the ball, but I batted it, and it struck the window. I am willing to pay for it."

There was a death-like stillness in the room as the little fellow was speaking, and it continued for a full minute after he sat down.

"I don't think it would be right for Charley Drake to pay the whole for the glass," said another boy, rising in his seat. "All of us who played ball then should pay something, because we were all playing the same as he was. I'll pay my part."

"And I."

"And I."

A thrill of pleasure seemed to run through the whole school at this display of honesty and of right feeling by the boys. The money was brought the next day, and the lesson will not be forgotten either by teacher or pupils.—Exchange.

Beginning Charity at Home.

To some young girls who wrote for counsel to the Wise Blackbird of Wide Awake, respecting the preparation of fancy work to be sent to distant city hospitals, that personage addresses the following excellent advice:

"But why, let me ask, undertake work that must go so far from home to reach its object? Have you no sick families in your own village to whom your attentions and help would be a grateful surprise? How is the poor-house furnished in your township? Would not the decorations and flowers in season be a thousand times more welcome to those who are overlooked by all, and who have forgotten to hope for any notice or pleasure? Hundreds of generous homes near by may send their offerings to the city hospitals while the same charities exist in every county to be aided and encouraged, but how few think of the crushed and hopeless within an hour's drive of their homes? Have you a village or even a county hospital, or if there is one, is it a good one? If not, why not turn your talents to starting one, where accidents may be treated with the best appliances, and the sick with chronic diseases find such quiet and care as would be difficult to secure at home. I would suggest making the mottoes and other pretty things for home decoration, and having a pleasant little sale to raise money for couches, invalids' chairs, water beds, spinal corsets, and appliances for distorted limbs, to be lent in the neighborhood to persons needing them who could ill afford to buy such things. This would be a noble work, and worth your efforts—nay, it is one so close to you that it comes within the line of sacred, inspiring duty, and any aid or suggestion I can give in such undertakings you may call for."—Wide Awake.

Find Out for Yourselves.

Boys should never go through life satisfied to be always borrowing other people's brains. There are some things they should find out for themselves. There is always something waiting to be found out. Every boy should think some thought that shall live after him. A farmer's boy should discover for himself what timber will bear the most weight, which is the most elastic, what will last longest in the water, what out of water, what is the best time to cut down trees for fire-wood? How many kinds of oak grow in your region, and what is each specially good for? How does a bird fly without moving a wing or a feather? How does a snake climb a tree or a brick wall? Is there any difference between a deer's track and a hog's track? What is it? How often does a deer shed his horns, and what becomes of them? In building a chimney, which should be the largest, the throat or the funnel? should it be wider at the top, or drawn in? The boys see white horses. Did they ever see a white colt? Do they know how old the twig must be to bear peaches, and how old the vine is when grapes first hang upon it? There is a bird in the forest which never builds a nest, but lays its eggs in the nests of other birds. Can the boys tell what that bird is? Do they know that a hop-vine always winds with the sun, but a bean-vine always winds the other way? Do they know that when a horse crops grass he eats back toward him; but a cow eats outward from her, because she has no teeth upon her upper jaw, and has to gum it?—Chatterbox.

—According to the Milling World, sackcloth or canvas can be made as impervious to moisture as leather, by steeping it in a decoction of one pound of oak bark with fourteen pounds of boiling water. This quantity is sufficient for eight yards of stuff. The cloth has to soak twenty-four hours, when it is taken out, passed through running water, and hung up to dry. The flax and hemp fibers, in absorbing the tannin, are at the same time better fitted to resist wear.

—There are native Mexicans who still worship Montezuma as a god, who pray every night for his return to rule over them and look every morning for the coming of his golden chariot in the east.—Detroit Post.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL.
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. JULY 11 .1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	½ "	40
¼ "	½ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
"	½ "	10
"	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary entry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

THOMAS CORBETT declines the race for the Senate in the Ballard district.

THE Cincinnati News-Journal has on hand libel suits amounting to $45,000.

JUDGE F. A. BOYD, of Newport, is a candidate for representative in Campbell county.

SUPERVISORS of tax in Owen county increased the valuation of taxable property $81,039.

ELIJAH HOGAN, at one time a citizen of this county is a candidate for the legislature in Gallatin county.

IN Owen county, local option is threatening to become epidemic, and four districts will vote on it at the August election.

OHIO has had a bloody war over the removal of a county seat; but as the battle was not in Kentucky it's of no importance.

IT is estimated that the production of whisky in Kentucky this year will be one-fourth less than that of last year. There has been no estimate on the number of drunks less.

IN Iowa, last year, 949 pairs of twins were born.—Ex.

If they are of democratic parentage, the state will soon change its political complexion.

THE county democratic executive committee through its chairman, addresses the democratic voters, this week, urging them to come out at the August election and poll a full vote. Let the democrats heed the request.

THE Lexington Transcript gave its readers a treat on the fourth of July by sending them the largest daily paper ever printed in that city, and it was brim full of interesting reading matter. The Transcript is growing very popular.

IF those who think Proctor Knott knows nothing about state affairs, will read his speeches, they will learn that he has some idea of how things have been conducted at home for many years. He has the whole subject thoroughly in hand.

WE have always been of the opinion that Boone county plays second fiddle to no county in the state when it comes to the production of its soil, and when we can, almost in the shadow of our sanctum, find timothy six feet tall, we are thoroughly convinced that our position is correct

OF late we have been reading so much about editors fighting duels, that when a man steps in to pay his subscription, we become so excited and nervous that, in filling out the receipt, we are as apt to write it for two years as one. Now, don't all rush in to pay us while in this fix.

THE Commonwealth says that Hon John G. Carlisle has not announced himself a candidate for United States Senator, but is in the hands of his friends. It appeared to us that Mr. Carlisle was putting too much on his plate to be consistent with his past record, and we are glad to hear that he has not made the alleged announcement.

IT is reported from Austin, Texas, that the grand jury has indicted from forty to fifty members of the legislature for gambling.—Ex.

Grand juries at the capitol cities of several other states have the same field for cultivation, but the prefix "honorable" seems to be a license in most states for those whom the Texas grand jury is investigating, while the less fortunate local gamblers are spotted every time.

ABOUT the only reason that there is such indifference in regard to the revision of the constitution is, that the people know that the work will fall into the hands of a lot of politicians whom they are not willing to trust with a matter of as grave importance as that of framing the fundamental law of the land. Let an election for delegates be called, and all manner of material will be popping up as candidates for the positions

A WASHINGTON dispatch has this to say about the troublesome trade-dollar: "Preston, acting Director of the Mint, says under the act which authorized the coinage of trade dollars, these pieces were coined for depositors of silver bullion at the mints and a charge imposed for coinage at a rate not to exceed the actual cost to the Government, of the manufacturer. By this act any owner of silver bullion could have the same coined into trade-dollars. They, therefore, were not issued or paid out by the Government in payment of obligations, or exchanged for other money. The Government has endeavored to keep the trade-dollar in its lawful and proper channel, and from ignorance of the law relative to this coin, parties have taken them in ordinary business transactions, when they could have been lawfully refused. Preston says there is no remedy, unless congress legislates upon the matter. His idea would be to call the trade-dollars in and redeem them congress fixing the rate at which they be redeemed."

Felix A. Barbee, of Cynthiana, in declining to become a candidate for county clerk of Harrison county, gives vent to his feelings as follows:

"I ran for office once—when I was young and foolish. I got defeated, and I am glad of it. I'd rather be a "yellow hound" and bay a moon made of green cheese than submit myself again to the moral crucifiction, button-holing, lying, sneaking, double dealing, back-biting, conniving, whispering, rot gut swelling, hand-shaking, foul-breathing, make-me-believe friendships and bare-faced treachery that must befall every man that runs for office—falsely said to be the gift of the people—in a great county like Harrison. In the gift of the devil would hit nearer the marks. No, no "Democrats" you may hang the ocean on a grape-vine to dry, lasso an avalanche, pin a napkin to [illegible] volcano, skim the clouds from the sky with a teaspoon, throw salt on the tail of a noble American eagle, post "for rent" on the moon, and put leather spectacles on the sun, but never for a moment delude yourself with the idea that I will ever allow my name to be used in connection with any office. Never, gentlemen, never! NEVER!! NEVER!!! Yours for something better. —[Bourbon News.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer has the following interview with Hon. John G. Carlisle, in which he said:

"Unless we make some great blunder in Congress during the next session, I regard the election of a democratic president in 1884 as almost assured."

"To what cause do you attribute the changes in public sentiment which you believe to have been made?"

"They are too numerous to be stated at length. Different causes have operated in different parts of the country. In the West the high tariff views of the republican party and its tendency towards sumptuary legislation alienated thousands of liberal voters at the last election, and the indications now are that they have determined to support the democracy hereafter, or that they will at least give us a fair trial before returning to their old party affiliations."

"Do you believe that Ohio will elect the democratic ticket this fall?"

"The election in Ohio this fall will show that the revolution is not going backward, and will, I think, demonstrate our capacity to carry the country in 1884. I think that the democrats will carry Ohio this fall. I think that there is not much room for doubt about it. The democrats have made strong nominations, and they will make a vigorous canvass. Judge Hoadly is an able and aggressive man and every speech he makes will strengthen his party."

"The country then, in your opinion, is prepared to trust the democracy?"

"We must not deluded ourselves with the idea that we can retain power permanently, simply because the people are dissatisfied with the republican party. They will give us a fair trial, but if we fail to make good our professions of retrenchment and reform, they will repudiate us at the very next opportunity."

"Is the outlook good for a Democratic victory in Iowa?"

"The Democracy have a splendid chance to carry Iowa this fall. Many of the best informed gentlemen in the State believe that they will elect a majority of the legislature and choose a Democratic United States Senator to succeed Mr. Allison."

WE have, of late, been repeatedly asked when and where the Teachers' Institute for this county will be held this year, but having heard the Commissioner say nothing as to the time when or the place where, we were unable to answer. The Commissioner will give due notice of the time and place, and as he is very earnest in the discharge of his official duties, he will do all in his power to make it interesting and beneficial to the teachers.

THE Milton Free Press has been enlarged. As Trimble county would not allow Brother Sarlls to go to the legislature he will give it a larger paper.

To the Democratic Voters of Boone County.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee, of Boone county, held in Burlington, on Monday, July 2d, for the purpose of taking some action with regard to the approaching August election, it was deemed best in view of the short time now intervening, and the busy season of the year, to dispense with all forms of election for a democratic nomination, and let the canvass continue as between the democratic candidates, to the regular August election. While feeling that with the assured democratic majority of Boone there would be no danger, the committee would urge in connection with this announcement, vigilance upon the part of every voter and the necessity of thorough organization, and express the hope that as full vote may be polled as possible. They would also urge, that aside from the local election the necessity at this political period and from the prominence Kentucky enjoys as a democratic State, of swelling the state ticket to its maximum. Boone can contribute her mite, and it behooves every democrat to exercise his franchise, which is not only his duty as a citizen, but which he owes to party organization.

By order of the Committee.
J. G. FURNISH, Chmn.

NOT any of us are so good as we might be, and we of the South, especially, have grown accustomed to being considered especially wicked by our godly neighbors in the highly-cultured North, but there are some things that we are not guilty of. For instance, when we open a tannery down here, only the skins of the lower animals are manipulated. They do things differently in Massachusetts. Gov. Butler said the other day:

"I have got specimens of five different skins of human beings—only one of a negro—and I have presented here a pair of shoes, all ready to be put on to the feet of some person, cut out from the breast of a white woman (applause), and I have got the whole skin of the back of an other woman."

These ghastly specimens are the results of what have been apologetically referred to as the "freaks of students" in dealing with the deceased paupers of the Tewksbury Almshouse.—[Courier-Journal.

The Staff of Life.

Christian county will not have an average wheat crop.

Grayson county farmers are counting on 15 bushels to the acre of wheat.

It is estimated the wheat yield of Daviess county will not average over ten bushels to the acre.

Grant county farmers are busy harvesting their golden grain, which is heavier than they anticipated.

Two farmers in Logan county have 600 acres in wheat, which they think will average 25 bushels per acre.

Owingsville Outlook: The harvest season has opened in this section. Our farmers are paying $2 50 per day for hands. In many portions of the county there is a splendid crop.

Most of the wheat crop of the county has been harvested, and from the best information we can gather there has been about one-half the average crop harvested. The quality, howevrr, is much better than usual.—Crittenden Press.

Our farmers are busy saving their wheat and rye. The wheat yield will be much better than was expected some time ago, though not as thick on the ground as it ought to be, the heads are large and well filled. It is thought that the average will be ten bushels to the acre.—[Owen Democrat.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—Silver has been discovered near Montvale Springs, Tenn.

—A Jackson county (Ga.) negro claims to be the father of forty-two children.

—An egg was broken in Rome, Ga. last week that had a perfectly formed egg inside the yolk.

—A turnip is growing in St. Augustine, Fla., that measures two and a half feet in circumference.

—The fruit and vegetable growers in the vicinity of Hazlehurst, Miss., have organized for protection.

—The boys and girls of Coltax, La. played a game of base-ball last Sunday, the girls winning the game.

—Mr. Thomas Hughes is expected in Rugby in the fall, leaving England about the 1st of September.

—The cattle that were shipped from Georgia recently are dying on the Texas prairies. The weather is too hot for them.

—A cave on the Colorado river, over one mile in length, and in some places thirty feet in width, is attracting considerable attention at Lampasas, Tex. This cave is about sixteen miles from the town, and has two small streams running through it, which are about two feet deep.

LOOK! LOOK!! LOOK!!!

From JULY 1st, to AUG., 1st, Custom Made suits will be on the average $5 less. Ready Made suits have been reduced 25 per cent.

The stock is large and must be disposed of to make room for my Fall Goods, let every one take advantage of the great reduction. H. F. BLASE, 540 Madison St., Covington, Ky.

EARLY BREAKFAST STOVES.

Early Breakfast Stoves have been submitted to the severest tests and have successfully stood the trial of years. They have become, and are now, recognized as the standard Stove of America. They are guaranteed not to have a single ounce of scrap iron in them, and to have more labor saving conveniences than any Stove in the Land.

THE MONITOR COAL OIL STOVE

has far exceeded anything of the kind in the past, and this year it comes out with many New and valuable Improvements. No one should buy a Coal Oil Stove until they have examined the Monitor, no one should be without one. For sale only by

W. H. & J. M. McCLUNG,
537 Madison St., Covington, Ky.
All Kind of Stoves Repaired.
All Kinds of Roofing, Guttering.
DONE TO ORDER.

—J. W. Johnson, the colored lawyer who was admitted to the Austin bar at the present term of the District Court, has filed a petition in the County Court, claiming $1,000 damages from the Texas Central railroad for a violation of the Civil Rights Bill. He claims that the defendant company damaged that amount by not permitting him to ride in a first-class car.

—It is said that Mr. Tulane will appeal to the Louisiana Legislature, backed by the strong public sentiment of the State, asking that the property generously given by him to the cause of education in New Orleans be released from the burdens of taxation. He has just added property to his donation, which will increase the revenue of the prospective Tulane University $200 a day, bringing the donation up to $600,000.

—A queer accident happened to a little girl in Atlanta, the other day. She was working with a sewing machine, and was running it at a good speed when the driving-rod, which was made of wood, snapped in two, and one piece penetrated the fleshy part of her leg below the knee, tearing the flesh in a terrible manner. As soon as the broken rod entered the child's flesh the machine stopped and in order to remove the wood the wheel of the machine had to be turned by hand.

Telling it very Short.

"I'll tell it, sir, in few words if I can, but the story would fill a book if justice was done to it."

"Surely, Michael, but put it short this time so's I can squeeze it into a page of letter paper."

"Here you are, sir, then, and there are thousands of people here in Binghamton, N. Y., who will testify to the truth of what I say. My name is Michael Guilfoyle. I am seventy-four years old. For about nine years I was almost shut out from the world by rheumatism. I had peddled small wares in this city for years, and had to stop altogether. At the best of times I could only hobble miserably about with my cane. I was bent nearly double with pain and weakness, and my hands were useless to labor with. I was but the poor wreck of a once strong man. None of the medicines usually given for rheumatism did me the least good, sir. My old friends and customers forgot me, as though I were under ground,

'With the end of my nose and the tip of my toes
Turned up to the roots of the daisies.'

My days and nights were doleful and painful. I had no hope except death. That is God's truth, and Mr. Mosher, here, knows it.

"I can't tell you how, but PARKER'S TONIC cured me. That was three years ago. I'm lively as a cricket now, sir and go my business rounds every day, rain or shine. You may tell this to all the world, and refer the doubters to me."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change is made for two reasons: first, because ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient, and secondly, because unprincipled inferior preparations under the name of ginger.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom of the outside wrapper.

NOTICE TO Contractors and Builders.

Sealed proposals will be received at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind., until seven o'clock p. m.,

Thursday, July 12th, 1883,

for the building of the Christian Chapel above the foundation, according to the plans and specifications.

Proposals for each part of the work separate will also be received.

Plans and specifications on file at the store of Tebbs Bros., Lawrenceburg, Ind.

The building committee reserve the right to reject any or all bids, and a sufficient bond must be furnished with the bids for the entire building, as a guarantee that the building will be completed according to the plans and specifications.

JOHN SORTWELL, Sr, J. H. RUSSE,
JOHN H. LOVE, A. G. TEBBS,
J. W. TEBBS, W. M. TERRILL
Building Committee.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., June 20, 1883.

Hay Conveyors.

We take this method of informing the public that we are MANUFACTURING and SELLING W. M. CONNER'S

HAY CONVEYORS.

Just the thing to use in large barns
BAKER & CRUTCHER,
35-4t Florence X-Roads.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals will be received at Burlington, Boone county, Ky., until the 21st day of July, 1883, for hauling and breaking the following amount of lime-stone rock on the Burlington and Bellevue Pike, bids to be for sections and distributed according to directions of the Board of Directors on each section as follows:—On section 1st, 10 rods; on section 2d, 8 rods; on section 3d, 8 rods; on section 4th, 10 rods; on section 5th, 5 rods; on section 6th 5 rods. A perch of stone broken to be 25 feet long, 1 foot wide and 1 foot in depth, and 12 perches as stated above to make 1 rod of broken stone. The stone to be broken so that the largest will pass through a 2½ inch ring. Contractors will be required to have the hauling and breaking done by the first of December next. The Directors reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

S. P. BRADY, President,
30-2t WM. WALTON, Secretary.

JNO. S. DORMAN & CO.

—DEALERS IN—

MILLINERY, DRY GOODS, NOTIONS,

Clothing, Carpets, Boots, Shoes, Hats, Caps, Trunks, Valises, &c.

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - INDIANA.

A. M. Elliott AND Co,

—DEALERS IN—

Threshers,
Engines,

SAW MILLS, HORSE POWERS, BUCKEYE
Reapers, Mowers and Self-Binders,
South Bend Chilled Plows, Furst & Bradley Steel Plows.
Buggies, Wagons and Farming Implements in General.

Give us a call. Satisfaction guaranteed in every sale. Corner second and Judiciary Streets, Aurora, Indiana. 33-6t

NOTICE.

Know all men by this notice: That Elzy Garrison, H. A. Hicks, B. L. Rice, C. C. Talbott, Wallace Garrison, John S Mason and C. A. Huey, under the name and style of the Richwood and Big Bone Turnpike Co., have associated themselves together to contract and operate a turnpike road, beginning at its intersection with the Union and Beaver Lick turnpike, just southeast of Dr. H. C. Lassing's residence, in Boone county, Kentucky, and running thence in a general westwardly direction along an established and surveyed route, in a main line to Elzy Garrison's gate, and consisting of said main line and a branch turnpike, beginning at Robert Willis' corner with Richard Howlett, on the old Big Bone and Union dirt road, running in a general northwardly direction until it intersects the general main line at a point S. E. of C. T. Rice's old homestead. Said main line and branch road shall be called the Richwood & Big Bone Turnpike.

Big Bone or some point on the road shall be the principal place of business.

The amount of capital stock shall be $10,000, to be paid in as the work progresses.

Said corporation shall date from June 9, 1883, and continue fifty years.

Its officers shall be a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer and five directors, all of whom shall be ellected annually on January 1st of each year.

It shall not subject itself, at any time, to a greater liability or indebtedness than $6,000.

Private property shall be exempt from corporate debts.

ELZIE GARRISON, H. A. HICKS, B. L. RICE,
WALLACE GARRISON, JOHN S. MASON,
COURTNEY C. TALBOTT, T. A. HUEY.
June 12, 4t.

LUMBER.

A. Corbin & Son.

—) BELLEVUE, KY., (—

Will sell the best Hemlock Stock Boards at $13 00.

Best Hemlock fencing at	$13 00
Standard Shingles at	$4 50
Weather boarding, white pine,	$18
Flooring, yellow pine, at	$35

Doors, Window Sash and blinds always on hands.

Prices subject to a chance without notice. Persons who contemplate building will do well to call and see us before purchasing.

A. Corbin & Son.,
Bellevue, Ky.

Farm for Sale.

A small farm of 11¼ acres, on the Covington and Lexington pike, at the top of Willow Run Hill. On it are a commodious house, necessary out buildings and a good orchard. Title good. Call on W. C. Tupman, Sheriff's Office, Covington, Thomas Tupman, Kenton Heights or W. L. Riddell, Burlington.

W. J. RICE.
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Erlanger Hotel.

JOHN L. CONNER, Prop.
C. F. PETTIT, Clerk.

First-Class Hotel Accommodations, with a thorough Feed and Sale Stable attached.

Having returned to my Hotel stand after a years absence, I will be glad to have my old patrons and friends, and new ones I hope to make, call upon me, when we will use every effort to make it pleasant and agreeable for all. 25-3m

LOOK HERE!

when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on

Winegardner

He has a large assortment of

Wall Paper!

And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.

Inks, Pens and Stationary
constantly on hand,
Headquaters in Lotton House.

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 8 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55¼ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good. MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; N. E. Hawes, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:—

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. Ed Fowler, Constable.

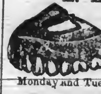
Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

E. E. IGOE,



Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey,
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles, $5.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.
50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

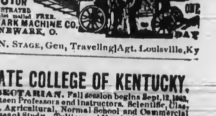
COLOGNE

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines,
2 to 100 Horse Power.

Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will furnish a horse power with ⅓ less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS, Box 1400, Corning, N. Y.

$1000 REWARD

For any machine hulling and cleaning as fit for market as much Clover Seed in one DAY as the VICTOR



VICTOR ILLUSTRATED Pamphlet mailed FREE.
NEWARK MACHINE CO.,
NEWARK, O.

W. N. STAGE, Gen, Traveling Agt. Louisville, Ky

STATE COLLEGE OF KENTUCKY.

UNSECTARIAN. Fall session begins Sept. 12, 1883. Fifteen Professors and Instructors. Scientific, Classical, Agricultural, Normal School and Commercial Courses of Study. Tuition and Matriculation fees, $30 per annum. Board in dormitory, $2.25 per week; in private families, $4.50. 320 students last year. Buildings, apparatus & machinery entirely new. Capacity for 600 students. Range of study wider and expenses less than any college in Kentucky. For catalogues apply to Judge W. B. Kinkead, or to James K. Patterson, Ph. D., President of the College, Lexington, Ky.

"THE BEST IS CHEAPEST."
ENGINES, Horse Powers THRESHERS SAW-MILLS, Clover Hullers
(Suited to all sections.) Write for FREE Illus. Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES.
New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price, selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

We are authorized to announce JAMES R. CLUTTERBUCK as a candidate for Sheriff at the August election, 1883, subject, however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce Dr. S. S. SCOTT as a candidate to represent Boone county in the next General Assembly, subject however, to the action of the democratic party.

We are authorized to announce N. S. WALTON as a candidate for the legislature, subject to the action of the democratic party.

Oats are ripening. Length good.

Everybody's potato crop looks well.

The wheat harvest is about finished.

Ice-cream freezers have been in demand the past week.

Fire had its old time pleasantness about it last Sunday.

Mrs. Gen Wallace and Miss Nettie Gardner spent Saturday and Sunday in Union.

James E. Duncan has a large field of wheat which is reported will make 25 bushels to the acre.

The tobacco crop is making a good start this season. There is no complaint of slow growth.

There is two kinds of men that can't commit forgery, viz.: A blind man or one who can not write.

An Owen county fox hunter had to kill seven of his hounds, they being bitten by a rabbid dog.

Judging from the appearance of mine host of the Boone House, he has the finest garden in the village.

That Joe-Cy-Joe eating match is very interesting, three times a day. The cook says, "nixy", though.

The Bellevue communication was received too late for last issue, but it is very good reading this week.

A bevy of young ladies called in last press-day to see the weary printers pant and toil to be ready to celebrate.

Some of the farmers claimed last week, that they had tobacco large enough to top at fourteen leaves.

The colored population was on the qui vive, Sunday, on account of the wedding of a couple that evening.

Every year increases the popularity of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Recommended for all pulmonary troubles.

'Squire Baker has been having some janglimbie experience riding over to town lately. Ask him for particulars.

Don't forget the pic-nic at Viola Park next Saturday. In the evening the grounds will be beautifully illuminated.

There will be many "foul" corn fields this fall. The wet season has rendered it almost impossible to kill the weeds and grass.

While at Erlanger, the other day, we had a brief chat with attorney DeJarnett who came down on the train going to the city.

Camp meeting commences at the Stevenson camp ground, Corinth, Grant county, July 26th, and continues till August 5th.

Frank Kirkpatrick put this office under lasting obligations by the manner in which he administered to the relief of suffering humanity last press day.

The first watermelons of the season were brought to town last week. C. L. Crisler, of the Boone House brought them from the city. They were a southern production.

That handsome knight of the paint brush across the way from our abode, manipulates the guitar every evening for the amusement of his bachelorship, and we are regaled with the strains of his sweet music.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent.

A few days since Mrs. W. J. Rice, of Bullittsville, gave her little boy half a teaspoon full of paragoric, which turned out to be Fowler's Solution. The dose being large the child threw it up, and the doctor was not apprehensive of any serious result.

On the fourth inst., Miss Annie Cowen celebrated her birthday by entertaining handsomely some of her friends with ice-cream and other delicacies. Miss Annie never forgets the printers, and we return our thanks for a saucer of delicious ice-cream.

Rev. Mr. Gaines, of New York, will visit his relatives in this county this month, and it is reported through the county that he will occupy the pulpit in the Universalist church at this place next Sunday, which we are requested to say is a mistake.

The many friends hereabout of Timothy Horton, several years since a citizen of this place, will be glad to learn that he is located near Elrod, Ripley county, Indiana, on a fine farm. T. J. Porter made him a visit a few weeks since, and says that he is doing well and looking well.

Last week a floater was found in the river at Hamilton. At the inquest held by 'Squire Garnett, from papers on the corpse, it was ascertained that the deceased was a steamboat mate named Edward C. Kennedy, of Maple Hill, Mason county. Some believe that he had been knocked from a boat by rousta-bouts. The remains were buried at Hamilton.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Prof. Stephenson left Thursday morning after having spent several days in our midst.

Dudley Rouse, wife and son returned Monday evening, from a four days visit to Frankfort.

Benj. Crisler, of Ashby Fork was in town Thursday. Reed sent him home in a shining buggy.

Mrs. Wood Hume and daughter, of Covington, are visiting Mr. W. F. McKim, of this place.

Mr. Thomason and wife, of Petersburg, were the guests of Dr. Grant and wife, Saturday.

Miss Mitchell, daughter of George Mitchell, of Pendleton Co., was visiting relatives in this county a few days since.

Miss Gussie Kirkpatrick has returned home after a very pleasant visit with friends at Scattersville.

Master Willie Arnold and his sisters, Misses Katie and Lillie with their guest, Miss Mabel Bennett, of Louisville, spent the 4th with their sister Mrs. C. W Saxton.

We have in our office a bunch of timothy 6 feet 3 inches tall, which was brought to us by Mr. Benjamin Rice, and was grown on his farm. The stalks resemble young sapplings.

The following is a list of the Kentucky fairs:

Mount Sterling, July 31st, three days.
Sharpsburg, August, 7th, four days.
Richmond, August 14th, four days.
Cynthiana, August, 21st, four days.
Lexington, August 28th, four days.
Paris, September 4th, five days.
Falmouth, September 11th, four days.
Maysville, September 18th, four days.
Louisville, October 2d, four days.

Base-ball.

The game of ball between the Newport and Burlington clubs, at this place, on the fourth, was witnessed by a large crowd. The game was badly played throughout on both sides. At one time it looked as though the home team would gain an easy victory, but the tables turned and they were defeated in a score of 16 to 20. The boys seemed to be clear off.

Last Saturday the Almonts and the Speedwells (the latter playing four of the Burlington club) commenced a game on the grounds here, but only played six innings when the Speedwell team withdrew from the game, claiming that the umpire was ruling unfairly in improperly calling strikes on them when at the bat, and calling balls against their pitcher when in the gool. The Almonts led in the score from the beginning. The ruption caused no excitement, and the two teams and the spectators quietly meandered from the field.

